wife and her brother, C. W. Gibson, by adversary possession. This partition, as before stated, was made after the sale and conveyance of said mineral interest to Price and Steinman by the children of James M. Gibson, who seem to have considered their mother as having a mere dower interest in the land. At least they divided the land into four shares, laying off Mrs. Hylton's and C. W. Gibson's shares together as one parcel: Hylton at the time of the partition having purchased or contracted to purchase the interest of C. W. Gibson. So far as the record shows, neither the wife nor either of her children have ever questioned the validity of said partition, and it seems to have been acquiesced in by all of them. In the year 1877, after the partition, the wife and children of James M. Gibson, other than Hylton's wife, executed a deed to Hylton, in consideration (as recited therein) of $200, by which they conveyed to him "a certain tract or parcel of land," describing it by metes and bounds, with covenants of general warranty. The parcel of land it is conceded, or at least is clearly shown, to be the same parcel allotted as the shares of Hylton's wife and C. W. Gibson in the parol partition; but no reference is made in the deed to the partition. In October, 1890, after James M. Gibson had obtained a conveyance from the heirs of Wm. Boggs, from whom the appellees claim that James M. Gibson purchased the 700-acre tract, or at least a part thereof (but had not fully paid the purchase price and obtained a conveyance), Gibson executed a deed to Hylton in consideration of $600, as recited therein, by which he conveyed the same land embraced in the said conveyance of 1877 (though no reference is made to that deed), with covenants of general warranty. Both deeds were duly recorded. The appellees claim that Hylton took actual possession of the land under the conveyance of 1877, and has ever since in person or by tenants been in possession thereof, claiming it in fee. The appellant claims that Hylton and his wife went into possession of the surface of the land after that deed was made, and that they and those claiming under them have continued in the possession of the surface down to the present. But it denies that such possession gave Hylton possession of the minerals under the facts and circumstances of this case.

[4] It is well settled in this state that, where a purchaser, if he be a stranger to the title, takes a conveyance of the whole estate in a tract of land, although his grantor was only a tenant in common with others, and in pursuance thereof enters into the exclusive possession of the land, claiming title to the whole, it is an ouster of the other cotenants, and the grantee so entering and claiming title may rely upon his adversary possession, if continued the statutory period. Johnston v. Va. Coal & Iron Co., 96 Va. 158-163, 31 S. E. 85; Preston, etc., v. Va. Min. Co., 107 Va. 245, 248, 57 S. E. 651; Freeman on Cotenancy, § 197.

[5] It is also well settled that, as between tenants in common and others claiming privity, the entry and possession of one are ordinarily deemed the entry and possession of all, and this presumption will prevail in favor of all until some notorious act of ouster or adversary possession is brought home to the knowledge of the others. Until there is notice, actual or constructive, that the possession is hostile, it will be deemed amicable, notwithstanding the tenant's possession may have been wholly adversary. Stonestreet v. Doyle, 75 Va. 356, 378, 379, 40 Am. Rep. 731, and cases cited; Pillow v. Southwest, etc., Co., 92 Va. 144, 23 S. E. 32, 53 Am. St. Rep. 804. Yet a tenant in common may enter adversely and claim in severalty, and where he does the statute of limitations will run in his favor and against his tenants in common. See King v. Carmichael, 136 Ind. 20, 35 N. E. 509, 43 Am. St. Rep. 303; Clymer v. Dawkins, 3 How. 674, 11 L. Ed. 778; Bradstreet v. Huntington, 5 Pet. 402, 438-440, 8 L. Ed. 170; Ricard v. Williams, 7 Wheat. 59, 5 L. Ed. 398; Caperton v. Gregory, 11 Grat. (52 Va.) 505; Tyler on Ejectment, 882; Joyce v. Dyer, 189 Mass. 64, 75 N. E. 81, 109 Am. St. Rep. 603; Greenhill v. Biggs, 85 Ky. 155, 2 S. W. 774, 8 Ky. Law Rep. 825, 7 Am. St. Rep. 579; Johnson v. Toulmin, 18 Ala. 50, 52 Am. Dec. 212; Crawford v. Mels, 123 Iowa, 610, 99 N. W. 186, 66 L. R. A. 154, 101 Am. St. Rep. 337.

[6] In considering the question whether or not Hylton's entry and possession was adversary and hostile, the familiar principle must be borne in mind that when one enters upon land he is presumed to enter under the title which his deed purports upon its face to convey, both as to the boundary or extent of the land and the nature of his title. The deed to Hylton from the wife and children of James M. Gibson in the year 1877 purported to convey the fee in the whole. It is not contravened that he entered and took possession of the land under that deed, and, in the absence of anything to the contrary, he is presumed to have entered under a claim of title to the whole in fee. This is not a case where a tenant in common, being or entering into possession as such afterwards, attempts to claim that his possession was adverse to his tenants in common. Hylton did not enter as tenant in common. From the first he is presumed, indeed he is proved, to have claimed under his deed, and there is nothing to show that he or those who claim under him ever acknowledged that the title to the land was anything other than as it appeared upon the face of his deed.

If Hylton had been in possession of the land under the parol partition as the vendee of C. W. Gibson, or perhaps in right of his wife, a different question would be presented; but taking a conveyance, which was duly recorded, of the whole land in fee, with covenants of general warranty, and under such deed entering into the actual possession thereof, claiming title to the whole, must, we think, be regarded as an ouster of the other tenants in common, and give Hylton the right to rely upon his adversary possession, which if continued the statutory period would bar the other tenants.

The evidence clearly shows that Hylton was in the exclusive possession of the land from the year 1877, when he entered under the conveyance of that date, claiming title to the whole tract in fee, until the institution of this suit, a period of 30 years or more. He paid taxes on it throughout these years as the fee-simple owner, resided upon it the greater portion of the time, conducted mercantile operations upon it, built upon it, cleared portions of it, and mined coal for his domestic purposes and small quantities for sale. Whether his coal operations during that period would have been sufficient to have given him title to the coal, if the mineral interest had been severed from the surface, need not be considered, since, as we have seen, there was no such severance; but unquestionably his acts of adversary possession were sufficient to create in him a complete title to the land in fee, mineral as well as surface, for his deed covered both.

It follows from what has been said that there was no error in the circuit court's action in reference to the Hylton portion of the 700-acre tract.

The action of the circuit court in holding that the appellant was the owner of a four-fifths mineral interest in the Van Buren Bolling parcel of the 700-acre tract of land, and decreeing a partition of the mineral interest therein, is assigned as cross-error.

[7] When W. B. Gibson conveyed his undivided mineral interest in the 700-acre tract of land to Price and Steinman, he was only about 19 years of age. After his maturity he sold, as he claims, the surface in the share of the 700-acre tract (which he acquired under the parol partition and by exchange with his brother, H. F. Gibson) to William Merricks, and directed his father, James M. Gibson, whom he seems to have thought was the holder of the legal title, to convey the same to Merricks. His father in 1880 executed a conveyance to Merricks, by which he conveyed or undertook to convey the said parcel in fee, with covenants of general warranty. This conveyance, it is claimed, was a disaffirmance of the conveyance made by W. B. Gibson to Price and Steinman, since it made no reservation of the mineral interest theretofore sold them. Gibson testified that Merricks knew that he had sold the mineral interest, and that he was only selling and intending to sell him the surface. This is denied by Merricks, who testified that he purchased the land in fee in accordance with the terms of the conveyance made to him by J. M. Gibson. Whether or not the deed made by the father by the parol direction of the son, under the facts disclosed by the record, would make out a case of disaffirmance of the conveyance of the mineral made by W. B. Gibson to Price and Steinman, in the view we take of the case, need not be considered, for if it did not Merricks and those who claim under him have acquired complete title to the land under color of title by adversary possession. Merricks went into possession of the land under his purchase from W. B. Gibson. He conveyed the same in fee simple, with covenants of general warranty, in the year 1884 to Ephraim Brock. Brock conveyed it, with like covenants, to J. H. Stallard in the year 1886, and in 1887 Stallard conveyed it, with like covenants, to Van Buren Bolling. It is not controverted, as we understand the record, that Merricks and those who claim under him have, since the year 1880, been in the actual and uninterrupted possession of the surface of the land, claiming it as their own.

The contention of the appellant is that neither Merricks nor any of those who claim under him ever entered upon the coal or other minerals on or under the land. There is no evidence that they ever mined or used the coal or other minerals in any way, and, if there had been a severance of the mineral interest from the surface, no case of title to the minerals by adversary possession would be proved; but, as there was no severance of the minerals, and the conveyance to Merricks was in fee without any reservation of the minerals, the conveyance to him and the conveyance to those who claim under him was color of title to the whole tract, mineral as well as surface. Merricks and those claiming under him having been in the adversary possession of the land, claiming title to the whole fee for more than the statutory period, the claim of the appellant to the mineral interest therein was barred, and the circuit court erred in not so holding.

The court is of opinion that, in so far as the decree of the circuit court holds that the appellant has any interest in the mineral on the Van Buren Bolling land, and directs partition thereof with costs, it is erroneous, and must be reversed, and in other respects affirmed.

Reversed in part; affirmed in part.

STONEGAP COLLIERY CO. v. KELLY & VICARS.†

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1913.)

1. LANDLORD AND TENANT (§ 37*) — CONSTRUCTION OF LEASE — CONSTRUCTION AGAINST LESSOR.

The language of a lease is to be construed most strongly against the lessor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Landlord and Tenant, Cent. Dig. § 98; Dec. Dig. § 37.*]

2. LANDLORD AND TENANT (§ 37*) — CONSTRUCTION OF LEASE — INTENT OF PARTIES.

The intention of the parties to a lease must be ascertained by reference to the entire instrument and not to disjointed parts of it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Landlord and Tenant, Cent. Dig. § 98; Dec. Dig. § 37.*]

3. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 62*) — LEASE — PURPOSE OF USE — RESTRICTIONS IN LEASE.

Where certain contiguous tracts of land were leased to a company for the purpose of mining coal and manufacturing coke thereon, and the lease provided that all the rights which had been granted to the lessors by the grantors of the several tracts for any land, coal, surface, or mining rights and privileges not excepted or reserved should pass to the lessee, the lessee could, under the lease, construct thereon buildings for the future use of its employes and, pending such use, lease the buildings to another company without accounting to the lessors for the rent thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 173, 175-180; Dec. Dig. § 62.*]

4. LANDLORD AND TENANT (§ 134*) — PURPOSE OF USE — IMPLIED RESTRICTIONS.

Equity will not raise by implication a covenant in restraint of a beneficial use of leased premises.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Landlord and Tenant, Cent. Dig. §§ 482-485; Dec. Dig. § 134.*]

5. LANDLORD AND TENANT (§ 134*) — PURPOSE OF USE — IMPLIED RESTRICTIONS.

A covenant that premises shall be used for a specified purpose does not impliedly forbid their use for a similar lawful purpose which is not injurious to the rights of the landlord.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Landlord and Tenant, Cent. Dig. §§ 482-485; Dec. Dig. § 134.*]

6. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 62*) — LEASE OF MINE — PURPOSE OF USE — INCIDENTAL USE.

Where a lease of premises limits the use to coal mining, the right to use the premises in all ways which are customary in carrying on those operations is necessarily incidental to the lease.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 173, 175-180; Dec. Dig. § 62.*]

7. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 62*) — LEASE — PURPOSE OF USE — INTENTION OF PARTIES.

Where the lessees of premises for the purpose of coal mining required the lessors to purchase certain tracts of land adjacent to the premises and include those tracts in the lease, although there was neither coal nor timber thereon, that fact indicates that it was the intention of the parties that the use of the premises was not to be limited to strictly mining operations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 173, 175-180; Dec. Dig. § 62.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Wise County. Suit by Kelly & Vicars against the Stonegap Colliery Company. Decree for the plaintiffs, and defendant appeals. Reversed, with directions to dismiss the bill.

Bond & Bruce, of Wise, Bullitt & Chaikley, of Big Stone Gap, and White & Case, of New York City, for appellant. Geo. C. Peery and E. M. Fulton, both of Wise, for appellees.

HARRISON, J. This controversy involves the construction and proper interpretation of a certain mining lease entered into between the parties thereto on the 17th of July, 1902. The bill was filed by the appellees seeking to enjoin the appellant from using any of the leased premises for any purpose other than that of mining coal, making coke, and selling the same, and that the appellant be especially enjoined from collecting rents from the Currier Lumber Corporation, such rents being claimed by the appellees, and that the appellant be compelled to account to the appellees for all rents, issues, and profits that it had theretofore received from the leased premises by uses foreign to the purpose of the lease.

In the progress of the voluminous proceedings which followed, the prayer of the bill was granted, perpetually enjoining the appellant from making the uses of the leased premises complained of, and a final decree was entered awarding a money recovery against the appellant for rents it had collected from the occupants of certain houses on the leased premises.

In the view we take of the case, we will not stop to consider the demurrer to the bill, which was overruled, but will proceed at once to consider the merits of the controversy.

It appears that in July, 1902, the appellant leased from the appellees a contiguous boundary of land, containing approximately 5,700 acres, for the purpose of mining coal, making coke, and selling the same. This body of land is made up of numerous smaller tracts acquired by the lessors at different times, and much of it has no mineral value, but is only valuable for its uses in connection with that part where the mining operations are carried on. It further appears that, in order to provide in an economical way against the increasing demand for tenement houses expected to result from the development of the mines, appellant in November, 1905, entered into an agreement with R. L. Benson, trustee, who had large timber and stave mills on an adjacent tract of land, by which it leased to him 5.84 acres of the leased premises and permitted him to erect thereon a number of houses, to occupy the same for a period of ten years, paying a nominal rent therefor of $25 per year, and at the end of said period the land and houses to revert to the appellant. In September, 1908, the Currier Lumber Corporation, successor to R. D. Benson, trustee, leased from appellant a number of these houses for a period of eight months at $10 each per month. The right of appellant to make these contracts and derive the benefit flowing from them is the question involved in this litigation.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

†Rehearing denied December 4, 1913.

[1, 2] The deed of lease is to be regarded in the light of the following well-known rules of construction: (1) The language of the contract is to be construed most strongly against the grantor; and (2) the intention of the parties must be ascertained by reference to the entire instrument and not to disjointed parts of it. 2 Min. Inst. 1056, 1058.

In Chamberlain v. Brown, 141 Iowa, 549, 120 N. W. 338, the court says: "There is another familiar rule applicable to cases of this kind that, if the meaning and effect of the lease be fairly capable of two constructions, that will be adopted which is most favorable to the lessee."

[3] "Those things which are appurtenant to a mine will pass under a lease of the mine as a necessary part thereof, although not mentioned in the lease." 27 Cyc. 700. See, also, Devlin on Deeds, § 863.

In City of New York v. Interborough R. T. Co., 125 App. Div. 437, 109 N. Y. Supp. 885, the court says: "This is a recognition of the right of the lessee to use the demised premises for such collateral purposes as such property might be customarily used. A lessee of real property is entitled to the exclusive use of demised premises for any purpose not prohibited by the lease, not amounting to waste or destruction of the subject-matter. This is the general rule."

"The grant of a thing passes the incident as well as the principal, though the latter only is mentioned; and this effect cannot be avoided without an express reservation. * * * A grant of a thing will include whatever the grantor had power to convey, which is reasonably necessary to the enjoyment of the thing granted." Riddle v. Littlefield, 53 N. H. 503, 16 Am. Rep. 388.

The first clause of the lease provides as follows: "The lessors hereby lease to the lessee, its successors and assigns, for the purpose of mining coal and manufacturing coke thereon and therefrom, and selling said coke and coal, the following tracts or boundaries of coal lands or coal rights and surface rights owned by the lessors near the town of Wise, Wise county, Virginia." Then follows the description of 86 different tracts or parcels of land, some of which were owned in entirety by the lessors and as to others they only owned the coal and other minerals, together with certain mining rights and privileges, and as to others they only owned the surface. This description of the several properties is followed by the following clause: "All of the rights and privileges which have been granted by the various grantors hereinbefore named to either the said Kelly or said Vicars, or by any other grantor or grantors, to them or either of them for any of the land, coal, surface, or mining rights and privileges, hereinbefore specifically described and not herein excepted or reserved, and which the said lessors now own, shall pass to the lessee under this lease; but it is understood that the said lessors have heretofore sold and conveyed divers tracts, pieces or parcels of surface to various persons, which were conveyed to them by the aforesaid grantors, and all of which are reserved from the operation of this lease."

[4, 5] These provisions of the lease constitute all that is essential to be considered in its construction. It seems clear that under these provisions the surface rights owned by the lessors are granted to the lessee, certainly all of such rights passed from the lessors. In other words, the whole of the properties owned by the lessors passed to the lessee, together with all rights and privileges appurtenant thereto. If it was the intention of the parties that the lessee should have, for the purpose of its operations, all of the property, rights, and privileges owned by the grantors, more apt language to accomplish that purpose could hardly have been employed than that of the two provisions of the deed which have been mentioned. There are no covenants in the deed restraining the beneficial use of the premises granted, and it is obviously inconsistent with the principles upon which a court of equity acts to raise by implication a covenant in restraint of a beneficial use of property. A covenant that premises shall be used by a lessee for a particular specified purpose does not impliedly forbid that they may be used for a similar lawful purpose which is not injurious to the landlord's rights, unless such other use is expressly forbidden. Reed v. Lewis, 74 Ind. 433, 39 Am. Rep. 88; San Antonio Brewing Asso. v. Brents, 39 Tex. Civ. App. 443, 88 S. W. 368.

The law on the subject is stated as follows in 24 Cyc. 1046, citing numerous cases: "The general rule is that by the lease of a building everything which belongs to it, or is used with and appurtenant to it, and which is reasonably essential to its enjoyment, passes as incident to the principal thing and as a part of it unless specially reserved."

And again at page 1061: "Where the contract of lease is silent on the subject, the lessees have, by implication, the right to put the premises to such use and enjoyment as they please, not materially different from that in which they are usually employed, to which they are adapted, and for which they are constructed. The law, however, implies an obligation on the part of the lessee to use the property in a proper and tenant-like manner, without exposing the buildings to ruin or waste by acts of omission or commission, and not to put them to a use or employment materially different from that in which they are usually employed or apparently violative of the spirit and purpose of the lease as such spirit and purpose is evidenced by the recitals therein."

[6] Appellees rely on the alleged implied restriction that the premises are not to be used for any purpose except "for mining coal, and manufacturing coke, and selling such coal and coke"; the contention being that this disjointed sentence raises an implication that the use to be made of the premises, and especially the use to be made of the surface, is so limited that the lessee cannot make the use thereof that is denied to it in this case by the appellees.

If it were permissible for a court of equity, in the light of the principles we have cited, to raise by implication a covenant restraining the beneficial use of property, it would be necessary, the deed being silent on the subject, to inquire as to the manner in which premises leased for such purposes are usually employed. The record shows that the uses to which such premises are necessarily put are so extended as to be difficult of mention in detail. It abundantly appears from the testimony of numerous coal operators, men of wide experience in this and other coal fields in West Virginia and Pennsylvania, that it is usual and customary for the lessee to have the possession, control, and use of the surface of the leased premises, and especially that adjacent to the operation, for all purposes. This is necessary, as shown, for many reasons, both affirmative and negative. It is necessary for coal operators to build numerous tenement houses for their employes, stores, warehouses, office buildings, hospitals, supply houses, hotels, and boarding houses, tipples for loading coal, crushing plants, side tracks, tram roads, motor roads; to erect tanks, dig wells, lay pipes; to have gardens and pastures both for themselves and employes; and many other rights and privileges depending on local conditions. Control of the surface is necessary to enable the operators to keep off persons engaged in selling whisky, to keep off as far as possible disreputable women and labor agitators. These, among others too numerous to mention in detail, are the purposes to which the coal operator must put the leased premises, and the right to so use such premises is necessarily incidental to the lease. Jones on Landlord & Tenant, § 382; Taylor on Landlord & Tenant, § 161; 24 Cyc. 1061.

[7] It is to be further observed that the action of the parties is significant as showing their intention, and that the construction of the lease now contended for by the appellees is not warranted. It appears that a large part of the leased premises, known as the Carter tract, part of which is the land in controversy in this suit, is cleared and has no mining timber upon it and no coal underlying it, and yet it was regarded as so important to the leased premises that the appellant, before consummating the lease, required the appellees to purchase the tract and include the same in the lease. This was manifestly not done for the purpose of mining coal or cutting timber from such land, for it was known that neither was there, but only because it was regarded as necessary for the lessee to have control of the surface in connection with its contemplated coal and coke operations. Its purchase and inclusion in the lease would have been a vain and useless thing unless the lessee could use the surface thereof in such manner as seemed to it best for furthering the success of its enterprise.

It further appears that the lessors made no objection to the erection of the houses in controversy on the leased premises, nor have they ever made any expenditure either for building the houses in controversy or for keeping up repairs or paying the insurance and taxes thereon. The houses were built under an arrangement made by the lessee for the purpose of providing tenements for its employes when needed. If under these circumstances the lessors were entitled to the rents of the houses, they would be entitled to the possession, and, if so, they would seem to have an equal right to enter and take possession of any other house of the lessee which was not at the time being occupied by an employe connected with its mining operations. Such a right would be repugnant to the letter as well as the spirit of the lease, and such a narrow construction of the lease, if carried to its logical conclusion, would impede and disorganize, if not entirely stop, the operations of the lessee.

In conclusion we are of opinion that the appellant was plainly within its rights in having the houses in controversy erected under the arrangement pointed out and in renting them to the Currier Lumber Corporation until it became necessary for appellant to use them for its own employes; and, further, that appellant was under no obligation to account to the appellees for the rent of such houses arising from their occupancy by the Currier Lumber Corporation or any one else.

The decree appealed from must therefore be reversed, and this court will enter such decree as the circuit court should have entered, dissolving the injunction in favor of the appellees and dismissing their bill, with costs.

Reversed.

ROSS et al. v. ROSS et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1913.)

1. WILLS (§ 733*)—CONSTRUCTION—DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY—PERSONAL PROPERTY.

A holographic will, by which the testator bequeathed to his wife $3,000 in cash from any money that was to his credit at the time of his death and all of his personal property of every description, when construed according to the expressed intent of the testator, using the words in their definite legal sense, gave to the wife immediately upon his death the cash on hand, which amounted to less than $3,000, and she was, at the settlement of the estate, entitled to the balance of the personal property, consisting largely of bonds and notes secured by mortgages and deeds of trust.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 1819-1846; Dec. Dig. § 733.*]

2. WILLS (§ 565*)—CONSTRUCTION—DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY—PERSONAL PROPERTY.

The separate bequest of the money will not be construed as indicating that the testator did not use the term "personal property" in its technical sense, but meant thereby his tangible personal effects, especially where it appeared that he had been supervisor and assessor and had had an opportunity to learn the legal distinction between real and personal property, and where the other clauses of the will spoke in detail of other property, but made no reference to the bonds and notes.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 1233-1238; Dec. Dig. § 565.*]

3. WILLS (§ 564*)—CONSTRUCTION—PROVISION FOR SUPPORT.

Where a testator provided by his will that his wife should manage the real property until the youngest child became 21, and then divide it equally among the children, and that out of the rents she should support herself and the unmarried daughters, she is not entitled to spend the entire amount of the rents for her support, but only such amount as is necessary to support herself and daughters in their station in life, and the balance is to be retained and divided when the property is divided.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 1228-1232; Dec. Dig. § 564.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court of City of Lynchburg.

Suit by Ross and others against Ross and others. Decree for defendants, and plaintiffs appeal. Modified and affirmed.

S. V. Kemp, of Lynchburg, for appellants.
F. S. Kirkpatrick, of Lynchburg, for appellees.

HARRISON, J. The late Eugene E. Ross departed this life at his home in Campbell county in June, 1912, leaving surviving him his wife, Lizzie I. Ross, and nine children. The deceased was twice married, and seven of the children surviving him were the offspring of his first marriage; the remaining two being the children of his second and surviving wife, the youngest of these two being born after the father's death.

The bill in this case was filed by the six adult children of the first marriage for the purpose of having construed the holograph will left by Eugene E. Ross, dated August 10, 1905, and duly probated in June, 1912. The will mentioned is as follows:

"I give to my Wife Lizzie I ROSS one Double Tenemt House on the Corner of 8th and Wise Street in Lynchburg, Va., and three thousand Dollars in Cash from any Muneys that may be to my Credit at the time of my Death and All my personal Property of Every Description I Give to Doherty Ross my youngest Daughter two houses and Lots in Campbell County none as Lots 10 and 11 in Fair ground Addition Same Lots as Come to me from John A. Faulkner.

"It is my Request that all other Property owned By me Shall be kept to Gether Except these Carpenters Chops located in Park avenue Addition which I wood Advice the Saile as Soon as Possible all other Property Except suchas I have Given a way in this will Shall be Ceped to Gether, untill my youngest Child become of Age then Equly Devided beleen all of my Children including Doherty Ross and I apoint my wife Lizzie I. Ross my agent to take incharge of all of my Property and Coriect all Rents and make Improvements and give to hirsif and children and unmared Dauter a Support out of Eny Rents She may Corlec untill the youngest Child become of Age I further more Request that no Bond be Required of Hir in wilness of the Above," etc.

It is apparent from the testator's spelling and punctuation that he was a man of little learning. The record, however, shows that he was a man of fine sense, excellent judgment, and good business qualifications, who had acquired by his thrift and business sense an estate valued at more than $50,000, which was nearly equally divided between real and personal property. While his spelling and punctuation are bad, the intention of the testator is expressed with reasonable clearness.

[1,2] The present controversy concerns chiefly the first sentence of the will, which is as follows: "I give to my Wife Lizzie I ROSS one Double Tenemt House on the Corner of 8th and Wise Street in Lynchburg, Va., and three thousand Dollars in Cash from any Muneys that may be to my Credit at the time of my Death and All my personal Property of Every Description."

At the time of the testator's death he had securities, principally deeds of trust or mortgages, aggregating about $23,000, and something over $1,000 in cash to his credit in bank. The interpretation which the complainants, who are the appellants here, insist upon giving to the foregoing language employed by the testator is that the cash to his credit at the time of his death included the bonds and notes left by him, and that the whole, cash on hand and the securities left, must be treated as one fund, out of which the $3,000 given his wife in cash from any money he might have to his credit must be paid; that the testator did not use the term "personal property" in its technical sense, but intended by the words "All my personal Property of Every Description" to give his wife only the tangible household property; that, if he had intended to give her all his personal property of every description, there would have been no occasion for the provision of $3,000 in cash from any money that might be to his credit at the time of his death, as the term "personal property" technically used would cover the $3,000 in cash, as well as the notes and bonds.

In Allison v. Allison, 101 Va. 543, 544, 44 S. E. 906, 63 L. R. A. 920, it is said:

"The object in construing wills is to arrive at the true intent of the testator, but that intent is to be gathered from the language used, for the object of construction is not to ascertain the presumed or supposed, but the expressed, intention of the testator; that is the meaning which the words of the will, correctly interpreted, convey. Wooton v. Redd's Ex'r, 12 Grat. [53 Va.] 206; Hatcher v. Hatcher, 80 Va. 171; Waring v. Bosher's Adm'r, 91 Va. 236, 21 S. E. 464.

"In construing wills, the words used should be given their ordinary and usual significance; but, where technical words are used, they are presumed to be used technically, and words of a definite legal signification are to be understood as used in their definite legal sense, unless the contrary appears on the face of the instrument. Waring v. Waring, 96 Va. 641, 32 S. E. 150."

Guided by these well-settled principles, we are of opinion that the construction contended for by the appellants is strained, and not warranted by the language used, and would wholly fail to effectuate the manifest intention of the testator. In addition to the presumption that the testator understood the technical meaning of the term "personal property," and that he used the words "All my personal Property of Every Description" in their usual and ordinary sense, and not in the restricted sense suggested by the appellants, it is shown of record that he had enjoyed large and unusual opportunities for acquiring a thorough knowledge of the distinction which the law makes between personal and real estate. For six years he was an active and influential member of the board of supervisors of Campbell county. In this capacity he frequently examined with care the tax lists which are divided into two classes and listed in separate books, one for real estate, and the other for personal property. He was at one time the assessor for his district, lying adjacent to the city of Lynchburg, which paid at that time about one-half of the taxes gathered from the entire county. In this capacity he had to assess separately both real and personal property. His opportunities, therefore, for knowing what was meant by the term "personal property," and what was included therein, were exceptionally good. His practical knowledge of the subject is further shown by the fact that he listed with the commissioner of the revenue, under the head of personal property, to be taxed, $8,500 of the bonds that are now the subject of dispute. It is not conceivable that a man of the testator's large business experience and fine sense would have given his wife all of his personal property of every description, when he had bonds and notes, intending by the use of such broad language to include only tangible property, such as household and kitchen furniture. Nor is it a reasonable supposition that he intended to include bonds and notes not due in the language "Cash from any Muneys that may be due to my Credit at the time of my Death."

There is no such conflict between the gift to his wife of $3,000 in cash from any money to his credit and the gift of all his personal property of every description as to justify the interpretation contended for by appellants, which would defeat the manifest intention of the testator. The testator doubtless realized that his wife, who was to have the care and support of his younger children, would need at once ready cash, and his purpose was to supply that need by providing that, out of any money to his credit at the time of his death, she should have not exceeding $3,000. It turned out that he had to his credit in bank at the time of his death little more than one-third the amount named, which is all that his wife can get under that provision. This result was probably intentional on the part of the testator; at any rate there is no occasion to speculate as to the proper disposition of the surplus cash, had he left more than $3,000 of money to his credit.

The effort to include bonds and notes not due for several years after the testator's death in the language "Cash from any Muneys * * * to my Credit at the time of my Death" is not in accord with common experience. The testator's good sense, fine judgment, and long and prosperous business career forbid the conclusion that he intended by the use of the language "Cash from any Muneys * * * to my Credit at the time of my Death" to include as money to his credit bonds and notes not due.

When we look to the whole will, we find that the testator speaks somewhat in detail of his other property, which had not been devised by the clause under consideration. He authorizes his wife to collect the rents and use the same in making improvements, etc., and in supporting herself and children and unmarried daughter until the youngest child comes of age. He does not refer to the interest or income from his bonds and notes, because the personal property from which such income would be derived had already been given in absolute estate to his wife. In the latter part of his will he was dealing only with the estate left after the gift of his personal property to his wife.

It is very clear from the whole will that the testator's intention was to provide liberally for his wife, who was charged with the care and support of his dependent children, and yet, if the construction sought to be placed upon his will by the appellants were sound, his wife would have far less with which to carry her burden than she would have had if her husband had died intestate. Upon this branch of the case, the decree appealed from is without error.

[3] It is conceded that the support which the rents had to afford was for the widow, her two children, and unmarried daughter. The decree appealed from gives them this support, but goes further, and directs that the net proceeds of such rents shall be divided into four equal parts, one of which shall belong to Mrs. Ross, and one to each of her three daughters.

We are of opinion that this provision for support means a support according to their station in life, and while from the evidence it is not likely that the rents will exceed such support before the youngest child comes of age, still it is possible that it may do so, in which event the surplus over a support would have to be preserved for distribution among all the children when the youngest child reaches maturity. The language of the testator must be regarded, and the court was without power to determine now that until the youngest child comes of age—some 15 years hence—all the net rents should be applied to such support.

The decree under review inadvertently holds that the pretermitted child, Verna Ross, is entitled to one-eighth of the estate, whereas it should have held her entitled to one-ninth thereof; there being nine children.

The decree appealed from must, therefore, be so modified as to provide that the net revenue from rents shall be used by Lizzie I. Ross until her youngest child is of age, for the support of herself and three daughters, named in the decree, to the extent that such net rents may be necessary for their support according to their station in life, and further modified so as to provide that Verna Ross, the pretermitted child, shall be entitled to one-ninth of the estate. Subject to these two modifications, the decree complained of must be affirmed, with costs in favor of the appellees, as the parties substantially prevailing.

Modified and affirmed.

STEELE'S ADM'R v. COLONIAL COAL & COKE CO.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia.
Sept. 11, 1913.)

1. RAILROADS (§ 282*)—INJURIES TO LICENSEE—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE—NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for the death of a coal miner who was killed by being knocked from the platform of an engine, where he was riding for his own convenience, by the impact of an engine of the defendant company with a car coupled to the engine on which he was riding, evidence held insufficient to show any actionable negligence on the part of the employees of the defendant company.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 910-923; Dec. Dig. § 282.*]

2. TRIAL (§ 156*)—DEMURRER TO EVIDENCE—DETERMINATION.

Where deceased was killed by being thrown from the platform of a dinky engine, on which he was riding, by the impact of another engine against a car, from which the dinky had just been uncoupled, but the evidence failed to show whether it was before or after the dinky was put in motion, it will be assumed on demurrer to the evidence that it was afterwards.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 354-356; Dec. Dig. § 156.*]

3. NEGLIGENCE (§ 121*)—ACTIONS—PRESUMPTION AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

Negligence will not be presumed in an action to recover damages for personal injuries; but the burden is upon the plaintiff to prove it by a preponderance of the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 217-220, 224-228, 271; Dec. Dig. § 121.*]

4. NEGLIGENCE (§ 1*)—ACTIONS—ASSUMPTION OF RISK.

No cause of action arises from an injury caused by the doing of a dangerous but lawful act in a lawful manner; but in such cases the doctrine of assumption of risk applies.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. § 1; Dec. Dig. § 1.*]

5. RAILROADS (§ 276*)—INJURIES TO LICENSEES—ASSUMPTION OF RISK.

The rule that one who takes passage on a freight train assumes the risk of such jerking and jarring as are incident to the operation of such trains applies more strongly to a licensee than to a passenger, for whose safety the carrier is held to the exercise of extraordinary care.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 878-886; Dec. Dig. § 276.*]

6. RAILROADS (§ 280*)—INJURIES TO LICENSEES—DUTY TO MAKE RULES.

Where one coal company allows another to use its railroad yards, it owes no duty to a licensee on an engine of the other company to promulgate rules for the movement of engines in the yards.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 817-823; Dec. Dig. § 280.*]

7. RAILROADS (§ 282*)—INJURIES TO LICENSEES—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE—PROXIMATE CAUSE.

In an action for the death of one who was killed while riding upon an engine of a coal company in the yards of the defendant company, evidence held insufficient to show any proximate causal connection between the failure of the defendant company to promulgate rules for the movement of engines in its yards and the injury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 910-923; Dec. Dig. § 282.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Wise County.

Action by William Steele's administrator against the Colonial Coal & Coke Company. Judgment for the defendant upon a demurrer to the evidence, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

E. M. Fulton, of Wise, and A. N. Kilgore, of Norton, for plaintiff in error. Bullitt & Chalkley, of Big Stone Gap, for defendant in error.

WHITTLE, J. The following is a summary of the salient facts concerning the killing of William Steele, to recover damages for whose death this action was brought:

The defendant, the Colonial Coal & Coke Company, prevailed in the circuit court upon a demurrer to the evidence, and that judgment is now before us for review.

[1] The defendant is a private corporation, and operates a railroad as an adjunct to its business, extending from its coal mines and coking plant at Dorchester to Dorchester Junction, three miles away, where a connection is formed with the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and the Interstate Railroad. The defendant is not a common carrier, but uses this branch line of railway under the statute which allows a coal company to operate a railroad from its mines to a junction point with a common carrier. The Sutherland Coal & Coke Company (which will hereinafter be called the Sutherland Company) is a private firm of coal operators, and owns a line of railroad from their plant on Powell's river, a distance of several miles, to a point of junction with the defendant's road at Dorchester, from which latter point to Dorchester Junction they run their cars over the defendant's road. Besides its main track from Dorchester to Dorchester Junction, the defendant has several switches or yard tracks, used in connection therewith, in the immediate vicinity of its coke ovens. The Sutherland Company owned a "dinkey" engine of about 18 tons weight, and the defendant's engine weighed 65 tons. There was also a traffic arrangement between the two coal companies, by which the Sutherland Company was permitted to operate its "dinkey" over the defendant's yard tracks.

[2] On the day of the accident the dinkey had pushed a car loaded with brattice lumber from the plant of the Sutherland Company to Dorchester to a point where a gondola car loaded with cinders was standing on the main track. Thereupon the dinkey pushed both cars down the main track and stopped near the commissary. The big engine was on the main track a short distance below the commissary, and the crew were under orders to shove the cinder car up the track, and switch it off on the cinder track to be emptied. The engineer in charge of the dinkey was advised of the proposed movement, and requested to remove his engine up the track beyond the cinder switch. He accordingly raised the lever on the brattice car and placed it in position to uncouple that car from the dinkey. Discovering two negroes and Steele in the cab of his engine, he ordered them to "unload," and the negroes stepped off. It does not appear whether Steele attempted to get off the dinkey or not; but at that juncture (whether immediately before or after the dinkey was put in motion was not clearly shown, but upon a de-nurrer to the evidence it must be assumed to have been afterward) the big engine backed up against the cinder car, and the force of the jar was imparted to the brattice car and jostled the lever back in position, automatically coupling the car to the dinkey, which moved it several feet up the track, leaving that space between it and the cinder car. At the time of the impact Steele fell from the platform of the dinkey, which was unguarded, between it and the brattice car, and the wheels of the latter passed over his body and killed him. Steele was an employé of the Sutherland Company (but was not about its business when he was killed), and such employés were in the habit of getting on the dinkey anywhere it might be in the yard to ride back from Dorchester to Sutherland. This service was rendered free of charge, and Steele had boarded the dinkey for his own convenience, and at a time and under circumstances which must have made it known to him that the time had not arrived for the dinkey to set out on the return trip to Sutherland, nor was it satisfactorily shown why he remained on the engine after he was ordered to "unload" (to get off).

It is undenied that the engineer in charge of the dinkey was apprised of the purpose of the crew of the big engine to couple it onto the cinder car and push it off on the cinder track, and that this was done in the usual way, and with ordinary care. The speed of the big engine did not exceed one mile an hour, and the force of the impact was not excessive, "the bump was very light," less, it was said, than is usually incident to coupling cars under like conditions. Nor does it appear that those in charge of the big engine knew of the presence of Steele on the dinkey.

[3] In these circumstances, without considering any other phase of the case, it is manifest that the evidence fails to fix actionable negligence upon the defendant. The general doctrine is fundamental, that, in an action to recover damages for personal injuries, negligence will not be presumed; but the burden rests upon the plaintiff to prove it affirmatively and by a preponderance of the evidence. This rule is nowhere more strongly stated, or more steadfastly adhered to, than in the decisions of this court. N. & W. Ry. Co. v. Cromer, 101 Va. 687, 44 S. E. 898; Consumers' Brewing Co. v. Doyle, 102 Va. 390, 46 S. E. 390; Northington v. Norfolk R., etc., Co., 102 Va. 446, 46 S. E. 475; N. & W. Ry. Co. v. McDonald, 106 Va. 207, 55 S. E. 554; Baughner v. Harman, 110 Va. 316, 66 S. E. 86.

[4, 5] No cause of action can arise when an injury results from doing a dangerous but lawful act in a lawful manner. To hold otherwise would be to outlaw numerous occupations which are essential to the welfare of mankind. In all such cases the doctrine of "assumption of risk" applies. When, therefore, one takes passage on a freight train, he assumes the risk of such jerking and jarring as are incident to the operation of that class of trains as distinguished from passenger trains. 6 Cyc. 625, and cases cited. If this be the rule with respect to passengers, for whose safety the carrier is usually held to the exercise of extraordinary care, a fortiori must it apply to a mere licensee, to whom a lesser degree of care is due, who chooses to ride on a dinkey engine, without compensation, and for his own convenience.

[8, 7] Complaint is made of the failure of the defendant to have promulgated rules for the movement of engines on its yard. No such duty was owing from the defendant to a mere licensee upon its premises; but if it were the evidence does not show any proximate causal connection between the alleged omission and the injury complained of, as was done in the case of an employé in Va. Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Lore, 104 Va. 217, 51 S. E. 371.

The judgment is plainly right, and must be affirmed.

Affirmed.

KISER v. COLONIAL COAL & COKE CO. (Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1913.)

1. ELECTRICITY (§ 15*)—LIABILITY FOR INJURIES TO LICENSEES AND TRESPASSERS.

Parallel with a wagon road was the track of a motor road, across which was a path used by those in the vicinity in crossing the track. An electric light wire was strung along the motor poles, and had broken at a point five feet from the path. In disobedience to the positive orders of her parents not to go on the track, a child three years old went on the track, took hold of the wire, and brought it in contact with the rail, causing a flash, which set fire to her clothes. Held, that the company owning the track and wire was not liable for her injuries and death, since she was a trespasser, or at most a bare licensee, to whom the company owed no duty of having the place of the accident in safe condition, and, moreover, the bringing of the wire in contact with the rail was a result which could hardly have been foreseen.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Electricity, Cent. Dig. § 8; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

2. NEGLIGENCE (§ 33*)—CARE REQUIRED AS TO TRESPASSERS.

An owner of premises owes to a trespasser the duty only of doing him no intentional or willful injury, and before any duty of protection arises there must be such notice of his danger as would put a prudent man on the alert.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 45-47; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

3. NEGLIGENCE (§ 32*)—CARE REQUIRED AS TO "LICENSEE."

A "licensee," or one who is permitted by the passive acquiescence of the owner to come on his premises for his own convenience, takes upon himself all the ordinary risks attached to the place and the business carried on there, and while the owner must not intentionally or willfully injure him, he owes him the active duty of protection only after he knows of his danger, or might have known it and avoided it by the use of ordinary care.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 42-44; Dec. Dig. § 32.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 5, p. 4143; vol. 8, p. 7706.]

Error to Circuit Court, Wise County.

Action by J. B. Kiser, administrator of May Lunsford, against the Colonial Coal & Coke Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Bond & Bruce, of Wise, for plaintiff in error. Bullitt & Chalkley, of Big Stone Gap, for defendant in error.

WHITTLE, J. This is a personal injury action to recover damages for the death of plaintiff's intestate, May Lunsford, ascribed to the wrongful act of the defendant in error, the Colonial Coal & Coke Company, hereinafter referred to as "the company." The plaintiff brings error to the judgment of the circuit court rendered for the company on a demurrer to the evidence.

[1] The material facts are these: May Lunsford, who at the time of her death was 3 years and four months old, was the daughter of James Lunsford, a coal miner in the employment of the company, and lived with her parents in a house leased from the company and located in the mining town of Dorchester. The house fronts on a wagon road, beyond which and practically parallel with it at that point is the track of the motor road, which is about 40 feet from the house. There was also a wire fence between the house and the motor track, which was in a dilapidated condition. There were three houses, including the house occupied by the Lunsfords, in a row on the same side of the motor track, and the families who lived in these houses were in the habit of using a path which crossed the track in front of them for the purpose of going to the commissary and post office and spring, and the miners to their work. These various places could also be reached by following the wagon road to the stable and thence across the track into the streets of Dorchester; but the path afforded a nearer route, and was habitually used for the purposes mentioned by the three families referred to. It moreover appeared that the children of these families were accustomed to use the space between the dwellings and the motor track for a playground; but the track was a recognized place of danger for children, and Lunsford had given his wife instructions to keep their children off the track and had whipped them for going upon it, fearing that they might be run over and killed by the motor, which ran along there frequently and at a rate of speed which rendered it extremely dangerous to young children who might be on the track. A small electric light wire was strung along the motor poles and used to supply light to the company's barn and one of its tenant houses. This wire from some cause was weak and had frequently broken, and from time to time been repaired in a crude way by any employé of the company who chanced to discover the break; and of its general condition the company had notice.

Shortly before the casualty, which caused the child's death two days later, the wire broke at a point 5 feet from the path. The details of the accident may best be told in the language of an eyewitness, Mrs. Far-bush, who says: "I saw the little boy, the brother of May, take hold of the wire and put the end down against the track, and it made a flash. I supposed at the time they had powder there. The little girl then took hold of the wire and stuck it down, and there came a flash and set the little girl's clothes on fire. The boy was about 8 years old."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Index

†Rehearing denied December 4, 1913.

It thus appears that there was no danger in merely taking hold of the wire. No harm resulted to either child from that cause per se; but the injury came when the flash caused by bringing the end of the live wire in contact with the rail set fire to the child's clothes. That was the proximate cause of the accident, a result which could hardly have been foreseen. Moreover, it is not pretended that the children had any business at the point of the accident. They were there in disobedience to the positive orders from their parents, and without the knowledge or consent of the company. They were in no sense invitees, and were trespassers, or at most bare licensees, upon the track. In neither relation did the company owe to plaintiff's intestate the duty of having the place of accident in safe condition. The duty of prevision is not due by the proprietor of premises to either one of those classes.

[2] Speaking generally, the duty owing by the owner "to a trespasser on his premises is to do him no intentional or willful injury." There must be such notice of the trespasser's danger as would put a prudent man on the alert before the duty of protection arises.

[3] So, also, with respect to a bare licensee (that is to say, one who is permitted by the passive acquiescence of the owner to come on his premises for his own convenience). He "takes upon himself all the ordinary risks attached to the place and the business carried on there." The owner must not intentionally or willfully injure him, but he owes him the active duty of protection only after he knows of his danger, or might have known of it and avoided it by the use of ordinary care. These principles have been repeatedly announced by this court and are conclusive of the case. Nichol's Adm'r v. W. O., etc., R. Co., 83 Va. 102, 5 S. E. 171, 5 Am. St. Rep. 257; N. & W. R. Co. v. Wood, 99 Va. 156, 37 S. E. 846; Walker v. Potomac, etc., R. Co., 105 Va. 226, 53 S. E. 113, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 80, 115 Am. St. Rep. 871, 8 Ann. Cas. 862; Clark v. Fehlhaber, 106 Va. 803, 56 S. E. 817, 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 442; Eaton v. Moore, 111 Va. 400, 69 S. E. 326.

In Walker v. Potomac, etc., R. Co., supra (a turntable case in which an infant was killed), the authorities are reviewed at length, and the court reaches the conclusion that the rule that a landowner does not owe to a trespasser the duty of keeping his land in a safe condition applies as well to infants as to adults.

Upon the whole case, we find no error in the judgment under review, and it must be affirmed.

Affirmed.

CHEESEBREW v. TOWN OF POINT PLEASANT et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Oct. 29, 1912.)

Dissenting opinion.

For majority opinion, see 71 W. Va. 199, 76 S. E. 424.

WILLIAMS, J. (dissenting). I agree that the charter of a municipality, which gives it the right to sue and be sued, to contract and be contracted with, by necessary implication also confers power to employ counsel and to provide for their compensation; but such implied power must be limited to the cases in which the town's rights are directly involved. It does not confer the right to employ counsel in suits wherein the town is not a party and its interests only collateral and incidental. Butler v. Milwaukee, 15 Wis. 493; Hight v. Monroe County, 68 Ind. 575. Such implied power can be no more than is necessary to make effective the powers expressly granted; it must be restricted to cases wherein the town sues, or is sued, or, wherein its contracts, involving liability, are at stake. It must either be a party to the suit, or it must have some present pecuniary interest directly affected by the litigation; it must involve more than a mere right to be exercised at some future time.

The town of Point Pleasant was not peculiarly interested in the result of Harden's trial. It had issued him a license to sell intoxicating liquors, and had received its license tax. It did not guarantee the right, and was not bound to return the tax in the event the court had held the license void. It was as much Harden's duty to interpret the town's charter as it was the duty of the town itself. He took whatever risk there was of a mistaken interpretation; and the courts never relieve against a mistake of law.

The courts are as much bound, being a co-ordinate branch of the government, to interpret correctly the charter privileges and powers of a municipality, when they are collaterally brought in question, as they are to interpret correctly the law relating to any other matter. Hence, viewing the municipality as a subdivision of the state government, its interest in securing a particular interpretation of its charter is not distinct from the interest which the court itself would have in giving that interpretation. They are both instruments of government. A municipal charter confers governmental, not private, rights; and the Legislature may grant to, or withhold from, municipalities privileges and powers, at its pleasure; and the courts must construe the law so as to carry out the legislative will. Therefore a municipality has no more implied power to employ counsel to engage in a suit, to which it is not a party for the purpose of securing a particular construction of its charter, than it has to employ counsel to attend a session of the Legislature, for the purpose of securing the passage of an act amending its charter; and no one, I think, would contend that such power as that is given by implication.

McGUIRE v. OLD SWEET SPRINGS CO.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Dec. 2, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 651*)—RECORDS—DEPOSITION—WANT OF SERVICE.

Apparent want of service of a notice to take a deposition read on the trial in the court below over a general objection will not be regarded on writ of error here when it is made to appear from a corrected record certified from the lower court that notice thereof was in fact duly accepted by counsel.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2815; Dec. Dig. § 651.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 6*)—EMPLOYMENT—FABRICATED CONTRACT—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The evidence in this case is not sufficient to overcome the verdict of the jury against defendant's theory that the contract sued on was a fabricated contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 6; Dec. Dig. § 6.*]

3. CORPORATIONS (§ 291*)—OFFICERS—TERM OF OFFICE—WORKMEN.

Section 53, chapter 53, Code 1906, relating to corporations providing that "the officers and agents so appointed shall hold their places during the pleasure of the board," does not apply to persons employed to perform work, such as carpenter work, and who are in no way to act in a representative capacity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1250-1254; Dec. Dig. § 291.*]

4. CORPORATIONS (§ 407*)—GENERAL MANAGER—AUTHORITY—CONTRACT—VALIDITY.

There is no apparent authority in the general manager of a corporation operating a summer hotel, due to the nature of his office, to make unusual, extraordinary or unnecessary contracts for labor, such as carpenter work, extending beyond the term of his own employment, but when with specific direction of the president, or there is no abuse of such authority and no fraud or imposition practiced in making such contract, it is not necessarily void.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1615-1619; Dec. Dig. § 407.*]

5. CORPORATIONS (§ 407*)—GENERAL MANAGER—AUTHORITY—CONTRACT—VALIDITY.

A proposal in writing by such corporation operating such hotel through such general manager, to a mechanic, to furnish him carpenter work, at a definite price per day, and for a definite time, running for a short time into another season and beyond the term of such general manager, when duly accepted and the work entered upon, is not void for want of authority express or implied on the part of such general manager to make the contract, and as being an unusual, extraordinary or unnecessary contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1615-1617; Dec. Dig. § 407.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

6. CONTRACTS (§ 10*) — MUTUALITY — WORK AND LABOR.

Nor is such a contract or proposal, when so accepted, void for want of mutuality of obligation on the part of the contracting parties.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 21-40; Dec. Dig. § 10.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Monroe County.

Action by W. J. McGuire against the Old Sweet Springs Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Brown, Jackson & Knight and O. P. Fitzgerald, all of Charleston, for plaintiff in error. T. N. Read, of Hinton, and J. H. Crozier, of Ronceverte, for defendant in error.

MILLER, J. In assumpsit plaintiff recovered a verdict and judgment for $387.00, on the following contract declared on: "September 15, 1908. Mr. Wm. McGuire contract with Old Sweet Springs Hotel Co. * * * Old Sweet Springs Hotel Co. agrees to furnish carpenter work for Wm. McGuire from above date to June 1—09 at Rate of 2.50 per day, McGuire to board himself, the Company to furnish 6 Rooms in Biery Cottage free of rent also to furnish all cord wood required between dates mentioned. Company also agrees to employ McGuire's Son (U. McG.) as Carpenter at least two (2) days a week at $2.00 per Day between dates mentioned, he to board himself. [Signed] Old Sweet Springs Hotel Co. (R)."

It is substantially averred in the declaration, that in consideration of the agreement and promises contained in said contract, plaintiff with his said son, a minor, on September 15, 1908, did move upon the premises of defendant, and into said cottage, and then and there began the discharge of their duties under the contract, and that defendant, well knowing and understanding the terms and effect thereof, did then and there recognize, approve and ratify the same, and did then and there furnish plaintiff and his said son, the cottage, cord wood and carpenter work, pursuant thereto, and so continued until November 1, 1908, when without any fault on his part, and without cause or assigning any reason therefor, and without plaintiff's consent, it withdrew from plaintiff and his said son all carpenter work, and other work of any kind, and notified him, that it would not furnish him further work, in direct violation of the terms of said contract, and did, on November 1, 1908, withdraw all further work from him, and paid him for the time from September 15, 1908, to November 1, 1908, at the rate of $2.50 per day for his services, and at the rate of $2.00 per day for two days in each week for his said son, and did furnish the cottage and cord wood as aforesaid, and that he and his said son had always been ready, willing, able and desirous to continue the work, but were stopped and hindered therein by defendant, wherefore, and for breach of the contract by defendant, plaintiff was entitled to recover from it, on the contract, for 182 working days from November 1, 1908, to June 1, 1909, on account of labor to have been performed by himself, and for 60 days, at the rate of $2.00 per day within the same period, to have been performed by his said son. Laying his damages at $500.00.

Defendant demurred to the declaration and to each count, which was overruled. Its pleas were non-assumpsit, and a special plea of non est factum, on which issues were joined, and the case was tried by a jury.

On the trial it was shown and admitted that the name, "Old Sweet Springs Hotel Co. (R)," was signed to the alleged contract, as the initial "R" implied, by W. D. Rockefeller, general manager, employed to operate the hotel for the season, and whose time, beginning in the spring, expired November 1, 1908; and it was proven that about September 1, 1908, Rockefeller had been notified, by the president of the defendant company, that he would not be continued in service after his term expired, and to at once close the house, discharge the labor, and prepare to settle up his accounts, and end his connection with the company.

The issues tendered on the trial were: (1) That the alleged contract was a fabrication conceived of after Rockefeller's employment ended. (2) That in any event, it was void and not binding on defendant, being without express authority; and, in so far as it purported to hire help for a period beyond Rockefeller's own employment, not within any "apparent authority" incident to his position. (3) That in any event, the alleged contract was nudum pactum, without consideration, and non-enforceable.

The following are relied on as errors calling for reversal: First, the admission of Rockefeller's deposition in evidence: Second, the refusal of the court to instruct a verdict for the defendant: Third, the giving of the only instruction asked for by plaintiff: Fourth, the refusal of the court to set aside the verdict and award defendant a new trial.

[1] The first point we think is not seriously relied on. There was objection on the trial to the reading of the deposition, which was overruled; but the objection was general, and not for want of notice suggested here. The notice as certified in the bill of exceptions does not show service of the notice on defendant, but a corrected copy from the record, since certified here on our request by the clerk of the circuit court, shows acceptance of service of the notice by local counsel for the defendant company. So this point of error will be overruled.

[2] If either of the three several issues tendered by defendant, were erroneously determined against it, it follows that the second, third and fourth errors assigned should be sustained, and the judgment below reversed. On the first, that the contract was a fabrication, the evidence is conflicting. Actual knowledge of this fact was known only to Rockefeller and McGuire, both of whom swear that the contract was made on or about its date, September 15, 1908. Rockefeller swears, moreover, that it was made pursuant to express verbal authority, of C. C. Lewis, Jr., President of the Company, and upon a memorandum made on an envelope in the presence of Lewis, shortly before the paper was prepared, and that the contract was made on a duplicate copy book, which was left in the safe in the private office at the hotel when everything was turned over to the company. McGuire swears that he moved into the cottage, and that he and his son performed labor under the contract, and were paid according to its terms up to November 1, 1908, when he was discharged. Prior to the date of the paper, both McGuire and his son had been working under Rockefeller, at the same kind of work, for several months, by the day, and under no special contract in writing.

That any such special authority was given by Lewis, president, is flatly denied by him; he swears that while at the hotel about September 1, 1908, he notified Rockefeller to close the house, discharge the help and that his services would not be required after November 1, 1908; that he left Old Sweet Springs about September 1, 1908, it might have been a few days after the first, returning to his home in Charleston, and that the first he knew of the alleged contract, was through his father, some time during the following winter. Mr. C. C. Lewis, Sr., appointed general manager, September 30, 1908, notified Rockefeller about October 10 or 12, that he would be at the hotel on October 14; that he did go and then instructed him to close up everything. Later, on November 3, he returned, to settle up, and on inquiry of Rockefeller whether he had his accounts ready so he could settle and pay labor bills, Rockefeller replied that there was no one then employed, except Burns, the gardener, Griffith, employed regularly on the farm, and a girl he had brought with him as a family servant. He did say there was one man McGuire, whom he considered it a hardship to dismiss at that time, and on Rockefeller's suggestion, Lewis went to see McGuire, telling him that if he considered it a hardship, he could have the cottage and his fire wood free until May 1, 1909, which seemed satisfactory to McGuire, and that the existence of the alleged contract was not then hinted or suggested either by Rockefeller or McGuire, and that he never heard of such a contract until in April following, when at the Springs McGuire delivered him a letter telling him of the contract, and threatening suit. He further swears that he then inquired of McGuire whether the alleged contract had not been drawn by Rockefeller and Marshall, his lawyer, a few days previous, when Marshall was there, and to which McGuire would make no answer.

There is considerable other evidence tending to throw suspicion on the contract. For example, McGuire wrote Lewis, Sr., February 16, 1909, making demand for a small bill for labor, which one of the workmen had assigned him to pay a board bill, also requesting him to secure payment of a small bill for crating a cart for Mr. John Lewis, and saying he was badly in need, having been without anything to do all winter, with a family to support. Then on April 3, 1909, he delivered to Lewis, Sr., the letter already alluded to, evidently dictated by an attorney, notifying Lewis of his alleged contract.

A bit of evidence, which might have shed much light on the question of fabrication, in the possession of defendant, was not produced. That was the duplicate order book, containing the contract with McGuire, which Rockefeller swears he left in the defendant's safe, November 1, 1908. The fact of the existence of that book and its contents was not denied, and the book was not produced. If that book came to the possession of defendant November 1, 1908, and contained the contract with McGuire, as Rockefeller swears, and swears that Lewis, Jr., had knowledge of it, it would have been strong evidence against the defendant's theory of fabrication, at least after November 1. If, on the contrary, the contract was not in the book, it would have furnished almost convincing evidence of fabrication, besides would have convicted Rockefeller of swearing falsely, entitling his whole evidence to little, if any, credence.

The apparent silence of McGuire about the contract, for so long a time, is of course a very strong circumstance against him. But if he was resting in the belief that defendant knew of his contract, through Rockefeller, and had the evidence of it in the order book, his conduct afterwards and in writing the letters are not wholly inconsistent. He swears that when he was laid off in November he understood it was for only a short time, and, according to Griffith, he said he, Lewis, Sr., had promised him the refusal if improvements should be made. If he had a binding contract, he might have been willing to be laid off for a short time, without surrendering any rights under his contract. He swears that he applied to Putney, the bookkeeper, for work, and also to Mr. Lewis himself, pursuant to the contract. Putney is not called as a witness on the subject.

On this evidence, was the jury wholly unwarranted in finding the contract genuine and not a fabrication, according to the theory of defendant? Whatever our personal views of the evidence may be, we could not justify reversal of the judgment, on principles applicable to trials by jury, on this score:

[4] Now as to the second issue, namely, want of express or apparent authority in Rockefeller to make the contract, voiding it. As noted, Rockefeller swore that he had the express direction of Lewis, Jr., president, to make the contract, denied by Lewis, but according to Rockefeller, fully known to him, and recorded in the duplicate order book left in the defendant's possession. There is one thing respecting Rockefeller's evidence of express authority from Lewis, which weakens it. He swears that his direction from Lewis to employ McGuire, was when the latter had another offer, and the proposal involved McGuire's moving his family from Pocahontas County to Old Sweet Springs, and in connection with proposed improvements of the property amounting to $50,000, to be carried out under Rockefeller's direction, with McGuire as foreman, etc. These circumstances accord with the circumstances of McGuire's original employment, before his departure from Pocahontas County, and in the beginning of Rockefeller's own employment, rather than those surrounding the parties in September, after all work had been ordered stopped, and Rockefeller had been notified of his own discharge, to be effective November first. He was evidently mistaken in the circumstance of the contract. But there is the contract, made or purporting to have been made September 15, 1908, recorded in the duplicate order book of the defendant, and the participating witnesses swear that it is genuine and made at that time.

But it is said the case was not tried or rested on the theory of express authority, but, as evidenced by the only instruction to the jury asked and given on behalf of plaintiff, on the theory of apparent authority of a general manager. If there was express authority, as, upon the evidence, the jury might have found, defendant could not complain of an instruction on the theory of apparent authority, of the general manager.

Against the theory of apparent authority, it is contended, first, that section 53, chapter 53, Code 1906, constitutes a statute of limitation, not only upon the general manager, but upon the board of directors of a corporation also, employing officers and agents, except at the pleasure of the board of directors. Second, that there is no apparent or implied authority from the character of the office of general manager to employ labor or make contracts of any kind for a period beyond his own employment.

[3] The statute, section 53, chapter 53, Code 1906, provides: "The officers and agents so appointed shall hold their places during the pleasure of the board." Note the statute says "officers and agents." In Darrah v. Ice & Storage Co., 50 W. Va. 419, 40 S. E. 373, the plaintiff suing was the Secretary-Treasurer, an officer of the company, and clearly within the statute. In Munn v. Trust Co., 66 W. Va. 204, 66 S. E. 230, 135 Am. St. Rep. 1024, we held that a mere bookkeeper, employed to do such work as might be assigned by the officers of the bank was not ex vi termini an officer or agent within the meaning of this statute. If this be the law, certainly a common carpenter employed, as the contract sued on implies, to do such daily work as he might be directed, and with no authority express or implied to represent the corporation, or to come into contact with the public in its business, is not an officer or agent whom the board or its general manager might not employ for a definite period. True he might be discharged by the corporation, but not without incurrance of liability for damages sustained, as Munn v. Trust Co., and cases cited, hold. If this were not law one board of directors, or its officers, could not contract for any kind of service beyond their own term of service, which would be greatly to the detriment of all kind of corporate business.

[5] But is there implied or apparent authority in a general manager to contract for such non-representative service, as carpenter work, beyond his own term of service? We think the authorities cited and relied on by counsel for defendant answer, No, if for anything unusual, extraordinary, or unnecessary, or if fraud or imposition upon the employer be shown. Laird v. Michigan L. Co., 153 Mich. 52, 116 N. W. 534, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 177; Camacho v. Hamilton Bank Note & Engraving Co., 2 App. Div. 369, 37 N. Y. Supp. 725; Nephew v. Michigan C. R. Co., 128 Mich. 599-602, 87 N. W. 753; Carney v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co., 162 N. Y. 453, 57 N. E. 78, 49 L. R. A. 471, 76 Am. St. Rep. 347; Ceeder v. H. M. Loud & Sons L. Co., 86 Mich. 541, 49 N. W. 575, 24 Am. St. Rep. 134; Smith v. Co-operative Dress Ass'n, 12 Daly (N. Y.) 304; Boogher v. Maryland L. Ins. Co., 8 Mo. App. 533; Vogel v. St. Louis Museum, etc., 8 Mo. App. 587; Reupke v. Grain Co., 126 Iowa, 633, 102 N. W. 509. But is this rule applicable here? Here was a general agent, with admitted authority to employ and discharge all labor, make necessary improvements, and carry on generally the business of a corporation operating a hotel remotely situated from centers of population, where good mechanics are generally found. Was it any thing unusual, extraordinary, or unnecessary, that he should employ a carpenter to reside on the grounds, and work out of season in making necessary repairs, usually made at such time, and to have the property in readiness for the following season, particularly, if, as is claimed in this case, such employment was suggested or directed by the president, or other executive officer, authorized in the premises? We can not think so. The power of a general manager depends largely on the nature of the business of the corporation. 2 Thompson on Corp. section 1585. We do not think, in this case, it was anything out of the usual or ordinary that the general manager should contract for labor to make repairs for the coming season, though extending slightly beyond the term of his own employment, even without the direction of an executive officer. With such direction there could be no doubt of it we think. 2 Thompson on Corporations, section 1581.

[8] But is the contract lacking in mutuality, and for this reason unenforceable? This point is strongly urged in a very elaborate and able brief of learned counsel. But we are of opinion, that it cannot be affirmed on authority. The contract amounted at least to a proposal by defendant to plaintiff to employ him. It was definite, certain and distinct both as to time, price and amount of service. According to the evidence plaintiff accepted this proposal, not by any formal writing, but by entering on the employment, and was paid according to the terms of the contract up to November 1, 1908. All this amounted to an acceptance of the proposal, binding him and the defendant to its entire performance, and though executory, constituted a valid contract, not void for want of the necessary element of mutuality. And if the defendant knew of the contract, and accepted service under it, and paid plaintiff pursuant thereto, as plaintiff's evidence tends to show, and as the jury may have concluded, that amounted to ratification, rendering the contract, if not in its inception, thereafter valid and binding. The acceptance by defendant could not be said to have been indefinite, conditional or uncertain. It is only when the acceptor himself has really promised nothing in return, has not made himself liable for any thing, or when the proposal is indefinite or uncertain so that acceptance results in nothing, that the rule of the authorities cited and relied on by defendant's counsel have complete application. 9 Cyc. 325; 1 Page on Contracts, sections 304, 306, and note 4; 2 Thompson on Corp. section 1585; Tucker v. Woods, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 190, 7 Am. Dec. 305; Hoffman v. Maffoli, 104 Wis. 630, 80 N. W. 1032, 47 L. R. A. 427. But when the proposal is certain, definite and unconditional, though the proposal be to one to perform labor, and there is like acceptance, there is no lack of mutuality, as the authorities cited and relied on we think fully show. Louisville & Nashville R. Co. v. Offutt, 99 Ky. 427, 36 S. W. 181, 59 Am. St. Rep. 467. If the conduct of plaintiff after the proposal in entering on the work amounted to acceptance, as we think it did, that proposal being certain, definite and unconditional, there was complete acceptance, and he thereby became bound to its fulfillment, and there was no lack of mutuality. We must, therefore overrule the point.

From all these considerations it follows, that the second, third and fourth points of error relied on must likewise be denied, and the judgment below affirmed.

GIBSON v. STATE. (No. 4,567.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Aug. 25, 1913.
Rehearing Denied Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EMBEZZLEMENT (§ 11*)—PUBLIC FUNDS—EVIDENCE.

One cannot be convicted of embezzlement, when it appears that all moneys collected by him in his fiduciary capacity have been fully paid to the person, firm, corporation, or department of government to which the funds should have been paid. The case is not altered if the payments are made on the wrong account.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Embezzlement, Cent. Dig. §§ 9, 10; Dec. Dig. § 11.*]

2. EMBEZZLEMENT (§ 4*) — WHAT CONSTITUTES.

If A. is charged with the duty of collecting for B. accounts from C. and D., he cannot be convicted of embezzlement if he pays the entire amount collected from D. to B., even though he directs that the amount collected be applied to the credit of C.'s account, if in fact he has not collected anything from C., and the account due by C. to B. is still outstanding.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Embezzlement, Cent. Dig. § 1; Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

Error from Superior Court, Brooks County; W. E. Thomas, Judge.

F. L. Gibson was convicted of embezzlement, and brings error. Reversed.

Branch & Snow, of Quitman, for plaintiff in error. Bennet, Long & Harrell, of Quitman, and Shipp & Kline, L. L. Moore, and J. A. Wilkes, Sol. Gen., all of Moultrie, for the State.

RUSSELL, J. The defendant was elected tax collector of Brooks county, to fill the unexpired term of his deceased father, who had held that office for about 14 years. At the time that he was inducted into office there was a shortage in the accounts of his deceased father of several thousand dollars, which had been collected as taxes of 1908. In 1909 the defendant collected the taxes for that year, and they were applied to settle the shortage of 1908. In the summer of 1910 the comptroller general called upon the tax collector for a settlement, but the defendant was unable to comply with this demand, because the funds had been applied as collections upon the accounts of his father for the year 1909. Various negotiations for settlement occurred between the defendant and the county officers of Brooks county and the comptroller general, and finally the grand jury of Brooks county indicted the defendant for embezzlement, and upon his trial he was convicted. There are various exceptions to rulings of the trial judge upon the admission of testimony, and complaints as to certain excerpts from his charge to the jury. We shall not consider any of these assignments of error, for the reason that we are of the opinion that the evidence fails to show the guilt of the accused, and that a new trial should have been granted upon the general ground that the verdict was contrary to law, because there was no evidence to support it.

[1] The single proposition upon which we base our ruling is that one cannot be shown to be guilty of embezzlement who has paid over all the money which he has collected to the person to whom it is due, even though he may have paid it upon the wrong account. The record shows that every dollar collected by this defendant was paid by him, either to the county of Brooks, if it was county tax, or to the comptroller general, if it was a state tax. It is true he directed that the money be applied to the shortage of his deceased father, in the effort to preserve the memory of that father from disgrace; but, after all, the county of Brooks and the state of Georgia received every dollar he collected, and it requires nothing more than the application of these payments to the proper account to correct the wrong, if any, done by the defendant. The Code section under which the accused was indicted declares that "any officer, servant, or other person employed in any public department, station, or office of the government of this state, or any county, town or city thereof, who shall embezzle, steal, secrete, or fraudulently take and carry away any money, paper, book, or other property or effects, shall be punished by imprisonment and labor in the penitentiary for not less than two years nor longer than seven years." Penal Code, § 184.

[2] It is somewhat strenuously insisted that, even if the conviction of the defendant was not authorized by proof of the embezzlement of $6,395 as alleged, he is guilty because of the embezzlement of the taxes collected from Tillman and those whom he represented. We of course recognize the principle that the conviction of the defendant would have been authorized as much if there was proof that he converted a portion of the amount charged against him as if he had converted to his own use the entire amount alleged in the indictment. If the defendant had collected the taxes from Tillman and those whom he represented, and had appropriated this amount (which is less than $200), or even $1 of it, to his own use, he would be guilty. According to the evidence, however, Tillman did not pay any money to the defendant. It appears that the defendant was personally indebted to Tillman for an amount larger than the amount due by Tillman to the state and county for his taxes for the year 1909, and that he gave Tillman tax receipts, signed by himself as tax collector, for the amounts due for taxes by Tillman himself and by certain firms and individuals whom Tillman represented, with the understanding that he (the defendant) personally was to make good these receipts by paying the taxes of Tillman and those whom he represented. Tillman did not pay to the defendant $1 in money. The fact that the defendant gave Tillman receipts does not affect the right of the county or state to force Tillman to pay the taxes, for nothing is better settled than that a receipt is only prima facie evidence of payment. "Receipts for money are always only prima facie evidence of payment, and may be denied or explained by parol." Civil Code, § 5795. If the defendant had carried out his undertaking, and had furnished the money to pay Tillman's taxes, and had in fact paid them, Tillman would have been relieved from liability to the state and county. But, as the tax collector in fact received no money from Tillman, he did not appropriate any such money to his own use, and he simply failed to carry out his promise to Tillman to pay Tillman's taxes; and, since no money was paid, this is a matter between Tillman and the defendant, with which the state of Georgia and the county of Brooks are not concerned. In other words, if Tillman had paid his taxes in money, it would have been within the power of the defendant either to have forwarded this money, as was his duty, or to have appropriated it to his own use, in which latter case he would have been guilty of embezzlement. But, having received no money, the only obligation resting upon the defendant was to make good his promise to Tillman, by supplying the money with which Tillman's taxes could be paid. This he failed to do, but this does not make the offense of embezzlement.

It is very plain from the evidence that the court erred in refusing a new trial.

Judgment reversed.

GEARRELD et al. v. WOODRUFF.
(No. 4,843.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 17, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. BAILMENT (§ 18*)—LIEN OF BAILEE—REPAIRS—RECORDING.

A failure to record a claim of lien for labor done or material furnished in repairing personal property within 10 days from the completion of the labor or the furnishing of the material is fatal to the maintenance of the lien, where possession of the property is surrendered to the bailor. Mulkey v. Thompson, 3 Ga. App. 522, 60 S. E. 223.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bailment, Cent. Dig. §§ 77-79, 81-84; Dec. Dig. § 18.*]

2. BAILMENT (§ 18*)—LIEN—REPAIRS—RECORDING—WAIVER.

The evidence demanded a finding that no claim of lien was recorded, and that possession of the property had been surrendered to the owner after the repairs for which the lien was claimed had been made. The evidence further demanded a finding that the defendants had waived their lien by an agreement to balance accounts from time to time with the person for whom the repairs had been made. This being so, and no claim of lien having been recorded as required by law, the lien was lost. Palin v. Cooke, 125 Ga. 442, 54 S. E. 90.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bailment, Cent. Dig. §§ 77-79, 81-84; Dec. Dig. § 18.*]

8. TROVER AND CONVERSION (§ 17*)—RIGHT OF ACTION—TITLE OF PLAINTIFF.

One who holds personal property as security for a debt may maintain trover for its recovery from one who wrongfully withholds possession thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trover and Conversion, Dec. Dig. § 17.*]

4. PREJUDICIAL ERROR—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

There was no prejudicial error in the excerpts from the charge objected to, and the evidence authorized the verdict.

Error from City Court of Newnan; W. A. Post, Judge.

Action by Mrs. P. L. Woodruff against W. P. Gearreld and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants bring error. Affirmed.

Hall & Jones and T. G. Farmer, Jr., all of Newnan, for plaintiffs in error. W. G. Post, of Newnan, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment affirmed.

HOBBS v. TAYLOR et al. (No. 4,864.) (Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 17, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY (§ 156*)—ACTION—PLEA.

Suit was brought on a forthcoming bond alleged to have been executed by two named minors as principals and the defendants as sureties. The defendants pleaded that they did not sign the bond sued on as sureties for the minors, but that they did execute a forthcoming bond for one Warren as principal, and that since its execution it was altered, without their knowledge or consent, so as to make it appear that the two minors named in the petition had signed the bond by Warren as agent and next friend. The undisputed evidence established the truth of this plea. Held, the trial judge did not err in refusing to strike the plea over the objection that it was not alleged therein that the alteration referred to was fraudulently made, and it was not error to direct a verdict in favor of the defendants. The effect of the plea was to set up that the defendants had not executed the contract sued on, and that for this reason they were entitled to be discharged. The plea was not governed by the general rule in reference to fraudulent alteration of instruments.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Surety, Cent. Dig. §§ 423-426; Dec. Dig. § 156.*]

Error from City Court of Dublin; J. B. Hicks, Judge.

Action by A. L. Hobbs, administrator, against W. B. Taylor and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Jas. A. Thomas, of Dublin, for plaintiff in error. S. P. New, of Dublin, for defendants in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment affirmed.

JOSEPH DRY GOODS CO. v. HOME PATTERN CO. (No. 4,752.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

SALES (§ 363*)—ACTION FOR PRICE—DIRECTION OF VERDICT—EVIDENCE.

The written contract sued on being unambiguous in its terms, and it being admitted that the defendant had not complied with the provision of the contract which authorized the defendant to return to the plaintiff and receive credit for certain patterns not sold by the defendant, and there being no facts in evidence which would excuse the noncompliance with the contract, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the full amount sued for, and there was no error in directing the jury so to find.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. § 1064; Dec. Dig. § 363.*]

Error from Superior Court, Baldwin County; J. B. Park, Judge.

Action by the Home Pattern Company against the Joseph Dry Goods Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Hines & Vinson, of Milledgeville, for plaintiff in error. D. S. Sanford, of Milledgeville, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

NEWTON v. COOPER. (No. 5,024.) (Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 17, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PARENT AND CHILD (§ 5*)—CONTROL OF CHILD—ABANDONMENT BY PARENT.

By abandonment of his family a father loses parental control over his minor children and the right to their services and the proceeds of their labor. Civil Code 1910, § 3021; Southern Railway Co. v. Flemister, 120 Ga. 524, 48 S. E. 160.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Parent and Child, Cent. Dig. §§ 70-73, 76, 76; Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

2. PARENT AND CHILD (§ 5*)—EARNINGS OF CHILD—RIGHTS OF MOTHER.

A mother, who has the care and custody of a minor child who has been abandoned by his father, is entitled to the services of the child and the proceeds of his labor. Savannah Railway Co. v. Smith, 93 Ga. 742, 21 S. E. 157; Amos v. Atlanta Railway Co., 104 Ga. 806, 31 S. E. 42.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Parent and Child, Cent. Dig. §§ 70-73, 75, 76; Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

3. PARENT AND CHILD (§ 6*)—ACTION FOR CHILD'S EARNINGS—NECESSITIES.

Where a parent sues one who, without his consent, had employed his minor son, to recover the value of the son's services while employed by the defendant, the latter has the right to set off the value of necessities supplied by him to the minor during the employment. Culbertson v. Alabama Construction Co., 127 Ga. 599, 56 S. E. 765, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 411, 9 Ann. Cas. 507.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Parent and Child, Cent. Dig. §§ 77-85; Dec. Dig. § 6.*]

4. PARENT AND CHILD (§ 6*) — ACTION FOR CHILD'S EARNINGS—NECESSITIES.

Applying the foregoing principles to the testimony of the plaintiff as set forth in the answer of the justice of the peace, the verdict in her favor was warranted. Under her testimony the sum recovered was less than the value of the minor's services, after deducting the amount expended by the defendant for necessities. There was no error in overruling the certiorari.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Parent and Child, Cent. Dig. §§ 77-85; Dec. Dig. § 6.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fayette County; Robt. T. Daniel, Judge.

Action by Mattie Cooper against Horace Newton. Judgment for plaintiff in justice's court, and from the refusal of certiorari by the superior court the defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Lester C. Dickson, of Fayetteville, for plaintiff in error. H. A. Allen, of Senoia, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. Judgment affirmed.

JONES v. BELLE ISLE. (No. 4,902.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 16, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. SUNDAY (§ 11*)—CONTRACTS—RIGHT TO ENFORCE.

A contract made on Sunday in furtherance of work of the ordinary calling of one of the contracting parties cannot be enforced by him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sunday, Cent. Dig. §§ 30-34; Dec. Dig. § 11.*]

2. SUNDAY (§ 15*)—CONTRACTS—RATIFICATION.

Where one, in pursuance of the work of his ordinary calling, lets to another on Sunday a conveyance which is used on that day, a subsequent promise by the user to pay for the conveyance, made on a secular day without any new consideration, will not support an action, either for the sum agreed to be paid or upon an account for the value of the hire of the conveyance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sunday, Cent. Dig. § 46; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; Geo. L. Bell, Judge.

Action by A. L. Belle Isle against H. T. Jones. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

J. E. & L. F. McClelland and M. Herzberg, all of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Young H. Fraser, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. Suit was brought to recover for the hire of automobiles. The defendant pleaded that the contract sued on was made and performed on Sunday. The evidence shows that on Saturday night, May 25, 1913, about 10 o'clock, the defendant rented an automobile from the plaintiff for the purpose of calling on some friends. The driver was told to wait, and some time after 12 o'clock the defendant ordered another machine, and both of them were used by him for several hours on Sunday morning in riding for pleasure, or as one witness described it, in "joy riding," which seems to be a term peculiarly applicable to pleasure trips in automobiles. Several days after the ride the defendant promised to pay the plaintiff the account sued on. The plaintiff's ordinary and usual business was letting automobiles for hire. The plaintiff prevailed, and the defendant's petition for certiorari was overruled.

[1] 1. The pursuit of one's ordinary calling on Sunday, except from necessity or for charity, is a crime. Penal Code, § 416. The law will not enforce a contract, the performance of which is made penal. The crime is punished, and the criminal must likewise lose the fruits of the illegal act. Ford v. Thomason, 11 Ga. App. 359, 75 S. E. 269. Hence it is that the court will not enforce a contract made on Sunday in furtherance of one's ordinary business. Calhoun v. Phillips, 87 Ga. 482, 13 S. E. 593; Smith v. Christian, 6 Ga. App. 259, 64 S. E. 1002; Dorough v. Equitable Mortgage Co., 118 Ga. 178, 45 S. E. 22. Generally if a contract founded upon an illegal consideration is executed, it will be left to stand. If it be executory, neither party can enforce it. Watkins v. Nugen, 118 Ga. 372, 45 S. E. 262. As letting automobiles for pleasure rides was a work neither of charity nor of necessity, the contract as to the automobile hired on Sunday was void ab initio.

[2] 2. If one's ordinary calling is lawful, a contract made in furtherance thereof is neither illegal nor immoral. If made on Sunday, it is unenforceable solely because the state, in the exercise of its police power, has prohibited the citizen from pursuing his usual business or calling on the Sabbath day. A contract founded upon a consideration which is neither illegal nor immoral may be subsequently ratified, even though it is unenforceable ab initio because made on a day on which the law prohibits it from being executed. Hence, if a contract of sale be made on Sunday and the property delivered to the purchaser, his retention of it after the expiration of Sunday would amount to a ratification and render him liable for the purchase price. And where a contract is made on Sunday, and the parties proceed to carry it out on a subsequent day, both will be bound. McAuliffe v. Vaughan, 135 Ga. 352, 70 S. E. 322, 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 255, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 290; Bryant v. Booz, 55 Ga. 438. In Meriwether v. Smith, 44 Ga. 541, it was held that, where a contract for labor was made on Sunday and afterwards performed by the laborer on a secular day, the promisor could not set up the illegality of the contract. In that case the distinction is clearly drawn between a suit to enforce a promise or undertaking entered into on Sunday and a suit on a contract made on Sunday where the thing to be done was afterwards performed. As was said by Judge McCay: "It would be a fraud, in one who has received the consideration of a contract on a week day, to set up the invalidity of the contract because made on Sunday. He reaffirms the contract by receiving the consideration." In Bendross v. State, 5 Ga. App. 175, 62 S. E. 728, this court held that a laborer could not be prosecuted for refusing to perform a contract of labor executed on Sunday; but it appeared that no affirmative action had been taken ratifying the contract on a secular day.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

The consideration of the contract into which the defendant entered in the present case was neither illegal nor immoral. The services were rendered by the plaintiff. The defendant was not bound by his promise to pay made on Sunday, nor would he be held bound by the implied promise to pay arising from the acceptance of the services. It is an anomaly to speak of the ratification of an agreement which never had any legal existence as a contract. Day v. McAllister, 15 Gray (Mass.) 433; Butler v. Lee, 11 Ala. 885, 46 Am. Dec. 230. Perhaps it is more accurate to say that, where a sale is made on Sunday, the retention of the property on a secular day will be treated as evidence of a new promise to pay, the continued use of the property being sufficient consideration for the promise, though upon principle it seems that the new promise ought to be confined to the value of the property and not to the amount contracted to be paid on Sunday. None of the cases, however, extend this rule, the soundness of which has been doubted (Ladd v. Rogers, 11 Allen [Mass.] 209; Tillock v. Webb, 56 Me. 100), to a case where the consideration has been consumed on Sunday and the status cannot be restored. The owner of the automobile knew it was illegal to let his machine on Sunday. With this knowledge he took the risk of voluntary payment by the defendant. The contract was wholly executed on Sunday; nothing remained to be done but to pay for the use of the machine. The new promise to pay was founded upon no new consideration, and there was no such obligation to pay as would support the new promise. The hirer of the automobile was engaged in an illegal act, one which is denounced by our law as a crime. The original promise to pay was made in furtherance of a crime. Therefore it could not furnish a consideration for a new promise made on a secular day. Catlett v. M. E. Church, 62 Ind. 365, 30 Am. Rep. 197. There is no reason why the courts should be solicitous to aid one who violates the Sunday law to reap the fruits of his illegal act. It is the declared policy of this state that no one shall pursue the work of his ordinary calling on Sunday. To allow the plaintiff to recover in this case would encourage the violation of the Sunday law. The purpose of the law is to discourage and, as far as possible, prohibit work on the Sabbath day save that which is done of necessity or for charity.

The plaintiff had no right to let his automobile for hire, and the defendant's promise to pay amounted to nothing. Of course, as to the machine used on Saturday, he is liable to the extent of its use on that day, and to this extent the plaintiff is entitled to recover.

Judgment reversed.

IVEY v. LOUISVILLE & N. R. CO. et al. (No. 4901.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

PETITION—SUFFICIENT—GENERAL DEMURRER.

As against a general demurrer, the petition set forth a cause of action for the recovery of the sum paid by plaintiff for transportation from Sparta to Atlanta over the defendant's railroad. As to other elements of damage, the petition set forth no cause of action. Johnson v. Seaboard Air Line Railway, 13 Ga. App. —, 79 S. E. 91.

Error from City Court of Sparta; R. W. Moore, Judge.

Action by Pelham Ivey against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company and others. Judgment for the defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

R. H. Lewis, of Sparta, for plaintiff in error. Jos. B. & Bryan Cumming, of Augusta, and Burwell & Fleming, of Sparta, for defendants in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment reversed.

SALTER v. BETTISON. (No. 4930.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 197*)—REVIEW—CERTIORARI.

To entitle a plaintiff in certiorari to another trial, he must show error in the trial under review. The plaintiff in the lower court (the defendant in certiorari) foreclosed a mortgage, and the defendant interposed an affidavit of illegality, based solely upon the ground that the property upon which the levy was made was homestead property and exempt from the debt for which the mortgage was given. The mortgage contained a waiver of homestead, and the record does not disclose any evidence tending to show that the nature of the exemption conferred by the homestead was such as to defeat the lien of the mortgage. The property having been found subject in the justice's court, the burden was upon the plaintiff in certiorari to show some legal reason why this judgment was erroneous. Having failed to show error in the judgment, the certiorari should have been overruled.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 768-771; Dec. Dig. § 197.*]

Error from Superior Court, Mitchell County; Frank Park, Judge.

Action by T. W. Salter against W. H. Betison. Judgment for plaintiff. From the sustaining of a certiorari in the superior court, plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

W. V. Custer, of Bainbridge, for plaintiff in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment reversed.

HERRING v. FIRST NAT. BANK OF VIENNA. (No. 4,925.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 330*)—ASSIGNMENTS (§ 34*)—BONA FIDE HOLDER OF NOTE—NECESSITY OF INDORSEMENT.

To enable the holder of a promissory note payable to another to assert successfully the rights of a bona fide purchaser for value, it must appear that the payee formally indorsed or assigned it in writing to the holder before its maturity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 794-804; Dec. Dig. § 330; *Assignments, Cent. Dig. §§ 67-71; Dec. Dig. § 34.*]

2. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 452*)—EVIDENCE (§ 432*)—PAROL DEFENSES—WANT OF CONSIDERATION.

The consideration of a promissory note is always a proper subject of inquiry, and the answer of the defendant in this case was not demurrable upon the ground that his counterclaim antedated the note which was the basis of the action. The case is clearly distinguishable from that of Turner v. Pearson, 93 Ga. 515, 21 S. E. 104, and similar cases.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 1303, 1352-1364, 1367-1376; Dec. Dig. § 452; *Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1981-1989; Dec. Dig. § 432.*]

Error from City Court of Vienna; W. H. Lasseter, Judge.

Action by the First National Bank of Vienna against T. L. Herring. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Jere M. Moore, of Montezuma, for plaintiff in error. Watts Powell, of Vienna, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. The suit was upon two promissory notes signed by the plaintiff in error. The notes were payable to the Vienna Cotton Oil Company, and were not indorsed or assigned in writing. The petition was filed in the name of the Vienna Cotton Oil Company, for the use of the First National Bank of Vienna, and alleged an indebtedness on the part of the defendant of $881.70, besides interest and attorney's fees. On motion of the plaintiff the petition was amended by striking the words "Vienna Cotton Oil Company for the use of," and thus the case proceeded, with the First National Bank of Vienna as plaintiff, suing for its own use. The court struck the answer of the defendant, and, upon the petition as amended, rendered judgment against the defendant for the full amount set forth in the petition. The motion to amend the plaintiff's petition was made in response to a motion on the part of the defendant to strike the petition.

[1] We think the trial judge erred in rendering judgment against the defendant, for there was no evidence which authorized the plaintiff to recover. The statement in the petition that the plaintiff "was the owner in due course of business of said note before maturity" is a mere conclusion of the pleader, and is wholly unsupported by anything in the record. The notes themselves were not negotiable without indorsement, for payment was stipulated to be made to the Vienna Cotton Oil Company. "Unless a promissory note is made payable to bearer, it is not proprio vigore negotiable in the strict legal sense; it is wanting in the final requisite which imparts to it the quality of negotiability, viz., indorsement. By this act alone can it become negotiable, and therefore it follows that he who receives it before indorsement does not take it as negotiable paper; and not being thus negotiable, he takes subject to the equities between the parties." Benson v. Abbott, 95 Ga. 75, 76, 22 S. E. 129. Furthermore, the interest of the oil company in the note, and its title thereto, could not be passed except in writing. "Where a note, draft, or check is made payable to order, the indorsement of the payee is necessary to transfer the legal title to another. Without such indorsement, the transferee takes the paper as a mere chose in action, and to recover upon it must aver and prove the consideration." Farris v. Wells, 68 Ga. 604. There being no averment in the petition in the present case as to what was the consideration, and no proof that there was any consideration by reason of which the title of the oil company to the note passed to the bank, the bank was not entitled to recover against the defendant, even though the oil company might have been able to do so.

It is no defense to an action on a note brought by the holder of the legal title to the note, that he has no pecuniary interest in the suit; but the holder of a note payable to another, which has not been indorsed or assigned in writing, cannot bring an action thereon in his own name, but must necessarily use the name of the holder of the legal title, as suing for his use. See Hartford Insurance Company v. Amos, 98 Ga. 534, 25 S. E. 575, in which it was held that a demurrer to an action brought upon a policy of fire insurance by a person other than the one to whom the policy was issued should have been sustained, though the declaration alleged that the latter had "for a valuable consideration transferred and assigned and delivered said policy of insurance to the petitioner." Under our Code (Civil Code, § 3653) all choses in action are assignable; but, as held by the Supreme Court in construing this section of the Code, the assignment must be in writing. Hartford Insurance Company v. Amos, supra; Turk v. Cook, 68 Ga. 681; Daniel v. Tarver, 70 Ga. 206; Hatcher v. Bank, 79 Ga. 547, 5 S. E. 111; Riley v. Hicks, 81 Ga. 272, 7 S. E. 173; First National Bank v. Hartman Steel Co., 87 Ga. 438, 13 S. E. 586. Even after the court had erroneously overruled the defendant's motion to strike the petition as amended, the plaintiff in this case was certainly not entitled to recover, in the absence of proof that the transfer was upon consideration.

[2] 2. In view of the fact that it is only as to a bona fide purchaser before maturity that the maker of a note is precluded from setting up equities, the court erred in striking the defendant's answer. In the state of the pleadings there was nothing to show that the plaintiff bank was a bona fide purchaser before maturity of the notes in question; and for this reason the defendant was not precluded from showing (as he averred in his plea to be the case) that the consideration of the notes had partially failed.

Judgment reversed.

WATTERS v. SOUTHERN FIXTURE & CABINET CO. (No. 4,764.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. ATTACHMENT (§ 192*)—DISCHARGE BY SECURITY—EFFECT.

Where property which has been attached has been replevied, the attachment is dissolved, the bond is substituted for the property, "and the case stands as if it had been founded on ordinary principles." Thompson v. Wright, 22 Ga. 613; Camp v. Cahn, 53 Ga. 558; Walter v. Kierstead, 74 Ga. 18 (5a); Woodbridge v. Drought, 118 Ga. 871, 45 S. E. 266.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Attachment, Cent. Dig. §§ 637-639; Dec. Dig. § 192.*]

2. ATTACHMENT (§ 339*)—LIABILITIES ON BOND—BOND FOR RELEASE—JUDGMENT.

Where an attachment has been dissolved by the giving of a replevy bond, and on the trial a general verdict is returned in favor of the plaintiff for the amount of his claim, it is lawful for the plaintiff to take judgment against the defendant and his securities upon the replevy bond. Civ. Code 1910, § 5113.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Attachment, Cent. Dig. §§ 1223-1232; Dec. Dig. § 339.*]

3. MOTION TO SET ASIDE JUDGMENT—DENIAL.

The court did not err in overruling the motion to set aside the judgment.

Error from Superior Court, Floyd County; J. W. Maddox, Judge.

Action by the Southern Fixture & Cabinet Company against A. W. Watters. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Eubanks & Mebane, of Rome, for plaintiff in error. Sharp & Sharp, of Rome, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

CARPENTER v. FIRST NAT. BANK OF SANDERSVILLE. (Nos. 4,946-4,950.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 267*)—EXCEPTIONS TO FINAL JUDGMENT—NECESSITY.

Suit was brought on a promissory note. The bill of exceptions recites that the court passed "an order refusing an amendment to an original plea filed by the defendant, and, on demurrer, struck the plea and amended plea and entered judgment for the plaintiff." The only assignment of error in the bill of exceptions is in the following language: "To the action of the court in refusing the amendment to the original answer the plaintiff in error excepted, and now excepts and assigns the same as error, on the ground that the same was contrary to law." Held, that the writ of error in each case must be dismissed. To confer jurisdiction upon this court, it was essential that error be assigned upon the final judgment. The judgment refusing to allow the amendment to the defendant's plea was not a final judgment; nor would a judgment allowing the amendment have effected a final disposition of the case. A mere specification of a final judgment is not sufficient. There must be at least a general assignment of error on the final judgment; else this court is without jurisdiction to determine any interlocutory ruling made during the progress of the trial. The question of practice is controlled by the decision of the Supreme Court in Lyndon v. Georgia Ry. & Electric Co., 129 Ga. 353, 58 S. E. 1047. See, also, McCranie v. Shipp, 10 Ga. App. 544, 73 S. E. 701; Simmons v. Peagler, 7 Ga. App. 252, 66 S. E. 629; Whidden v. Merry, 8 Ga. App. 564, 69 S. E. 1085; Neal-Blum Co. v. Zeigler, 11 Ga. App. 273, 75 S. E. 142; Mertins v. Pritchard, 135 Ga. 643, 70 S. E. 328, and cases cited.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1447, 1460, 1572-1578, 1581; Dec. Dig. § 267.*]

Error from City Court of Louisville; W. L. Phillips, Judge.

Separate actions by the First National Bank of Sandersville against G. L. Carpenter, J. T. O'Neal, C. W. Churchill, J. O. Kelly, and J. W. Pilcher. Judgments for the plaintiff, and defendants bring error. Writs of error dismissed.

R. N. Hardeman, of Louisville, for plaintiffs in error. Gross & Swint and Evans & Evans, all of Sandersville, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Writs of error dismissed.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

McCLENDON v. TEMPLE COTTON OIL CO. (No. 4,883.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 753*)—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR—NECESSITY.

There being no assignment of error in the bill of exceptions upon any ruling or judgment, no question is presented for the decision of this court, and the writ of error must be dismissed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3086-3089; Dec. Dig. § 753.*]

Error from City Court of Carrollton; James Beall, Judge.

Action between Green McCleendon and the Temple Cotton Oil Company. Judgment for the Temple Cotton Oil Company, and McCleendon brings error. Writ of error dismissed.

J. O. Newell, of Carrollton, for plaintiff in error. Griffith & Matthews, of Buchanan, and C. E. Roop, of Carrollton, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Writ of error dismissed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE RY. CO. v. LINDSEY. (No. 5,041.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 17, 1913. On Motion for Rehearing, Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

CARRIERS (§ 359*)—APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1003*)—EJECTION OF PASSENGER—DISOBEDIENCE OF RULES—VERDICT OF JURY.

The plaintiff was a passenger on one of the defendant's trains. According to his testimony, he entered one of the coaches, where several persons were smoking, and lit a cigarette. There were one or two female passengers on the train, and the conductor requested the plaintiff to cease smoking. The plaintiff agreed to comply with the request, provided the conductor would compel others in the car to desist from smoking. The conductor failed to compel the others to desist, and used towards the plaintiff harsh and insulting language, and, upon the plaintiff's refusal to stop smoking, stopped the train and ejected him therefrom. The jury were authorized to accept the plaintiff's version of the transaction, and under it the verdict in his favor for $100 was authorized. Under the plaintiff's testimony, the conductor was not in good faith endeavoring to enforce a reasonable regulation of the company; and if others were permitted to smoke on the car the plaintiff had a right to assume that the conductor was attempting to impose upon him an unwarranted restriction on account of personal grievance directed solely against him, which he had done nothing to provoke. The testimony in the company's behalf makes a different case; but the jury declined to accept its explanation of the occurrence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1439-1442; Dec. Dig. § 359; Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3938-3943; Dec. Dig. § 1003.*]

Error from City Court of Atlanta; H. M. Reid, Judge.

Action by C. B. Lindsey against the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed, and motion for rehearing denied.

W. G. Loving, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Alonzo Field, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. Judgment affirmed.

On Motion for Rehearing.

Counsel for the plaintiff in error insists that this court misapprehended the evidence, and that the jury were not warranted in finding that persons other than the plaintiff were permitted by the conductor to smoke in the car. Apparently the preponderance of the evidence is with the defendant; but, under the law, this court has no power to pass upon disputed questions of fact. From its organization until the present time it has consistently held that, if there is any evidence, no matter how slight, to authorize the verdict, this court cannot interfere, unless some material error of law has been committed. It is true that in the present case some of the witnesses introduced by the plaintiff himself did not corroborate his version of the transaction; but this was solely a question for the jury. The plaintiff testified that other persons were permitted by the conductor to smoke, and, under his testimony as a whole, the inference was warranted that the conductor was not attempting to enforce a regulation of the company impartially, but was imposing an unwarranted restriction upon the plaintiff alone. This may not be the truth; but the jury by their verdict say that it is; and this issue of fact is thus foreclosed so far as this court is concerned. This conflict in the testimony clearly distinguishes the case from that of Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Motes, 117 Ga. 923, 43 S. E. 990, 62 L. R. A. 507, 97 Am. St. Rep. 223, relied on by counsel for the plaintiff in error.

Rehearing denied.

DURHAM v. PAGE. (No. 4,868.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 534*)—WRIT OF ERROR—BILL OF EXCEPTIONS—RECORD—PETITION FOR CERTIORARI.

Where a bill of exceptions complains of the refusal of the judge of the superior court to sanction a petition for certiorari, and the petition is not set forth in the bill of exceptions, nor attached thereto as an exhibit, but is specified and sent up as a part of the record, no question is presented for decision by this court, and the writ of error must be dismissed. Where the judge of the superior court refuses to sanction the certiorari, the petition does not become a part of the record, and cannot be brought to this court as such. A petition for certiorari if not sanctioned, is not a part of the record. Taylor v. Town of Omega, 12 Ga. App. 698, 78 S. E. 144, and citations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2397, 2398; Dec. Dig. § 534.*]

Error from Superior Court, Hart County; D. W. Meadow, Judge.

Action between C. M. Durham and George J. Page. From a refusal to sanction a petition for certiorari, Durham brings error. Writ of error dismissed.

J. A. McDuff, of Lavonia, and Moore & Pomeroy, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Skelton & Skelton, of Hartwell, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Writ of error dismissed.

BROOKE v. GEORGIA PERUVIAN OCHRE CO. (No. 4,739.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1068*)—HARMLESS ERROR—INSTRUCTIONS—PARTY NOT ENTITLED TO RELIEF.

The permission granted by the defendant to the plaintiff to use a portion of the defendant's land for agricultural purposes was subsequent to the delivery of the unconditional warranty deed by the plaintiff conveying the same premises to the defendant; and, so far as appears from the record, this permission was given without consideration. A verdict in favor of the defendant was therefore demanded, and errors in the charge, if any, were immaterial. No material errors were committed upon the admission of testimony.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4225-4228, 4230; Dec. Dig. § 1068;* Trial, Cent. Dig. § 525.]

Error from City Court of Cartersville; A. M. Foute, Judge.

Action by George W. Brooke against the Georgia Peruvian Ochre Company. Judgment for the defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Finley & Henson, of Cartersville, for plaintiff in error. Neel & Neel, of Cartersville, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

RICHARDSON v. MALLORY. (No. 4,983.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. LOGS AND LOGGING (§ 28*)—LIEN OF SAW-MILL PROPRIETOR—VALIDITY.

The lien of a sawmill man, provided for in section 3356 of the Civil Code of 1910, must be asserted in the manner prescribed in section 3354. It follows that, where possession of the property upon which the lien is claimed has been surrendered to the debtor, the lien is lost, unless the claim of lien is recorded in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county where the owner of the property resides within 10 days after the work is done or the material is furnished.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Cent. Dig. §§ 72-74; Dec. Dig. § 28.*]

2. NEW TRIAL (§ 81*)—GROUNDS—WAIVER.

Where, in the trial of the issue arising upon the foreclosure of such a lien and a counter affidavit filed thereto, it appears from the evidence that possession of the property upon which the lien is claimed was surrendered to the debtor before the lien was foreclosed, and the evidence fails to disclose that the claim of lien was recorded as required by law, a verdict in favor of the lien is without evidence to support it; and it is error to overrule a ground of the motion for a new trial specifically raising this point, although at the trial there was no motion raising the point that the failure of the plaintiff to record his claim of lien operated to defeat the lien.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. § 131; Dec. Dig. § 81.*]

Error from City Court of Madison; K. S. Anderson, Judge.

Action by T. A. Mallory against R. A. Richardson. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

F. C. Foster, of Madison, for plaintiff in error. Williford & Lambert, of Madison, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment reversed.

J. K. ORR SHOE CO. v. UPSHAW & POWLEDGE. (No. 4,964.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. BANKRUPTCY (§ 363*)—ALLOWANCE OF CLAIM—EFFECT AS BAR.

The fact that a claim for the unpaid price of goods sold on credit is proved and allowed in bankruptcy is no bar to a subsequent action by the creditor against the debtor to recover the balance due for the goods, where it is alleged they were obtained by false representations made by the debtor to induce the sale. Friend v. Talcott (U. S. Supreme Court, April, 1913) 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31, 223 U. S. 27, 33 Sup. Ct. 505, 57 L. Ed. 712.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Cent. Dig. §§ 550-554; Dec. Dig. § 363.*]

2. BANKRUPTCY (§ 426*)—DISCHARGE—EFFECT—FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATIONS.

A discharge in bankruptcy does not release a bankrupt from liability for obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations. Atlanta Skirt Mfg. Co. v. Jacobs, 8 Ga. App. 299, 68 S. E. 1077.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Cent. Dig. §§ 787, 791-807; Dec. Dig. § 426.*]

3. BANKRUPTCY (§ 363*)—ACCEPTANCE OF DIVIDEND—WAIVER OF FRAUD.

This was a suit upon an account, to which the defendants pleaded a discharge in bankruptcy. It was conceded that the plaintiff had proved its debt in a court of bankruptcy and received a dividend in the bankruptcy proceedings. The plaintiff offered evidence to prove that credit was extended to the defendants because of certain false representations made to it by the defendants at the time of the sale. Held, that the trial judge erred (1) in excluding this testimony; (2) in holding that the plaintiff, "having chosen to enter the bankrupt court and take its place with other creditors, and having received a dividend, waived any fraud in the purchase of these goods, and stood on the contract, and thus made the debt one provable in the bankrupt court, against which the discharge in bankruptcy is a complete bar;" and in directing a verdict for the defendants accordingly.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Cent. Dig. §§ 550-554; Dec. Dig. § 363.*]

Error from City Court of Atlanta; H. M. Reid, Judge.

Action by the J. K. Orr Shoe Company against Upshaw & Powledge. Judgment for defendants on directed verdict, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Hendrix & Silverman and Mayson & Johnson, all of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Smith, Hammond & Smith, of Atlanta, for defendants in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment reversed.

ALLISON v. MORGAN et al. (No. 5,017.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 28, 1918.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 627*)—BILL OF EXCEPTIONS—FILING—DISMISSAL.

To give this court jurisdiction, the bill of exceptions must be filed in the clerk's office within 15 days from the date of the trial judge's certificate thereto. Here the certificate is dated May 22d, and the clerk's entry shows that the bill of exceptions was filed in his office June 7th. Civil Code 1910, § 6167; Foote & Davies Co. v. Evans, 10 Ga. App. 194, 72 S. E. 1098, and citations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2744-2749, 3128; Dec. Dig. § 627.*]

Error from City Court of Jefferson; G. A. Johns, Judge.

Action between B. H. Allison and D. D. Morgan and others. From the judgment, Allison brings error. Writ of error dismissed.

P. Cooley and Ray & Ray, all of Jefferson, for plaintiff in error. J. A. B. Mahaffey, of Jefferson, for defendants in error.

HILL, C. J. Writ of error dismissed.

SOUTHERN RY. CO. v. JOHNSON.
(No. 4,852.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 28, 1918.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1001*)—JUDGMENT—EVIDENCE.

This being an action against a railway company for the killing of a cow, and the evidence not being such as to demand a finding that the presumption of negligence arising against the railway company had been rebutted, the judgment overruling the certiorari sued out by the defendant company will not be disturbed.

Western & Atlantic Railroad Co. v. Clark, 1 Ga. App. 235, 57 S. E. 916.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3922, 3928-3934; Dec. Dig. § 1001.*]

Error from Superior Court, Muscogee County; S. P. Gilbert, Judge.

Action by J. M. Johnson against the Southern Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Battle & Hollis and W. G. Love, all of Columbus, for plaintiff in error. S. M. Davis and Ed Wohlwender, both of Columbus, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

PINE BELT LUMBER CO. v. MORRISON & HARVEY. (No. 5,008.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 17, 1918.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PAYMENT (§ 85*)—MISTAKE—RIGHT TO RECOVER.

Under the evidence introduced in behalf of the defendants, they were entitled to set off against the plaintiff's demand money paid by mistake; it appearing that the mistake could be corrected without injustice to the plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Payment, Cent. Dig. §§ 272-281; Dec. Dig. § 85.*]

2. PAYMENT (§ 89*)—MISTAKE—EVIDENCE.

The evidence authorized the verdict, and no error of law was committed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Payment, Cent. Dig. §§ 291-296; Dec. Dig. § 89.*]

Error from City Court of Valdosta; J. G. Cranford, Judge.

Action by the Pine Belt Lumber Company against Morrison & Harvey. Judgment for the defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

W. D. Bule, of Nashville, for plaintiff in error. Whitaker & Dukes, of Valdosta, for defendants in error.

POTTLE, J. The Pine Belt Lumber Company sued Morrison & Harvey on an account for $182.43. The defendants admitted the indebtedness, but pleaded that by mistake they had paid the plaintiff $242.28, and prayed to recover the difference between the two amounts. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendants for $59.83. The plaintiff's motion for a new trial was overruled.

[1] 1. From the evidence it appears that the plaintiff sold a car of lumber to the Pannabaker Lumber Company, and by agreement drew on that company for $175, and the draft was paid. At this time the plaintiff was indebted to the Pannabaker Lumber Company, and this indebtedness and the draft made up the purchase price of the car of lumber. The Pannabaker Lumber Company credited the plaintiff with the amount of the indebtedness, paid the draft, and directed that the lumber be shipped to certain persons. When the invoice for the lumber came in, the Pannabaker Lumber Company obtained bill of lading drawn in favor of the persons to whom it directed that the shipment be made, and attached the bill of lading to a note payable to a bank for $242, and obtained from the bank the amount for which the lumber had been sold. After this transaction the Pannabaker Lumber Company, being in failing circumstances, desired to close out its business. It held out several orders for lumber, besides the one from plaintiff. Morrison & Harvey agreed to take over certain of these orders, pay the Pannabaker Lumber Company, and resell the lumber to the best advantage. They paid for the car sold by the plaintiff to the Pannabaker Lumber Company by assuming and paying after maturity the note which that company had executed to the bank. When the defendants took over the order on the plaintiff for the car of lumber, they credited the plaintiff on their books with the price of the car merely for convenience in keeping trace of the shipment, intending to charge it back when the bank was paid. During the absence of their bookkeeper, one of the defendants saw the account on the books and mailed the plaintiff a check for $242.66 by mistake, overlooking the fact that they owed the bank, and not the plaintiff. A short time after the defendants bought the car of lumber from the Pannabaker Lumber Company the plaintiff wrote defendants, requesting a remittance for a balance due by the Pannabaker Lumber Company. Defendants replied that they had nothing to do with the Pannabaker Lumber Company, and were not responsible for their accounts.

Under this evidence it is clear that the verdict in favor of the defendants was authorized. Money paid under a mistake of fact, or in ignorance of facts, may be recovered back, if the circumstances are such that the party receiving ought not in equity and good conscience to retain it. Camp v. Phillips, 49 Ga. 456. Certainly there is nothing in the evidence which would render it inequitable for the defendants to recover this money. The plaintiff has lost nothing by the payment of the money, and will be in no worse position after the mistake is corrected than it was before. One of the witnesses testified that, if it had not been misled by the payment, the plaintiff might have collected its indebtedness from the Pannabaker Lumber Company. But, according to evidence which the jury had a right to believe, the Pannabaker Lumber Company did not owe the plaintiff any money at the time the defendants paid it the $242.66 by mistake. Besides, shortly after the sale of the lumber, and before the mistake in payment was made, the defendants distinctly notified the plaintiff that they were not responsible for the debts of the Pannabaker Lumber Company. From their making the payment, the plaintiff would have had a right to assume that the defendants had agreed to pay this particular debt, were it not for the fact that the plaintiff had already been paid for this car of lumber by the Pannabaker Lumber Company. At least the jury could so find. Under the evidence for the defendants, the plainest principles of justice would require the money to be paid back.

[2] 2. There was no error in admitting evidence tending to show that the Pannabaker Lumber Company was not indebted to the plaintiff, nor in the admission of testimony explanatory of the transactions between the defendants and the Pannabaker Lumber Company, for the purpose of showing just what connection they had with that company and how the mistake came to be made. The instructions of the court covered the principles of law applicable to the recovery of money paid by mistake, both those pertinent to the plaintiff's contentions and those applicable to the contentions of the defendants. No error of law was committed.

Judgment affirmed.

HELMLY v. SAVANNAH OFFICE BLDG. CO. SAVANNAH OFFICE BLDG. CO. v. HELMLY. (Nos. 4,956, 5,028.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 977*) — GRANT OF NEW TRIAL—SCOPE OF REVIEW.

This court will not disturb the first grant of a new trial, where the verdict was not demanded by the law and the evidence, though the motion was based upon a single ground; nor will it determine whether the trial court was right in granting the motion on this special ground.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3860-3885; Dec. Dig. § 977.*]

2. CARRIERS (§§ 280, 316*)—ELEVATOR PASSENGERS—CARE REQUIRED—PRESUMPTION OF NEGLIGENCE.

The relation between one owning and operating an elevator for passengers and those carried in it is similar to the relation between carrier and passenger which arises in the case of an ordinary common carrier of passengers. The exercise of extraordinary diligence is required in the transportation of passengers while in the elevator, and also in giving intended passengers reasonable opportunity to enter it, and if, in the operation of the elevator, an injury occurs to one who is a passenger therein, or who is entering it with the intention of becoming a passenger, on proof of the injury, a presumption of negligence arises against the owner.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1085-1092, 1098-1108, 1106, 1109, 1117, 1261, 1262, 1283, 1285-1294; Dec. Dig. §§ 280, 316.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Error from City Court of Savannah; Davis Freeman, Judge.

Action by F. N. Helmly against the Savannah Office Building Company. Judgment for plaintiff. From the granting of a new trial, plaintiff brings error, and defendant files a cross-bill of exceptions. Affirmed.

Osborne & Lawrence, of Savannah, for plaintiff in error. Hitch & Denmark and Wm. L. Clay, all of Savannah, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. 1. The Savannah Office Building Company, the defendant, was the owner of a large office building, and operated an elevator in connection with the building for the benefit of its tenants and those having business in the building. The plaintiff was an employé of a tenant in this building, and while he was entering a passenger elevator, for the purpose of going to the office of his employers, he was injured by the sudden and unexpected starting of the elevator as he was in the act of entering. He sued the building company for damages for these injuries, and the jury gave him a verdict for $7,500. The defendant made a motion for a new trial, and the trial court granted the motion on the ground that the verdict was "legally excessive," and the plaintiff assigns error on the order granting another trial. A cross-bill of exceptions filed by the defendant brings to this court for consideration the question made in the motion for a new trial as to the relation existing between the plaintiff and the defendant,—whether that relation was one of passenger and common carrier, or that of landlord and tenant; the defendant in the cross-bill insisting that the relation was that of landlord and tenant, and that the rule of ordinary diligence was applicable, and assigning error on an instruction to the jury that the relation of common carrier for hire and passenger existed between the plaintiff and the defendant, and that the defendant owed to the plaintiff the duty of extraordinary diligence, and that on proof of injury to him by the running of the elevator a presumption of negligence arose.

[1] As to the main bill of exceptions, which complains of the grant of a new trial, the case is fully controlled by the decision of the Supreme Court in Smith v. Maddox-Rucker Co., 135 Ga. 151, 68 S. E. 1031, where it is held that, "where the verdict was not demanded by the law and evidence, the Supreme Court will not disturb the first grant of a new trial, though it was upon a single ground, nor will it determine whether the trial court was right in granting a motion on a special ground. This is a rule without an exception." Therefore, as to the main bill of exceptions, the judgment must be affirmed.

[2] 2. The question made in the cross-bill of exceptions, which it is necessary to decide, since there is to be another trial of the case, has never been passed upon by the Supreme Court of this state, and there is conflict in the authorities on the subject. We have given the question a very careful consideration, and have concluded that the liability of the owner of a building who maintains in it an elevator for the use of its tenants and their customers and employes is that of a common carrier of passengers, and the rule of diligence which applies to common carriers of passengers, under the statute of this state, is applicable. The doctrine here announced is sustained by the great weight of authority, although there are some decisions of courts of last resort of the highest character which announce a contrary rule. The authorities on both sides of this question can be found in a note to the case of Edwards v. Manufacturers' B. Co. (Rhode Island Supreme Court) in 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 744. It will be seen from an examination of these authorities that, except in Michigan, Rhode Island, and New York, it is held that the obligation of an owner of an elevator to passengers, or those attempting to become passengers, is the highest degree of care in protecting them, or, as required by the statute of this state as to common carriers, extraordinary care and diligence. It seems also to have been the rule announced by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Mitchell v. Marker, 62 Fed. 139, 10 C. C. A. 306, 25 L. R. A. 33, decided by Judge Lurton, Circuit Judge (now a member of the Supreme Court of the United States). In that case it was held that passenger elevators are within the rule governing other carriers of passengers, which requires the highest degree of care, and that reasonable opportunity must be given to a passenger on entering an elevator to obtain his balance, before a rapid and sudden start of the elevator is made.

The Code of this state defines a common carrier as "one who pursues the business constantly or continuously for any period of time, or any distance of transportation," and it declares that such a carrier "is bound to use extraordinary diligence." Civil Code 1910, § 2712. In section 2714 it is declared that "a carrier of passengers is bound to extraordinary diligence on behalf of himself and his agents to protect the lives and persons of his passengers." Unquestionably, under this definition, one who carries passengers on an elevator from floor to floor of a large office building, or of a hotel, constantly and continuously, is a carrier of passengers. No rational distinction in principle can be based on the fact that the passengers are carried vertically rather than horizontally; and it is not material as to the distance the passengers are carried. True, the passenger on an elevator pays to the owner of the elevator no fare or hire for his carriage; but payment for this service is made to the owner by his tenants, by reason of the fact that their rental is increased in proportion to the facility of the service given to them by the owner. In other words, this increased rental is equivalent to the fare paid to railroad or street car companies. Certainly the danger to the passenger on an elevator is as great as the danger to a passenger on a railroad train or street car. Persons who are lifted by elevators are subject to great risks of life and limb. They are hoisted vertically; they have no power over the running of the elevator, and are unable, in case of the breaking of the machinery of the elevator, to help themselves. In their passage from floor to floor they are absolutely at the mercy of the owner's employé who runs the elevator. They must depend upon his skill and upon his attention to duty; and in our opinion there is no employment where the law should demand a higher degree of care and diligence than in the case of persons using and running elevators for lifting human beings from one level to another. The danger is great, and the utmost care and diligence should be required.

We conclude, therefore, that the learned trial judge correctly instructed the jury to the effect that the measure of diligence which the law required of the owner and operator of an elevator in an office building, or elsewhere, for the carrying of passengers, was that prescribed by the statute of this state for common carriers of passengers. We therefore affirm the judgment on the cross-bill of exceptions.

Judgment affirmed.

FRANKLIN v. FIELDS & CHANCE
(No. 4,710.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 28, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. NEW TRIAL (§ 132*)—PROCEEDINGS—STATEMENT OF GROUNDS—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

A ground of a motion for a new trial complaining of the admission of documentary evidence cannot be considered, when the evidence is not set forth in the ground, either literally or in substance, or attached thereto as an exhibit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 273-275; Dec. Dig. § 132.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§§ 157, 419*)—PAROL—CONSIDERATION—NOTE.

Where, in a suit upon a promissory note alleged to have been given in payment of commissions for the sale of real estate, the defendant contended that he had not employed the plaintiff to sell the property, it was not error to permit the plaintiff to testify that the defendant had listed with him the property to be sold upon commission, over the objection that it did not appear whether the contract was oral or written, and that the admission of the evidence permitted an inquiry into the consideration of the note sued on.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 460-470, 1912-1928; Dec. Dig. §§ 157, 419.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 979*)—REVIEW—DISCRETION OF TRIAL COURT—MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

The evidence was directly conflicting upon the issues made by the pleadings, and a verdict for either party would have been authorized; consequently the discretion of the trial court in overruling the motion for a new trial will not be controlled.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3871-3873, 3877; Dec. Dig. § 979.*]

Error from City Court of Statesboro; H. B. Strange, Judge.

Action by Fields & Chance against John Franklin. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

J. J. E. Anderson, of Statesboro, for plaintiff in error. Fred T. Lanier, of Statesboro, for defendants in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

GLASS v. LOWRY NAT. BANK.
(No. 4,793.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

BILLS AND NOTES (§ 537*)—EVIDENCE—DEFENSE.

There being no evidence offered in support of the defendant's plea that the note sued on was without consideration, it was immaterial whether the plaintiff's purchase of the note was before or after maturity, and for this reason the court did not err in directing a verdict in favor of the plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 1862-1893; Dec. Dig. § 537.*]

Error from City Court of Atlanta; H. M. Reid, Judge.

Action by the Lowry National Bank against S. C. Glass. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

T. C. Battle, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Tindall & Silverman, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

FRANKLIN v. FORD. (No. 4,778.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CONTINUANCE (§ 46*)—GROUNDS—SUFFICIENCY OF SHOWING.

The trial judge did not abuse his discretion in overruling the motion for continuance based on the absence of the defendant and his alleged sickness. This ground of the motion was supported only by the unsworn statement of one who was alleged to be a physician. There was no evidence that the certificate was made by a physician. It also appeared from the record that, if the defendant had been present at the trial, the result would not have been different, as no meritorious defense was set up. Handley v. Bank, 10 Ga. App. 883, 78 S. E. 413.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Continuance, Cent. Dig. §§ 132-140; Dec. Dig. § 46.*]

2. BASTARDS (§ 17*)—CONTRACTS—VALIDITY.

An agreement made by the reputed father of a bastard child with the mother of the child that he will pay her $5 a month, on the 20th day of each month, until the expiration of 10 years, for the support of the child, is founded on a good consideration, and is valid. Hays v. McFarlan, 32 Ga. 699, 703, 79 Am. Dec. 317.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bastards, Cent. Dig. §§ 24-27; Dec. Dig. § 17.*]

3. ACTION (§ 53*)—SPLITTING CAUSE OF ACTION—CONTRACT TO SUPPORT BASTARD.

The mother with whom such a contract has been made has a legal right to sue monthly the putative father, or she can wait until the expiration of the 10 years, and sue him for the entire amount covered by the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 549-551, 553-623; Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

4. BASTARDS (§ 17*)—CONTRACTS—RIGHT OF ACTION—PARTIES.

The contract being with the mother, and obligating the putative father to pay her so much a month for the support of the child, the mother, and not the child, has a right to sue on the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bastards, Cent. Dig. §§ 24-27; Dec. Dig. § 17.*]

5. ATTORNEY AND CLIENT (§ 190*)—SETTLEMENT OF SUIT—SUBSEQUENT PROCEEDINGS BY ATTORNEY FOR FEES.

Where the mother employs an attorney to bring suit on the contract at the expiration of the 10 years, and he files suit thereon, the mother, after the suit has been filed, cannot legally satisfy the suit, or judgment, or decree thereon, without full satisfaction of the fees due the attorney in accordance with her contract with him for such legal services; and where she does settle the suit after it has been filed, without payment of the fees due the attorney, the attorney has a right to control the suit, and to prosecute it to a termination, for the purpose of recovering the fees due him according to the contract. Georgia Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Crosby, 12 Ga. App. — 78 S. E. 612.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Attorney and Client, Cent. Dig. §§ 412-417; Dec. Dig. § 190.*]

6. ATTORNEY AND CLIENT (§ 190*)—SETTLEMENT OF SUIT—SUBSEQUENT PROCEEDINGS BY ATTORNEY FOR FEES—PLEADINGS.

In a suit to recover fees as indicated above, no change or amendment of the pleadings is necessary to perfect the attorney's right to recover. The filing of the suit by him is sufficient to put the defendant on notice as to his rights as an attorney.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Attorney and Client, Cent. Dig. §§ 412-417; Dec. Dig. § 190.*]

7. DIRECTION OF VERDICT.

The evidence demanded the verdict as directed.

Error from City Court of Floyd County; J. H. Reece, Judge.

Action by C. S. Ford against G. W. Franklin, Jr. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Denny & Wright and Graham Wright, all of Rome, for plaintiff in error. M. B. Eubanks and E. P. Treadaway, both of Rome, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment affirmed.

HUDGINS v. STATE (No. 4,918.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§§ 665, 918*)—SEQUESTRATION OF WITNESSES—DISCRETION.

The enforcement of the rule requiring the sequestration of witnesses is an administrative function of the trial court, and the manner of its exercise rests largely within the discretion of the court. Failure of the court to require strict or absolute sequestration of witnesses is not ground for a new trial, unless it is manifest that there was an abuse of the discretion of the trial judge, due to the manner of its exercise.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1549-1566½, 2163-2192, 2195, 2196, 2219-2224; Dec. Dig. §§ 665, 918.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 665*)—WITNESSES (§ 311*)—SEQUESTRATION OF WITNESSES—PROSECUTING WITNESS—CREDIBILITY.

In exercising his discretion in administering the rule which requires a trial judge to accord to either party the right of having the witnesses of the opposite party examined out of the hearing of each other, it is not error for the judge in a criminal case to permit the prosecutor to remain in the courtroom throughout the trial. If the prosecutor is called as a witness, the fact that he has heard the testimony, as well as his relation to the case and his interest therein, may be considered by the jury in passing upon the credibility of his testimony.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1549-1566½; Dec. Dig. § 665.* Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 1072-1075; Dec. Dig. § 311.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1178*)—APPEAL—ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR—ABANDONMENT—BRIEF.

Assignments of error not even referred to in the brief and argument of counsel for the plaintiff in error must be treated as having been abandoned.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3011-3013; Dec. Dig. § 1178.*]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 935*)—NEW TRIAL—EVIDENCE.

The evidence, though conflicting, authorized the verdict finding the accused guilty, and it was not error to refuse a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2193, 2194, 2297, 2298, 3068; Dec. Dig. § 935.*]

Error from City Court of Dublin; J. B. Hicks, Judge.

Will Hudgins was convicted of carrying a pistol concealed, and brings error. Affirmed.

H. P. Howard and T. E. Hightower, both of Dublin, for plaintiff in error. Geo. B. Davis, Sol., of Dublin, for the state.

RUSSELL, J. 1, 2. The defendant was convicted of carrying a pistol concealed. The complexion of the case is such that the jury would have been authorized to acquit the accused. However, inasmuch as there is evidence which authorized the conviction of the defendant, it cannot be held that the trial judge erred in overruling the motion for new trial, so far as the motion is predicated upon the ground that the verdict is contrary to the evidence and without evidence to support it.

[1] In reference to the special grounds: The court did not err in permitting the recall of the witness Joe Beard, to testify for the state, over the objection of the defendant's counsel, although at the beginning of the trial the defendant had asked for a strict sequestration of the witnesses, and later, after this witness had testified in chief, again requested the court to send this witness from the room during the examination of the other witnesses, if the state intended to use him again. It appears from the indictment that Joe Beard was the prosecutor. In enforcing the right accorded by section 1043 of the Penal Code to either party in a case to have the witnesses of the opposite party examined out of the hearing of each other, the judge discharges an administrative function of the court, but the manner of its exercise is necessarily addressed largely to his sound discretion. Shaw v. State, 102 Ga. 666, 667, 29 S. E. 477; Keller v. State, 102 Ga. 506 (1), 31 S. E. 92.

[2] So far as we know, the practice is almost universal for the court to permit the prosecutor, whose name appears upon the indictment, to remain in the courtroom throughout the trial, to aid the solicitor general in the conduct of the case. Of course, in passing upon the credibility of a prosecutor's testimony, if he should be a witness, the jury would take into consideration the fact that he had heard the testimony, just as they would view his testimony in the light of his interest as a prosecutor. While, as suggested by counsel for the plaintiff in error, it appears from the record that the testimony of the prosecutor, upon his second examination, referred to the testimony of the witnesses for the defendant who had testified in the interval between his first and second examinations, and sought to specifically deny what they had sworn, still this does not demonstrate that the judge had abused his discretion in permitting the prosecutor to remain in the courtroom. The jury heard his reference to the testimony of the witnesses, they knew he had heard them testify, and it was for them to say whether or not his statement to the contrary of what they had sworn, in specific denial of the previous testimony, was true or false. It is true that, even under strict enforcement of the provision of the Code as to sequestration, it is not feasible to exclude the parties to a cause in a civil case, or, generally, the officers of the court, if they should be witnesses.

The ruling of this court in Collins v. State, 10 Ga. App. 34, 72 S. E. 526, cited by counsel for plaintiff in error, is in accord with what is now held. The only difference in the two cases is that in the Collins Case the facts implied a waiver of the right to a strict sequestration and in the present case the defendant did not waive any right and insisted upon a strict sequestration. The degree of strictness with which the rule requiring the sequestration of the witnesses should be enforced must necessarily depend largely upon the facts in each case, and it cannot be said that a judge abused his discretion in administering the rule in reference to the sequestration of witnesses, unless it is manifest that the right given by the Code was arbitrarily denied. Without regard to this, the precise matter urged by the plaintiff in error is not a proper matter for an assignment of error, for it is well settled that a violation of the orders of a trial judge to sequester the witnesses affords no reason for excluding the testimony of a witness who remained in the hearing of the court, although the jury may consider his presence within the hearing of the other witnesses in passing upon the credibility of his testimony.

[3] 3. The defendant objected to the introduction of the minutes of the September term, 1910, of the court, showing that he was at that term of the court tried and convicted of the offense of pointing a pistol, upon the ground that this evidence was irrelevant, and it would seem that this testimony was clearly objectionable, and probably was prejudicial; but for some reason the plaintiff in error abandoned this assignment of error in this court. The argument in the brief is restricted to a consideration of alleged errors of the court in the matter of the sequestration of the witnesses, and there is no reference whatever to other grounds of the motion for new trial. Consequently, under the well-settled rule, these grounds of the motion will not be considered.

[4] 4. The evidence, though conflicting, authorized the verdict finding the accused guilty, and it was not error to refuse a new trial.

Judgment affirmed.

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA RY. CO. v.
FLEMING.

FLEMING v. CENTRAL OF GEORGIA RY. CO.
(Nos. 4,750, 4,751.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CARRIERS (§ 281*)—CARRIAGE OF SICK PAS-SENGER—LIABILITIES.

While it is the duty of a carrier of passengers, who accepts a sick passenger, to exercise due diligence in taking care of him, and to furnish all practical facilities for his safe and comfortable passage, consistent with the conduct of the carrier's business and the comfort and safety of other passengers, this measure of diligence does not require the carrier to place a sick passenger in its baggage car. It applies only to the transportation of passengers in passenger cars provided for that purpose; and refusal by a conductor of a passenger car to transport a sick passenger in a baggage car raises no liability on the part of the carrier.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1093-1097, 1241; Dec. Dig. § 281.*]

2. CARRIERS (§ 281*)—CARRIAGE OF SICK PAS-SENGER—LIABILITIES.

The fact that conductors of passenger cars had previously permitted sick passengers to be placed in the baggage car would not vary the rule as announced in the foregoing headnote, and would not give a passenger the right to be transported in the baggage car. A baggage car is a place of danger, and, either sick or well, a passenger has no right to demand that the company shall transport him as a passenger in the baggage car.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1093-1097, 1241; Dec. Dig. § 281.*]

Russell, J., dissenting.

Error from City Court of Greenville; H. H. Revill, Judge.

Action by E. M. Fleming against the Central of Georgia Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error, and plaintiff files cross-bill of exceptions. Reversed on main bill, and cross-bill dismissed.

Ella May Fleming, as the widow of Henry A. Fleming, sued the Central of Georgia Railway Company to recover damages for the alleged negligent homicide of her husband. The petition in substance alleges that he was suffering from appendicitis, and that it was necessary to bring him to Atlanta for an operation; that for this purpose he was taken to a station of the defendant's railway, where a ticket was purchased for him, and a demand was made upon the conductor in charge of the train that, on account of his sickness and inability to sit up, he be taken in the baggage car as a passenger to Atlanta, the baggage car being a place where he could recline upon his cot and could be more safely transported than in a passenger car. The conductor declined to receive him as a passenger in the baggage car, and directed that he be taken upon his cot into a compartment of a passenger coach, called a "smoking car." In the smoking car two seats were thrown in such a way that the cot on which the sick man was being carried could be laid between the two. It is alleged that there was no place or room for his cot in the smoking car, that it was necessary to place his cot between two seats thrown together, and that this caused his body to be placed in a bowl-like position, which was uncomfortable and dangerous, and which caused the appendix to burst, and that the bursting of the appendix caused his death. There is also an allegation that, in taking the cot into the smoking compartment, one of the employees who was aiding in this service negligently dropped his end of the cot; but there is no allegation that any injury was caused by this act of negligence. On the contrary, it is distinctly affirmed in the petition that those in charge of Fleming managed the best way they could to place him in the smoking car according to the instructions of the conductor. It is also alleged that the railway company had been in the habit of transporting sick persons as passengers in the baggage car, and that this habit was so frequent as to become a custom binding upon the company. The negligence alleged against the defendant, in substance, is the refusal of the conductor to allow Fleming to be taken on the baggage car as a passenger; also that the defendant well knew his condition, and that "the failure of the defendant company to provide a safe, convenient, and comfortable place for the carrying of said Fleming caused his appendix to burst, and this caused his death."

The defendant demurred to the petition generally and specially. The court sustained some of the special grounds, overruled others, and overruled the general demurrer. To this judgment the defendant excepted. The plaintiff excepted by cross-bill of exceptions to the judgment so far as it sustained the special demurrer. The view that we take of the question raised by the main bill of exceptions will render unnecessary any discussion of the cross-bill.

Battle & Hollis, of Columbus, and McLaughlin & Jones, of Greenville, for plaintiff in error. N. F. Culpepper, of Greenville, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] The trial judge erred in not sustaining the general demurrer. The allegations of the petition were not sufficient to show a cause of action. While railroad companies are required to exercise extraordinary diligence in taking care of their passengers, and, where a passenger is manifestly sick, to furnish him all practical facilities for his safe and comfortable passage, consistent with the conduct of the carrier's business and the comfort and safety of its other passengers, yet we do not think this rule of diligence requires a railroad company to take any person as a passenger, either sick or well, in its baggage car. Civil Code 1910, § 2718, provides that all conductors, or other employes in charge of such cars shall be required to assign all passengers to their respective cars, or compartments of cars, provided for passengers. Section 2717 provides that all railroads doing business in this state shall furnish equal accommodations, in separate cars or compartments of cars, for white and colored passengers; the section not applying to sleeping cars. Section 2719 makes any passenger guilty of a misdemeanor when he refuses to remain in the seat, car, or compartment to which he has been assigned, and clothes the conductor and any and all employes on such cars with power to eject from the train or car any passenger who refuses to remain in the car or compartment assigned to him. Penal Code 1910, § 539, provides that companies operating and using compartment cars, or separate cars, shall furnish to the passengers comfortable seats and have such cars well and sufficiently lighted and ventilated, and that a failure to do so shall be a misdemeanor. These sections of the Code impose upon the carrier of passengers specific duties. It is required that equal accommodation be furnished to all passengers, that seats shall be furnished for passengers, and that passenger cars shall be furnished for passengers. The law requires also that baggage of passengers shall be transported in a baggage car furnished for that purpose.

*For other cases see same topic and section: NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes 79 S.E.—24

Now, the gravamen of the complaint in the present case is that Fleming, the passenger, was not carried in the baggage car, a car designed, not for passengers, but solely for baggage. It is well known that baggage cars are not fitted up for the reception of passengers. It has also been frequently held that passengers who ride in baggage cars assume the risk of that place. A baggage car is a known place of danger. It is placed ahead of the passenger cars, and next to or near the locomotive. Railroad companies generally, if not universally, provide in their rules and regulations that passengers shall not ride in the baggage car; and such a rule is not only reasonable, but is also one, we think, which a conductor or other employe has no authority to waive, so as to bind the company under ordinary circumstances. 4 Elliott on Railroads, § 1631. But, even in the absence of any such rule or regulation, it is manifest from the sections of the Code above cited, as well as from common knowledge, that the proper place for a passenger is in a car fitted up for that purpose, and that a baggage car is a more or less dangerous place. Mr. Beach in his work on Contributory Negligence, §§ 150, 152, goes so far as to lay down the principle that one who rides in a baggage car is a quasi trespasser, and cannot recover as a passenger, no matter whether the injury would have been sustained or not if he had remained in his proper place. We think, therefore, that it is clear that a carrier has the right to refuse to enter into a contract which would increase the hazard of a passenger, and a passenger cannot complain of such refusal.

[2] Even if there had been a practice of conductors to take sick passengers in the baggage car, there is no evidence that it was authorized by the company. Such a practice would certainly be against the spirit of the law set out in the Code sections above quoted. A railroad company is not required by law to carry hospital cars, or cars especially for sick people to ride in. It is not required to convert a baggage car into a car especially for sick people. If it accepts a sick passenger, its duty is to place him in a passenger car in such a position as will insure, so far as possible, his safety and his comfort. Where the carrier does this, the measure of its duty has been fulfilled. We think, therefore, that the trial judge should have sustained the general demurrer and dismissed the petition. We reverse the judgment on the main bill of exceptions, and dismiss the cross-bill of exceptions.

Judgment on main bill of exceptions reversed. Cross-bill dismissed.

RUSSELL, J., dissenting.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO. v.
CALHOUN. (No. 4,857.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PETITION NOT DEMURRABLE.

The petition set forth a cause of action, and was not subject to the demurrers filed thereto.

2. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 78*)—
ANSWER—ADMISSIONS.

Where, in a suit against a telegraph company to recover the statutory penalty for the failure to deliver a message as provided in section 2812 of the Civil Code of 1910, the petition alleges that the message was received by the defendant company on a given date at its office in a named city and the telegraph tolls were paid to the company as required by its regulations and the laws of this state, an answer by the defendant, that for want of sufficient information these allegations can neither be admitted nor denied, must be treated as an admission of those allegations. The facts thus averred in the petition are matters as to which the company must have had knowledge, and it will not be heard to say that it did not. Nor will it be excused for its failure to ascertain the truth in reference to these matters by a statement in the answer that it has not had sufficient time since filing the petition to make the necessary investigation to ascertain the truth. The time prescribed by law within which the defendant must file its answer must be held as a matter of law to be a reasonable time within which to make the necessary investigation. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Shamos, 12 Ga. App. 468, 77 S. E. 312.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 79-81; Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

3. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 78*)—DICTION OF VERDICT.

The defendant's acceptance of the message for delivery to the plaintiff and the failure to deliver having been shown by undisputed evidence, and all other material averments in the petition having been proved, either by evidence or by admissions in the defendant's answer, it was not erroneous to direct a verdict in the plaintiff's favor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 79-81; Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

4. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1078*)—EXCEPTION—ABANDONMENT.

The exception in the motion for a new trial in reference to the admission of certain documentary evidence, not being referred to in the brief of counsel for the plaintiff in error, must be treated as having been abandoned.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4256-4261; Dec. Dig. § 1078.*]

Error from City Court of Miller County; W. I. Geer, Judge.

Action by L. E. Calhoun against the Western Union Telegraph Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Bush & Stapleton, of Colquitt, and Dorsey, Brewster, Howell & Heyman and John K. MacDonald, all of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO. v. CALHOUN. (No. 4,856.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PLEADING (§ 248*)—AMENDMENT—EFFECT—TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

Where, in a suit against a telegraph company for the recovery of the statutory penalty for the failure to deliver a message, it is alleged in the petition that the defendant maintained an office at Macon, Ga., and that the telegram referred to was delivered to the defendant company at Macon, an amendment to the petition, striking the words "City of Macon" and substituting in lieu thereof "Town of Arlington," does not set forth a new cause of action; it appearing that the allegation of both the original petition and the amendment referred to the same message, and the purpose of the amendment being merely to correct the mistake made in the original petition in reference to the office at which the message was received.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 686, 687, 689-706, 708½, 709; Dec. Dig. § 248.*]

2. DECISION FOLLOWED.

All of the other questions raised in the record are controlled by the decision this day rendered in Western Union Tel. Co. v. Calhoun (No. 4,857) 79 S. E. 370.

Error from City Court of Miller County; W. I. Geer, Judge.

Action by L. E. Calhoun against the Western Union Telegraph Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Bush & Stapleton, of Colquitt, and Dorsey, Brewster, Howell & Heyman and John K. MacDonald, all of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

BOWEN v. DE LOACH. (No. 5,030.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 17, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. SALES (§ 202*)—TRANSFER OF TITLE—CASH SALE.

Where personalty is sold on cash sale, title does not pass till the purchase money is paid.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 542-551; Dec. Dig. § 202.*]

2. SALES (§ 202*)—TRANSFER OF TITLE—PART PAYMENT.

The evidence authorized a finding that title to the personalty sued for was not to pass to the person under whom the defendant claimed until the amount of the purchase money had been paid, and that the plaintiff had received only a small part of the purchase money. The fact that the sum so received had not been returned did not operate to pass title into the purchaser, but merely gave him the right to complete the sale and obtain title by payment of the balance due. Not having done this, he acquired no title which he could transmit to a third person. The evidence did not show a conditional sale to the person under whom the defendant claimed, but showed an absolute sale for cash.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 542-551; Dec. Dig. § 202.*]

Error from Superior Court, Bryan County; W. W. Sheppard, Judge.

Action by C. O. De Loach against L. S. Bowen. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

J. P. Dukes, of Pembroke, for plaintiff in error.

POTTLE, J. Judgment affirmed.

HATTON v. W. D. MORTON & CO.

W. D. MORTON & CO. v. HATTON.

(Nos. 4,767, 4,780.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. BROKERS (§ 20*)—CONTRACT—CONSTRUCTION—WHAT LAW GOVERNS.

The contract to pay commissions for the sale of real estate, upon which the suit was brought, was made and was to be performed within the state of Georgia; and hence its validity, form, and effect is to be controlled by the law of this state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Brokers, Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

2. BROKERS (§ 42*)—RIGHT TO COMMISSION—FAILURE TO REGISTER.

Under the ruling of this court in Ford v. Thomason, 11 Ga. App. 359, 75 S. E. 269, which was followed in Horsley v. Woodley, 12 Ga. App. 456, 78 S. E. 260, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, because he had not registered as a real estate dealer, as required by law. The court did not err in directing a verdict in favor of the defendant, and in view of the affirmation of that judgment, the assignments of error in the cross-bill of exceptions will not be considered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Brokers, Cent. Dig. § 43; Dec. Dig. § 42.*]

Error from City Court of Waycross; Jno. C. McDonald, Judge.

Action by R. C. Hatton against W. D. Morton & Co. Judgment for defendants on directed verdict, and plaintiff brings error, and defendants file cross-bill of exceptions. Judgment on main bill affirmed, and cross-bill dismissed.

Herbert W. Wilson and Jno. S. Walker, both of Waycross, for plaintiff in error. Wilson, Bennett & Lambdin, of Waycross, for defendants in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment upon the main bill of exceptions affirmed. Cross-bill of exceptions dismissed.

WYATT v. WYATT et al. (No. 4,756.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 327*)—PARTIES—SURETY ON BAIL BOND.

An action of trover was brought, and bail process issued. The defendant gave bail bond, with surety. On the trial, upon motion of the defendant, the bail process was dismissed, and the surety on the bond discharged. Thereafter the case proceeded to verdict and judgment against the defendant in trover only. The plaintiff sued out a writ of error, assigning error upon the judgment discharging the surety; but the surety was not served with the bill of exceptions. Held, that the writ of error must be dismissed. The surety was not a party in the court below, but he has a property right in the judgment in his favor. He is a party to the writ of error, and, as his rights are to be affected by the judgment in the Court of Appeals, he is entitled to notice and an opportunity to be heard in this court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1795, 1814-1820, 1822-1835; Dec. Dig. § 327.*]

Error from City Court of Madison; K. S. Anderson, Judge.

Action by Frances Wyatt against Martin Wyatt and others. From the judgment, plaintiff brings error. Writ of error dismissed.

Williford & Lambert, of Madison, for plaintiff in error. E. H. George and F. C. Foster, Sr., both of Madison, for defendants in error.

RUSSELL, J. Writ of error dismissed.

MOBLEY v. HARRELL (No. 4,859.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 334*)—EXCESSIVE PAYMENT BY MISTAKE—RIGHT TO RECOVER.

The allegations of the petition set forth a cause of action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 959-980; Dec. Dig. § 334.*]

Error from Superior Court, Grady County; Frank Park, Judge.

Action by Sam Harrell against O. L. Mobley. A judgment dismissing the petition was reversed on certiorari to the superior court, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

R. C. Bell and J. S. Weathers, both of Cairo, for plaintiff in error. R. R. Terrell, of Whigham, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Harrell sued Mobley in the city court of Whigham. Mobley demurred generally and specially, and the court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the petition, and Harrell by certiorari carried the case to the superior court, where the judgment of the city court was reversed, and the case remanded for trial. Mobley excepted to this judgment of the superior court.

The suit in the city court was for money had and received, and the allegations of the petition made the following case: On October 30, 1911, Harrell bought from Mobley a certain tract of land containing 150 acres, more or less, in the southwestern portion of lot No. 185 in the nineteenth district of Decatur county, Ga., at the fixed price of $11 per acre of whatever the tract would measure, to be paid on or before November 1st thereafter. Harrell and Mobley acting together secured the county surveyor to survey and measure this tract for the purpose of ascertaining the exact number of acres therein. The surveyor made this survey and measurement, and reported to them that the tract contained 133.66 acres, including a 7-acre tract that there was some dispute about. Assuming that this survey and measurement was correct, Harrell paid to Mobley the sum of $1,470.25, which was at the rate of $11 per acre, according to the survey and measurement, and Mobley executed his deed to Harrell accordingly. Very soon thereafter Harrell received a letter from the surveyor, notifying him that, after carefully looking over his figures relating to the survey and measurement, he found that he had made a mistake of fact, that the tract of land which Harrell had bought contained only 108.19 acres, that this mistake came about by reason of his being interrupted both by Harrell and by Mobley while he was trying to figure the number of acres contained in the tract. The disputed strip of 7 acres was not surveyed, and the addition of this to the tract which Mobley had sold to Harrell made the entire tract contain 115.19 acres, and this, at $11 per acre, amounted to $1,266.09. It was alleged that by reason of this mistake of the surveyor the petitioner paid to Mobley $204.16 more than he should have paid him, and more than Mobley should have received for the land, and the suit was brought to recover this excess, with interest on the same from the time of its payment. Mobley demurred to this petition, on the general ground that it set forth no cause of action, and on the special grounds that no copy of the contract of sale or of the deed referred to was attached to the petition, and that the relief that the plaintiff sought was on account of an alleged mistake, for which the city court was without jurisdiction to give relief, the same being equitable relief, which could only be granted by the superior court. The demurrer was sustained by the trial judge, and on certiorari this judgment was reversed.

We think the judgment of the superior court, sustaining the certiorari and remanding the case for trial, was right. If the plaintiff establishes on the trial the allegations of the petition, he will be entitled to recover the money paid the defendant in excess of the agreed price for the land. The land was not sold by the tract, according to the allegations of the petition, but expressly sold by the acre at a stipulated price of $11 per acre. The case, under the allegations, is not one where the vendor is charged with having made a fraudulent statement about the number of acres to induce the vendee to buy the land. There is no allegation that the vendee was deceived by any statement of the vendor; nor is it a case in which the vendee himself was guilty of negligence in ascertaining the facts, and, because of his own laches, would not be allowed any relief. In other words, it was not a case in which the purchaser relied upon the guaranty of the vendor as to the number of acres and was deceived, and there was no allegation of actual fraud upon the part of the vendor. If these were the facts, there could be no recovery. King Lbr. Co. v. Cowart, 136 Ga. 739, 72 S. E. 37. Nor is it a case where the vendee had sufficient opportunity to inspect the property and was prevented by the seller's fraud from so doing; but he voluntarily chose to rely upon the vendor's statement, without making any investigation to ascertain the truth. If this was the case, the plaintiff could not recover. Martin v. Harwell, 115 Ga. 156, 41 S. E. 686.

But the allegations of the petition, which are admitted to be true by the demurrer, clearly show that the excess over the stipulated price of the land was paid, not because of any fraud of the defendant or any negligence of the plaintiff, but simply through a mistake of fact, which mistake was made, not by the plaintiff or the defendant, but by the surveyor whom both had selected to ascertain the exact number of acres, in order that the correct amount as stipulated could be arrived at. Certainly, if the plaintiff established the allegations of his petition, the money should be refunded to him by the defendant, for the money had been paid through a mistake made by the surveyor. An action for money had and received lies in all cases where money is in the hands of another which ex sequo et bono the plaintiff is entitled to recover, and which the defendant is not entitled in conscience to retain. Bates-Farley Bank v. Dismukes, 107 Ga. 212, 217, 33 S. E. 175, and citations. We therefore conclude that the judge of the superior court did right in sustaining the certiorari and remanding the case for a trial.

Judgment affirmed.

JARRARD v. HAWES. (No. 4781.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. WITNESSES (§ 126*)—COMPETENCY—TRANSACTIONS WITH DECEASED PERSONS—STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

The evidence act of 1889 (Acts 1889, p. 85) superseded the decisions of the Supreme Court rendered prior to its passage, in which the evidence acts of 1866 (Acts 1866, p. 188) were construed. The provisions of section 5858 of the Code exclude the plaintiff, in a case in which the defendant has died, from testifying with relation to any conversation or transaction with the deceased; and there is no exception to the rule. For this reason the trial judge did not err in withdrawing, in his charge to the jury, that portion of the testimony of the plaintiff which purported to relate statements of the deceased defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. § 551; Dec. Dig. § 126; Statutes, Cent. Dig. §§ 359, 362.]

2. CONTRACTS (§ 353*)—ACTIONS FOR BREACH—INSTRUCTIONS—AMOUNT OF RECOVERY.

The plaintiff's action was based upon an entire contract, and for this reason the trial judge did not err in confining the consideration of the jury to a recovery for the plaintiff of the full amount of the contract price, in case the jury found in his favor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 93, 1829-1844; Dec. Dig. § 853.*]

3. NEW TRIAL (§ 71*)—CONFLICTING EVIDENCE.

The evidence, though conflicting, warranted the finding in favor of the defendant, and there was no error in refusing a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 144, 145; Dec. Dig. § 71.*]

Error from City Court of Bainbridge; H. B. Spooner, Judge.

Action by M. A. Jarrard against T. S. Hawes, administrator. Judgment for the defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

M. E. O'Neal, Albert H. Russell, and W. V. Custer, all of Bainbridge, for plaintiff in error. B. B. Bower, Jr., and T. S. Hawes, both of Bainbridge, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

BLALOCK v. EMPIRE LIFE INS. CO.
(No. 4,877.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. INSURANCE (§ 179½*)—EVIDENCE (§ 450*)—PAROL EVIDENCE—POLICY—CONSTRUCTION.

This was an action on a life insurance policy dated August 6, 1910, providing for the payment of an annual premium of $47.73. The first annual premium was paid. On August 6, 1911, the premiums were made payable quarterly, and the insured paid a quarterly premium of $12.65, less a dividend of 74 cents. The second quarterly premium became due on December 6, 1911 (allowing the 30 days' grace provided for in the policy). On December 22, 1911, the insured died, having failed to pay the second quarterly premium. The policy provides: "If any premiums shall not be paid when due, the company shall first apply any withdrawable surplus to pay the same, and the remainder of the premium due, if any, shall be charged against this policy as a loan, if the prospective loan value specified herein be sufficient to cover such advance, in addition to any existing liens and accrued interest; provided that, if the credits be not sufficient to cover the entire premium then due, the company shall apply the same, if sufficient, to pay the premium for a shorter period, but not less than a full quarterly premium." It is further provided in the policy that the insured may borrow the amount specified in column 2 of a table accompanying the policy, for the year in which the loan is to be taken, the contract to be assigned to the company as security, "and the premiums on the contract shall be paid in full to the end of the next policy year succeeding the day when the loan is made." In the loan table accompanying the policy and in column 2 thereof, opposite the words "2nd policy year," appear the figures $78. The plaintiff contends that when the second quarterly premium for the second year became due, to wit, on December 6, 1911, the policy had a loan value of $19.50, which, under the "automatically nonforfeitable" clause of the policy, should have been automatically applied by the company to the payment of the second quarterly premium, which would have carried the insurance beyond the date upon which the insured died. Held: (1) The policy is not ambiguous, and parol evidence was not admissible to explain its terms. (2) Construing the provisions in the policy relating to loans, in connection with the "automatically nonforfeitable" clause, the meaning of the policy is that at the time of the default as to the payment of the second quarterly premium by the insured the policy had no loan value which could be automatically applied to the payment of the premium due, and, under the policy, no amount was available to the insured as a loan until the end of the second year and the payment by him of a full annual premium for the third policy year.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 179½; Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2068-2082, 2084; Dec. Dig. § 450.*]

Error from City Court of Macon; Robt. Hodges, Judge.

Action by A. L. Blalock, administrator, against the Empire Life Insurance Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Miller & Jones and Wallace Miller, all of Macon, for plaintiff in error. Hatcher & Smith, of Macon, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

McARTHUR v. WILSON. (No. 4,972.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM (§ 83*)—RIGHT TO INTERPOSE.

In this state the statutory right of set-off is restricted to demands or claims of a similar nature, and a claim arising ex contractu cannot be set off against a claim arising ex delicto. Civil Code 1910, § 5521; Geer v. Cowart, 5 Ga. App. 251, 62 S. E. 1054.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Set-Off and Counterclaim, Cent. Dig. §§ 1, 32, 54, 55; Dec. Dig. § 83.*]

2. COURTS (§ 188*)—CITY COURTS—JURISDICTION—EQUITABLE SET-OFFS.

Except as above limited, the right of set-off is a purely equitable right, cognizable only in a court of equity. Hecht v. Snook, 114 Ga. 923, 41 S. E. 74. The city courts of this state have no jurisdiction to allow equitable set-off.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. §§ 439, 440, 442, 447, 448, 451, 452, 454, 458, 464, 465, 467, 468; Dec. Dig. § 188.*]

3. SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM (§ 83*)—CONTRACT AND TORT.

In a trover suit to recover possession of personal property, a plea setting up a debt claimed by the defendant against the plaintiff should not have been allowed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Set-Off and Counterclaim, Cent. Dig. §§ 1, 32, 54, 55; Dec. Dig. § 83.*]

Error from City Court of Reidsville; E. C. Collins, Judge.

Action by W. B. McArthur against W. C. Wilson. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Way & Burkhalter, of Reidsville, for plaintiff in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment reversed.

ROGERS-McRORIE CO. v. ROBESON CUTLERY CO. (No. 4,935.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. SALES (§ 347*)—ACTION FOR PRICE—EVIDENCE.

This was a suit upon an account for goods sold and delivered. The defendant pleaded that the goods were never received, and that, if they were delivered to the carrier as the agent of the consignee, the plaintiff agreed to release the defendant from payment, and to look alone to the carrier for the value of the goods. The case was submitted to the judge without the intervention of a jury, and he rendered a judgment in favor of the plaintiff; the judgment being put upon the ground "that the alleged rescission is not effective to defeat the plaintiff's recovery." There was evidence from which the judge could have found that the goods sued for had been actually delivered to the defendant by the carrier at destination. It follows that a judgment in favor of the plaintiff was authorized, without reference to whether the alleged agreement of release or rescission was based upon a sufficient consideration and therefore binding upon the plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 962-972; Dec. Dig. § 347.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

2. EVIDENCE (§ 179*)—WITNESSES (§ 255*)—BEST AND SECONDARY EVIDENCE—DUPLICATE BILL OF LADING—MEMORANDUM.

The admission in evidence of the alleged duplicate bill of lading issued by the initial carrier affords no ground for a new trial, both because it appeared that the original bill of lading was beyond the jurisdiction of the court and not accessible to the plaintiff, and because the duplicate was the highest and best evidence that could be produced. Furthermore, there was evidence of an actual delivery of the goods to the initial carrier. While the witness who testified as to the delivery of the goods to the carrier stated that his testimony was based upon a certain memorandum with which he had refreshed his recollection, it appeared, from his testimony, that he knew the memorandum was correct at the time it was made, and that it was made either by himself or under his supervision. The testimony was therefore admissible. Lenney v. Finley, 118 Ga. 427, 45 S. E. 317. There was no material error in any of the rulings complained of.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 595-599; Dec. Dig. § 179; * Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 874-880; Dec. Dig. § 255.*]

Error from City Court of Baxley; D. W. Krauss, Judge.

Action by the Robeson Cutlery Company against the Rogers-McRorie Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Parker & Highsmith, of Baxley, for plaintiff in error. R. L. J. & S. J. Smith, Jr., of Commerce, and Little, Powell, Hooper & Goldstein, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

ELROD v. M. C. KISER & CO. (No. 4,799.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. ACCORD AND SATISFACTION (§ 11*)—FORM OF AGREEMENT—CHECK—CONDITION OF ACCEPTANCE.

Where a debtor sends to his creditor a check which contains a statement to the effect that it is to be applied in full settlement of all accounts and notes due by the debtor (and as to the amount of which indebtedness the parties were in dispute), the creditor's acceptance and collection of the check will operate as a full settlement and satisfaction of all accounts and notes owing the creditor by the debtor previous to that date. Bass Dry Goods Co. v. Roberts Coal Co., 4 Ga. App. 520, 61 S. E. 1134; Wilcox v. Rogers, 13 Ga. App. —, 79 S. E. 219.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Accord and Satisfaction, Cent. Dig. §§ 75-82; Dec. Dig. § 11.*]

2. TRIAL (§ 203*)—INSTRUCTIONS—ISSUES.

This being a suit upon a promissory note, and the only defense filed by the defendant being that of accord and satisfaction, by reason of the fact that the plaintiff had accepted and collected a check containing a condition such as that above mentioned, and there being evidence offered in support of that defense, it was error to charge the jury in substance that the defendant could not prevail unless he showed that the note sued on had been paid, and to omit to give in charge the principle announced in the preceding headnote.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 477-479; Dec. Dig. § 203.*]

Error from Superior Court, Hart County; D. W. Meadow, Judge.

Action by M. C. Kiser & Co. against D. N. Elrod. Judgment for the plaintiffs, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Skelton & Skelton, of Hartwell, for plaintiff in error. Jas. H. Skelton, of Hartwell, for defendants in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment reversed.

LITTLE ROCK FURNITURE CO. v.

JONES & CO. et al. (No. 5,009.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. NOVATION (§ 1*)—PRINCIPAL AND SURETY (§ 97)—DISCHARGE OF SURETY.

A change in the nature or terms of a contract is called novation. Such novation without the consent of the surety discharges him. Civil Code 1910, § 3543; Bethune v. Dozier, 10 Ga. 235.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Novation, Cent. Dig. § 1; Dec. Dig. § 1; * Principal and Surety, Cent. Dig. §§ 146-168; Dec. Dig. § 97.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 5, pp. 4848-4851; vol. 8, p. 7733.]

2. PRINCIPAL AND SURETY (§ 97*)—DISCHARGE OF SURETY—ALTERATION OF CONTRACT.

This rule will not be altered by the fact that the change in the contract, which was made without the knowledge or consent of the surety, nevertheless inured to the benefit of the principal and the surety. If the change is made without the knowledge or consent of the surety, the surety's complete reply is "Non hæc in fœdera veni." Hill v. O'Neill, 101 Ga. 832, 28 S. E. 996.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Surety, Cent. Dig. §§ 146-168; Dec. Dig. § 97.*]

3. GUARANTY (§ 53*)—DISCHARGE—CHANGE IN CONTRACT.

The above-stated rule applies to guarantors as well as to sureties; and any material alteration in the original contract, without the knowledge or consent of the guarantor thereof, would relieve him from the guaranty. Johnson v. Brown, 51 Ga. 498.

[Ed. Note.—For other case, see Guaranty, Cent. Dig. §§ 64, 66; Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

4. GUARANTY (§ 53*)—DISCHARGE—CHANGE IN CONTRACT.

The Little Rock Furniture Company entered into a contract with Jones & Co. to furnish to them a certain number of cots and equipment to be used at the Confederate reunion in Macon, at stipulated terms. The Georgia Life Insurance Company went on the bond of Jones & Co. to guarantee the performance of their part of the contract. Subsequently the original contract was changed in material parts, without the knowledge or consent of the guarantor. These facts appeared from the allegations of the petition. Held, that the judgment sustaining a demurrer filed by the insurance company, setting up the novation and its consequent release, was properly sustained.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Guaranty, Cent. Dig. §§ 64, 66; Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§§ 205, 280*)—OBJECTION TO EXCLUSION OF PLAINTIFF'S EVIDENCE—SUFFICIENCY—NONSUIT.

The trial judge having, on objection, excluded from the evidence all the testimony introduced by the plaintiff to sustain the allegations of the petition as laid, and this judgment not having been excepted to, the award of a nonsuit was proper. The correctness of the judgment excluding the evidence, where no objection or exception was filed to that judgment, could not be brought in question by an exception to the judgment awarding a nonsuit. This being the situation, this court must assume that the exclusion of the testimony was proper; and the exclusion of the testimony left the plaintiff where it could not legally recover.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1281, 1282, 1503-1515; Dec. Dig. §§ 205, 280.*]

Error from City Court of Macon; Robt. Hodges, Judge.

Action by the Little Rock Furniture Company against Jones & Co. and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Jno. R. L. Smith and W. D. McNeil, both of Macon, for plaintiff in error. Miller & Jones and Robt. W. Barnes, all of Macon, for defendants in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment affirmed.

CITY DRUG CO. v. AMERICAN SODA FOUNTAIN CO. (No. 4,861.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. FRAUDS, STATUTE OF (§ 95*)—PRINCIPAL AND AGENT (§ 103*)—SALE BY AGENT—APPROVAL OF PRINCIPAL.

Where an agent for the sale of personal property receives an order for its purchase, in which is a recital that the order is taken subject to the approval of his principal, no sale is completed until the principal approves the order; and where the purchase price exceeds $50, such approval must be in writing, in order to comply with the statute of frauds. Civ. Code 1910, § 3222, par. 7. Prior to its acceptance by the principal the order is merely an offer to buy, and it does not become a complete contract of sale until it has been accepted by the principal in writing. The fact that the proposed purchaser pays to the agent to whom the order is delivered the sum of $1 as a part of the purchase price does not dispense with the necessity for a written acceptance by the principal, in the absence of proof that the money was paid to and accepted by the principal with knowledge of the terms of the order.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Frauds, Statute of, Cent. Dig. §§ 183-185; Dec. Dig. § 95.* Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. §§ 278-293, 353-359, 367; Dec. Dig. § 103.*]

2. DIRECTED VERDICT APPROVED.

The foregoing propositions control the case. The evidence demanded the verdict in favor of the plaintiff, and the court did not err in directing the jury so to find.

Error from City Court of La Grange; Frank Harwell, Judge.

Action by the American Soda Fountain Company against the City Drug Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

E. A. Jones, of La Grange, for plaintiff in error. Hatton Lovejoy, of La Grange, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

BALLARD v. DANIEL et al. (No. 4,819.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CERTIORARI (§ 70*)—APPEAL—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR—CERTAINTY AND CLEARNESS.

There is no merit in the motion to dismiss the bill of exceptions because the assignments of error are insufficient.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Certiorari, Cent. Dig. §§ 195-208; Dec. Dig. § 70.*]

2. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 202*)—REVIEW BY CERTIORARI—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR.

Though the allegations and assignments of error in the petition for certiorari were not very clearly or intelligibly set forth, they were not so indefinite or unintelligible as to require a dismissal of the certiorari on that ground by the judge of the superior court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 778-789; Dec. Dig. § 202.*]

Error from Superior Court, Morgan County; Jas. B. Park, Judge.

Certiorari by R. L. Ballard against C. E. Daniel and others to review a judgment of a justice of the peace. To the order of the superior court dismissing the certiorari, the petitioner brings error. Reversed.

M. C. Few, of Madison, for plaintiff in error. E. H. George, of Madison, for defendants in error.

HILL, C. J. [1] 1. This was a foreclosure of a laborer's lien. The fi. fa. issued thereon was levied upon certain property to which a claim was interposed. On the trial of the claim case in the justice's court, the justice found in favor of the claimant. The plaintiff sued out a writ of certiorari, and in the superior court the judge dismissed it, on the ground that the assignments of error complained of were insufficient and defective. When the case was called for argument in this court, a motion was made to dismiss the bill of exceptions because it failed to specify plainly the decision complained of; that "the assignments of error were insufficient in law; that the assignments of error were confused, incoherent, and unintelligible, and failed to present clearly any statement of the rulings of which it seeks to complain and the matters which transpired in the court below."

The assignments of error are as follows:

(1) That the court erred in not disposing of the traverse filed to the truth of the answer of the magistrate whose judgment was the subject-matter of the complaint; (2) that the court erred in dismissing said certiorari upon the ground that the errors complained of were insufficiently assigned, said assignment being as follows: "That the court erred in passing the order dismissing said levy and said laborer's lien upon all the grounds as therein stated, which said order is as follows: 'After argument had, after all of the evidence of the plaintiff was introduced, on motion of the claimant's attorney, it is ordered that said levy be dismissed on the grounds that the evidence fails to show that the contract of labor was completed, or that the plaintiff was forced to abandon her contract of labor, or that she had fully settled with her employer, the defendant in fi. fa., with the cotton picked to the date of said levy. In open court this the 12th day of Dec., 1910. E. H. Prince, J. P.' To which errors of the court in passing said order as aforesaid on the 8th day of March, 1913, dismissing said petition for certiorari and disallowing the same, plaintiff says was error, and to said error of the court she then excepted, and now excepts and assigns the same as error upon all of the grounds as stated in the original petition for certiorari and as hereinbefore in this bill of exceptions stated fully." While the assignments of error are not very aptly or clearly stated in the bill of exceptions, we think they are sufficient to furnish all the necessary information for this court; and the motion to dismiss is therefore overruled.

[2] 2. We think that the judge of the superior court erred in dismissing the certiorari on the ground that the petition failed to set out any sufficient assignments of error, or to inform the court as to what transpired in the magistrate's court on the trial of the case. The assignments of error contained in the petition for certiorari may be briefly stated as follows: After stating the character of the case, it is alleged that the judgment was adverse to the petitioner, and being dissatisfied therewith, she (petitioner) brings her petition for certiorari within 30 days after the final determination of said case, and then proceeds plainly and distinctly to set forth what occurred on the trial of the case and the errors complained of. First, Petitioner, being plaintiff in laborer's lien, tendered issue, and issue was joined, whereupon the claimant moved the court to dismiss said lien foreclosure, upon the ground that it did not distinctly set forth that the contract had been fully performed. Whereupon petitioner offered the following amendment: "And now comes the affiant, in case of Rosa Lee Ballard v. C. F. McDonald and amends her affidavit in said matter, and for cause of amendment says: The nonperformance of the contract to a finish was caused by breach of the contract on the part of C. F. McDonald refusing to deliver to her her part of the crops as marketing said crop, and Charlie Daniel, the claimant in said matter, to do the same"—which amendment was allowed. Evidence was then introduced by the plaintiff in support of her lien. After the conclusion of the evidence, the following order was passed by the magistrate: "After all the evidence for the plaintiff was introduced, on motion of the claimant's attorney it is ordered that said levy be dismissed, on the ground that the evidence fails to show that the contract for labor was completed, or that the plaintiff was forced to abandon her said contract of labor, or that she had fully settled with her employer, the defendant in fi. fa., with the cotton picked to the date of said levy." Petitioner assigned the following errors: "That the court erred in passing the order dismissing said levy and said laborer's lien upon all of the grounds as therein stated."

The assignments of error are somewhat confused, but we think that they are sufficiently specific, and that the judge of the superior court erred in dismissing the certiorari on the ground that the assignments were not sufficiently definite and specific. We think, further, that the judge should have submitted to the jury the traverse to the answer of the magistrate, and should also have passed upon the assignments of error upon their merit. Judgment reversed.

JACKSON v. STATE. (No. 5,012.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 17, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1092*)—BILL OF EXCEPTIONS—SERVICE—CERTIFICATE OF ATTORNEY.

There is no provision of law for serving a bill of exceptions upon the opposite party by mail. The mere certificate of counsel is not proper evidence of service of a bill of exceptions. In the present case, the only evidence of service of the bill of exceptions being a statement indorsed thereon and signed by counsel for the plaintiff in error, to the effect that he had served the solicitor general "with the within bill of exceptions by mailing to him through the U. S. mail a copy of the within," the motion of the solicitor general to dismiss the writ of error must be sustained. Civ. Code 1910, § 6160; Clark v. Lyon, 48 Ga. 126.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2803, 2829, 2834-2861, 2919; Dec. Dig. § 1092.*]

Error from Superior Court, Laurens County; K. J. Hawkin, Judge.

Lelia Jackson was convicted of selling liquor, and brings error. Dismissed.

Howard & Kea, of Dublin, for plaintiff in error. E. L. Stephens, Sol. Gen., of Wrightsville, for the State.

RUSSELL, J. Writ of error dismissed.

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA RY. CO. v. McKEY.
(No. 4,851.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. RAILROADS (§ 369*)—INJURIES TO PERSONS ON TRACK—STATUTORY SIGNALS.

A railroad company, relatively to a person not upon or approaching a public crossing, is under no duty to comply with the statutory requirements as to giving signals and checking the speed of its train; and the failure to comply with such requirements is not, as to such a person, negligence for which damages may be recovered. Atlanta & Charlotte Air Line Railway Co. v. Gravitt, 93 Ga. 369 (4), 20 S. E. 550, 26 L. R. A. 553, 44 Am. St. Rep. 145.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1259-1262; Dec. Dig. § 369.*]

2. RAILROADS (§ 359*)—INJURIES TO PERSONS ON TRACK—DUTY OF COMPANY.

A driver of an automobile, who undertakes to cross a railroad elsewhere than at a public crossing, cannot recover for injuries to the automobile, received in consequence of a collision with a passing train, solely upon the ground that the railroad company's servants failed to comply with the statutory requirements in reference to ringing the bell or blowing the whistle and checking the speed of the train. The only duty which the railroad company owes to a person in such a situation is not to injure him or his property wantonly or willfully, and to use ordinary care to prevent such injury after the person or his property is discovered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1288, 1239; Dec. Dig. § 359.*]

3. RAILROADS (§ 389*)—INJURIES TO PERSONS ON TRACK—PROXIMATE CAUSE—FAILURE TO GIVE SIGNALS.

The failure of the engineer to give the signals required by the statute when approaching a public crossing will not impose liability upon a railroad company to a person upon or near the railroad track who is fully aware of the approach of the train. In such a case failure to give the statutory warning of the approach of the train cannot be regarded as the proximate cause of an injury sustained by a person having knowledge of the approach of the train. Central Railroad v. Brinson, 70 Ga. 209.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1319-1323; Dec. Dig. § 389.*]

4. NEGLIGENCE (§§ 136, 141*)—COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE—QUESTION FOR JURY—INSTRUCTIONS.

There being evidence of mutual negligence on the part of the driver of the automobile, as well as on the part of the defendant, and the comparison of such negligence being a question for the jury, it was error to refuse a written request to charge as follows: "If you believe that the plaintiff and the defendant were both negligent, but the negligence of the plaintiff exceeded that of the defendant, or equaled it, then the plaintiff could not recover, and you should find for the defendant." Macon Railway & Light Co. v. Carger, 4 Ga. App. 477, 61 S. E. 882; Brunswick & Western R. Co. v. Wiggins, 113 Ga. 842, 39 S. E. 551, 61 L. R. A. 513.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 277-353, 382-399; Dec. Dig. §§ 136, 141.*]

5. RAILROADS (§ 400*)—INJURIES TO PERSONS ON TRACK—INSTRUCTIONS—PROXIMATE CAUSE.

It being undisputed in the evidence that the driver of the automobile saw the approaching train at a distance of about a mile from where the collision occurred, the trial judge should have instructed the jury that the failure of the engineer to ring the bell and blow the whistle would not be such negligence as would afford the plaintiff ground for complaint.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1385-1381; Dec. Dig. § 400.*]

6. TRIAL (§ 296*)—INSTRUCTIONS—CURE BY OTHER INSTRUCTIONS.

The charge to which exception is taken in the third ground of the amendment to the motion for a new trial was not erroneous, in view of the fact that the trial judge, in another part of the charge, instructed the jury in reference to the law of contributory negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 705-713, 715, 716, 718; Dec. Dig. § 296.*]

7. NEGLIGENCE (§ 101*)—RAILROADS (§§ 387, 389, 395, 396*)—INJURIES TO PERSONS ON TRACK—ACTIONS—BURDEN OF PROOF—COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE.

Where, in a suit against a railroad company for damages, it appears that injury has been sustained by the running of the defendant's trains, a presumption of negligence arises against the railroad company, and it carries the burden of proving that it exercised all ordinary and reasonable care and diligence. This may be done either by showing that the plaintiff was at fault equally with or more than the defendant, or that the injured party could by the exercise of ordinary care have avoided the consequences of the defendant's negligence, or that the injury was due to an unavoidable accident for which neither party was to blame. The railroad company may defend by proving one or more of the foregoing theories of defense. It is not bound, at all events, to prove any particular one or more than one of them; and therefore the court erred in placing the burden upon the defendant in this case of showing that the plaintiff was guilty of negligence or that the occurrence was an accident.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 85, 163, 164; Dec. Dig. § 101.* Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1296, 1314-1316, 1319-1323, 1339, 1340, 1341-1343, 1357; Dec. Dig. §§ 337, 389, 395, 396.*]

8. TRIAL (§ 251*)—INSTRUCTIONS—ISSUES.

The question of the width of the public highway was, under the pleadings, pertinent only for the purpose of illustrating the question whether the plaintiff's automobile stopped within the public highway or beyond the highway. The only allegation of negligence in reference to the character of the crossing maintained was that it was not so filled or elevated as to afford a safe, easy, and convenient passage for automobiles and other vehicles; hence the question of negligence of the defendant in the maintenance of the crossing should be confined to the specific act of negligence charged in the petition.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 587-595; Dec. Dig. § 251.*]

9. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1066*)—HARMLESS ERROR—IGNORING ISSUES.

There was evidence from which the jury could find that at the time of the collision the automobile was on the railroad at a public crossing, and that the defendant was negligent in failing to check the speed of its train before reaching the crossing. In view of the fact, however, that there was a conflict in the evidence as to the location of the automobile, the errors indicated above required the grant of a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 4220; Dec. Dig. § 1066.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Error from City Court of Forsyth; T. B. Cabaniss, Judge.

Action by T. S. McKey against the Central of Georgia Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Lloyd Cleveland, of Griffin, J. E. Hall, of Macon, and Willingham & Willingham, of Forsyth, for plaintiff in error. Whitaker & Dukes, of Valdosta, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment reversed.

HALL v. C. J. ROEHR & CO. (No. 4,806.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 93*)—DECISIONS REVIEWABLE.

"Where the only questions presented for review by this court arise upon rulings by the court below on the trial of the issue raised by special plea to the jurisdiction, which was not sustained by the verdict thereon returned, and it appears that neither a reversal of any one or more of such rulings nor a setting aside of such verdict would operate to terminate the main case, but would leave the same still pending, the writ of error is premature, and must be dismissed." Ross v. Mercer, 115 Ga. 353, 41 S. E. 594. See, also, State Mutual Ass'n v. Kemp, 115 Ga. 355, 41 S. E. 652; Warren v. Blevins, 94 Ga. 215, 21 S. E. 459.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 643-647; Dec. Dig. § 93.*]

Error from City Court of Bainbridge; H. B. Spooner, Judge.

Action by C. J. Roehr & Co. against C. O. Hall. The court made certain rulings on the trial of a special plea, which was not sustained by the verdict returned, and defendant brings error. Writ of error dismissed.

R. G. Hartsfield, of Bainbridge, for plaintiff in error. J. C. Hale, of Bainbridge, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Writ of error dismissed.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS CO. v.
GEORGE GILMORE & CO.
(No. 4,813.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CUSTOMS AND USAGES (§ 10*)—APPLICATION—SCOPE.

Where one goes into the open market of a particular trade or business and makes a contract to purchase, he is bound by a custom universal in its character, which is applicable to that particular trade or business (the custom becoming by implication a part of the contract), unless the contract stipulates to the contrary, or, in making the purchase, the purchaser notifies the seller that the contract is made without regard to the particular custom.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Customs and Usages, Cent. Dig. §§ 11-21, 35-39; Dec. Dig. § 10.*]

2. CUSTOMS AND USAGES (§ 21*)—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The evidence in the present case was issuable as to the character and universality of the custom claimed by the plaintiff to exist in the market where the purchase was made, and as to the knowledge of the defendant of the existence of such custom, and also as to whether the contract was made irrespective of the custom.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Customs and Usages, Cent. Dig. § 47; Dec. Dig. § 21.*]

Error from City Court of Sandersville; E. W. Jordan, Judge.

Action by the Louisiana Red Cypress Company against George Gilmore & Co. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Goodwin & Wood, of Sandersville, for plaintiff in error. Evans & Evans, of Sandersville, for defendants in error.

HILL, C. J. Gilmore & Co., of Warthen, Ga., inquired by letter of the Louisiana Red Cypress Company, of New Orleans, La., for prices on best cypress shingles in car load lots. In reply the Louisiana Red Cypress Company wrote, making the following quotations of prices:

"4" Best Cypress Shingles.....	$4 30
5" " " " .....	4 30
6" " " " .....	4 30

On receipt of these quotations of prices Gilmore & Co. ordered a car load of five-inch shingles, specifying that 10,000 six-inch shingles be included in the shipment. The car of shingles was shipped to Gilmore & Co. and was received by them. They received from the Louisiana Red Cypress Company a bill for 166,000 shingles, covering the shipment, and they replied that they had counted the shingles, and that there were only 131,500 shingles. The Louisiana Red Cypress Company admitted that this was the correct number of pieces, and took the position that the shingles were sold on the basis of the standard shingle of four inches in width; that when shingles four inches in width are bought, the purchaser receives 1,000 pieces, which are counted as 1,000 shingles; that when he orders five-inch shingles he receives 800 pieces counted as 1,000 shingles (on the basis of four-inch shingles this being the unit and standard of counting); and that when six-inch shingles are ordered the purchaser receives 667 pieces, counted as 1,000 shingles (on the basis of four-inch shingles, as the unit of counting). Gilmore & Co. refused to make payment on this basis, but did pay what they understood to be due under their contract, to wit, $374.74, the price of 131,500 shingles.

The Louisiana Red Cypress Company brought suit against them for the balance which it claimed to be due according to the custom governing the designation of shingles which prevailed in the Louisiana market (the shingles having been shipped from Louisiana), and also sued for the freight.

On the trial the evidence showed that the freight had been paid by Gilmore & Co., and the trial judge directed a verdict for them on the ground that, although there was a custom among lumbermen to count shingles on the basis of four-inch shingles this custom was not communicated or known to the defendants, and therefore that they were not bound by it. The plaintiff excepts, taking the position that knowledge of this custom had been communicated to the defendants; that, according to the evidence, the defendants were dealers in shingles, and had been for years, and knew, or should have known, the custom of counting shingles; and that by implication the custom of the trade became a part of the contract and binding on the defendants.

It will be seen from the foregoing statement of facts that the controlling question raised by the record was the interpretation which should be placed upon the order for shingles which Gilmore & Co. gave to the Louisiana Red Cypress Company. There was no dispute that in the market where these shingles were bought there was a custom of counting cypress shingles as claimed by the plaintiff. The question in dispute was whether the defendants had knowledge of the custom. If the custom prevailed in the market where the shingles were bought, and was universally understood as applicable to a particular trade or business, by implication of law this custom became a part of the contract and was binding upon both parties. 12 Cyc. 1085 (b); Kirby Planing Mill Co. v. Hughes, 11 Ga. App. 645 (4), 75 S. E. 1059. In other words, where a custom is universal or general, and applies to the subject-matter of the contract, every person who makes the contract is presumed to know the custom, and it enters into the contract. Kirby Planing Mill Co. v. Hughes, supra; Horan v. Strachan & Co., 86 Ga. 408, 12 S. E. 678, 22 Am. St. Rep. 471. As above stated, the evidence in behalf of the plaintiff was that in Louisiana, where these shingles were bought, it was universally understood by the trade that, when one ordered 1,000 five-inch shingles and 1,000 six-inch shingles, the purchaser would receive only 800 five-inch shingles, and only 687 six-inch shingles, and in each instance the shingles would be counted as 1,000. Besides this evidence of the prevailing custom, knowledge of which the defendants were presumed to have had, there was evidence that they had been dealers in shingles for many years, and, from this fact, must have known of this custom. We conclude, without further discussing the question, that the issue was one for the jury, and could not have been determined as a matter of law by the court. It was for the jury to say, as a matter of fact, under the evidence, whether this was a custom where these shingles were bought, and, whether the defendants bought with knowledge, actual or constructive, of such a custom, and, if so, whether they put the plaintiff on notice, at the time of the purchase, that they were not buying in accordance with this custom, but that when they ordered 1,000 shingles, whether five-inch or six-inch shingles, they expected to get 1,000 shingles by actual count.

[2] It is further contended by the defendants that, while there may have been such a custom as claimed by plaintiff, it was a mere local custom or business usage, and was not general or universal in its scope, and was not binding upon the defendants, unless they gave their assent thereto, and that the plaintiff was put on notice that in buying these shingles the defendants were relying upon the custom governing the sale of pine shingles, and that this custom was that they should receive 1,000 five-inch shingles and 1,000 six-inch shingles for every 1,000 ordered, regardless of the width of the shingles; in other words, that it took 1,000 five-inch shingles to make 1,000 shingles, and 1,000 six-inch shingles to make 1,000 shingles. This we think was a question for solution by the jury.

Judgment reversed.

W. H. COOPER & SONS v. BELL.

BELL v. W. H. COOPER & SONS.

(Nos. 4,922, 4,967.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

NEW TRIAL (§ 117*)—MOTION—DISMISSAL—DELAY IN FILING.

The motion for a new trial, not having been filed during the term at which the rule nisi was granted, should have been dismissed on motion made at the hearing thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 238-241; Dec. Dig. § 117.*]

Error from City Court of Madison; K. S. Anderson, Judge.

Action by E. J. Bell against W. H. Cooper & Sons. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants bring error, and plaintiff filed a cross-bill of exceptions. Judgment upon cross-bill of exceptions reversed, and main bill of exceptions dismissed.

E. H. George, of Madison, for plaintiffs in error. F. C. Foster, Sr., of Madison, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. This case is controlled by the ruling of the Supreme Court in the case of Hilt v. Young, 116 Ga. 708, 43 S. E. 78. The plaintiff in the lower court has filed a cross-bill, the ruling upon which will be controlling in the decision of both writs of error. From the cross-bill it appears that the motion for a new trial was not filed at the term at which the rule nisi was granted, and indeed was not filed until the day the judgment was rendered overruling the defendant's motion for a new trial. Upon the hearing of the motion for a new trial, the plaintiff's counsel made a motion to dismiss it, which was overruled. As decided in Hilt v. Young, supra, the judge erred in refusing to dismiss the motion for a new trial.

Our attention is called by counsel for the plaintiff in error in the main bill of exceptions to the case of Cook v. Cook, 67 Ga. 381. Counsel for the plaintiff in the lower court pursued the practice suggested in that case. Nothing more is held in that case than that a writ of error will not be dismissed where the motion to dismiss the motion for a new trial is not made in the lower court. And this ruling is in accord with the subsequent practice act of 1911 (Laws 1911, p. 149). The ruling in Southern Ry. Co. v. Flemister, 120 Ga. 524, 48 S. E. 160, is not in point, because in the present case the record discloses without dispute the date upon which the motion for a new trial was actually tried.

Judgment upon cross-bill of exceptions reversed; main bill of exceptions dismissed.

KERR GLASS MFG. CO. v. AMERICUS GROCERY CO. (No. 5,033.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 16, 1913.
Rehearing Denied Oct. 3, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1005*)—VERDICT—CONFLICTING EVIDENCE.

The evidence was conflicting, but authorized the verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3880-3876, 3948-3950; Dec. Dig. § 1005.*]

2. PLEADING (§ 93*)—ANSWER—INCONSISTENT PLEAS.

A defendant may in different paragraphs of his answer file contradictory or inconsistent pleas.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 189, 190; Dec. Dig. § 93.*]

3. TRIAL (§ 295*)—ACTION FOR PRICE—INSTRUCTIONS—FRAUD.

The instructions of the trial judge were not subject to the criticism that they permitted the jury to base a verdict upon fraud not pleaded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 703-717; Dec. Dig. § 295.*]

4. SALES (§ 364*)—ACTION FOR PRICE—INSTRUCTIONS—FRAUD.

It was not error to charge that rescission is allowed if the party defrauded moves with "reasonable promptness" after discovering the fraud, nor that restitution of the goods bought need not have been made if they were worthless.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 1065-1076; Dec. Dig. § 364.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 302*)—PRESENTATION BELOW—MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

Some of the grounds of the motion for a new trial, complaining of rulings on evidence, are incomplete and cannot be considered. The others are without merit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1744-1752; Dec. Dig. § 302.*]

6. SALES (§ 278*)—LIABILITY FOR PRICE—MISREPRESENTATION OF QUALITY.

Where one orders an article described only by a name importing no particular quality, and the article proves to be unsuited to the use intended, and for which it was represented by the seller to be suitable, the purchaser is not bound for the purchase price, unless at the time of the purchase he had knowledge of the real quality of the article.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 772-776; Dec. Dig. § 273.*]

7. TRIAL (§ 350*)—INSTRUCTIONS—VERDICT.

Looking to the substance and not the form of the defendant's answer, the only defense relied on was that the goods sold were worthless. Its right to rescission depended upon the establishment of this defense. Proof of fraud was not an essential part of the defense, because, in the present case, if the goods were in fact worthless, it was immaterial whether or not the purchase was made because of fraudulent misrepresentations. It was not error to refuse to instruct the jury that, if they found for the defendant, they should specify in the verdict whether the finding was based upon the plea of rescission, or upon that of failure of consideration.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 828-833; Dec. Dig. § 350.*]

Error from City Court of Americus; W. M. Harper, Judge.

Action by the Kerr Glass Manufacturing Company against the Americus Grocery Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

R. L. Maynard, of Americus, for plaintiff in error. Shipp & Sheppard, of Americus, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. The plaintiff sued the defendant upon an open account for the purchase price of a lot of fruit jars. The account arose under a written contract for the purchase of a large lot of fruit jars described as "economy jars." A portion of the goods was delivered and accepted by the defendant, and the remainder rejected. The suit was for the balance claimed to be due under the contract. The defendant pleaded that it was induced to enter into the contract by the false and fraudulent representations of the plaintiff's agent in reference to the quality of the jars made to defendant and to retail merchants from whom the agent secured orders, which were turned over to defendant to be filled. It was further pleaded that the jars were worthless and wholly unsuited for the use for which they were intended, to wit, preserving fruit and vegetables, that the defendant had on hand a large quantity of the jars which it tendered to the plaintiff, and it prayed to recover back the amount it had paid for the purchase price. There was no demurrer to the answer, and the trial resulted in a general verdict for the defendant, but in effect finding against its plea of recoupment. The plaintiff's motion for a new trial was overruled.

[1] 1. The evidence was conflicting upon the issue raised by the answer; but there was evidence which authorized a finding that the fruit jars were totally worthless and wholly unsuited for preserving fruits and vegetables, that repeated tests of the jars had been made by persons skilled in the business of canning fruits and vegetables, and in some cases all of the products placed in the jars spoiled. On the other hand, witnesses who had used the jars testified that they were suitable for preserving fruit and vegetables, and were of the quality which the seller's agent represented them to be. This conflict in the evidence was settled by the jury adversely to the plaintiff's contention, and the approval of the verdict by the trial judge forecloses the question of the sufficiency of the evidence.

[2] 2. Complaint is made that the court refused to require the defendant to elect whether it would stand on its plea of failure of consideration, resulting from a breach of the implied warranty of the law, or upon its plea of rescission. It is contended that the plea of failure of consideration is a recognition of the contract, a plea of rescission, a repudiation of the contract, and that a defendant cannot file these inconsistent defenses. A plaintiff is not permitted in the same action to treat a contract as subsisting and also repudiate it. Harden v. Lang, 110 Ga. 392, 395, 36 S. E. 100; Timmerman v. Stanley, 123 Ga. 850, 853, 51 S. E. 760, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 379. The defendant is, however, permitted to assume inconsistent positions and file inconsistent pleas. If suit is brought on a contract, the defendant may plead that no contract was ever entered into, that if entered into it was procured by fraud and was therefore void, or that it was valid when made, and the consideration has partially or totally failed. If such inconsistent pleas are filed, the defendant is entitled to prevail if he sustains any one or more of them. Civil Code 1910, § 5649; Mendel v. Miller, 134 Ga. 610, 68 S. E. 430. The rule just stated is applicable whether the inconsistent pleas be filed in the first instance or be introduced by way of amendment to the original answer.

[3] 3. Complaint is also made that the court charged generally upon the subject of fraud, and did not limit the instructions to the fraud pleaded. Upon examining the charge as a whole, we do not think it subject to this criticism. The jury must have understood from the language used by the trial judge that they must determine from the evidence whether the defendant had been defrauded as alleged in its answer.

[4] 4. Complaint is made of several parts of the charge of the court upon the subject of rescission for fraud, to the effect that restitution must be made with reasonable promptness after the discovery of the fraud, unless the thing received is wholly worthless, in which event no offer to return it need be made. The Code provides that the defendant "must promptly, upon discovery of the fraud, restore or offer to restore" whatever he has received, "if it be of any value." Civil Code, § 4305. The instructions of the judge were in substantial accord with this section of the Code, and there was evidence to authorize the charge.

[5] 5. Several grounds of the motion complain of the admission of evidence. Some of these are not complete and cannot be considered, and the others present no meritorious exception.

[6] 6. The court charged the jury as follows: "I charge you that when a known, described, and definite article is ordered of a manufacturer, although it is stated by the purchaser that it is required for a particular purpose, yet if the known, described and definite thing that is of the kind and quality called for or ordered be actually supplied, there is no warranty that it shall answer the particular purpose intended by the buyer. In other words, if it should appear that the defendant knew the economy jar, and knew its purposes and offices, and gave an order for it, although he may have stated that he wanted to use it for some foreign use, why, if the plaintiff shipped to him the jar that he ordered, with that knowledge on his part, he would not get the benefit of any warranty that it would do anything else beyond what it was ordinarily intended for." It is conceded that this instruction is in the main correct; but it is contended that the court erroneously limited the rule to a "known, described, and definite thing." There was no error in this instruction when applied to the facts of this case. The defendant ordered "economy jars." This was but the name of a jar which the manufacturer claimed to be superior in quality to other jars. If the defendant had, before the purchase, known of the defects which it now claims to exist, it would not be heard to complain. But the mere fact that a purchaser gets the brand of goods he orders does not necessarily preclude him from pleading total failure of consideration, if the goods prove to be worthless, and he is in ignorance of this fact at the time of the purchase. If the contract had described the jars and set forth their qualities, and the jars delivered were of the quality and kind thus described, the principle of the decisions relied on by the defendant would be applicable. City of Moultrie v. Schofields Sons Co., 6 Ga. App. 464, 469, 65 S. E. 315; Fay v. Dudley, 129 Ga. 314, 58 S. E. 826. The defendant knew nothing of the quality of "economy jars." The name imported no particular article of a definite kind and quality. The jar exhibited by the agent appeared to be of the quality represented by him when the test which he used was applied; but, according to some of the evidence, they were wholly worthless as fruit jars when put to practical use.

[7] 7. The defendant contends that, when requested to do so, the court ought to have instructed the jury to specify the plea upon which the verdict was based. This is the rule where more than one separate and distinct defense is filed. Civil Code § 5925; Livingston v. Taylor, 132 Ga. 1, 8, 63 S. E. 694. In determining whether there is really more than one defense, regard must be had more to substance than to form. A defendant may file a special defense in many different paragraphs and in varying language; but, if all the paragraphs contain substantially the same defense, the statutory rule does not apply. Crockett v. Garrard, 4 Ga. App. 360, 61 S. E. 552. In the present case the defendant had but one defense, viz., that the goods purchased were worthless. Its right to rescission depended on the establishment of this defense. Fraud also was pleaded; but, unless the goods were not reasonably suited for the purpose for which they were sold, there was no fraud. The jury did not allow any recovery for the jars which had been accepted and paid for, and the verdict merely relieved the defendant from taking and paying for goods not delivered. Only partial rescission was allowed, and the only theory upon which the verdict could have been founded was that the jars were not suited to the uses intended. If this was true, it is immaterial whether there were fraudulent misrepresentations or whether the seller honestly believed the goods were as represented. No material error is disclosed in any of the grounds of the motion for a new trial.

Judgment affirmed.

DAVIS v. COX. (No. 4,838.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 9, 1913.
Rehearing Denied Oct. 3, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. LOGS AND LOGGING (§ 25*) — VENDOR'S LIEN.

The lien provided for by section 3358 of the Civil Code of 1910 applies to timber or logs that have been severed from the soil, and does not apply to standing trees, although sold to the purchaser to be severed from the soil and converted into lumber for his sawmill.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Cent. Dig. § 58; Dec. Dig. § 25.*]

2. LOGS AND LOGGING (§ 33*)—LIENS—THIRD PERSON CLAIMANT—RIGHT TO ATTACK LIEN.

A claimant has the right to show that an execution levied on the property claimed by him is void or inoperative, and, where an execution has been issued under foreclosure of a lien, under Civ. Code 1910, § 3358, and a counter affidavit has been filed and a claim interposed to the levy, the claimant has a right to attack the validity of the lien claimed, although the defendant may have withdrawn his counter affidavit before the trial of the claim case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Cent. Dig. §§ 89-103; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

3. LOGS AND LOGGING (§ 3*)—SALES—TRANSFER OF TITLE.

Where a written contract of sale of standing timber was entered into and one-half the purchase money paid, the title to the timber passed immediately to the purchaser, in so far as it affected the rights of innocent persons who subsequently bought from the purchaser lumber cut from the timber, though there was a verbal agreement, of which such innocent persons had no knowledge, between the seller and the purchaser that the title to the timber should not pass until it was cut.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Cent. Dig. §§ 6-12; Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

Error from Superior Court, Whitfield County; A. W. Fite, Judge.

Claim case in Justice Court by W. H. Davis against W. T. Cox. From a judgment finding the property subject, plaintiff appealed to the Superior Court, wherein judgment was again rendered finding the property subject, and claimant brings error. Reversed.

Cox foreclosed in a justice's court a lien for timber furnished to one Hughey for his sawmill, under the provisions of the Civil Code 1910, § 3358. Davis filed a claim, and from a judgment finding the property subject the claimant appealed to the superior court, where the case was submitted to the presiding judge, without the intervention of a jury, and the judge rendered a judgment finding the property subject. Error is assigned on this judgment.

A statement of the evidence on the trial is as follows: Cox, the plaintiff, testified that he sold to Hughey, the defendant, the timber from which the lumber levied on was sawed. It was standing timber when he sold it to him, and the purchaser was to cut and saw the timber into lumber. The timber was sold standing for $200, and $100 was paid in cash; the foreclosure being for the other $100. "It was agreed between myself and Hughey that the title to the timber should not pass until it was cut." Davis, the claimant, testified that he had no notice as to the trade between the plaintiff and Hughey; that he bought the lumber from Hughey and paid him for it before Cox had filed or foreclosed his claim; that he bought it in good faith; that he knew that Cox had sold Hughey the timber from which this lumber was sawed, for he gave Hughey the money to pay Cox; that he advanced the money while Hughey was sawing the lumber; that when he advanced the money the lumber was sawed and stacked on Cox's land.

W. E. Mann, of Dalton, for plaintiff in error. M. C. Tarver, of Dalton, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] It has been repeatedly held by this court and the Supreme Court that the lien given under section 3358 of the Civil Code 1910 applies to logs and lumber which has been severed from the soil; that it is not intended to give a lien to a vendor of standing trees, though sold to be severed from the realty by the purchaser and converted into timber for his sawmill. Ray v. Schmidt, 7 Ga. App. 380, 66 S. E. 1035; Giles v. Gano, 102 Ga. 593, 27 S. E. 730; Loud v. Pritchett, 104 Ga. 652, 30 S. E. 870; Balkcom v. Empire L. Co., 91 Ga. 651, 17 S. E. 1020, 44 Am. St. Rep. 58.

[2] In the Ray Case, supra, it was held by this court that, where the vendor of standing trees has foreclosed a lien for the purchase price and has had execution levied upon timber and logs made from the trees by the vendee, and the timber and logs are claimed by a third person, who bought them from the vendee before the date of the lien foreclosure, and, without notice of the claim of lien, on the trial of the claim case the possession of a lien by the plaintiff is open to attack by the claimant. Wright v. Brown, 7 Ga. App. 389, 66 S. E. 1034; Osborne v. Rice, 107 Ga. 281, 33 S. E. 54. In the present case it is insisted that, since the defendant had withdrawn his counter affidavit made to the foreclosure of Cox's lien, the claimant could not attack the validity of the lien. Under the authority of these decisions we think that this contention is not sound, and that the claimant can show that the lien claimed by the plaintiff is for any reason invalid.

[3] It is insisted, however, that these decisions are not applicable in this case, because the title to the timber did not pass until after it had been severed from the soil by the purchaser. This contention is based upon the testimony of Cox that "it was agreed between myself and Hughey that the title to the timber should not pass until it was cut." This contention seems to be answered by the decision of the Supreme Court in Loud v. Pritchett, 104 Ga. 652, 30 S. E. 870. The sale of the timber was complete, because, under the facts, the title to the timber passed into the purchaser immediately upon the conclusion of the contract, since there was nothing else for the vendor to do, and the sale was made of standing timber. A mere verbal agreement made between the seller and the purchaser that the title to the timber should not pass until it was cut would not change the rule of law in this respect, and such a reservation of title could not affect the rights of subsequent parties who bought the lumber which had been cut from the timber while in the possession of the purchaser, without any notice of the seller's lien or of this verbal condition attached to the sale.

Judgment reversed.

LETTWICH et al. v. EARLY.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1913.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 431*)—DELIVERY OF DEED—PAROL EVIDENCE.

While parol evidence is inadmissible to prove that a deed perfect on its face was delivered to the grantee on condition, this rule does not control where the question is whether there was such a complete and perfect delivery as to vest in the grantee a perfect and indefeasible title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1975-1980; Dec. Dig. § 431.*]

2. DEEDS (§ 66*)—DELIVERY—QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

Whether there has been such a complete and perfect delivery of a deed to the grantee as to vest in him a perfect and indefeasible title to land, or an interest therein, is a question of fact to be determined by the circumstances of the case, and cannot in the majority of instances be declared as a matter of law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 127, 633; Dec. Dig. § 66.*]

3. DEEDS (§ 54*)—DELIVERY—NECESSITY.

Delivery of a deed is essential to its validity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. § 116; Dec. Dig. § 54.*]

4. DEEDS (§ 56*)—"DELIVERY"—ACTS CONSTITUTING.

The fact of delivery of a deed depends on the intention which must be manifested by some express act of the grantor, or by acts, words, or conduct, and the grantor must lose control or dominion over the deed, and it must be his intention to pass title at the time and lose control over it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 117-123, 125; Dec. Dig. § 56.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 2, pp. 1958-1970; vol. 8, p. 7632.]

5. LOST INSTRUMENTS (§ 23*)—EVIDENCE OF EXECUTION, LOSS, AND CONTENTS—SUFFICIENCY.

In a suit by the heirs of a deceased husband against the wife to partition land originally owned by the wife, an interest in which it was claimed she conveyed to the husband by a deed which had been lost, equity would require strong and convincing proof of the former existence of such title, its loss, and its contents.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Lost Instruments, Cent. Dig. §§ 51-57; Dec. Dig. § 23.*]

6. DEEDS (§ 208*)—DELIVERY—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

In a suit by the heirs of a deceased husband against the wife to partition land originally owned by her, evidence held insufficient to show that a deed executed by her for the purpose, as claimed by her, of giving the husband a life estate in case he survived her, had ever been delivered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 625-632; Dec. Dig. § 208.*]

7. DEEDS (§ 58*)—DELIVERY—DELIVERY TO THIRD PERSON.

Where a deed from a wife to a husband which had not been delivered was intrusted by the wife to a third person upon his explanation that he thought he could use it to advantage in a railroad election in counting the vote, this did not constitute a delivery passing title to the husband; since while the deed may be delivered not only to the grantee himself but to a stranger for his use, or declared to be delivered although the grantee be absent, yet, if delivered to a stranger without any declaration or other matter to show that it is for the use of the grantee, it is not a sufficient delivery.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 130-135; Dec. Dig. § 58.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Grayson County.
Suit for partition by Celia Leftwich and others against Josephine Early. From a decree dismissing the bill, complainants appeal. Affirmed.

J. S. Bourne and H. A. Cox, both of Independence, for appellants. R. L. Kirby, of Independence, for appellee.

CARDWELL, J. Josephine Willets was seised and possessed of a certain tract or parcel of land lying in Grayson county, Va., containing 80 acres, more or less, which she acquired by conveyance of date August 25, 1881, and, being so seised of said tract of land, the said Josephine Willets, in the year 1893, intermarried with N. C. Leftwich. N. C. Leftwich departed this life some time in the year 1905 intestate, leaving the said Josephine, his widow, and the following heirs at law, surviving him: Celia Leftwich, his mother, Joseph Leftwich, and C. E. Leftwich, brothers of the whole blood, and Charlotte Evans, a sister of the half blood. The said Josephine Leftwich afterwards intermarried with one Don Early, and at the first rules held in the clerk's office of Grayson county circuit court, February, 1907, Celia Leftwich, mother, and Joseph Leftwich and Charlotte Evans, brother and sister, of the said N. C. Leftwich, deceased, filed their bill in this cause against the said Josephine Early, the purpose of the bill being to have partition of the said tract of 80 acres of land between the plaintiffs and the defendant, the bill alleging that some time in the year 1895 the defendant, while the wife of the said N. C. Leftwich conveyed to him a one-half undivided interest in said tract of land in fee simple with general warranty of title; that said N. C. Leftwich died intestate seised and possessed of said one-half undivided interest in said tract of land; and that complainants were unable to file the deed or copy thereof conveying to him this undivided interest in the land, as an exhibit with their bill, because the deed was never admitted to record and has, since the death of the said N. C. Leftwich, been destroyed by his widow, the defendant, without the consent of his heirs at law, or either of them. The bill also sought partition of one-half an acre of land, alleged to have been owned by the said N. C. Leftwich at his death; but this parcel of land is not involved in this controversy.

The said Josephine Early filed her answer to said bill in which she admitted the ownership of said tract of 80 acres of land as alleged in the bill, and also her marriage to the said N. C. Leftwich, and that after his death she intermarried with said Don Early, but denied emphatically that she ever at any time conveyed to her said husband, the said N. C. Leftwich, a one-half undivided interest in said tract of land or any interest therein, except as in her answer stated. Her answer then avers: "That at the time of her marriage to the said N. C. Leftwich he did not own any land; that they commenced and continued to live and keep house on the said 80 acres of land until his death; that this land was her sole and separate property; that there were no living children born to her of her marriage with the said N. C. Leftwich; that she was devoted to him and felt that in case of her death during his life that he might be turned out of a home; that he had become attached to her, and after frequent conversations with him on the subject she decided to give him some showing on the land during his lifetime, and from the date of her death to the date of his death." Her answer further avers: That after having reached this conclusion, she advised her said husband of her said decision and intention, and he caused a writing to be prepared, which was afterwards signed by her, and by the terms of which he took a life estate in one-half of said land in the event of his outliving her; that it was understood and agreed between them that this paper would never be worth anything to him unless he outlived her, and for this reason it was also agreed that it should not take effect, or be delivered to him, except at her death and in the event she died before he died." She further avers: "That from the day the said paper was signed and acknowledged by her until her said husband's death, and long after, it remained in her possession; that it being the understanding between them that it was to be of no effect unless he outlived her, and that in case of his death before her it would be destroyed, and feeling that the paper had served its purpose and that henceforth it was worthless, she paid no attention to it, and for aught she now remembers she may have destroyed it along with other of her said husband's papers; but, be this as it may, she is unable to find the same." Said defendant further says: "That this was the only interest or claim her said husband ever had to the said tract of land, in any way, and that this was not considered by her or her said husband as giving him any interest in the said land until her death, leaving him living, and that it was their intention in the execution of the said paper simply to protect him against the contingency of her dying first." The answer further states that she (the defendant) paid out a large sum of money for her said husband during his last illness, and that the claims asserted by complainants are neither legal nor equitable, etc.

Upon the hearing of the cause, on the pleadings and depositions of witnesses examined for both complainants and defendant, the cir-cult court being of opinion "that there has not been shown such delivery of the deed in controversy alleged to have been made by defendant, Josephine Leftwich, now Josie Early, to N. C. Leftwich, for a one-half undivided interest in and to the 80-acre tract of land mentioned and described in the bill as the law requires, and without such delivery said deed, even if made, is invalid, and that it did not pass title to N. C. Leftwich," adjudged and decreed that the complainants, have no interest in the said 80 acres of land, and that as to this tract of land the bill be dismissed with costs to the defendant. From said decree Celia Leftwich and her co-complainants obtained this appeal.

A decision of the case turns upon whether there was such delivery of the deed in question as was necessary to vest in the grantee, N. C. Leftwich, a perfect and indefeasible title to a one-half undivided interest in and to the said tract of land.

The contention of appellee throughout, and which was sustained by the circuit court, is, not that the deed in question was delivered on condition, but that it was never delivered at all, and that it was never to be delivered or taken possession of by the grantee therein until after the death of the grantor, leaving the grantee surviving her, and that even then it only conveyed to him a one-half undivided interest in the 80-acre tract of land for and during his life.

[1, 2] The authorities are uniform in holding that parol evidence is inadmissible to prove that a deed, perfect on its face, was delivered to the grantee on condition; but this rule does not control in a case where the question is whether there was such complete and perfect delivery of the deed from the grantor to the grantee as to vest in the latter a perfect and indefeasible title to land or an interest therein, which is a question of fact to be determined by the circumstances of the case, and cannot, in the majority of instances, be declared as a matter of law.

"Formal delivery is not essential if there be acts evidencing an intention to deliver, but an essential requisite to a good deed is that it be delivered by the grantor himself, or his attorney, and the deed takes effect only from such a delivery." 2 Min. Inst. (4th Ed.) p. 731, and authorities there cited.

"The date of a deed is prima facie the date of delivery, but only prima facie." Ferguson v. Bond, 39 W. Va. 561, 20 S. E. 501; Harman v. Oberdorfer, 33 Grat. (74 Va.) 497; Raines v. Walker, 77 Va. 92; Hardy v. Norfolk Mfg. Co., 80 Va. 404.

"The question of delivery" of a deed "is one of intention, and the rule is that a delivery is complete when there is an intention manifested on the part of the grantor to make the instrument his deed." Martin v. Flaherty, 18 Mont. 96, 32 Pac. 287, 19 L. R. A. 242, 40 Am. St. Rep. 415.

In the case just cited, the opinion quotes from 1 Dev. on Deeds, § 262, as follows: "As no particular form of delivery is required, the question whether there was a delivery of the deed or not, so as to pass title, must in a great measure, where it is not clear that an actual delivery has been effected, depend upon the peculiar circumstances of each particular case. The question of delivery is one of intention and the rule is that a delivery is complete when there is an intention on the part of the grantor to make the instrument his deed. The main thing which the law looks at is whether the grantor indicates his will that the instrument should pass into the possession of the grantee; and, if that will is manifest, then the conveyance inures as a valid grant, although, as above stated, the deed never comes into the hands of the grantee. A deed does not become operative until it is delivered with the intent that it shall become effectual as a conveyance. Whether such intent actually existed is a question of fact to be determined by the circumstances of the particular case." 2 Min. Inst. supra; Tyler v. Hall, 106 Mo. 813, 17 S. W. 819, 27 Am. St. Rep. 837.

In the last-named case it was held that "a deed left by the grantor in a place where it is accessible to the grantee does not constitute a delivery in the absence of an intention on the part of the grantor to deliver and of the grantee to accept. * * * So long as the delivery of a deed remains incomplete, a grantor can change his intent, and destroy the deed if he so desires."

In Schuffert v. Grote, 88 Mich. 650, 50 N. W. 667, 26 Am. St. Rep. 816, the opinion of the court says: "Evidence showing that a conveyance of land was signed, acknowledged, witnessed, and handed to grantee, who was a son of the grantor, to whom the deed was immediately returned; that the father said that he calculated to deed the property to his son, so that there would be no trouble after his death, but that he would not like to see it go on record in his lifetime; and the son replied he need not be afraid of its going on record, and that he (the father) could keep it himself—does not show a delivery of the deed; and if the grantor subsequently destroyed it, and conveyed the same property to another person in consideration of services performed and to be performed, the latter acquired the title."

In Parrott v. Avery, 159 Mass. 594, 35 N. E. 94, 22 L. R. A. 153, 38 Am. St. Rep. 465, the Supreme Court of Massachusetts held that "a deed is not delivered though it is executed in the presence of a witness, if there is no declaration on the part of the grantor that he intends it to take effect at once, and he retains it in his possession during his lifetime, putting it in a chest and bequeathed the chest to the grantee." Stone v. French, 37 Kan. 145, 14 Pac. 530, 1 Am. St. Rep. 237.

[3, 4] The authorities cited, to which many more might be added if deemed necessary.

hold that the delivery of a deed is essential to its validity; that the fact of delivery is one of intention, which intention must be manifested by some express act of the grantor, or by acts, words, or conduct manifesting an intention to deliver, and that by such act of delivery the grantor must lose control or dominion over the deed in question; and that it is his intention that it should pass title at the time and that he (grantor) should lose control over it.

The deed in question in Tyler v. Hall, supra, under which the defendant claimed title from his father, the original source of title, was found by the administrator of the father in a desk kept by him prior to his death and under his control, among other papers belonging to him at his death, and was afterwards given into the defendant's (grantee) possession by the administrator of the grantor. Held, that the burden of proving that the deed was delivered before the father's death was on the defendant.

[5] The suit out of which this appeal arises is in effect a suit to set up by parol evidence a muniment of title to land, and in such cases courts of equity require strong and convincing proof of the former existence of such title, its loss, and its contents.

This court held, in Barley v. Bird, 95 Va. 317, 28 S. E. 329, that "courts of equity, in exercising their jurisdiction to set up a lost instrument which is to constitute a muniment of title, require strong and conclusive proof of its former existence, its loss, and its contents."

[6] It appears from the record that appellee and her husband N. C. Leftwich were unlettered, ignorant negroes; the husband being impecunious, while the wife owned the land conveyed to her as above stated, and was economical and thereby enabled to do much more for the comfort of her husband in health, as well as in sickness, than he was ever able to provide for himself. They were married in 1893, and the deed here in question was signed and acknowledged by her in 1895, as she frankly admits, but was never delivered, nor was it to be delivered unless her husband survived her, in which event it was then and only then to be recorded, whereby he would own and control a one-half undivided interest in her land during his life, so that he might not be dispossessed of a home during his life. There is no proof that the husband, N. C. Leftwich, ever in his lifetime asserted title to any part of this land, or denied the ownership or control thereof in his wife. The wife (appellee) states fully in her answer in this cause the nature of the transaction under review, and in her deposition, taken in her own behalf, the statements she makes are not only entirely consistent with those made in her answer, but are consistent with the circumstances surrounding her and her said husband during their married life.

The only disinterested witness introduced by appellants whose evidence at all tends to prove a delivery of said deed within the meaning of the law is one M. L. Vaughan, who is a man of some prominence in the county in which appellee and her husband N. C. Leftwich resided during the period from the date of their marriage till the death of the husband; but Vaughan was not positive as to the material facts with respect to which he undertook to testify, and, in fact, not only are the statements made by him contradicted by proof of other facts and circumstances, testified to by others, but when the testimony given by him is read as a whole he appears to have but a slippery memory, and has to admit that he was mistaken as to the material facts with respect to which he had undertaken to testify.

Not only did N. C. Leftwich in his lifetime never assert a legal claim to an interest in the land of his wife, but no one has testified in this case that he ever was financially able to pay $600, the amount that Vaughan states was the consideration named in the deed in question, "as well as he could remember," and there is no other evidence than that of Vaughan contradictory of the statement of appellee to the effect that the deed only stated a nominal consideration.

Every witness called on behalf of appellants, except said M. L. Vaughan, was a close relative of N. C. Leftwich, deceased, and directly interested in the result of this litigation. Much of the evidence given by these witnesses is wholly irrelevant to the issue, consisting largely of loose conversations with N. C. Leftwich not in the presence of appellee, or with the latter after the former's death, which in no way committed her to any concession helpful to the appellants in this cause, while the statements of other of these witnesses are either discredited or flatly contradicted by facts proven.

P. A. Reavis, a witness 52 years of age, a farmer, and who had known N. C. Leftwich from the time he was a small boy; T. E. Brannock, deputy clerk of the circuit court of Grayson county, a deputy treasurer and tax collector of the county in 1904; and Wilson Blair, also a prominent farmer—all totally disinterested witnesses, say in substance that not only did N. C. Leftwich never assert title to an interest in the land in controversy, but disclaimed any interest in his wife's land, and all along and within a short time of his death denied that he owned any land.

Appellee testified that in the year 1894 or 1895 she executed and acknowledged "what they called a deed, and that their agreement at the time was that if I would make him these papers in case I died first, that he was to hold an interest in the place his lifetime, and in case he died first the papers were to be destroyed and to be no more account. I to hold the paper in my possession until the death of one or the other of us. He was to have what remained at my death his lifetime. It was agreed for me to hold it (the deed) in my possession, and if I died first it was to be delivered to him and it was to go on record, and if he died first it was to be destroyed. After his death I destroyed all the Leftwich's papers, and I suppose it was destroyed with them. It was in my possession from the time it was acknowledged until the time it was destroyed, except one time when I handed it to J. M. Parsons. He came to my house and sent Norvell (her husband) in after the paper, and I would not send it. He (Parsons) came in and explained to me why he wanted it. He said that he thought he could use it to advantage in railroad election in counting the vote. He wanted to see if he could. He receipted me for the paper and promised to return it when he was through and did so. He sent it to me by mail. I do not know M. L. Vaughan. He never received the paper from me and never passed my house and returned this deed." Appellee denies positively the statements made by the witnesses for appellants as to conversations with her husband with reference to said deed or her land, alleged to have taken place in her presence; in fact, she denies practically every statement made by appellants' witnesses except the fact that she made the deed to her husband in pursuance of the agreement and understanding stated by her in her answer and in her examination as a witness, and that she destroyed it in pursuance of this understanding, and denies that she ever delivered the deed to her husband for any purpose. She asserts positively that it was never out of her possession or control except on the occasion when at the request of J. M. Parsons she let him take it away with the understanding that he would return it to her which he did. It is not pretended that appellee understood the purpose for which Parsons wanted the deed or intended by the loan of it to him to confer any benefit upon the grantee, N. C. Leftwich.

[7] The weight of the evidence is decidedly to the effect that appellants' leading witness, Vaughan, never saw the deed by reason of its having been delivered to him by appellee or N. C. Leftwich for any purpose, and the contention, were it made, that appellee, an ignorant negro woman, by complying with the request of Parsons in the manner she did, intended that the deed should pass title, at the time, and that she should lose control over it, could not be maintained. Whilst a deed may be delivered, not only to the grantee himself, but to a stranger for his use, or declared to be delivered although the grantee be absent, yet if delivered to a stranger, without any declaration or other matter to show that it is for the use of the grantee, it is not a sufficient delivery. 2 Min. Inst. p. 732.

It also appears from the proof in this case that when N. C. Leftwich incurred any debt it was paid by his wife (appellee), and therefore there was no conceivable reason why he should not have had this deed recorded and the land it purported to convey transferred to himself and claimed it, or some interest in it, as his own, except for the fact that, as appellee claims, the deed was never delivered to him, and was to be of no force or effect unless she died before he did, in which event he was to have only an undivided one-half interest in the land for his life.

This is not a controversy between creditors of N. C. Leftwich, deceased, and appellee touching the right of the former to subject the land in question to the payment of debts asserted against Leftwich but a case in which a court of equity is asked by the next of kin and heirs at law of the decedent to take the title of appellee's land from her and give it to them, and that too upon proof that is of itself not only unsatisfactory and therefore not conclusive, but is contradicted or discredited throughout by positive evidence, borne out by the circumstances clearly shown to have surrounded the parties to the transaction in question.

The decree appealed from is, in our opinion, not only in accordance with the right and justice of the cause, but is fully justified by the evidence in the record, and therefore it is affirmed.

Affirmed.

KEITH, P., and WHITTLE, J., absent.

MORGAN v. COMMONWEALTH.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1913.)

CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1014*)—APPEAL AND ERROR—SUCCESSIVE PETITIONS FOR WRIT OF ERROR.

Under Code 1904, § 3466, providing that when the Court of Appeals shall deem the judgment complained of clearly right, and shall reject a petition for a writ of error on that ground, and the order of rejection so states, no other petition shall thereafter be entertained, the court is without jurisdiction to entertain an amended petition for a writ of error to a judgment of conviction for crime, after the original petition had been denied in an order expressly stating that the court was of the opinion that the judgment was clearly right.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2571; Dec. Dig. § 1014.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Wise County.

One Morgan was convicted of malicious shooting, and files an amended petition for a writ of error. Petition denied.

Bond & Bruce, of Wise, for petitioner. The Attorney General, for the Commonwealth.

PER CURIAM. Morgan was indicted before the circuit court of Wise county for malicious shooting, and was sentenced to four years' confinement in the penitentiary. He filed his petition, asking for a writ of error from this court, and praying that a new trial be awarded him. This petition was considered by this court at its session in Wytheville on the 16th day of June, 1913, and the court, being of opinion that the said judgment was plainly right, rejected the said petition and affirmed the judgment. See abstract of judgment of this court filed with the record.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

By section 3466 of the Code it is provided, among other things, that when the Court of Appeals "shall deem the judgment, decree, or order complained of plainly right, and reject the petition on that ground, and the order of rejection so states, no other petition therein shall afterwards be entertained. But the rejection of such petition by a judge in vacation shall not prevent the presentation of such petition to the court at its next term."

The case before us comes clearly within the operation of the statute. The court, as appears from its order, deemed the judgment complained of plainly right, and rejected the petition on that ground, and the order of rejection so states; therefore this court has no jurisdiction to entertain any other petition with respect to it, and the amended petition presented at this term of court is, for these reasons, rejected.

LYNCH v. O'BRIEN et al†

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1913.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 301*)—LIABILITY OF INDORSER—RELEASE.

Where, after the holder of a note, without the consent of an indorser, surrendered certain collateral security, the note was subsequently renewed from time to time, the indorser, who repeatedly renewed his indorsement with knowledge of the facts, waived his defense to the note based on such surrender, and estopped himself to assert such a defense.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 706-721; Dec. Dig. § 301.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 441*)—PAROL EVIDENCE TO VARY WRITING.

An indorsement of a renewal note could not be varied or contradicted by proof of a contemporaneous parol agreement that the indorser should not be liable thereon, because of the holder's surrender of collateral security pledged for the payment of the original note.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1719, 1723-1763, 1765-1845, 2030-2047; Dec. Dig. § 441.*]

Appeal from Law and Chancery Court of City of Roanoke.

Suit by J. W. Lynch against E. F. O'Brien and others. Decree for defendants, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Thos. W. Miller and Jackson & Henson, all of Roanoke, for appellant. A. E. King, of Roanoke, for appellees.

HARRISON, J. The bill in this suit was filed by the appellant for the purpose of obtaining release from his liability as indorser upon a certain negotiable note. The ground upon which the release was asked is that 32 shares of certain stock had been deposited with the original note, when executed, as collateral, and that subsequently 7 shares of this stock was surrendered without appellant's consent.

[1] It appears that in March, 1907, E. F. O'Brien executed a note for $3,200, payable to the appellant, J. W. Lynch, and E. W. Tinsley 60 days after date. This note was indorsed by the payees and discounted for O'Brien by the First National Bank of Roanoke. In the body of the note it appeared that 32 shares of Roanoke Knitting Mills stock was deposited therewith as collateral. The note was curtailed by O'Brien, and renewed from time to time in the same shape, and with the same indorsement, until it was reduced to $2,100. The renewal for $2,100 was in the shape of a plain negotiable note, without mention of collateral. At the time of this last-mentioned renewal O'Brien withdrew 7 shares of the stock, leaving with the bank the remaining 25 shares. O'Brien made no further payment. The note was, however, subsequently renewed from time to time, with same indorsers, until it was reduced to $1,800 by payments made by the indorsers.

The evidence is beyond dispute that, when appellant indorsed the several renewals of the $1,800 note now held by the appellee bank and from which he seeks to be released, he had full knowledge of the fact that the 7 shares of stock had been withdrawn by O'Brien. Having repeatedly renewed his indorsement of the note after full knowledge of the defense available in respect to the original note, appellant must be held to have waived such defense and to be estopped from availing himself of it as to the renewal. This principle is elementary. Joyce on Defenses to Com. Paper, § 649; Building Ass'n v. Blair, 98 Va. 490, 495, 36 S. E. 513; University of Va. v. Snyder, 100 Va. 567, 579, 42 S. E. 337.

[2] Appellant relies upon an alleged parol agreement that he was not to be liable upon his indorsement of the renewals because of the previous withdrawal of the 7 shares of stock held as collateral. This parol contract is not satisfactorily shown. This, however, is immaterial; it being settled by numerous decisions of this court that a contemporaneous parol agreement cannot be shown to alter or vary the terms of a valid written instrument. Towner v. Lucas, 13 Grat. (54 Va.) 705; Slaughter v. Smither, 97 Va. 202, 33 S. E. 544; Percy v. Bank, 110 Va. 132, 65 S. E. 475. The absolute indorsement of the note in question cannot, therefore, be affected by a contemporaneous agreement that, notwithstanding such indorsement, appellant was not to be bound by it.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

† Rehearing denied.

The decree denying the relief asked in this case is plainly right, and it must be affirmed.

Affirmed.

KEITH, P., absent.

BRANHAM v. ARTRIP.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1913.)

1. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE (§ 128*)—JURISDICTION—UNCERTAIN CONTRACT—DAMAGES.

Where equity could not grant specific performance of an alleged parol contract for the sale of land because of uncertainty of its terms, and complainant could obtain complete relief at law, the suit would not be retained for the purpose of awarding complainant damages for the value of improvements, less the rental value of the land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Cent. Dig. §§ 412-419; Dec. Dig. § 128.*]

2. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE (§ 128*)—RELIEF—VALUE OF IMPROVEMENTS—STATUTES—APPLICATION.

Code 1904, § 2760, provides that any defendant against whom a decree or judgment shall be rendered for land, when no assessment of damages has been made, at any time before the execution of the decree or judgment, may present a petition to the court for the allowance of the value of permanent improvements, less the rental value of the occupation of the land, and the court may suspend the judgment and assess the damages of the plaintiff and the allowances to the defendant for such improvements. Held, that such section applies only to actions of ejectment, or to cases in which a decree or judgment is rendered against a defendant for land, and cannot be invoked in a suit by an unsuccessful complainant for specific performance of an alleged contract to convey land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Cent. Dig. §§ 412-419; Dec. Dig. § 128.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Dickenson County.

Bill by W. J. Artrip against W. J. Branham to restrain the prosecution of an action of ejectment and to enforce specific performance of an alleged contract for the sale of real property. From a decree in favor of complainant for the value of his improvements, less the rental value of the land, respondent appeals. Reversed.

Sutherland & Sutherland, of Clintwood, for appellant. Skeen & Skeen, of Clintwood, and Vicars & Peery, of Wise, for appellee.

HARRISON, J. The appellant instituted an action of ejectment to recover of the appellee the possession of a certain lot of land in Dickenson County. Appellee thereupon filed the bill in this case, praying that appellant be enjoined from prosecuting his action at law, and praying for the specific performance of an oral contract alleged in the bill. The circuit court refused to specifically enforce the contract alleged, because it was too indefinite and uncertain, but entered a decree directing that possession be delivered to the appellant upon the terms that he should pay appellee the value of the improvements he had put upon the land less the rental value of the same. From that decree this appeal was taken.

[1] We are of opinion that the grounds necessary to justify the specific performance of the alleged contract were wholly wanting in the case, and that the circuit court properly refused to enforce it. We are, however, further of opinion that when the court reached that conclusion it should have dismissed the bill, leaving the parties to their remedies, if any, at law.

It is not every case in which a court of equity acquires jurisdiction of a cause for a specific purpose that it may, notwithstanding that purpose has failed in whole or in part, go on to decree against any party before it. So far from it, when the remedy at law is more appropriate than in equity, or where the verdict of a jury is proper, the jurisdiction will be declined. Walters v. Farmers' Bank, 76 Va. 12.

The case of Robertson v. Hogshead, 3 Leigh (30 Va.) 667, was one where the bill filed was for the rescission of a contract. The court, having held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a rescission of the contract, was asked to go on and ascertain the damages he had sustained by reason of the alleged fraud in the procurement of the contract. This the court declined to do, and on appeal Judge Tucker, speaking for this court, said: "A bill for damages only will not lie in equity. The court could only ascertain those damages by sending the case to a court of law. To that court, therefore, the party should apply, instead of clogging the litigation by a suit in equity, which could only end where he ought to have begun."

In the case before us the appellant denies that he ever entered into any parol agreement for the sale of the land in question. The appellee, having no title, is asking for the ascertainment of unliquidated damages for improvements claimed to have been put upon the land by him. The alleged parol contract is uncertain and indefinite, and the whole evidence adduced on the subject utterly conflicting and unsatisfactory. It is therefore a case, as was said in Walters v. Farmers' Bank, supra, where the remedy at law is more appropriate than in equity, and the verdict of a jury necessary for its proper determination.

[2] The appellee, to sustain the jurisdiction of a court of equity to go on and ascertain the damages to which he is entitled in this case for improvements alleged to have been put upon the land, relies upon section

2760 of the Code of 1904, which is as follows:

"Any defendant against whom a decree or judgment shall be rendered for land, where no assessment of damages has been made under the preceding chapter, may, at any time before the execution of the decree or judgment, present a petition to the court rendering such decree or judgment, stating that he, or those under whom he claims, while holding the premises under a title believed by him or them to be good, have made permanent improvements thereon, and praying that he may be allowed for the same over and above the value of the use and occupation of such land; and thereupon the court may, if satisfied of the probable truth of the allegation, suspend the execution of the judgment or decree, and impanel a jury to assess the damages of the plaintiff, and the allowances to the defendant for such improvements."

It has been repeatedly held that the statute relied on applies only to actions of ejectment, or to cases in which a decree or judgment is rendered against a defendant for land. Graeme v. Cullen, 23 Grat. (64 Va.) 266; Woods v. Krebbs, 33 Grat. (74 Va.) 685; Effinger v. Hall, 81 Va. 94; Flanary v. Kane, 102 Va. 547, 558, 46 S. E. 312, 681. The case at bar is not an ejectment suit, but a chancery suit for the specific enforcement of an alleged parol contract, and no decree has been rendered therein against the defendant for land.

For the foregoing reasons, this court will reverse the decree appealed from, and will enter such decree as the lower court should have entered, dismissing appellee's bill, with costs, without prejudice, however, to his right to proceed in a court of law to enforce such rights as he may have.

Reversed.

KEITH, P., absent.

HONAKER v. SHRADEE.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1913.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1002*)—REVIEW—QUESTIONS OF FACT.

In ejectment involving the location of a disputed boundary, the jury's finding on conflicting evidence as to its correct location was conclusive, unless some other valid objection could be shown thereto.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3935-3937; Dec. Dig. § 1002.*]

2. BOUNDARIES (§ 36*)—EVIDENCE—ADMISSIBILITY.

In ejectment involving the location of plaintiff's eastern line, evidence as to the execution and contents of a lost title bond for land adjoining such line was properly admitted, where it was received only as tending to throw light on the location of the line and not for the purpose of establishing defendant's title to the land in controversy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Boundaries, Cent. Dig. §§ 160-162, 164, 166-176; Dec. Dig. § 36.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1057*)—HARMLESS ERROR—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

In ejectment involving a disputed boundary, the admission of an old survey, if error, was not prejudicial to plaintiff, where the land described therein was clearly identified and located by other evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4194-4196, 4205; Dec. Dig. § 1057.*]

4. NEW TRIAL (§ 161*) — CONDITIONAL REFUSAL.

Where, in ejectment involving a disputed boundary, the declaration in one count sought the recovery of plaintiff's whole tract of land, containing 1,000 acres, and in another count the recovery of the 79-acre tract actually in controversy, and the real issue was understood by the court, the jury, and the parties, but the jury returned a general verdict for defendant, the court properly required defendant to enter a release of that portion of the land outside the tract which was the subject of dispute instead of granting a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 321-323; Dec. Dig. § 161.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Bland County.

Ejectment by one Honaker against one Shrader. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Williams & Williams and A. R. Porterfield, all of Bland, for plaintiff in error. Jackson & Henson, of Roanoke, and Williams & Farrier, of Pearisburg, for defendant in error.

HARRISON, J. [1] The plaintiff's declaration in this action of ejectment contains two counts. The first describes the land alleged to be withheld as his entire tract containing 1,000 acres. The second count describes the land in controversy as 79 acres more or less, lying on the south side of Buckhorn Mountain, on Wolf creek, in Bland county. The real question involved in the controversy, as shown by the record, was the correct location, on the ground, of the eastern line of the plaintiff's land; plaintiff contending that its correct location was at one place, while the defendant insisted that it was at another. Upon this question the evidence was conflicting. The jury have established the true line to be as contended for by the defendant, and upon well-settled principles the verdict must stand, unless some other valid objection can be shown thereto. Pilkerton v. Roberson, 110 Va. 136, 65 S. E. 835.

[2] The objection made by the plaintiff to the evidence offered by the defendant as to the execution and contents of a lost title bond executed by Chapman & French to Hiram D. Lambert, about the year 1853, for land adjoining the plaintiff's eastern line, was properly overruled. Evidence of this title bond and its contents was not introduced, as contended by the plaintiff, for the purpose of establishing the defendant's title to the land in controversy, but merely as evidence tending to throw light upon the true location of the eastern boundary line, and that its true location was where the defendant claimed it to be. The court in admitting this evidence, both at the time of its admission, and subsequently by instructions, limited the same to the light, if any, it threw on the question of boundary involved. Oral evidence is always admissible as to location and boundary, and it would seem to be clear that evidence of the contents of a lost title bond was admissible for the same purpose. Austin v. Minor, 107 Va. 101, 57 S. E. 609; Schaubach v. Dilleuth, 108 Va. 86, 60 S. E. 745, 15 Ann. Cas. 825; Edmunds v. Barrow, 112 Va. 330, 71 S. E. 544.

[3] The plaintiff also complains of the ruling of the court in permitting an old survey, bearing on the question involved, to be introduced by the defendant. No sufficient reason for rejecting this evidence is suggested, but, even if it had been error to admit the survey mentioned, it was plainly without prejudice to the plaintiff, as the land described therein was clearly identified and located by other evidence in the case.

Several other objections to the ruling of the court upon the admission of evidence are raised, but upon examination they are found to be wholly without merit and, therefore, need not be adverted to in detail.

In the petition for a writ of error no complaint is made of the action of the court in refusing certain instructions asked for by the plaintiff, but it is contended that the verdict of the jury was not in accord with the instructions given, and the assertion is made that in the instructions given for the plaintiff the jury are told that the title deeds under which the plaintiff claimed covered the land in controversy and that he was entitled to recover the same. The instructions do not bear this interpretation. Whether the plaintiff's title papers covered the land in controversy depended upon the true location of his eastern line. This was a question of fact for the jury, and no instruction given by the court trenching upon the province of the jury to settle that question.

As to the instructions given by the court for the defendant, no error is pointed out; the plaintiff contenting himself with the general observation that they are erroneous and misleading. An inspection of these instructions shows them to be free from reasonable objection. They embody views of the law applicable to the case which have been long settled by the decisions of this court, and are expressed in language which could not be misunderstood.

[4] As already seen, the plaintiff's declaration was in two counts, one for the recovery of his whole tract of land containing 1,000 acres, and the other for the recovery of the small tract actually in controversy. When the case was given to the jury they returned a general verdict for the defendant on the issue joined. After the jury was discharged the plaintiff moved the court to set aside the verdict upon the ground, among others, that the effect of the general verdict was to give the defendant the whole tract of 1,000 acres. Thereupon the court of its own motion required the defendant to enter of record a release of that portion of the land outside of the small tract which was the subject of dispute, and overruled the motion for a new trial. This action of the court is assigned as error; it being contended that the court had no power to put the defendant upon terms in a case like this.

The whole controversy in this case was as to the small tract of land described in the second count of the declaration. The ownership of this land depended upon the correct location on the ground of the plaintiff's eastern line; the defendant claiming no part of the land except the small tract to which the true location of the eastern line entitled him. The real issue in the case was understood from the beginning to the end of the trial by the court, the jury, and all parties concerned, and no reason is perceived why the court, to avoid the possibility of future controversy, should not have required the defendant to release of record all claim to the land outside of the small tract that the verdict of the jury had decided he was entitled to. Fry v. Stowers, 98 Va. 417, 36 S. E. 482; Tolley v. Pease (W. Va.) 78 S. E. 111.

In the ejectment case of Fry v. Stowers, supra, this court said: "We do not approve the rule announced in Shiflet v. Dowell, 90 Va. 745 [19 S. E. 848], that the principle stated does not apply in the case of an action of ejectment, because of the statute which requires that the verdict shall 'specify the land, particularly as the same is proved, and with the same certainty of description as is required in the declaration.' The practice of putting a party upon terms where the verdict is plainly erroneous in part is a wise and salutary one, saving delay, costs, and above all, ending strife, and we perceive no good reason why the ends of justice are not as much subserved by the application of the principle in an action of ejectment as in any other case."

Upon the whole case, we find no error prejudicial to the plaintiff, and the judgment complained of must be affirmed.

Affirmed.

KEITH, P., and WHITTLE, J., absent.

LUCK CONST. CO. v. RUSSELL COUNTY.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1913.)

1. COUNTIES (§ 205*)—DISALLOWANCE OF CLAIMS—APPEAL—FILING PLEA OF OFFSET.

While under Code 1904, §§ 833, 843, and 844, the manner of suing a county is by "appeal" from the action of the board of supervisors upon presentation of the claim, the determination of the board is not an adjudication of the case, and the court to which the "appeal" is taken is not an appellate court in the sense that a plea of offset cannot be filed therein.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. §§ 328-334; Dec. Dig. § 205.*]

2. COUNTIES (§ 206*)—CLAIMS AGAINST COUNTY—EFFECT OF ALLOWANCE.

The allowance of a claim against a county by the board of supervisors is not an adjudication of the claim, and does not estop the county from setting up a defense to the claim when subsequently sued upon it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. §§ 322, 323, 325-330; Dec. Dig. § 206.*]

3. HIGHWAYS (§ 113*)—ACTIONS AGAINST COUNTIES—PLEADING—SUFFICIENCY OF PLEA OF OFFSET.

In an action against a county for the balance of the contract price for constructing a road, a plea of offset, alleging that plaintiff failed to perform its agreement and that the county was damaged thereby in excess of the amount claimed, is sufficient to entitle the county to recover from the plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. §§ 348-352, 355; Dec. Dig. § 113; Contracts, Cent. Dig. § 1335.]

4. HIGHWAYS (§ 113*)—CONTRACTS—CONSTRUCTION—ROAD CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT.

A contract with a county for the construction of a road provided that payments should be made on the engineer's estimates, that in case any work or material should be unsatisfactory to the engineer they should be removed, that the engineer should settle all disputes, and that no work should be regarded as accepted until final acceptance of the whole work. Held that, in view of the last provision, the engineer's estimates were not conclusive or a final acceptance and did not prevent inquiry as to whether the work embraced therein had been done according to contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. §§ 348-352, 355; Dec. Dig. § 113; Contracts, Cent. Dig. § 1335.]

5. TRIAL (§ 253*)—INSTRUCTIONS—IGNORING EVIDENCE.

An instruction, in an action against a county for the balance due on a road construction contract, that if the facts therein stated are true the county is estopped from denying that certain work was not according to contract, which disregards evidence that the plaintiff induced the action claimed to constitute an estoppel by fraud, was properly refused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 613-623; Dec. Dig. § 253.*]

6. ESTOPPEL (§§ 54, 59*)—EQUITABLE ESTOPPEL—PERSONS TO WHOM AVAILABLE.

The doctrine of estoppel in pais is an equitable one, and it cannot be taken advantage of by one claiming to have been influenced by the conduct of another to his injury, who acted with knowledge of the facts relied on as constituting an estoppel, much less by one whose own acts or fraud induced conduct on the part of another alleged to constitute an estoppel.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Estoppel, Cent. Dig. §§ 128-135, 146, 147; Dec. Dig. §§ 54, 59.*]

7. TRIAL (§ 252*)—INSTRUCTIONS—APPLICABILITY TO ISSUE.

A requested instruction, in an action against a county on a contract, that plaintiff is entitled to recover if the work was performed according to the specifications, "as directed by the engineer," was properly modified by striking out the words quoted, where the contract provided that the work should be done in accordance with the specifications and to the satisfaction of the county and engineer.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 505, 596-612; Dec. Dig. § 252.*]

8. HIGHWAYS (§ 113*)—CONTRACTS—CONSTRUCTION OF ROADS—RESPONSIBILITY FOR ACTS OF ENGINEER—FRAUD OF OTHER PARTY—MISTAKE.

The estimates or other acts of the engineers under a contract with a county for the construction of a road are not binding upon either party, where induced by fraud of the other party or the result of fraud or mistake so great as to amount to fraud on the part of the engineers.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. §§ 348-352, 355; Dec. Dig. § 113; Contracts, Cent. Dig. § 1335.]

9. TRIAL (§ 260*)—INSTRUCTIONS—OTHER INSTRUCTIONS COVERING SAME POINT.

Instructions that the persons who were required to perform certain duties under a contract were the engineers within its meaning were unnecessary, and the court did not err in refusing them, where the jury were instructed that if they believed that certain persons, whom the evidence showed were the ones who performed such duties, were appointed to perform them, that they were the engineers.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 651-659; Dec. Dig. § 260.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Tazewell County.

Action by the Luck Construction Company against the County of Russell. Judgment in favor of the defendant, and the plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Hart & Hart, of Roanoke, Chapman & Gillespie, of Tazewell, and Finney & Wilson, of Lebanon, for plaintiff in error. H. A. Routh, of Lebanon, and Henson & Bowen and A. S. Higginbotham, all of Tazewell, for defendant in error.

BUCHANAN, J. The plaintiff in error, who was the plaintiff in the trial court, entered into a written agreement with the county of Russell for the construction of some six miles of macadam road. When the plaintiff had performed its undertaking, as it claimed, it presented to the board of supervisors of that county for allowance and payment a claim for $9,914.38, the balance due under the contract as it claimed. The board of supervisors refused to allow the claim, and from its action the plaintiff appealed to the circuit court for Russell county. It being agreed that there was good cause for removing the cause to another circuit, it was removed to the circuit court for Tazewell county.

There was a verdict and judgment in that court for the defendant and a recovery in its favor for the sum of $1,000.68. To that judgment this writ of error was awarded.

The first error assigned is to the action of the court permitting the defendant to file a special plea of set-off under section 3299 of the Code.

The first ground of objection is that no such plea could be filed in an appellate court.

By section 844 of the Code it is provided that "no action shall be maintained by any person against a county upon any claim or demand until such person shall have first presented his claim to the board of supervisors of such county." By section 838 it is provided, that, when any such claim is presented to and disallowed by the board of supervisors, the claimant may appeal within a named time; and by section 843 it is declared that such determination by the board of supervisors shall be final and conclusive and a perpetual bar to any action in any court, unless an appeal be taken from such action, or unless the board shall consent and agree to the institution of an action by such claimant. This is the manner prescribed by law by which claims against the county may be collected, and the county cannot be sued in any other mode than that prescribed by law. Botetourt v. Burger, 86 Va. 530, 533, 10 S. E. 264.

[1, 2] While the method prescribed by the statute for litigating the rights of the parties as to the claim so disallowed is called an appeal, the action of the board of supervisors is in no proper sense of the term an adjudication of the claim on its merits, and even where the claim has been allowed by the board such action will not estop the county from setting up a defense to the claim when subsequently sued upon it. Board of Supervisors v. Catlett's Ex'rs, 86 Va. 158, 162, 163, 9 S. E. 999, and authorities cited.

In that case it was held that the powers and duties of the board of supervisors are executive and not judicial, and that its allowance of a claim is not an adjudication and does not bar its contesting the claim's validity and pleading the statute of limitations when a mandamus is applied for to compel payment. And a fortiori this would be true where the claim has been disallowed.

The county had the same right to file a plea of set-off under section 3299 of the Code as it had to make any other defense which the facts justified it in making.

[3] A further objection to the action of the court in permitting the special plea of set-off to be filed is that it does not aver fraud or any other matter which would entitle the defendant to recover over against the plaintiff, and amounts to no more than the general issue. This latter objection does not seem to be much relied on, and if it were is plainly without merit. The allegations of the plea, if true, show that the plaintiff not only failed to keep and perform its agreement in various particulars, but that by reason of such failure the defendant was injured and damaged in excess of the amount claimed and sued for by the plaintiff.

[4] Errors are assigned to the action of the court in giving and refusing instructions, in admitting evidence, and afterwards in refusing to exclude the same and in overruling the motion of the plaintiff to set aside the verdict of the jury because contrary to the law and the evidence. The propriety of the action of the court in respect to all these assignments of error depends for the most part upon what is the true meaning of the contract sued on.

The contention of the plaintiff is, and its assignments of error are based chiefly upon the view, that the monthly estimates of the engineer in charge of the work were conclusive upon the parties. On the other hand, the county claims that these monthly estimates are not conclusive of the statements contained in them.

By the terms of the agreement between the parties and the specifications which are expressly made a part of it, it is provided, among other things, that "payments shall be made monthly upon approximate estimates of the engineer, reserving ten per cent. (10 per cent.) of amounts due until a final settlement. * * * In case any of the said work done or materials provided by the party of the first part shall be unsatisfactory to the said engineer, then the party of the first part shall, on being notified thereof by the engineer, immediately remove such unsatisfactory work or materials and replace the same with good work or materials satisfactory to said engineer," and in the event the plaintiff did not do so the engineer was given the right to remove such rejected work or materials at the expense of the plaintiff. It was then provided, in the same clause, that "no work shall be regarded as accepted until the final acceptance of the whole work herein contracted for." It was further provided that "to prevent all disputes and litigation it is further agreed by the parties hereto that the said engineer shall decide all questions, difficulties and disputes of whatever nature which may arise relative to the construction, prosecution and fulfillment of this contract, and as to the character, quality, amount and value of any work done, material furnished under or by reason of this contract, and his estimates and decisions upon all claims, questions and disputes shall be final and conclusive upon the parties thereto."

It further provides that the plaintiff should not be "entitled to demand or receive payment for any portion of the work to be done under or by reason of the contract until all disputes, disagreements and questions between the parties hereto affecting the right to any portion of the amount claimed shall have been settled as above provided for."

There are other provisions of the contract which throw some light upon its meaning as to the question under consideration, but the provisions quoted are those chiefly relied on by the parties to sustain their respective contentions.

The agreement does not, as do many if not most contracts for the construction of railroads, macadam roads, and the like, expressly provide that when the work is completed there shall be a final estimate, or declare in express terms what shall be the effect of the monthly estimates of the engineer; but when all the provisions of the agreement are read and considered together it seems to us it is clear that it was not intended that the monthly estimates should be final and conclusive of the facts recited in them, or regarded as a final acceptance of the work mentioned in them. To so hold would be to give no effect to that provision of the contract which expressly declares that "no work shall be regarded as accepted until the final acceptance of the whole work herein contracted for." What would have been the meaning and effect of the contract if that provision had not been inserted, it is unnecessary to consider. It is in the contract; its meaning is plain and unambiguous. It shows that the parties did not intend that the making of monthly estimates during the progress of the work and payments thereon should be regarded as a full or final acceptance of the work embraced in such monthly estimates, but that the work was to be accepted as a whole when completed. This being so, the court did not err in giving instructions numbered 1 and 5, offered by the defendant, which told the jury that such monthly estimates were not conclusive of the statements made therein, and did not constitute final acceptance of the work covered by such monthly estimates. Neither did the court err in refusing to give instructions numbered 3, 5, and 7, offered by the plaintiff, by which the court was asked to tell the jury, in effect, that such monthly estimates and payments thereon as provided by the contract without objection were conclusive upon the parties and could not be controverted.

It will be convenient here to consider the assignment of error as to the action of the court in the admission of evidence.

The object of the evidence admitted over the plaintiff's objections, and which the court refused to exclude, was to show that part of the work embraced in the monthly estimates was not done according to the provisions of the contract. Under the construction placed upon the contract as to the effect of the monthly estimates, such evidence was clearly admissible.

[6] By instruction No. 10 offered by the plaintiff, the court was asked to tell the jury that if they believed the facts hypothetically stated therein the defendant was estopped from denying that such portions of the work done as were embraced in the monthly estimates had not been properly constructed. Several objections are made to this instruction.

The instruction fails to take into consideration the fact that there was evidence tending to show not only that the plaintiff knew that the work embraced in the said monthly estimates was not done in accordance with the provisions of the contract, but that the plaintiff had by fraudulent practices deceived the engineer who made some of the monthly statements in the belief that such work had been properly done.

[8] The doctrine of estoppel in pais is purely an equitable one, and it is essential to the application of that principle that a party claiming to have been influenced by the conduct of another to his injury was ignorant of the state of facts relied on to constitute such estoppel. O. & O. Ry. Co. v. Walker, 100 Va. 69, 70, 92, 93, 40 S. E. 633, 914, and authorities cited. And still less can he base a claim for an estoppel upon acts or conduct which were induced by his own acts, and a fortiori on those induced by his own fraud or false representations. See Jones v. Bond, 88 Va. 81, 9 S. E. 503; note to Williamson v. Jones, 4 Am. & Eng. Dec. in Eq. pp. 285, 286, and cases cited; 16 Cyc. 747, and cases cited.

It is unnecessary to consider the other objections urged to instruction No. 10 since the objection already considered shows that the court did not err in refusing to give it.

[7] Instruction No. 6, offered by the plaintiff, was as follows: "The court instructs the jury that if you believe from the evidence that the plaintiff performed the work mentioned in the contract and specifications in evidence before you, according to the said contract and specifications, as directed by the engineer, and offered same to the defendant, through its agents and engineers, for acceptance, then you should find for the plaintiff, notwithstanding that the contract provides that 'no work shall be regarded as accepted until the final acceptance of the whole work herein contracted for.'"

The court modified this instruction by striking out the words italicized. The provision in the contract was that the work was to be done in accordance with the specifications and conditions of the agreement between the parties and to the satisfaction of the county of Russell and the engineer. The modification was clearly proper, and the instruction as given was as favorable to the plaintiff as it was entitled to have it.

The refusal of the court to give the plaintiff's instructions numbered 1, 2, and 4 is assigned as error.

The object of these instructions, as stated by the plaintiff in his petition for a writ of error, was to tell the jury who was "the engineer" provided for in the contract between the parties. The instructions were as follows:

"(1) The court instructs the jury that it was the duty of the defendant under the contract to appoint an engineer to set the stakes, establish the grades, and do and perform the other duties designated by the contract to be done and performed by the engineer; and if you believe from the evidence that in the course of the construction the said defendant did appoint Messrs. Dorden, Mullen, Cocke, and Lancaster for the performance of these duties, then said Dorden, Mullen, Cocke, and Lancaster became and were the agents and officers of the defendant in the construction of said work, and all their acts as such engineers under the contract are valid and binding upon the defendant.

"(2) The court instructs the jury that the engineer named and provided for in the contract in evidence in this case is and was the person who performed and discharged the duties and did the things mentioned in said contract to be done and performed by the engineer, and that regardless of what he may have termed himself or may have been termed by others, and also regardless of his competency or incompetency in the science of engineering."

"(4) The court instructs the jury that it was the duty of the engineer mentioned in the contract to establish lines and grades to superintend and direct the work, and to make and furnish to the board of supervisors of Russell county estimates of the work done, and the party who performed and upon whom devolved these duties is the engineer under the terms of this contract, regardless of what name he may be called by."

The court modified instruction No. 1 by adding to it, "except in case of fraud on the part of the plaintiff or gross mistake made by the said engineers," and gave it as instruction "A."

[8] The effect of instruction No. 1, as offered by the plaintiff, was to tell the jury that the persons named therein, by whatever name called, were "engineers" within the meaning of the contract, and that all their acts under the contracts were valid and binding upon the defendant. The modification made in it by the court did not, in the slightest degree, change it as to the character of the persons named, nor the valid and binding effect of their acts under the contract, "except in case of fraud on the part of the plaintiff or gross mistake made by the engineers." The modification or rather addendum made by the court was clearly proper, for the acts of engineers under such contracts are not binding upon either party when such acts have been induced by the fraud of the other party or are the result of fraud or mistake on the part of the engineers so gross as to amount to fraud on the rights of the other party. N. & W. Ry. Co. v. Mills, 91 Va. 613, 22 S. E. 556.

[9] By instructions 2 and 4 the court was asked to tell the jury that the persons who were required to do certain acts and perform certain duties under the contract were the engineers within its meaning. Having told the jury by instruction "A" that the persons named in that instruction (who the evidence showed did the work and performed the duties described in instructions 2 and 4) were to be considered the engineers within the meaning of the contract, there was no necessity for giving the last-named instructions and the court did not err in rejecting them.

Without discussing further the assignments of error based upon the giving and refusing of instructions, it is sufficient to say that this court is of opinion that the instructions given fully submitted the questions involved in the case to the jury, and submitted them as favorably as the defendant was entitled to have them submitted.

The remaining assignment of error is to the refusal of the court to set aside the verdict because it was contrary to the law and the evidence.

There was no error, as we have seen, to the prejudice of the plaintiff in giving and refusing instructions, nor in the admission of evidence. The case having been properly submitted to the jury, the only remaining question is as to the sufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict of the jury. While the evidence is conflicting, there is ample evidence, to say the least, to justify the jury in believing that the road was not constructed in accordance with the contract, and that the damage resulting to the county from the plaintiff's failure to keep and perform its contract was as much as the sum found by the jury in its favor.

The judgment complained of must be affirmed.

Affirmed.

KEITH, P., and WHITTLE, J., absent.

VIRGINIAN RY. CO. v. BELL.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1913.)

1. CARRIERS (§ 348*) — INJURIES TO MAIL CLERK—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE — INSTRUCTIONS.

In an action for injuries to a railway mail clerk, where there was evidence that he knew of the defective condition of the car, and that the door would shut upon a sudden checking of the speed of the train, and that he failed to take such precautions for his safety as he could have done, the defendant was entitled to have the question of contributory negligence submitted to the jury clearly and fully.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers Cent. Dig. §§ 1403-1405; Dec. Dig. § 348.*]

2. CARRIERS (§ 348*) — INJURIES TO MAIL CLERK—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE — INSTRUCTIONS.

In such an action, instructions given for the plaintiff, which only impliedly require the jury to find freedom from contributory negligence by stating that they must find that the negligence of the defendant was the sole proximate cause of the injury, and by placing the burden of proving contributory negligence upon the defendant, do not submit fully and clearly the question of contributory negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1403-1405; Dec. Dig. § 348.*]

3. TRIAL (§ 267*)—INSTRUCTIONS — APPLICABILITY TO EVIDENCE—INJURIES TO PASSENGERS.

In an action for personal injuries to a railway mail clerk, where there is evidence tending to show contributory negligence, and the carrier submits an instruction which is erroneous as making the issue a question of law upon certain facts instead of a question of fact, the court should modify the instruction, or should give another instruction, which submits the issue of contributory negligence as fully as the instructions for the plaintiff submitted the issue of the defendant's negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 668-672, 674; Dec. Dig. § 267.*]

4. TRIAL (§ 296*)—INSTRUCTIONS — MISLEADING INSTRUCTION.

Where a declaration for injuries to a railway mail clerk alleged in two counts that the carrier was negligent in running its train at a rapid rate of speed and suddenly checking it, and in two other counts alleged negligence in other respects, but under such circumstances that the injury would not have happened unless the train had been suddenly checked while running at a rapid rate of speed, instructions as to the negligence in the last two counts, which did not require a finding that the train was suddenly checked while running at a rapid speed, did not mislead the jury to believe that the plaintiff could recover without showing the sudden checking, where an instruction, given at the defendant's request, expressly told them that there could be no recovery unless such fact was proved.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 706-713, 715, 716, 718; Dec. Dig. § 296.*]

5. CARRIERS (§ 347*)—INSTRUCTIONS — INJURIES TO PASSENGERS.

In an action by a railway mail clerk for injuries caused by the door sliding shut upon him, where he testified that he was looking out to see where they were, when the engineer checked the speed of the train, and caused the door to shut, and another mail clerk testified that under such circumstances he would not have used a hook to fasten the door open, if there had been one, the question of whether he would have used a hook should have been submitted to the jury in the instruction submitting negligence in failing to supply it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1346, 1350-1366, 1388-1397, 1402; Dec. Dig. § 347.*]

6. TRIAL (§ 252*)—INSTRUCTIONS — APPLICABILITY TO EVIDENCE.

A requested instruction which is not supported by the evidence is properly refused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 505, 596-612; Dec. Dig. § 252.*]

7. TRIAL (§ 251*)—INSTRUCTIONS — APPLICABILITY TO ISSUES—INJURIES TO PASSENGERS.

Where two counts of a declaration for injuries to a railway mail clerk charged the carrier with negligence in furnishing a defective car and improperly placing it in the train, so that the door slid shut upon the clerk, when the speed of the train was suddenly checked, but did not allege negligence in the checking of the train, instructions requested by the defendant, which based the plaintiff's right of recovery upon the defendant's negligence in the running of its train, were properly refused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 587-595; Dec. Dig. § 251.*]

8. CARRIERS (§§ 280, 325*)—CARRIAGE OF PASSENGERS—RAILWAY MAIL CLERKS—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—ASSUMPTION OF RISK.

A railway mail clerk in the discharge of his duties, while he is required to exercise ordinary care in using a defective door of the mail car, and cannot recover if he fails to do so, is, nevertheless, entitled to the same degree of care as a passenger, and does not assume the risk of the defect, even though he knew of it and did not report it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 1085-1092, 1098-1103, 1105, 1106, 1109, 1117, 1348; Dec. Dig. §§ 280, 325.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Montgomery County.

Action by O. C. Bell against the Virginian Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed, and new trial awarded.

Hall & Woods, of Roanoke, H. J. Phlegar, of Christiansburg, and G. A. Wingfield, of Norfolk, for plaintiff in error. Hunt & Staples, of Roanoke, for defendant in error.

BUCHANAN, J. This action was brought by the defendant in error, O. C. Bell, to recover damages for personal injuries caused, as alleged, by the negligence of the plaintiff in error, the Virginian Railway Company. Upon the trial of the cause there was a verdict and judgment against the railway company, and to that judgment this writ of error was awarded.

The first error assigned is to the action of the court in giving the following instructions asked for by the plaintiff:

"I. The court instructs the jury that, if they believe from the evidence that the plaintiff on October 26, 1911, was U. S. railway mail clerk, and in the discharge of his duties as railway mail clerk on combination mail and baggage car No. 23 of train No. 14 of the defendant railway company was injured by being struck on the neck by the sliding door of said car, and that his said injury was caused by the absence of a fastener or hook on the sliding door of said car, that a reasonably safe hook or other fastener could have been provided for and attached to said door by the exercise of the utmost care on the part of the defendant company, and that the exercise of the utmost care for the protection of the said plaintiff on the part of the defendant company required that said company should provide a reasonably safe hook or other fastener for said door, and that the said plaintiff's injuries resulted solely and proximately from such negligence of said defendant in not exercising the utmost care to provide said hook, then the jury shall find for the plaintiff, and assess his damages at such sum as they may believe he has sustained, not exceeding the amount alleged in the declaration.

"II. The court instructs the jury that, if they believe from the evidence that the plaintiff on October 26, 1911, was a U. S. railway mail clerk, and in the discharge of his duties as railway mail clerk on combination mail and baggage car No. 23 of train No. 14 of the defendant railway company was injured by being struck on the neck by the sliding door of said car and that his injury was caused by the fact that said combination mail and baggage car No. 23 was being run with the mail end of said car to the rear instead of with the mail end of said car forward, and that said car could have been run with its mail end forward by the said defendant company by the exercise of the utmost care on its part, and the exercise of the utmost care on the part of the defendant for the protection of the said plaintiff required that said defendant should run the said combination car with its mail end forward, and that said plaintiff's injuries resulted solely and proximately from said defendant's negligence in not exercising the utmost care to run said car with its mail end forward then the jury shall find for the plaintiff, and assess his damages at such sum as they may believe he has sustained, not exceeding the amount alleged in the declaration, to wit, the sum of $15,000.

"III. The court instructs the jury that if they believe from the evidence that the plaintiff on October 26, 1911, was a U. S. railway mail clerk, and while in the discharge of his duties as railway mail clerk on combination mail and baggage car No. 23 of train No. 14 of the defendant railway company was injured by being struck on the neck by the sliding door of said car, that said train No. 14, on which plaintiff was being carried, was being negligently run at an excessive rate of speed and was suddenly and negligently checked, and that as a result of said excessive rate of speed and said sudden checking that said sliding door of said car struck the said plaintiff on his neck and injured him, and that said excessive speed and sudden checking of said car could have been avoided by the exercise of the utmost care on the part of the defendant railway company, and that said plaintiff's injuries resulted solely and proximately from the negligence of said defendant in failing to use the utmost care to avoid running its train at an excessive rate of speed and to avoid a sudden checking of the speed of said train, then they shall find for the plaintiff, and assess his damages at such sum as they may believe he has sustained, not exceeding the sum of $15,000, the amount sued for.

"IV. The court instructs the jury that, if they believe from the evidence that the plaintiff on October 26, 1911, was a U. S. railway mail clerk, and in the discharge of his duties as railway mail clerk on combination mail and baggage car No. 23 of train No. 14 of the defendant railway company was injured by being struck on the neck by the sliding door of said car, and that his said injury was caused by the fact that said car was being run with mail end to the rear, and by the fact that said car was equipped with a sliding door instead of a hinge door, and, further, by the fact that there was no hook or other reasonably safe fastener provided for said sliding door, and, further, by the fact that said train No. 14 was being negligently run at an excessive rate of speed, and that the speed of said train was suddenly and negligently checked, and that said defendant company, by the exercise of the utmost care, could have run said car with mail end forward, and could have provided a hinge door in lieu of a sliding door for said car, and, further, could have provided a reasonably safe hook or other fastener for said sliding door, and that the exercise of the utmost care for the protection of the said plaintiff on the part of said defendant company required that said company should run said car with the mail end forward, and should provide said car with a hinge door instead of a sliding door, and should provide a reasonably safe hook or other fastener for said sliding door, and that such utmost care on the part of the defendant for the protection of the plaintiff required that it, the defendant, avoid such running at such excessive speed and sudden stopping, and that said plaintiff's injuries resulted solely and proximately from any one of the above-mentioned acts of negligence of said defendant, or from the concurrence of two or more of said acts of negligence, then the jury shall find for the plaintiff, and assess his damages at such sum as they may believe he has sustained, not exceeding the sum of $15,000."

Each of these instructions is objected to upon the ground that they leave out of view the defendant company's theory of the case—that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence. This objection may be considered in connection with the refusal of the court to give the defendant's instruction No. 6, which is also assigned as error.

[1] There was evidence tending to show that the plaintiff knew of the alleged defective condition of the car; that it was not being run with its mail end next to the engine, as he claims it should have been; that the door of the car would shut upon the sudden application of the brakes, when the train was running rapidly; that such application of the brakes might occur at any time; and that he could have taken but did not take any precautions for his protection at the time he was injured. The defendant was therefore entitled to have the question of contributory negligence clearly and fully submitted to the jury. The plaintiff's instructions 1, 2, 3, and 4 distinctly and fully submitted the plaintiff's theory of the case to the jury. While in each of those instructions the jury are told that, if they believe the facts hypothetically stated in them, they must find for the plaintiff, yet in neither of them is there the usual qualification (where there is evidence tending to show that the plaintiff was not in the exercise of due care), "unless they believe that he was guilty of contributory negligence." See A. C. L. Ry. Co. v. Caples, 110 Va. 514, 519, 66 S. E. 855.

[2] The plaintiff insists that the qualification as to contributory negligence is contained in the requirement in his instructions 1, 2, 3, and 4, that the jury should believe that the alleged acts of negligence on the part of the defendant was the sole and proximate cause of the accident, before they could find for him, and in his seventh instruction.

That instruction is as follows: "The court instructs the jury that, if the defendant company relies upon contributory negligence of the plaintiff, as a defense to this action, then, unless the same appears from the testimony introduced by the plaintiff, the burden of proving such contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff is upon the defendant, and it must appear by a preponderance of the evidence that said plaintiff failed to exercise, for his own safety, that degree of care, under all the circumstances of this case, which a reasonably prudent person, using ordinary care, would have exercised."

[3] The plaintiff's instructions Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4 only submit the question of contributory negligence to the jury by implication, and his instruction No. 7 is directed chiefly to telling the jury upon whom was the burden of proof on that issue, and only in the most general way refers to what would constitute due care on the part of the plaintiff. These instructions not only did not submit fully and clearly the question of contributory negligence to the jury, but the court refused to give the defendant's instruction No. 6, which was in these words:

"The court instructs the jury that, although they may believe from the evidence that at the time the plaintiff claims he was injured the defendant was negligent in using a mail car with a sliding door and without a hook to hold the door open, or in so placing the mail car in the train that the door would slide shut in the direction the train was moving, or in running the train at an excessive rate of speed and stopping it suddenly, yet, if they further believe from the evidence that the plaintiff knew of the condition of said door and the position the mail car was placed in the train, that the train was running at a rapid rate of speed, and might possibly be suddenly stopped at any time, and with knowledge of these facts the plaintiff thrust his head out of the door, without using the means or precautions which he could have used to prop or hold the door open, then the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, and they must find for the defendant."

That instruction sets out the facts relied upon by the defendant to show want of due care on the part of the plaintiff at the time of the accident, and while it declares that these facts, as a matter of law, would make out a case of contributory negligence, instead of leaving that question to the jury, still, as the instructions given for the plaintiff did not distinctly and fully submit that question to the jury, the court, under the circumstances, ought to have corrected instruction No. 6, or given an instruction in lieu of it, which as fully and as distinctly submitted to the jury the theory of the defendant as to contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff as the instructions given submitted the theory of the plaintiff as to the negligence of the defendant.

[4] Instructions Nos. 1 and 2 are also objected to upon the ground that they are in conflict with the defendant's instruction No. 8. That instruction told the jury that there could be no recovery under either count in the declaration, "unless the train approached the station at Ironto at a rapid rate of speed, and that the speed of said train was so suddenly checked as to cause the mail car to lurch forward with greater violence than ordinarily attends the stopping of trains, and that as a result thereof the door of the mail car slid shut with such force" that it caused the injury complained of.

The evidence tended to show that the use of the mail car with a hanging door without hooks, or the running of the car with the wrong end foremost, could not have caused the sliding door to shut suddenly and violently, unless the train was running rapidly and was suddenly checked. That this was the case was recognized by the pleader in framing his declaration, for in the first and fourth counts the rapid running and sudden checking of the train are charged to have been negligent, and in the second and third counts, while these acts are not alleged to have been done negligently, yet the allegations show that the accident could not have happened but for such rapid running and sudden checking.

But it is insisted by the plaintiff that his instructions (Nos. 1 and 2) require the jury to so believe before they could find for him, since his right to recover under either of said instructions is made to depend upon the fact that the sole and proximate cause of his injuries was the act or acts of negligence hypothetically stated in each.

While instructions Nos. 1 and 2 are not as clear upon that point as they might be, yet, when read in connection with instruction No. 8, we do not think that the jury could have believed that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, unless they had further believed that the train was running rapidly and was stopped suddenly when he was injured. But, as the judgment will have to be reversed upon other grounds, it would be better to make the instructions given upon the next trial clear upon this question.

[6] Another objection made to instruction No. 1 is that there was evidence tending to show that under the circumstances disclosed by the plaintiff's own evidence he would not have used the hook if it had been in place. He stated that, when the engineer blew the signal for the station: "I was changing my clothes; I pulled on my breeches. I didn't have no undershirt on, and when I ran to the door and looked out to see where I was, and just as I looked out he put his air on." One of the plaintiff's witnesses, also a mail clerk, testified that a mail clerk, who was only looking out to see if the mail was up, would not think of the hook, but would hold the door open with his hand. It is true that the plaintiff himself testified that he had no way of holding the door open while he was preparing to catch the mail; but he does not deny that, in looking out to see where he was or whether or not the mail was up, he could have held the door open with his hand. Opening the door to see where the train was or whether or not the mail was up required but a moment of time, and it is highly probable that under the circumstances disclosed by his own evidence the plaintiff would not have used or thought of the hook, as his own witness testified.

There being evidence tending to show that, if the hook had been in place, a mail clerk under like circumstances would not have used it, the question of whether or not the plaintiff would have used it to fasten the door before looking out ought to have been left to the jury, for the absence of the hook could not have been the proximate cause of the plaintiff's injury, if he would not have used it if in place.

The next assignment of error is to the action of the court in refusing to give instructions numbered 4, 5, 6, 10, and 11 offered by the defendant.

[8] Instruction No. 4 was properly rejected. While there is evidence tending to show that a mail clerk, in looking out of the door to see where his train was or whether the mail was up, would not have used the hook if it had been in place, under the circumstances testified to by the plaintiff (and heretofore discussed in considering the last objection to the plaintiff's instruction No. 1) there is no sufficient evidence to show that in handling the mails at the stations he would not have used the hook, or that it was not commonly used while actually handling the mail at stations, to justify the giving of the instruction as offered.

[7] Instructions Nos. 5 and 10 were also properly refused. Each of these instructions made the plaintiff's right to recover depend upon the fact that the defendant was guilty of negligence in the running of its train. Under the second and third counts in the declaration the right of the plaintiff to recover does not depend upon the negligent running of the train but upon the character and condition of the mail car and the manner in which it was placed in the train. While under the allegations of these counts the accident would not have resulted but for the rapid running and sudden stopping of the train, there is no allegation that the defendant by such rapid running and sudden stopping was guilty of negligence.

The objection to instruction No. 6 was discussed in considering the assignment of error as to the giving of the plaintiff's instructions, and need not be referred to further.

[8] Neither did the court err in rejecting the defendant's instructions Nos. 11 and 12. By instruction No. 11 the court was asked to tell the jury that, if the plaintiff knew for several months before the accident that there was no hook to hold the mail car door open, and that it was dangerous to operate it without a hook, and the plaintiff continued to perform his duties as mail clerk, without reporting the absence of a hook, and without a promise from the defendant to replace it, the plaintiff assumed the risk, and could not recover. By instruction 12 the jury were to be told that, if the plaintiff knew of the absence of the hook, and that it was dangerous to operate the car without it, and continued to perform his duties as mail clerk, without reporting the absence of the hook to the chief clerk of the railway mail service, or to the defendant, then he was guilty of contributory negligence, and they must find for the defendant. The effect of both of those instructions was to hold that the plaintiff had assumed the risk resulting from the absence of hooks on the car door. If the failure to place and keep hooks on the car door was negligence on the part of the defendant, and the plaintiff knew of their absence, it was his duty to exercise reasonable or ordinary care in using the door in his work, and, if he failed to do so, he was guilty of contributory negligence, and could not recover. But in discharging his duties as mail clerk in the car in its alleged defective condition, without informing the railway mail service or the defendant of the defective condition of the car, he did not assume the risk of damage resulting from the absence of hooks, nor did his failure to so notify either deprive him of the right of recovery. The relation which the plaintiff bore to the defendant as a common carrier imposed upon it the same degree of care for him that it was bound to exercise toward its other passengers. N. & W. Ry. Co. v. Shott, 92 Va. 34, 44, 22 S. E. 811. See Lindsey v. Pa. R. Co., 26 App. Cas. (D. C.) 503, 6 Ann. Cas. 862, and notes 863-865, and authorities cited. It was incumbent, therefore, upon the defendant to see that its mail car was such as it was its duty to furnish and maintain, and, if it failed to do so, the plaintiff was entitled to recover, unless he was guilty of contributory negligence. It would scarcely be contended that, if an ordinary passenger on a passenger train had known for weeks or months that the car upon which he was accustomed to travel was in a defective condition, by reason of which defect he was injured while in the exercise of reasonable care on his part, he could not recover because he had failed to inform the carrier of such defect, a defect which, under the high degree of care imposed upon it, it was bound to have knowledge of and remedy.

Another error assigned is to the refusal of the court to permit a map or drawing which purported to be a standard plan of the United States railway postal compartment cars. The objection made to the paper offered was that it was offered as a copy, and that it was not authenticated, as provided by section 3343 of the Code, nor was there evidence that it had been compared with the original and found to be a correct copy.

The ruling of the court seems to have been proper from what appears in the record; but, as the objection made to the paper can be cured before or at the next trial, it will be unnecessary to pass upon the question.

The remaining assignment of error is to the refusal of the court to set aside the verdict. As the judgment complained of must be reversed, this assignment of error will not be considered, as the evidence may and the instructions will be different on the next trial.

The judgment will be reversed, the verdict set aside, and a new trial awarded, to be had not in conflict with the views expressed in this opinion.

Reversed.

KEITH, P., absent.

SOUTH ATLANTIC LIFE INS. CO. v. HURT'S ADM'X.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Sept. 11, 1918.)

1. INSURANCE (§ 646*) — LIFE POLICY—DEFENSES—SUICIDE—BURDEN OF PROOF.

In an action on a life policy, the burden is on the defendant to prove a defense of suicide by clear and satisfactory evidence that the insured did actually commit suicide; a mere preponderance of the evidence being insufficient.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1555, 1645-1668; Dec. Dig. § 646.*]

2. INSURANCE (§ 646*)—LIFE POLICY—ACCIDENTAL DEATH—SUICIDE—PRESUMPTIONS.

Where the evidence in an action on a life policy as to whether insured's death was accidental or suicidal leaves the question in doubt, it will be presumed that it was accidental.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1555, 1645-1668; Dec. Dig. § 646.*]

3. INSURANCE (§ 665*)—LIFE POLICY—SUICIDE.

Where, in an action on a life policy, the evidence that insured committed suicide is circumstantial, the defense of suicide will fail unless the circumstances exclude, with reasonable certainty any hypothesis of death by accident.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1555, 1707-1728; Dec. Dig. § 665.*]

4. EVIDENCE (§ 63*)—PRESUMPTION AGAINST INSANITY.

All men are presumed to be sane until the contrary is shown, and the burden is on the party alleging insanity to prove it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 83; Dec. Dig. § 63.*]

5. INSURANCE (§ 665*)—PROOF OF INSANITY—INSANITY OF RELATIVES.

In the absence of evidence of any demeanor, act, or word of insured at any time indicating that he was insane, the fact that he was shown to have had insane relatives did not prove that he was insane at the time of his death.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1555, 1707-1728; Dec. Dig. § 665.*]

6. INSURANCE (§ 668*)—LIFE INSURANCE — SUICIDE—QUESTION FOR JURY.

In an action on a life policy, evidence held to require submission to the jury of the question whether insured died as a result of accident or committed suicide.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1556, 1732-1770; Dec. Dig. § 668.*]

7. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1058*)—REVIEW—RULINGS ON EVIDENCE—PREJUDICE.

Where a physician was introduced as a witness by insurer and interrogated fully concerning what he knew of insured and what he meant by the language used in an affidavit in which he stated that he knew nothing of the special cause of insured's death "unless it be hereditary insanity," defendant was not prejudiced by the exclusion of the affidavit containing such answer.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4195, 4200-4204, 4206; Dec. Dig. § 1058.*]

8. INSURANCE (§ 293*)—LIFE POLICY—FRAUD — ANSWERS WILLFULLY FALSE.

Where a life policy provided for two defenses only, to wit, suicide within 12 months from the date of the policy and fraud, fraud was not made out by untrue answers in the application failing to disclose that insured's uncle had been afflicted with hereditary insanity, where it was not shown that insured had knowledge that such insanity was hereditary and that the answers were willfully false.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 693; Dec. Dig. § 293.*]

9. INSURANCE (§ 293*)—LIFE POLICY—APPLICATION—FAMILY HISTORY—QUESTIONS—INSTRUCTION—"HEREDITARY DISEASE."

An application for life insurance, after containing numerous questions as to the applicant's physical and mental condition, inquired whether any intimate associate or any person in the applicant's immediate household was then ill with consumption, whether any one of them had recently been ill or died of that disease, and then asked whether any of the applicant's uncles or aunts had consumption or any "hereditary" disease. Held, that the last question should be construed as inquiring concerning physical ailments and condition and not to refer to hereditary insanity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 693; Dec. Dig. § 293.*

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 4, p. 328L.]

10. INSURANCE (§ 378*)—LIFE POLICY—APPLICATION—MEDICAL EXAMINER—KNOWLEDGE—IMPUTATION TO INSURER.

Where insurer's medical examiner, who took insured's application for the policy sued on, was well acquainted with the mental condition of insured's family, his uncles and aunts, and had been so from early boyhood, the insurer was bound by the physician's knowledge concerning such condition, under the rule that the examining physician for an insurance company is the agent of the insurer notwithstanding a provision of the contract to the contrary.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 968-997; Dec. Dig. § 873.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Tazewell County.
Action by Ollie L. Hurt, as Administratrix of John B. Hurt, deceased, against the South Atlantic Life Insurance Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Henry & Graham, of Tazewell, and Thos. B. Gay, of Richmond, for plaintiff in error. Greever & Gillespie and Chapman & Gillespie, all of Tazewell, for defendant in error.

HARRISON, J. Ollie L. Hurt, administratrix of John B. Hurt, deceased, recovered a judgment against the South Atlantic Life Insurance Company, in the circuit court of Tazewell county, for $5,000, the amount of a policy of insurance issued by the defendant company upon the life of the plaintiff's intestate; and upon the petition of the company this judgment is now before us for review.

Upon the trial of the case the defendant company interposed the plea of non assumption and a special plea tendering the plaintiff $27.30, being the amount of reserve fund held on account of the contract sued on, which it claimed was all that was due under the policy. Being required to file a statement of its grounds of defense, the company made two contentions: First, that the insured, during the first 12 months from the date of the policy, committed suicide; and, second, that the insured made in his application for insurance untrue answers to certain questions, which were material to the risk contracted for in the policy, thereby voiding the same.

From the evidence adduced it can be stated with confidence that at the time the policy in question was issued the insured was in good health, and that the application was made and the policy accepted by him in good faith. The evidence as a whole reveals the insured as a man of the highest integrity, of unusual business ability, possessed of large real and personal property, actively engaged in the successful prosecution of extensive business interests, with a large and happy family consisting of his wife and eight children, to which he was attached and in which he took great pride. Up to the time of his death he was full of plans for the future, with every confidence in his ability to carry them through successfully, with nothing to trouble him in any of his affairs, either in business or in his personal relations.

These were the conditions of the insured and the circumstances surrounding him up to the morning of January 26, 1911, when he left his home with two of his work hands to feed his cattle. After the cattle were fed he directed his men to return to the house, saying that he would remain "to watch the hogs away from the cattle." Failing to return to his home that day, search was instituted, and his dead body was found on the following morning in a pasture some distance from his home; death having been caused by a gunshot wound in his right temple. The body was found in an adjoining field to that in which the cattle had been fed, at the foot of a stump, lying on the left side with his feet partly drawn up. The left arm and hand was under him, and the right arm thrown across his body with the right hand resting upon the butt of a 38 calibre pistol, which showed that one chamber was empty. The deceased was shown to have owned a pistol which was not found after his death.

[1] While two grounds of defense were set out by the defendant company, the record discloses that the real contest was that the insured committed suicide within 12 months after the date of the policy. The great weight of authority, both text-writers and decisions, agrees that in a case of this kind the burden is upon the defendant to show by clear and satisfactory evidence that the insured did actually commit suicide; that a mere preponderance of evidence will not suffice.

In the case of Cosmopolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Koegel, 104 Va. 619, 52 S. E. 166, it is held that: "The defense of suicide, to avail, must exclude every hypothesis of accidental death. The party making the defense has the burden of proof. It will not be presumed. The mere fact that the body of an insured is found with a pistol in his hand and a bullet wound in his head is not sufficient to prove suicide."

[2] In that case, quoting with approval from high authority, it is further said: "Accidental death will be presumed, and this presumption must be overcome by the proof of facts which exclude every hypothesis of death except by suicide." And further that: "Where the evidence as to whether the death was accidental or suicidal leaves the question in doubt, the presumption is in favor of accident."

The doctrine laid down in the Koegel Case, supra, is adhered to and emphasized by this court in the subsequent cases of Life Insurance Co. of Va. v. Hairston, 108 Va. 832, 62 S. E. 1057, 128 Am. St. Rep. 989, and Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. v. De Vault, 109 Va. 392, 63 S. E. 982, 17 Ann. Cas. 27.

*For other cases see same topic and section-NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes.

[3] In the last-named case it is said: "Where the evidence of self-destruction is circumstantial, the defendant fails unless the circumstances exclude with reasonable certainty any hypothesis of death by accident."

The principles announced in the Virginia cases prevail with unanimity in numerous cases in point from other jurisdictions where the defense of suicide is sought to be established by circumstantial evidence. Of these we shall refer to but one.

In the case of Leman v. Manhattan Life Ins. Co., 46 La. Ann. 1192, 15 South. 389 (24 L. R. A. 589, 49 Am. St. Rep. 849), the suit was brought by a widow on a policy issued on the life of her husband. The jury found for the defendant on the defense of suicide, and on appeal the judgment upholding that verdict was reversed and a judgment entered in favor of the plaintiff for the amount of the policy. The facts were not unlike those in the case at bar, so far as the circumstances tending to support the theory of suicide were concerned. Briefly stated, the body was found with a wound from a gunshot causing death; the discharged pistol was wedged as if it had been forced on the right hand; the body was reclining on a sofa, as of one sleeping; the left arm rested on the breast; the right leg crossed on the left; the head in the usual position of one in repose; there being no evidence of any convulsive movement. The court said: "The question is whether these appearances point to suicide, to the exclusion of any other cause. Why not, with equal potency, to accidental death or death by the hand of another? * * * When, as in this case, circumstantial evidence alone is relied on to establish suicide, it is at least within bounds to say the evidence must be of a character to exclude, with reasonable certainty, any other cause of death. If the evidence falls short of this exaction, the suicide is not proved. The fact of death remains, and that casts the liability on the company insuring against death, with the excepted case of self-destruction, which the company fails to establish. This appreciation of the evidence and of the burden of proof constrains us to set aside the verdict and judgment of the lower court in favor of the defendant."

[4] In the case at bar the defendant company seeks to avoid the burden of proving that the insured committed suicide by attempting to show that he was insane at the time of his death, and that therefore the presumption against suicide never existed. Here, again, the defendant is confronted with another presumption, namely, that all men are presumed to be sane until the contrary is shown, and the burden is upon the party alleging insanity to prove it. Howard v. Howard, 112 Va. 566, 72 S. E. 133.

[5] The record fails to show one word or act of the insured up to the moment he was last seen to remotely suggest that he was insane. When last seen on the day of his death he was in his usual health and engaged, as usual, in the performance of his daily duties. It is true that the mother and certain relations of the insured are shown to have been insane, but it does not follow from this that the insured was insane. The result of the testimony of the experts in this case is that, when the acts and demeanor of a person indicate insanity, the fact that he has had insane relatives strengthens the view that he is insane, but, where no word or act on the part of the person whose sanity is questioned is shown, the fact that such person has had insane relatives, standing alone, raises no presumption of insanity. A critical reading of the record fails to disclose any demeanor, act, or word on the part of the insured, at any time indicating that he was insane, and therefore the fact that he was shown to have had insane relatives, standing alone, does not prove that he was insane at the time of his death. Apart from the insanity of relatives, the only other circumstance relied on by the defendant as tending to show that the insured was insane is that recently before his death he had lost flesh and was less talkative and jovial than usual. The experts agree that, while these circumstances may be present in cases of insanity, they do not, standing alone, indicate that a person is insane. They may and often do arise from many physical causes having no relation whatever to the disease of insanity.

[6] In concluding this branch of the case it is sufficient to say that, even if it be conceded that there is greater probability that the death of the insured resulted from a suicidal act than from an accident, still we cannot say that death by suicide is the only reasonable conclusion to be drawn from the evidence. The proof does not exclude, with reasonable certainty, death from accidental shooting, and, the burden being upon the defendant to establish its defense by proof, it was properly left to the jury to say whether or not it was a case of suicide.

[7] In the first assignment of error petitioner complains of the exclusion of the affidavit made by Dr. Baylor when the proof of death was made out; the point relied on being that petitioner was entitled to the benefit of his answer as to the special cause of the insured's death, the answer being: "Know of nothing unless it be hereditary insanity."

The statement of the attending physician in a proof of death would seem to be only necessary or valuable when the deceased has died from natural causes and has actually been attended by a physician. In such a case the insurance company has a right to know what the physician knows as to the cause of death. But in this case there was no attending physician, and the answer of Dr. Baylor, which is mere conjecture, shows that he knew no more about what caused the death than any one else who saw the dead body. But, be that as it may, Dr. Baylor was subsequently introduced as a witness by the defendant and interrogated fully on this point as to what he knew of the deceased in every way and what he meant by the language of the answer he gave in the affidavit mentioned. All that he knew was thus put completely and effectually before the jury, and the defendant suffered no prejudice whatever from the action complained of.

[8] The second assignment of error is to the action of the circuit court in refusing to give certain instructions asked for by the defendant company and in giving certain other instructions. The court's refusal to give instructions A and C, asked for by the defendant and refused, may be dealt with together.

In his application for the policy sued on the insured was asked the following question: "Have any of your uncles or aunts had consumption or any hereditary disease? If so, on paternal or maternal side?" To which the insured replied, "No." Instruction A told the jury that this answer was false and that it was material to the risk and directed the jury to find for the defendant. Instruction C told the jury that, if the insured, in answering the question mentioned, failed to disclose that his uncle, A. J. McGuire, had been afflicted with hereditary insanity, they must find for the defendant company.

[9] These instructions were properly refused. The policy provides for two defenses only, namely, suicide within 12 months from the date of the policy and fraud. Untrue answers, in order to be fraudulent, must be wilfully false. Mason v. Chappell, 15 Grat. (56 Va.) 572, settles the law in Virginia that the scienter must be shown. There is no evidence that the applicant for this insurance knew that he had "uncles or aunts" who had been the victims of hereditary insanity. He doubtless knew that he had relatives who had been insane, but that this layman knew the character of their insanity is not to be presumed when learned experts who have testified in this case differ as to the hereditary nature of insanity, all agreeing that certain kinds of insanity are not hereditary. When the doctors differ as to the hereditary nature of insanity, it is hardly to be expected that a layman, unlearned in the technical meaning of medical terms, would know whether or not a particular case of insanity was hereditary. Further, the form of the question was well calculated to mislead the applicant. He was asked a number of questions as to his physical and mental condition, and immediately preceding the question and answer under consideration he was asked: (16) "Is any intimate associate, or any person in your immediate family or household, now ill with consumption?" (17) "Has any one of them recently been ill, or died of that disease?" (18) "Have any of your uncles or aunts had consumption, or any hereditary disease?" This last question, certainly in view of those immediately preceding, would naturally have been regarded by the applicant as referring wholly to physical diseases, and it would be most natural for a layman to understand from the question that hereditary diseases of a like nature were referred to. Dr. Williams, the medical examiner for this company, who wrote out the answers of the applicant to these questions, when asked the meaning of the term "good health," said: "In the usual acceptance of the term, you would have reference to the physical condition." This witness is shown to have been, at the time, fully informed as to the family history of the applicant, and particularly as to the mental condition of his mother, uncles, and aunts, and in answer to the question, "Were those answers as you wrote them, and made by Mr. Hurt, true at the time they were made?" he says: "So far as I know they were." It does not seem reasonable to suppose that the defendant intended, by the question under consideration, to include mental trouble in the language "consumption or any hereditary disease." If it did, it has only succeeded in making an erroneous impression upon the applicant and misleading him into ignorantly making the answer now complained of.

[10] Apart, however, from these considerations, it appears that Dr. Williams, the medical examiner for the defendant company, who wrote out the answers of the deceased in his application for this policy, was well acquainted with his mother, uncles, and aunts from his early boyhood and was thoroughly familiar with their mental condition. It is a well settled principle that any knowledge which the agent of an insurance company may have is imputed to the company, and that medical examiners for insurance companies are considered as agents for the company, and the company is bound by any information its medical examiner may have at the time he fills out the application for the insured. Johnson v. Aetna Ins. Co., 123 Ga. 404, 51 S. E. 339, 107 Am. St. Rep. 92.

There is a very lengthy and luminous note to this case in which it is said, citing numerous authorities in support of the proposition, that: "The principle stated applies equally to medical examiners appointed by life insurance companies, though the application or policy may declare that such is not the case, for examiners are in law agents of the corporations selecting them and requiring the performance of their duties, including the asking of questions and the writing in the application of the responses thereto. Hence, though a medical examiner omits an answer made by the applicant, or writes it out substantially different from the response actually given by him, and the insurer acts only on the answers so written, still, as in law the medical examiner is the agent of the insurer and not of the insured, the former cannot escape liability on account of the failure of its medical examiner to perform his duty, nor even on account of his intentional misperformance of it. He is the agent of the insurer, and to it his knowledge is imputed, and, if it issues its policy, it must be deemed to have done so after its agent had communicated to it all the facts made known to him, and it is estopped from contending to the contrary."

The defendant company, therefore, knew or could have had through its medical examiner all the information that it now claims to have desired to elicit by the question under consideration, and it is estopped from contending to the contrary.

Instruction B asked for by the defendant tells the jury that the plaintiff's intestate committed suicide and peremptorily directs them to find for the defendant. Enough has been already said to show the fallacy of this instruction and that it was properly refused.

The petition points out no error in the instructions given by the court, and an examination of them shows that they are free from objection.

The case having been fairly submitted to the jury, their verdict must, under the law, stand and the judgment upholding the same be affirmed.

Affirmed.

KEITH, P., absent.

STATE ex rel. SIMS v. McMASTER, Insurance Com'r et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Sept. 30, 1913.)

INSURANCE (§ 20*)—FOREIGN INSURANCE COMPANY—LICENSE TO DO BUSINESS—REVOCATION—INSURANCE COMMISSIONER—DISCRETION—MANDAMUS.

Civ. Code 1912, §§ 2669, 2670, 2671, provide that it shall be a condition precedent to the right of a foreign insurance company to do business in the state that all actions arising out of such business with citizens of the state shall be tried in the state courts, and section 2700 declares that, if the Insurance Commissioner shall find that any such company has violated the law of the state, he shall revoke or suspend its license. Held that, where relator sued a foreign insurance company, which removed the cause to the federal court, and on complaint by relator to the Insurance Commissioner an order to show cause why the company's license should not be revoked was issued, and on return of such order the company showed that the removal was a mistake and without any intention on its part to violate the law, and offered to consent that the case be remanded, whereupon the Commissioner refused to revoke the license, his right so to act was discretionary, and relator had no such interest in the matter as entitled him to maintain mandamus against the Insurance Commissioner to compel him to revoke the license.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 16, 18-22; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

Mandamus on relation of T. P. Sims against F. H. McMaster, Insurance Commissioner, and others. Writ denied.

Gwynn & Hannon, of Spartanburg, for appellant. T. M. Mordecai and W. A. Holman, both of Charleston, for respondent McMaster.

PER CURIAM. Sections 2669, 2670, and 2671 of the Civil Code of 1912 provide that it shall be a condition precedent to the right of any foreign corporation to do business in this state that all actions arising out of the business of such corporations with the citizens of this state shall be tried in the state courts; and that it shall be deemed an essential part of all contracts between such corporations and the citizens of the state that actions arising thereout or pertaining thereto shall be tried in the state courts, which shall have exclusive jurisdiction of all such actions brought therein, saving the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. Other sections of the Civil Code prohibit foreign insurance companies from doing business in the state without a license from the Insurance Commissioner; and section 2700 provides that, besides other contingencies therein mentioned, if the Commissioner shall find that any such company has violated the law of the state, "he shall revoke or suspend" its license, and prohibits the doing of business thereafter by such company, until its authority to do business is restored by the Commissioner.

In June, 1912, the relator, T. P. Sims, commenced an action in the court of common pleas for Spartanburg county against the respondent the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York on a cause of action arising out of a transaction with said company. On petition and motion of the company, the cause was duly and regularly removed to the federal court. Thereafter, at the instance of the relator, the respondent F. H. McMaster, the Insurance Commissioner of the state, cited the company to show cause before him why its license to do business in the state should not be revoked, because of its violation of the provisions of the statutes above mentioned in removing said cause to the federal court. For cause, the company showed that the case had been removed in consequence of its general policy and custom in such cases, and without any intention to violate the law of the state, and offered to do all that it could to have it restored to the dockets of the state court for trial, agreeing that, if the plaintiff would move to dismiss the action in the federal court, it would consent thereto, and it would have its attorneys accept service of the same summons and complaint upon which the action had been originally brought and pay all costs and expenses to which the plaintiff therein (the relator herein) had been put by reason of the removal, except the fees of his attorneys. Upon this showing, the Commissioner refused to revoke the company's license.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Thereupon the relator instituted this proceeding to obtain a writ of mandamus to compel the Commissioner to revoke the license. Upon the petition, a rule to show cause was issued, and the matter was heard by the Chief Justice, at chambers. Upon hearing the returns, he held that the revocation of the license was in the discretion of the Commissioner, and that he had not abused his discretion or exercised it capriciously or arbitrarily, and further that the relator had shown no interest which had been prejudiced by the action of the Commissioner. He therefore dismissed the petition. The relator appealed.

The respondent the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York moved, on due notice, to dismiss the appeal on the ground, among others, that the relator had no right to prosecute it, since no right of his was prejudiced by the action of the Commissioner. Upon the day set for the hearing of the motion, no one appeared to resist it, and, on motion of respondents' attorneys, the court passed an order dismissing the appeal on the ground that the said T. P. Sims had not offered to show that he had any right to prosecute it.

Thereafter, on notice and affidavits, excusing their default, the attorneys for T. P. Sims moved the court to reinstate the appeal. At the hearing of this motion, it was agreed by counsel that the court should consider, along with the motion to reinstate the appeal, the original motion to dismiss it, the practical effect of which is that, if the court shall conclude that the appeal was properly dismissed, the motion to reinstate must be refused.

After careful consideration of the matter, we are of the opinion that no right of the relator, T. P. Sims, was prejudiced by the action of the Commissioner; and therefore he has no right to prosecute this appeal. We fail to see how he would be benefited by the revocation of the company's license. The Commissioner properly took into consideration, in exercising his discretion, not only that the revocation of the license, under the circumstances, would not benefit the relator, but that it would do positive injury to the company, to the state, in the loss of revenue, and to many citizens of the state who are agents of the company, and to many others who are policy holders therein.

The citation of the company to appear before the Commissioner to show cause why its license should not be revoked had the effect of bringing the company to a realization of its duty, under the law, to submit to the jurisdiction of the state court, and it offered and agreed to do all that was in its power which the relator could have reasonably asked or required it to do to restore the case to the jurisdiction of the state court. We are unable to see wherein the relator has any further interest in the matter, except, perhaps, to indulge a desire to punish the company; but the Legislature has not seen fit to confer upon private individuals the power to punish in such cases.

The motion to reinstate the appeal is therefore refused.

The CHIEF JUSTICE disqualified.

HUGGINS v. ATLANTIC COAST LINE R. CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. June 10, 1913. On Rehearing, Sept. 29, 1913.)

1. DAMAGES (§ 208*)—PUNITIVE DAMAGES—EVIDENCE.

Where, in an action for injuries to a railroad engineer, plaintiff claimed that the injury was caused by the incompetency of his fireman and testified that he had previously complained to defendant's foreman that the fireman was incompetent and had been promised a new fireman on his next trip, while the foreman denied notice of his incompetency and testified that if any such report of incompetency had been made to him he would not have kept the fireman two minutes, there was evidence justifying the submission of plaintiff's right to recover punitive damages on the theory that the foreman had recklessly and consciously disregarded plaintiff's right to the assistance of a competent fireman.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. §§ 54, 64, 68, 132, 144, 145, 205, 220, 533, 534; Dec. Dig. § 208.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1002*)—REVIEW—CONFLICTING EVIDENCE.

A verdict, on conflicting evidence, that plaintiff was injured as a result of the application of emergency brakes by plaintiff's fireman in response to a signal from plaintiff and not from a brakeman, was conclusive on appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3935-3937; Dec. Dig. § 1002.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 284*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—INCOMPETENT SERVANT—ISSUES AND PROOF.

Where, in an action for injuries to a railroad engineer by the alleged incompetency of his fireman, the complaint alleged that defendant's foreman knew of the fireman's unfitness, that the same had been repeatedly reported to defendant's officers, and that the fireman had a habit of tampering with the engine and of moving the train without authority, long prior to the date of the accident, such allegation authorized the admission of evidence of specific instances other than that alleged in the complaint of the fireman's meddling with the engine, and that other employees had complained to the foreman of the fireman's incompetency.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 861-876; Dec. Dig. § 284.*]

4. TRIAL (§ 242*)—MISLEADING INSTRUCTIONS.

Where the court charged that plaintiff could not recover if he was guilty of negligence in any one or more of the nine particulars specified in the answer, the jury were not misled by an instruction that the burden was on defendants to establish every material allegation of the defense of contributory negligence, in that it required proof of every one of the specifications of contributory negligence, whereas proof of one was sufficient to defeat a recovery; the same burden having been placed on plaintiff by an instruction requiring him to prove every material allegation of the complaint.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 569-576; Dec. Dig. § 242.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1062*)—INSTRUCTIONS—PREJUDICE—CLAIM FOR PUNITIVE DAMAGES—WITHDRAWAL.

Where, in an action for injuries to a servant, there was evidence sufficient to support a verdict for punitive damages, defendants were not prejudiced by plaintiff's withdrawal of his claim for punitive damages at the conclusion of the arguments to the jury, using the evidence merely to bar the defense of contributory negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4212-4218; Dec. Dig. § 1062.*]

6. NEW TRIAL (§ 153*)—GROUNDS—MISCONDUCT OF JURY—AFFIDAVIT—SERVICE.

Affidavits showing misconduct of jurors as a ground for new trial need not be served on opposing counsel four days before hearing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 283, 288; Dec. Dig. § 153.*]

7. NEW TRIAL (§ 55*)—GROUNDS—MISCONDUCT OF JURORS.

Where defendants' counsel acquired knowledge of misconduct of certain jurors during the trial, but did not call the same to the attention of the trial judge until after verdict, such misconduct, not having been such as to be clearly prejudicial, did not require the granting of a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 106-111; Dec. Dig. § 55.*]

8. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1004*)—REVIEW—EXCESSIVE VERDICT.

The Supreme Court has no power to set aside a verdict as excessive unless it is so excessive as to warrant a conclusion that the trial judge abused his discretion in refusing to grant relief against it, since if it is only moderately excessive the trial judge alone is vested with discretion to set it aside, either absolutely or conditionally.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3944-3947; Dec. Dig. § 1004.*]

9. DAMAGES (§ 132*)—PERSONAL INJURIES—VERDICT—EXCESSIVENESS.

Plaintiff, a railroad engineer 35 years old, in previous good health, was totally and permanently disabled as the result of the alleged negligence of his fireman in stopping the train suddenly in response to plaintiff's signal. At the time of his injury plaintiff had a wife and children dependent on him for support and was earning from $150 to $200 a month. As a result of his injury he was so totally and permanently disabled as to be unable to turn himself in bed without assistance, and was doomed for the rest of his life to suffer pain, both of body and mind. Held, that a verdict awarding him $40,000 was not excessive.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. §§ 372-385, 396; Dec. Dig. § 132.*]

On Rehearing.*10. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 833*)—PETITION FOR REHEARING—SERVICE.

A petition for rehearing is ex parte, designed to give counsel an opportunity to bring the alleged grounds to the attention of the court; it not being necessary to serve notice of the petition or of the grounds on opposing counsel.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3214, 3229-3240, 3244-3246; Dec. Dig. § 833.*]

11. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 670*)—RECORD—CASE—SUPPLYING FACTS.

Where the "case" on appeal did not show whether defendants during the trial had called attention of the trial judge to alleged misconduct of the jury, on which ground defendants based a motion for a new trial, such fact could not be proved by affidavit, but could only be shown by remanding the "case" to the trial court for amendment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2865, 2866; Dec. Dig. § 670.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Barnwell County; R. E. Copes, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by H. C. Huggins against Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company and another. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant railroad company appeals. Affirmed.

P. A. Willcox, of Florence, Harley & Best, of Barnwell, and L. W. Mclemore, of Sumter, for appellant. R. C. Holman and Bates & Simms, all of Barnwell, L. K. Sturkie, of Orangeburg, W. A. Holman, of Charleston, and Best & Cunningham, of Columbia, for respondent.

HYDRICK, J. This is an action for damages for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff, on October 21, 1909, while in the service of the defendant company as a locomotive engineer. He alleges that his injuries were caused by the negligent, willful, and wanton conduct of defendant in furnishing him an incompetent fireman, Peter Wilson by name, to assist him in the discharge of his duties as engineer; that said Wilson had the habit of tampering with the engine and moving the train without his authority and against his objection and protest, a fact which he had reported to the company several times, but, notwithstanding said reports and the company's knowledge that Wilson constantly and persistently interfered with the engine, contrary to his orders and the rules of the company, he was compelled to accept the assistance of said Wilson; that on the day he was injured, while he was in the caboose attached to his train, where he had the right to be, Wilson took charge of the engine and began to move the train; that, for the purpose of stopping him, as was his duty, he left the caboose, while the train was moving slowly, and got upon a flat car loaded with clinkers to signal him to stop, there being a number of cars between him and the engine; that when he gave him the signal to stop, instead of applying the service brakes, as he should have done, he applied the emergency brakes, and stopped the train so suddenly and violently that he was thrown to the ground under the car and injured.

The answer was a general denial and the plea of contributory negligence on the part of plaintiff in allowing Wilson to operate the engine, instead of doing so himself, and in unnecessarily exposing himself to danger by going upon the flat car to give the signal, when he could have done so with safety from the ground. There were nine specifications of contributory negligence, but the foregoing general statement substantially covers them all, in so far as they were sustained by evidence and relied upon in argument.

Plaintiff's testimony and that of his witness Miller tended to prove his allegations as to Wilson's persistence in disobeying the orders of the engineer and the rules of the company in moving the engine, and that it had been frequently reported to Charles Sykes, defendant's foreman, who had charge of that department of labor. They testified that, before going out on his last trip, plaintiff objected to taking Wilson as his fireman, saying to the foreman, "If you don't remove this man, he is either going to cause me to hurt somebody, or he will tear me up"; that the foreman told him to take Wilson on and that he would give him another fireman on the next trip.

Upon the issues as to Wilson's unfitness for the reason alleged, and as to the fact thereof having been reported to Sykes, the foreman, there was sharp conflict in the testimony. Only the plaintiff and his witness Miller testified to the affirmative of these issues, while some five or six engineers, the conductor of plaintiff's train, and others testified that Wilson was a good and obedient fireman; and the foreman denied that any report of the alleged objection to Wilson as a fireman had ever been made to him, saying that, if such report had been made, he would not have kept him in the service two minutes. He admitted, however, that plaintiff had complained of Wilson's inability to keep the engine hot.

Plaintiff testified that he got upon the flat car to signal Wilson to stop, and that he sat down on the corner of the car to make himself safe, and gave the signal; that his position was a safe one, if the train had not been stopped so suddenly and violently. On the other hand, defendant's testimony tended to show that Wilson was not running the train in disobedience of plaintiff's orders, but at his special request, and that the signal which caused him to put on the emergency brakes was given by Robert White, a brakeman.

Upon the close of all the testimony, the company moved for a directed verdict on the following grounds: "First. There is no proof of negligence upon which the plaintiff can recover. Second. There is no proof of willfulness upon which the plaintiff can recover. Third. The entire testimony shows that the accident and resulting injury to plaintiff was caused or contributed to by plaintiff's own negligence. Fourth. The entire proof shows that the accident and resulting injury to plaintiff were due to acts of omission of a fellow servant or fellow servants." The motion was refused, and, after hearing the arguments and the judge's charge, the jury rendered a verdict for plaintiff for $40,000. From judgment thereon, the company appealed.

[1] The foregoing statement of the issues and evidence shows that there was no error in refusing the motion to direct the verdict. It would be a useless consumption of time to enter upon any lengthy consideration of the law and the evidence to show the correctness of our conclusion that, under the decisions of this court, there was testimony which compelled the submission to the jury of all the issues raised by the pleadings. In deference, however, to the very earnest argument of the learned counsel for appellant, we notice the points which they have specially pressed upon the attention of the court. The first of these is that, upon consideration of all the testimony in the case, the issue of punitive damages should not have been sent to the jury. The specific point urged in this connection is that, assuming the truth of plaintiff's testimony as to Wilson's unfitness and his report thereof to Sykes, the latter's conduct in retaining Wilson in the service must be judged in the light of the testimony of the five or six engineers and others who testified as to Wilson's fitness and efficiency. That argument would be of great force, if we had jurisdiction to decide questions of fact; but we are only permitted to say whether there was any evidence from which a reasonable juror could have inferred a reckless or conscious disregard of plaintiff's right to a competent fireman to assist him and of defendant's duty to furnish him such an one. It must not be forgotten, however, that Sykes does not attempt to excuse his keeping Wilson in the service on the ground suggested, to wit, that he had investigated the charge and found it untrue. On the contrary, he testified that no such report had been made to him; but that, if it had been, it would have been his duty to investigate it, and, if found to be true, to take Wilson out of the service. He also testified that, if such report had been made, Wilson would not have been left in the service two minutes. Assuming, then, as we must, that the report was made and that it was true, and that, against plaintiff's objection and protest, he was ordered to take Wilson out with him as fireman, and that he did so, under promise of being given another on his next trip, it certainly cannot be said that this testimony would not support a reasonable inference of a reckless or conscious neglect of the duty to furnish plaintiff with a reasonably suitable and competent fireman.

[2] The next contention which we notice is that the only rational conclusion which can be drawn from all the evidence is that the signal which caused the emergency brakes to be put on was given by Robert White, a brakeman, for whose negligence, being a fellow servant of plaintiff, defendant is not liable. Here, again, counsel have overlooked a conflict in the evidence. While defendant's testimony does tend strongly to support that conclusion, the plaintiff and his witness Miller both testified that the plaintiff himself gave the signal to stop, and, in response to that signal, the emergency brakes were applied. Therefore it was a disputed question of fact whether the emergency brakes were applied on the signal from the plaintiff or on that given by the brakeman.

What has just been said disposes of the following assignment of error: That having charged the jury that plaintiff could not recover, if his injury was caused by the negligence of any other member of the crew than the fireman, and plaintiff having testified and all the evidence having shown that the injury was caused by the application of the emergency brakes on the signal from the brakeman, the court erred in refusing the motion for a new trial.

[3] Appellant complains because the court admitted testimony of specific instances, other than that alleged in the complaint, of Wilson's meddling with the engine. The ground of objection to this evidence was: "There is no allegation like that in the complaint." Turning to the complaint, we find the following general allegation: "Wilson had a habit of tampering with the engine * * * and of moving the train without authority * * * and had been doing such unauthorized acts long prior to the date above mentioned." The testimony was admissible under this general allegation. The ground now taken that evidence of specific instances of meddling with the engine was inadmissible, because notice thereof was not brought home to the company, cannot be considered, because that ground of objection was not made on circuit.

Upon the same principle, the exception which assigns error in allowing plaintiff to testify that other employes had complained to foreman Sykes of Wilson's incompetency must be overruled. The ground of objection was that there was no allegation like that in the complaint. But the testimony was admissible under the general allegation that defendant knew of Wilson's unfitness, and that the same had been repeatedly reported to its officers.

[4] Appellant's next complaint is that the judges charged the jury that the burden was upon the defendants to establish every material allegation of the defense of contributory negligence; the contention being that, as there were nine specifications of contributory negligence, the charge required the proof of each and every one of them, whereas the proof of one was enough to defeat a recovery. Examination of the charge shows that the same burden was placed upon the plaintiff—that he must prove every material allegation of his complaint, which, as a general statement of the law, is not incorrect. But it also appears from the charge that the jury were specially instructed, three or four times, that plaintiff could not recover, if he was guilty of negligence "in any one or more of the particulars" specified in the answer. From this, we are satisfied that the jury were not misled by the general statement complained of.

[5] At the conclusion of the arguments to the jury, plaintiff's attorneys announced that they would not ask a verdict for punitive damages. In response to this announcement, the judge charged that the jury must exclude punitive damages from their consideration. Appellant contends that it was error to allow plaintiff's attorneys to withdraw his claim for punitive damages after he had had the benefit of it throughout the trial and in the argument to the jury. The record fails to show that appellant interposed any objection in the court below, or that the court made any ruling, upon which this exception can be based. So far as the record shows, it may be inferred that the course adopted by plaintiff's attorneys was acquiesced in by defendant's attorneys. But passing by this defect in the record, we fail to see wherein appellant was prejudiced. If there had been no testimony upon which punitive damages could have been recovered, appellant's contention would be sound, because the jury were instructed that contributory negligence is no defense to a reckless or wilful tort. Therefore, in the absence of any such testimony, respondent could not have sustained the verdict on the ground that, under the instructions of the court, no punitive damages had been awarded, because, although the court might assume that the jury had obeyed the instruction and had not awarded any punitive damages, still the question would be left open, with no way of finding out whether the jury had denied to the defendant the benefit of the plea of contributory negligence on the ground that the injury was inflicted recklessly, wilfully, or wantonly. But as there was testimony to support such a finding, the withdrawal of the claim was favorable rather than prejudicial to defendant. We see no reason why a plaintiff should not be allowed to prove that a tort was recklessly, wilfully, wantonly, or maliciously inflicted merely for the purpose of defeating the defense of contributory negligence.

[6] When the jury were impaneled, the court ordered the sheriff to take charge of them and keep them together. On the first day of the trial, when the court had adjourned for dinner, and after the judge and most of those in attendance had retired from the courtroom, and while the plaintiff, his wife, and a few others remained, the sheriff also being present, several of the jurors went to where the plaintiff was sitting and shook hands with him and talked with him. One of them either picked up a cigar from the floor and handed it to him or gave him a cigar and struck a match and assisted him to light it. This was observed by two of defendants' attorneys from the opposite side of the room. They called the sheriff's attention to what was going on and admonished him that it was in violation of the court's order. Whereupon the sheriff sent the jury to their rooms until plaintiff was removed from the courtroom. During the dinner hour of the next day, being the day on which the verdict was rendered and prior to the rendition thereof, one of the jurors was seen by one of defendants' attorneys on the public square, near the courthouse, talking to another person, who was not a member of the panel. He had been allowed to separate from the panel and speak to this person without being accompanied by a bailiff. Neither incident was brought to the attention of the court until after the verdict was rendered, when defendant's attorneys presented affidavits, setting forth the fact above stated as a basis of one of their grounds for a new trial. Plaintiff's attorneys objected to the consideration of the affidavits, because they had not been served upon them four days before the hearing of the motion. They have given the proper notice that they would ask this court to sustain the judgment, if necessary, upon the ground that the circuit court should not have heard the affidavits for the reason stated. There is no statute or rule of court which requires the service upon opposing counsel of the affidavits touching such matters four days before the hearing. The circumstances might require a much shorter time. Suppose, for instance, that such an irregularity should occur in the trial of a case only a few hours before the court has to adjourn for the term by operation of law; in that event, it must be brought to the attention of the court on short notice or not at all. There was no error in hearing the affidavits.

[7] Nor was there error in overruling the motion. While the conduct of the jurors was in violation of the court's order, and they and the sheriff, or his bailiffs, who had charge of them, were reprehensible for doing and permitting it, and while they should have been reprimanded or dealt with more severely, if their conduct was willful, still the appellant waived its right to take advantage of it by failing to bring it to the attention of the court more promptly after it was observed. Parties will not be allowed to speculate on chances by withholding information of such irregularities until after verdict found, and then bring them forward or not as they may make for or against them. If either incident had been brought to the attention of the court at the first opportunity, to wit, upon the reassembling of the court in the afternoon, it might have been investigated, and, according to the result of the investigation, in the exercise of its discretion, the court might have ordered the trial to proceed, after proper caution and instruction to the jury; or it might have withdrawn the case from that jury and impaneled another; or it might have withdrawn it, and continued it to the next term as the circumstances would have permitted or required. The disposition of complaints of such irregularities must necessarily be left to the judgment and discretion of the presiding judge, who, being in the atmosphere of the trial, is in much better position than this court to determine whether, all things considered, they have resulted in injury or prejudice to the party complaining. Therefore this court will not interfere with the decision in such matters, unless it is made to appear clearly that it was erroneous and prejudicial.

[8] Much has been said by counsel for appellant about the size of the verdict in this case. Unquestionably, it is a very large verdict. But if a verdict which is only moderately excessive is allowed to stand, the trial judge is alone responsible; for he alone is vested with power and discretion to set it aside, absolutely or conditionally. This court has no power to do so, unless, as was said in Bing v. Railroad Co., 86 S. C. 530, 68 S. E. 645, it is so excessive as to warrant the conclusion that the circuit judge abused his discretion in refusing to grant relief against it. In that event, this court would have the power to set it aside, because a verdict which is so excessive as to warrant the inference that it is the result of caprice, passion, prejudice, or other considerations not found in the evidence, is without authority of law, and it would be manifest error of law to refuse to vacate it. To allow such a verdict to stand would be a just reproach upon the administration of justice.

[9] But in considering the size of the verdict, we must not overlook the fact that plaintiff's injury was severe and his consequent damages were great. At the date of his injury, he was a young man in good health, 35 years old, with a wife and children dependent upon him for their support, and he was earning from $150 to $200 a month. Now he is totally and permanently disabled, not even able to turn himself in bed without assistance, and, according to the evidence, he is doomed for the balance of his life to suffer pain of body and necessarily, also, that anguish of mind which is consequent upon his physical suffering and the contemplation of his helpless and hopeless condition.

Affirmed.

GARY, C. J., and WATTS and FRASER, JJ., concur.

On Rehearing.

HYDRICK, J. Upon the filing of the petition for rehearing, in deference to the earnest request of counsel for appellant, we carefully re-examined the record and the arguments of counsel in the light of the allegations of the petition and the argument in support thereof. But we have not discovered that any material fact or principle of law was overlooked or disregarded in the original consideration of the case.

The third paragraph of the petition is as follows: "With reference to exceptions 13 and 14, petitioner desires to present to the attention of the court one fact which the decision in the case has brought forward, and which possibly has not heretofore been noticed in the important bearing which it now occupies. In passing upon the question of the improper conduct of the jurors, the court says: 'Neither incident was brought to the attention of the court until after the verdict was rendered, when defendant's attorneys presented affidavits setting forth the facts above stated, as the basis of one of their grounds for a new trial.' The fact is that immediately following the incident observed in the courtroom, as soon as counsel for your petitioner could gain access to his honor, the circuit judge, the facts were laid before him; no time was lost, but he was fully apprised of the situation before the reassembling of the court in the afternoon, and we wish to impress upon this court, the fact that there was no attempt on the part of counsel for your petitioner to speculate by withholding information which it was believed the circuit judge should be supplied with. It seems now unfortunate that the record does not show this fact. So far as counsel for your petitioner can recall, no contention has been made in the case by opposing counsel that this was not done, and certainly could not have been made before the circuit judge, or, if made, have affected his mind, because he was well aware of the fact that the matter had been brought to his attention. This case is not of ordinary concern; it is of the most vital moment, and in the judgment of petitioner's counsel one in which the verdict was clearly the result of undue sympathy on the part of the jury. The verdict does not represent a dispassionate assessment of damages. Therefore, in considering the present question, it is vital for this court to take into consideration every incident that might have bearing on the verdict. As we have already stressed in the argument before this court and in our printed brief, it was obviously impossible for your petitioner's counsel to produce evidence of the nature of the communication with the jurors. And more important still, notice should be taken of the fact that plaintiff could have explained the transaction, or the court could have inquired into it. Nothing was done, and the fact stands of improper conduct and the violation of an order of the court. We therefore earnestly beg that the court will, if necessary, give to your petitioner the benefit of a further report from his honor, the circuit judge, so that the record in the cause may show the fact which this court now regards as vital—that the improper conduct on the part of the jury complained of was brought to the attention of the court. Under the circumstances appearing in this case, we feel impelled to urge upon the court petitioner's principal contention, which embodies every specific contention relied upon by the argument of the appeal; that is, that upon the whole case, where it appears that in the light most favorable to the plaintiff upon the issues involved there is barely a scintilla of evidence, this court should apply the most rigid test in measuring plaintiff's right to recover such a verdict as that rendered here, and should not hesitate to afford some relief from what must be apparent as a recovery palpably against the law applicable and the evidence adduced on the trial."

A short time after filing the petition, Mr. E. J. Best, one of plaintiff's attorneys, wrote each member of the court as follows: "Sirs: I am at a loss to know how to proceed in the case of H. C. Huggins, Plaintiff-Respondent, v. Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, Defendant-Appellant, now pending before your honorable court on a petition for a rehearing. The affidavit of Hon. R. El. Copes, presiding judge, shows the facts stated in paragraph 3 of the petition, to the effect that counsel for the defendant railroad company called to the attention of the trial judge the so-called or alleged misconduct of jurors, are absolutely false and untrue. Judge Copes states, in the form of affidavit, herewith inclosed, that he had no knowledge whatever, of any kind, that any alleged misconduct on the part of jurors had taken place, until his attention was called to the fact about a week after the trial had ended. If this be true then it is a matter, which I respectfully submit this honorable court should investigate upon its own motion and responsibility; such statements by practitioners of this honorable court should not go unnoticed. A palpable wrong and injustice can be done a successful litigant by petition for rehearing if all kind of ex parte statements are permitted to be made, which are calculated to influence the court. I am writing, as I stated, asking for suggestion as to the mode of procedure to be adopted under these extraordinary circumstances, and I will thank the court to confer in regard to what is the proper course for me to pursue under the circumstances. I am desirous of protecting the rights of my client to the fullest but do not desire to violate any rules of procedure or the practice which does and ought to obtain before your honorable court. Paragraph 3 of the petition for a rehearing is equivalent to presenting absolutely new evidence on the part of the railroad company by ex parte affidavits without the right of plaintiff-respondent or his attorneys to refute the same absolutely which can be done in the case under consideration."

In his affidavit, which accompanied Mr. Best's letter, Judge Copes said that the alleged misconduct of the jurors was not brought to his attention, privately or officially, until the hearing of the motion for a new trial, which was about a week after the rendition of the verdict. In reply to Mr. Best's letter, the court, through a letter of the Chief Justice, advised him that he should send a copy of the letter which he had addressed to the members of the court and a copy of the affidavit of Judge Copes to the attorneys for the appellant. Upon receipt of copies of this letter and affidavit, the attorneys for the appellant submitted affidavits of Mr. C. A. Best and Mr. Lucian W. McLemore to the effect that, as soon as they could get the opportunity to do so, after they had observed the conduct of the jurors in question, and before any other step was taken in the trial, at the suggestion of Mr. P. A. Wilcox, their senior associate, to whom they had reported the incident, they went to Judge Copes, in his private office, and told him what they had seen, as afterwards set out in their affidavits on the motion for a new trial; that the judge stated that he was glad they had done so, and that he would bear it in mind; that he did not suggest or require that it should be brought to his attention in open court. Mr. Wilcox, in his affidavit, affirms that they mentioned the incident to him, and that he advised them to inform the presiding judge of it privately, and suggest to him that, if he thought best, it would be brought to his attention in open court; that they went to the judge's private office, and, on returning, reported to him that they had carried out his instructions. Thereafter, in consequence of the letter of Mr. E. J. Best, Mr. Wilcox and his associates demanded an investigation of their conduct by this court.

These incidents have suggested the advisability of our calling attention to the practice and procedure in such matters, which has long prevailed and received the sanction of the bench and bar, and the importance of adhering to it, in order that ill-advised action on the part of members of the bar may be avoided in future.

[10] A petition for rehearing is ex parte. It has never been the practice to serve notice or the grounds thereof on opposing counsel. It is designed to give counsel the opportunity to bring to the attention of the court matters of law or of fact which counsel who file it think that the court has overlooked or disregarded in its consideration of the case. It is not intended that it shall be taken advantage of to reargue questions which were fully argued at the hearing and were considered and decided by the court.

[11] The grounds of the petition should therefore state, as concisely as possible, the matter of fact or principle of law which the court is supposed to have overlooked or disregarded. If counsel desire, they may submit argument in support of the grounds, but it should be separate and apart from the grounds themselves, and not incorporated in or commingled with them. The two should be kept as separate and distinct as the exceptions, or grounds of appeal, and the argument on appeal.

We have declared in numerous cases that we are bound by the "case," as prepared for the hearing of the appeal in this court, and that we will not consider, or allow to influence our decision, anything that counsel may say in argument, or otherwise, which is not based upon the "case." We do not consider statements found in the exceptions, unless they are supported by the facts stated in the "case." Of course, either side may rely upon anything which is fairly inferable from what is in the "case." In view of this frequently repeated declaration of the court, it was entirely useless, and not in accord with the proper practice, for counsel for appellant to assert in their petition that the alleged misconduct of the jurors had been brought to the attention of the circuit court, and the statement should not have been made, because it was admittedly not so stated in the "case," nor reasonably inferable from what was there stated.

The statutes and rules of court provide the manner in which the "case" shall be agreed upon or settled by the trial judge and prepared for the hearing of appeals in this court, and, when it has been so agreed upon or settled, all parties, including this court, are bound by it. Therefore it behooves counsel to exercise due care to see that it contains all that it should and nothing that it should not to sustain their various contentions. If, however, by accident, mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, anything should be omitted which should have been inserted, or vice versa, the proper course is to move this court, upon due notice and affidavits served upon opposing counsel, to recommit the "case" to the circuit court, for the purpose of having it corrected—a motion which this court has the discretion, in furtherance of justice, to grant, upon such terms as may seem just and proper. It follows that the affidavit of Judge Copes should not have been asked for or given, because it foreclosed his judicial attitude in relation to the matter, when circumstances might have required that the "case" be recommitted to him to settle the dispute between the parties upon the very point upon which he had given one of them an affidavit, without the attorneys on the other side having had an opportunity to refresh his recollection about the matter in dispute.

On the other hand, counsel for respondent should have known that, under the rule above stated, this court would pay no attention to the statement referred to, and therefore he violated correct practice in two respects: First, in addressing any communication to the members of the court upon the subject at all. Second, having done, so, in not sending a copy thereof to opposing counsel. As a rule, subject to but few exceptions, no communication should be had by counsel engaged in causes with judges touching matters pending before them, unless it be an ex parte proceeding, without the knowledge of opposing counsel. The incidents above narrated emphasize the importance of a strict adherence to this rule. If it had been observed, and counsel for the respondent had been invited to be present, when the alleged misconduct of the jurors was reported to the presiding judge, there would probably have been no dispute about it. We are not to be understood as holding that everything should be brought to the attention of the presiding judge in open court, because that course might result in prejudice to one side or the other. There was, therefore, no impropriety in reporting the incident in question to the judge in private, but opposing counsel should have been notified, and asked to be present, when it was done. But as respondent's counsel was not advised of what was done, and as it is not alleged in the petition that it was done in private and without his knowledge, he probably and naturally interpreted the allegation to mean that it was done in open court. This may explain, even if it does not fully excuse, his characterization of the allegation as "absolutely false and untrue." Possibly, if he had communicated with appellant's counsel and sought an explanation of the allegation, that which has been given would have appeared to be satisfactory. This leads us to remark that counsel should not be too quick to impugn the motives or the conduct of each other. Things are not always what they seem—especially when viewed in the fierce light of conflict and through glasses colored, perhaps, by personal and professional zeal and interest.

Being fully satisfied of the integrity of the counsel who have demanded an investigation of their conduct at the hands of this court, and being satisfied, also, that the unfortunate circumstance which gave rise to the demand grew out of a misunderstanding between counsel for appellant and respondent, no investigation is deemed necessary. We take pleasure in saying that we are quite sure that the departures from the strictly correct practice which we have pointed out on the part of counsel for both parties were due entirely to inadvertence, without any thought of impropriety, or intention to gain any unfair advantage.

The petition is dismissed, and the stay of remittitur heretofore granted revoked.

GARY, C. J., and WATTS and FRASER, JJ., concur.

HOLMES et ux. v. CARR et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Sept. 26, 1913.)

1. ACKNOWLEDGMENT (§ 20*)—AUTHORITY TO TAKE—DISQUALIFICATION OF OFFICER.

The probate of a deed was not invalid, because the justice of the peace before whom it was taken was the son of the grantee, and subsequently acquired an interest in the land by inheritance; he having no interest, vested or contingent, at the time of the conveyance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Acknowledgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 104-111; Dec. Dig. § 20.*]

2. ESTOPPEL (§ 35*)—BY DEED—AFTER-ACQUIRED TITLE.

Where the widow and only daughter of a decedent partitioned his lands between them, the daughter and her husband conveyed the part allotted to her, and the widow subsequently died intestate without having disposed of her interest, the daughter's grantee had title, whether the partition was valid or invalid, since the daughter, although married, was estopped by her deed, and the devolution of her mother's title on her by descent "fed the estoppel."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Estoppel, Cent. Dig. § 84; Dec. Dig. § 35.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Greene County; Allen, Judge.

Ejectment by Henry Holmes and wife against W. G. Carr and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

George M. Lindsay, of Snow Hill, for appellants. J. Paul Frizzelle, of Snow Hill, for appellees.

CLARK, C. J. [1] The plaintiffs except to the admission of a deed from them to T. W. Carr, the father of defendants, on the ground that the probate was improperly taken by W. G. Carr, the son of the said T. W. Carr, as justice of the peace. Said probate was taken by him in 1894, and at that time he had no interest in the property to which he succeeded, together with the other defendants, as heirs at law of their father, T. W. Carr, who died in 1903.

We have numerous decisions that an acknowledgment of a deed by the husband and wife, and privity examination of wife, taken before a justice of the peace, commissioner, or a notary, is a judicial, or at least a quasi judicial, act, and that a probate is void, if taken before one who has an interest in the conveyance. White v. Connelly, 105 N. C. 65, 11 S. E. 177; Long v. Crews, 113 N. C. 256, 18 S. E. 499; Land Co. v. Jennett, 128 N. C. 4, 37 S. E. 954. But this must be a pecuniary interest in the property conveyed. In Gregory v. Ellis, 82 N. C. 227, Dillard, J., says: "No judge, whether probate or other, could take jurisdiction of any cause wherein he was a party or otherwise had a pecuniary interest."

But in this case W. G. Carr, the justice of the peace, though he has since acquired an interest in the property by inheritance, at the time of the conveyance had no interest, either vested or contingent, in the property conveyed. His father might have sold it, or have devised it. The mere fact of his relationship to one of the parties to the conveyance does not affect the validity of the probate of the deed by him. In McAllister v. Purcell, 124 N. C. 262, 32 S. E. 715, this question was directly presented, and the court said: "There is no principle of law, nor precedent, which invalidates the acknowledgment and privy examination taken before an officer who has neither any interest in the instrument nor is a party thereto, simply because he is related to the parties."

[2] The land belonged to Richard Jones, who died in 1873, leaving Mahala Jones, his widow, and Sarah Holmes, the plaintiff, his daughter, who partitioned the land between them, and they went into possession of their respective shares. In 1894, while Mahala Jones was still living, Sarah Holmes and husband conveyed to T. W. Carr the part of which she was in possession—the land in controversy. Subsequently Mahala Jones died intestate, without having disposed of her land, leaving Sarah Holmes her sole heir. The question whether the partition was valid or not is immaterial. Sarah Holmes had no title to the interest, whether a divided or undivided interest, which Mahala Jones owned in the land at the time of the deed; yet Sarah Holmes, though a married woman, is estopped by her deed, and the subsequent devolution of her mother's title on her by descent "feeds the estoppel." Mordecai's Lectures, 785; Zimmerman v. Robinson, 114 N. C. 39, 19 S. E. 109.

The other exceptions require no discussion. No error.

BURNETT v. ATLANTIC COAST LINE R. CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Sept. 24, 1913.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 100*)—EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY ACT.

The acceptance of benefits from a relief department does not prevent a recovery of damages for negligence under the federal Employer's Liability Act of 1908 (Act April 22, 1908, c. 149, 35 Stat. 65 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1911, p. 1322]).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 166-170; Dec. Dig. § 100.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 87*)—EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY ACT.

Employer's Liability Act April 22, 1908, c. 149, 35 Stat. 65 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), creates no right that did not exist at common law, since the change of the law as to contributory negligence, assumption of risk, and negligence of a fellow servant only withdraws a defense, and does not create a new right.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 138; Dec. Dig. § 87.*]

3. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS (§ 182*)—PLEADING—EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY ACT.

Employer's Liability Act April 22, 1908, c. 149, § 6, 35 Stat. 66 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1911, p. 1324), providing that no action shall be maintained under the act unless commenced within two years, is a statute of limitation, and not a condition inherent in, or annexed to, the right of action declared by the act, and hence must be pleaded by defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, Cent. Dig. §§ 676-680, 682, 695, 705; Dec. Dig. § 182.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Edgecombe County; Cline, Judge.

Action by General Burnett against the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company. From a judgment in favor of defendant, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

This is an action to recover damages for personal injury caused by the negligence of the defendant, and the only defense relied on is that the plaintiff has since his injury accepted benefits from the relief department. No statute of limitations has been pleaded; but it is admitted that this action was commenced more than two years after the injury. It was further admitted that the complaint alleges a cause of action under the federal Employer's Liability Act, and that that act is applicable to this case; the point in controversy being whether section 6 of the act is a condition imposed upon the right of action or a statute of limitation.

The facts are set out in the judgment appealed from, except it is inadvertently stated therein that an issue of negligence was submitted to the jury, when the pleadings show that negligence was not denied, and the only controverted fact was the amount of damages.

The judgment is as follows:

"This cause came on originally to be heard before his honor, Geo. W. Ward, judge, and a jury, at the ——— term, 1911, of Edgecombe Superior Court. At that time the question of whether or not the plaintiff was injured by the negligence of the defendant, and, if so, the amount of damage sustained by him was submitted to the jury, and the jury found the issue of negligence in favor of the plaintiff, and fixed his damages at $1,000. No judgment was rendered upon the verdict; but by agreement the matter was left open to be further heard, and judgment signed at some subsequent term of court nunc pro tunc. The reason for deferring judgment (as stated to the judge rendering this judgment) was that at said former term one or more cases were pending in the Supreme Court of North Carolina, the decision of which would aid the lower court in a determination of the case at bar.

"The plaintiff Burnett insisted that, admitting the facts set out in the defendant's further answer, he was nevertheless entitled to judgment; the defendant insisting that, taking the facts stated therein to be true, it was entitled to judgment that it go hence without day, etc. Thereupon it was agreed that the facts set forth in the further answer by the defendant were true; but the conclusions of law therein were not admitted by the plaintiff. The plaintiff further contended that the contract called the relief department was invalid as matter of law, and Judge Ward made an entry on his notes of this admission and contention. It was further understood and agreed between the parties that the expression in paragraph 3 of the further answer, 'that the plaintiff did solemnly make and execute his said election, and did receive and accept under said regulations an aggregate sum of $97,' should only be taken as a statement of fact to mean that he did receive checks or drafts aggregating $97 from the relief fund, under the terms of his membership in said relief department, and cashed and used them.

"The cause was placed upon the motion docket at the March term, 1913, and came on to be heard before his honor, E. B. Cline, judge presiding, upon motion of both plaintiff and defendant for judgment in favor of each, respectively. It was agreed that, if the facts stated in the further answer in regard to the relief department, and the things done in connection therewith, or not done, by both parties were not a bar to recovery by plaintiff in this case, then the court was to render judgment in his favor for $1,000 and costs; but if they constituted a bar to a recovery by him, then the judgment was to be rendered in favor of the defendant.

"The court did not understand that the verdict of the jury was to determine the matter other than to find the negligent act and the amount of damages, if any were recoverable. Upon the argument before the undersigned, the plaintiff insisted upon the rendition of a judgment in his favor both under the acts of Congress as well as under the state law. The defendant insisted that the federal statutes were not applicable, and that it was entitled to judgment under the decision of King v. Railroad, 157 N. C. 44, 72 S. E. 801, and other decided cases.

"Treating the facts set forth in the further answer as true, except as qualified above, and which are made a part of this judgment as fully as though they were set forth herein, the court, upon consideration of federal statutes, the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Philadelphia, Baltimore & Washington R. R. Co. v. Schubert, 224 U. S. 603, 32 Sup. Ct. 589, 56 L. Ed. 911, and other cases, is of the opinion that they cannot aid the plaintiff to a recovery.

"As the court understands the application of the decision in King v. Railroad, supra, to this case, the plaintiff, under the facts appearing in the further answer, is estopped and precluded from a recovery against the defendant in this action.

"It is therefore considered and adjudged that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover, that he take nothing by his writ, and that the defendant go hence without day.

"E. B. Cline, Judge Presiding."

The plaintiff excepted and appealed.

G. M. T. Fountain & Son, of Tarboro, for appellant. F. S. Spruill, of Rocky Mount, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. [1] It is settled beyond controversy by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States that the acceptance of benefits from a relief department does not prevent a recovery of damages for negligence under the Employer's Liability Act of 1908 (Chicago R. R. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 31 Sup. Ct. 259, 55 L. Ed. 328; Railroad v. Schubert, 224 U. S. 603, 32 Sup. Ct. 589, 56 L. Ed. 911), and, as it is admitted that the act is applicable to this case, the only question presented by the appeal is the construction of section 6 thereof, which reads as follows: "That no action shall be maintained under this act unless commenced within two years from the day the cause of action accrued."

If this is a statute of limitation, the defendant cannot avail itself of its protection, because of its failure to plead the statute, which is required both under our Revisal, § 360, and under the general law (1 Wood on Limitations, § 7), and, on the other hand, if it is a condition inherent in and annexed to the right of action, the defendant was not required to plead it, and it would operate to defeat the plaintiff's action, which was commenced more than two years after the cause of action accrued.

The last principle is illustrated by the decisions in this state and elsewhere, under Lord Campbell's Act creating a right of action for wrongful death, and is the one invoked by the defendant.

It is true it has been generally held by the courts that, where a statute creates a right not known to the common law, and provides a remedy for its enforcement, and limits the time within which the remedy must be pursued, the remedy in such cases forms a part of the right, and, if not invoked within the time, both the remedy and the right are lost (Bear Lake Co. v. Garland, 164 U. S. 1, 17 Sup. Ct. 7, 41 L. Ed. 327; Negaubauer v. Railroad, 92 Minn. 184, 99 N. W. 620, 104 Am. St. Rep. 674, 2 Ann. Cas. 150; Rodman v. Railroad, 65 Kan. 645, 70 Pac. 642, 59 L. R. A. 706); but this view is not universally entertained, as it was held otherwise in Kaiser v. Kaiser, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 602, and the rule is at most a rule of construction adopted by the courts to aid in ascertaining the intent of the legislative body.

We must then examine the act of Congress, and, after considering its purpose, the subject with which it deals, the language used, and its effect, determine the legal operation of section 6. Again, we turn to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, and find that one purpose of Congress was to adopt a uniform rule operating alike on all employes of railroad companies engaged in interstate commerce, and that one of the effects of the statute is to supersede the laws of the states in so far as they cover the same field. Mondou v. Railroad, 223 U. S. 51, 53, 32 Sup. Ct. 169, 56 L. Ed. 327, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 44.

[2] The act includes within its terms all employes of railroad companies injured by negligence while employed in interstate commerce, and these may be divided into three or four classes for the purposes of this discussion.

In the first are those employes injured by the negligence of the company, when there is no assumption of risk, no contributory negligence, and no negligence of a fellow servant, and that there are such employes is exemplified by this record, from which it appears that the only fact in issue, or debated in this case, is the amount of damages.

The act of Congress creates no right in this class of employes that did not exist at common law, as they had the right before the act of Congress to maintain an action in the state courts, to recover damages for injuries caused by negligence, and the usual limitation upon the exercise of this right was three years.

In the next class are those employes, injured by the negligence of the company, who are guilty of contributory negligence. These are permitted to recover damages, which they could not do at common law; the act introducing the doctrine of comparative negligence, instead of that of contributory negligence.

The change in the law as to contributory negligence confers no right, and is operative only to withdraw from the company a defense theretofore existing, and the same may be said as to changes in the doctrine as to the negligence of a fellow servant, and of assumption of risk.

This seems to be the construction of the act adopted by the Circuit Court of Appeals in Garrett v. Railroad, 197 Fed. 715, 117 C. C. A. 109, in which the court says: "The damages allowed to the injured employes are but declaratory of rights existing at common law," and, if correct, it may well be questioned whether the rule of construction relied on by the defendant has any application; but, however this may be, the considerations suggested furnish reasons bearing upon the legal effect of section 6.

[3] The act supersedes the state law, and thereby deprives employes of a right of action existing at common law. It is entitled "The Employer's Liability Act," and was enacted for the benefit and protection of employes. It was designed to make it easier for employes to recover damages for injuries caused by negligence, and not to impose conditions destructive, not of the remedy, but of the right. If so, it seems to us more reasonable to conclude that in an act of this character, having in view the establishment and maintenance of the rights of the employe, under just restrictions, and considering the different classes of employes affected, it was the intent of Congress to limit the time within which an action could be commenced, and not to destroy the right.

The physical separation of the provision as to time from the section defining the right of action is also significant, and when considered in connection with the verbiage of section 6, which is peculiarly adapted to a statute of limitation, becomes, without other considerations, almost controlling.

The language of the section is strictly within the definition of a statute of limitation. Mr. Wood says in his work on Limitations (volume 1, § 1): "Statutes of limitations are such legislative enactments as prescribe the periods within which actions may be brought upon certain claims, or within which certain rights may be enforced. Statutes which provide that no action shall be brought, or right enforced, unless brought or enforced within a certain time, are statutes of limitation." And in Upton v. McLaughlin, 105 U. S. 640, 28 L. Ed. 1197, a statute in the following words was held to be a statute of limitation: "No suit, either at law or in equity, shall be maintainable in any court, between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an adverse interest, touching any property or rights of property transferable to or vested in such assignee unless brought within two years from the time when the cause of action accrued for or against such assignee."

The decisions of our court upon the provision as to time in the act conferring a right of action for wrongful death (Rev. § 59) in no wise conflicts with the position that section 6 of the Employer's Liability Act is a statute of limitation, because the act first referred to clearly confers a new right of action not existing at common law, the language used is not that ordinarily found in statutes of limitation, and the limitation as to time is a part of the section defining the right of action, and is made a part of it. The statute reads: "Whenever the death of a person is caused by a wrongful act, * * * the person or corporation * * * shall be liable to an action for damages to be brought within one year after such death."

The case of Dockery v. Hamlet, 162 N. C. —, 78 S. E. 13, is also called to our attention, in which it was held that the limitation of the time within which a claim against a county, city, or town could be presented was not a statute of limitation. The decision in that case was made upon the authority of Wharton v. Com'rs, 82 N. C. 14, and the court was not advertent to the fact that, when the Wharton Case was decided, the statute in question was a part of the chapter regulating county revenue, and that since then it has been made a part of the statute of limitation by express legislative act, and is now section 396, subsec. 1, of the Revisal.

The case of King v. Railroad, 157 N. C. 44, 72 S. E. 801, has no application, because it was decided under the principles of the common law, and this case is governed by the federal statute.

After full consideration, we are of opinion that the sixth section of the Employer's Liability Act is a statute of limitations, and that there is error.

The plaintiff is entitled to judgment upon the verdict for the amount of damages awarded, less $97 received by him from the relief department, which the statute says must be deducted.

Error.

BROWN, J., was not present and took no part in the decision of this case.

STATE v. RUFFIN.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Sept. 24, 1913.)

LARCENY (§ 15*)—PROPERTY SUBJECT OF LARCENY.

Where defendant broke open a letter intrusted to him to mail and abstracted money therefrom, he was guilty of "larceny."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Larceny, Cent. Dig. §§ 39-42; Dec. Dig. § 15.*

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 5, pp. 3991-4003.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Vance County; Cline, Judge.

James Ruffin was convicted of larceny, and he appeals. Affirmed.

The facts in evidence tended to show that on a certain Sunday night, 1913, Robert Royster had several letters written, and same were put in envelopes sealed and addressed to the respective parties; that one of these letters so inclosed and sealed was addressed to his father, Spot Royster, Vergilina, Va., and in that one said Robert had put $10 in bills. Next morning Robert gave these letters to Eugene Sandiford to mail, and Sandiford handed them to defendant for like purpose. There was further evidence tending to show that defendant, having opened the envelope and taken the money, resealed and mailed the letter at the post office in Henderson. The court charged the jury that if they should find beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant secured the letter from Sandiford for mailing and undertook to mail same at his request, that the money was then in it, and he broke open the letter and took it out and appropriated it to his own use, they would render a verdict of guilty; that the breaking of the letter was a sufficient taking within the proper definition of the crime. There was verdict of guilty, and from sentence to jail for eight months defendant excepted, assigning for error that on the facts in evidence defendant could not be convicted of larceny, having acquired possession by consent of owner or his bailee.

Thomas M. Pittman, of Henderson, for appellant. The Attorney General and T. H. Calvert, of Raleigh, for the State.

HOKE, J. (after stating the facts as above). At common law it was regarded as an essential feature of the crime of larceny that the party charged should have acquired possession of the property against the will of the owner and ordinarily with intent to steal at the time. The taking considered necessary to make out the offense involved the idea of a trespass on the possession of the owner either actual or constructive. The principle was held to include cases where possession was acquired from the owner animo furandi, by trick or fraudulent contrivance. State v. McRae, 111 N. C. 665, 16 S. E. 173; People v. Miller, 169 N. Y. 339, 62 N. E. 418, reported with instructive editorial note 88 Am. St. Rep. 546. And convictions were upheld when the party charged had only the custody of the property; the constructive possession remaining with the owner. Instances of this occurring when a servant or employé intrusted by the master with goods or money for a specific purpose, in breach of this purpose, appropriates same to his own use with felonious intent. State v. Jarvis, 63 N. C. 556.

There is high authority for the position that the conviction in the present case could very well be sustained on the ground that defendant had only the care or custody of the property and not the possession. Murphy v. People, 104 Ill. 528; Walker v. State, 9 Ga. App. 863, 72 S. E. 446. We are not called on to determine whether this view is in accord with our decisions more directly relevant to the question presented; the defendant not being the servant or employé of the prosecutor (State v. Copeland, 86 N. C. 692-695; State v. England, 53 N. C. 399, 80 Am. Dec. 334; State v. Martin, 34 N. C. 157), being of opinion that on the record the defendant has been properly convicted whether considered originally as bailee or only as custodian. It is the well-established principle that "a bailee who breaks bulk and appropriates the goods or a part of them to his own use with felonious intent is guilty of larceny." 18 A.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes 79 S.E.—27

& E. p. 479; Robinson v. State, 1 Cold. (Tenn.) 122, 78 Am. Dec. 487; State v. Fairclough, 29 Conn. 47, 76 Am. Dec. 590; Rex v. Jones, 32 Amer. Com. Law, p. 474; Reg. v. Jenkins, 38 Eng. Com. Law, p. 38. In Fairclough's Case, supra, citation is made from my Lord Coke as follows: "If a bale or pack of merchandise be delivered to carry to one at a certain place and he goeth away with the whole pack this is no felony, but if he open the pack and take anything out 'animo furandi,' this is larceny." 3 Coke's Ins. p. 417. In the Robinson Case, supra, the principle was applied where the prosecutor left his room and trunk unlocked in charge of defendant, who in prosecutor's absence opened the trunk and took money out of it with felonious intent. And again in Rex v. Jones, supra, to a case where defendant broke open a letter intrusted to him to mail and abstracted money from same, the very case we have here, and is recognized as the correct position in State v. England, supra, an authority to which we were referred by counsel. There is no error, and the judgment is affirmed.

No error.

COOPER et al. v. SEABOARD AIR LINE R. CO.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Sept. 24, 1913.)

1. TRIAL (§ 58*)—CONDUCT OF TRIAL—WITHDRAWAL OF EVIDENCE.

Where improper evidence is admitted, it is the duty of the trial court to withdraw it from the consideration of the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 187; Dec. Dig. § 58.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1053*) — REVIEW — HARMLESS ERROR.

Where evidence improperly admitted was withdrawn from the jury, it must be assumed that they heeded the admonitions of the court, and, in the absence of a showing that the admission was prejudicial, the error will be considered cured by the withdrawal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4178-4184; Dec. Dig. § 1053.*]

3. EVIDENCE (§ 548*)—COMPETENCY.

In a personal injury action, evidence by a medical expert that the muscles in the region of the stomach were rigid is competent as substantive evidence, being the result of a physical examination and the statement of a fact.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2346, 2365; Dec. Dig. § 548.*]

4. EVIDENCE (§ 548*)—OPINION EVIDENCE—EXPERT TESTIMONY.

The opinion of a medical expert based upon an examination and statements of the party injured was competent, when the examination was made solely to become a witness.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2346, 2365; Dec. Dig. § 548.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 206*) — RECEPTION OF EVIDENCE—RESTRICTION OF SCOPE.

Under rule 27 (140 N. C. 662, 66 S. E. 811), providing that it will not be ground of exception that evidence competent for some purpose but not for all is admitted unless the appellant asks that its purpose be restricted, an appellant cannot complain of the absence of such request that evidence competent in corroboration only was not so restricted.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1273, 1283-1289; Dec. Dig. § 206.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wayne County; Adams, Judge.

Action by Bessie Cooper and others against the Seaboard Air Line Railroad Company. From a judgment for plaintiff defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Murray Allen, of Raleigh, for appellant; Hayes & Bynum, of Pittsboro, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. [1] The principal evidence relied on is to the admission of certain evidence of Dr. Farthing, an expert in medicine, which was important to the plaintiff, which was withdrawn by the court, the consideration of the jury; the defendant contending that, although withdrawn, the jury, its impression upon the minds of the jurors remained and affected the verdict.

The authorities are all to the effect that it was not only within the power, but was the duty, of the judge to withdraw evidence, which he concluded had been improperly admitted (Gilbert v. Jones, 86 N. C. 225, 1 S. E. 225; Bridgers v. Dill, 97 N. C. 225, 1 S. E. 225; Wilson v. Manf. Co., 120 N. C. 95, 26 S. E. 629); and the rule is fully recognized in Parrott v. Railroad, 140 N. C. 547, 20 S. E. 432, relied on by the defendant, in Justice Brown, while discussing the withdrawal of evidence, says: "His honor drew the consideration of all of it from the jury in a very clear and distinct manner. In doing so, we do not think his honor exceeded his authority. When we say that the appellant has been really cured by such action, we will always order a new trial."

[2] We cannot see from the record that the defendant has been injured, and were to base a reversal upon the testimony of the defendant, we would be acting upon mere conjecture, unsupported by any evidence.

The qualifications of jurors prescribed by the statute are that they shall be of good moral character and of sufficient intelligence, "good and lawful men" of the Constitution, and, as the presumption is that the public officers entrusted with the duty to make up the jury lists have performed their duty, we must assume the contrary appears, that there is no man on the jury in this action who does not understand the direction of the court, and not to consider certain evidence, which would not honestly obey the instructions of the court.

The present Chief Justice said, in Wilson v. Manf. Co., 120 N. C. 95, 26 S. E. 629: "If the jury are to be deemed in-enough to obey his instructions in the charge, they must also be able to comprehend his instruction that certain evidence had been improperly admitted and is not to be considered by them."

The comments of Mr. Creasy on the jury system, in his work on the English Constitution, may be appropriately applied to our own juries. He says: "Juries are, of course, liable to error; and when they err, their blunders are made in public, and draw at least a full share of notice; but, on the other hand, we should remember the invaluable honesty and the almost invariable patience with which juries address themselves to their duty. No spectacle is more mark-worthy than that which our common-law courts continually offer of the unflagging attention and resolute determination to act fairly and do their best, which is shown by jurors, though wearied by the length of trials, which are frequently rendered more and more wearisome by needless cross-examinations and unduly prolix oratory. * * * Nor are the errors of judgment which juries fall into by any means so numerous as the impugnors of the system assert. The jury generally know what they are about much better than their critics do. 'Twelve men conversant with life, and practiced in those feelings which mark the common and necessary intercourse between man and man' are far more likely to discriminate correctly between lying and truth-telling tongues, between bad and good memories, and to come to a sound, common sense conclusion about disputed facts, than any single intellect is, especially if that single intellect has been 'narrowed though sharpened' by the practice of the profession of the law. * * * Each juror knows that it is not by him alone, but by him and his eleven fellow jurors conjointly, that the verdict is to be given. Each juror, therefore, knows that if any of the eleven differ from him in opinion at the end of the case, they must argue the matter out among them. Each juror, therefore, watches the entire progress of the trial with his reasoning faculties intent on every part of each litigant's case, and thus prepares himself for a full and fair discussion of the whole," and he quotes from the French philosopher, De Tocqueville, that: "The jury, and especially the civil jury, serves to imbue the minds of the citizens of a country with a part of the qualities and character of a judge; and this is the best mode of preparing them for freedom. It spreads amongst all classes a respect for the decisions of the law; it teaches them the practice of equitable dealing. Each man in judging his neighbor thinks that he may be also judged in his turn. This is in an especial manner true of the civil jury, for, although hardly any one fears lest he may become the object of a criminal prosecution, everybody may be engaged in a lawsuit. It teaches every man not to shrink from the responsibility attaching to his own acts; and this gives a manly character, without which there is no political virtue. It clothes every citizen with a kind of magisterial office; it makes all feel that they have duties to fulfill towards society, and that they take a part in its government; it forces men to occupy themselves with something else than their own affairs, and thus combats that individual selfishness, which is, as it were, the rust of the community."

[3] The evidence of Dr. Farthing, which was admitted and not withdrawn, that the muscles in the region of the stomach were rigid, was competent as substantive evidence, and in corroboration of the plaintiff, as the evidence was the result of a physical examination of the plaintiff and was the statement of a fact.

[4] There is authority for the position, taken by the defendant that the opinion of a medical expert, based upon an examination and statements of the party injured, are incompetent, when the examination is made for the purpose of becoming a witness for such party (Railroad v. Huntley, 38 Mich. 537, 81 Am. Rep. 321; Railroad v. Wiley, 134 Ky. 461, 121 S. W. 402); but these decisions have no application to the facts presented here, as it appears that all statements made to the doctor by the plaintiff, and his opinion thereon, were withdrawn from the jury.

[5] The defendant admits that the evidence of the father of the plaintiff was competent in corroboration of the plaintiff, but insists that it was not substantive evidence, and complains that his honor did not restrict the purpose for which it was introduced. There was no request to restrict the evidence, and the objection is met by rule 27 (140 N. C. 662, 66 S. E. viii): "Nor will it be ground of exception that evidence competent for some purposes, but not for all, is admitted generally, unless the appellant asks, at the time of admission, that its purpose shall be restricted."

Upon the whole record, we find no error.
No error.

STATE v. COBB.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Sept. 18, 1913.)

1. HOMICIDE (§ 282*)—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

Evidence in a prosecution for murder held to warrant the submission to the jury of the question of defendant's guilt.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. § 574; Dec. Dig. § 282.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 422*)—DECLARATIONS OF CODEFENDANT.

One of two defendants jointly on trial for murder cannot object that declarations of his codefendant admissible only against his code-

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes fendant, were made while in custody and under duress.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 984-988; Dec. Dig. § 422.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 673*)—EVIDENCE—DECLARATIONS OF CODEFENDANT.

While the declarations of one of two defendants jointly on trial for murder were admissible only as against the party making them, it was not error to admit them, when the jury were instructed that they were incompetent as to the other defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1597, 1872-1876; Dec. Dig. § 673.*]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1153*)—WITNESSES (§ 226*)—EXAMINATION—DISCRETION OF COURT—REVIEW.

The mode of the examination of witnesses is within the sound discretion of the trial court and is not reviewable on appeal except in cases of very gross abuse of such discretion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3061-3066; Dec. Dig. § 1153.* Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 792-797; Dec. Dig. § 226.*]

5. CRIMINAL LAW (§§ 633, 1152*)—TRIAL—CONDUCT OF TRIAL—DISCRETION OF COURT.

The mode of conducting the trial is in the discretion of the trial judge, and the exercise of discretion is not reviewable unless in case of abuse of discretion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1450, 1451, 1453, 1454, 1459, 3053-3057; Dec. Dig. §§ 633, 1152.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Halifax County; Lane, Judge.

R. W. Cobb was convicted of murder in the first degree, and he appeals. Affirmed.

R. C. Dunn, of Enfield, and Jos. P. Pippen, of Littleton, for appellant. T. W. Bickett, Atty. Gen., T. H. Calvert, Asst. Atty. Gen., and E. L. Travis, of Halifax, for the State.

BROWN, J. There are 60 exceptions in the case on appeal. We have examined each one of them and the entire record with that care which the importance of the case demands, but will not undertake to comment on them seriatim, as it would unduly lengthen this opinion, and would be threshing over again much "old straw."

The most important contention of defendant is that the court should have allowed his motion to nonsuit or direct a verdict of not guilty at conclusion of the evidence upon the ground that the evidence is insufficient to convict.

[1] The state's evidence tends to prove that the deceased was a merchant, living about 2 or 3 miles from Rosemary, and his store was situated about 100 yards from his dwelling. He was in the habit of closing the store about 10 o'clock at night on Saturdays, and carried the money with him from the store to the house. On the night of the homicide he left the store about 10 o'clock with his son, Shelton Shaw. It was a dark night, and they had just come out of the light of the store. When they reached the corner of the house porch, a man, who was sitting on the ground, stood up and said, "Hands up!" The deceased ordered him to get away, and the man then shot. The son of the deceased testified that he could not recognize the man, or tell whether it was a white or a black man, on account of the darkness of the night, but that he was wearing a cap and that he was of the height and size of the defendant. There was other testimony that the defendant usually wore a cap. There is testimony tending directly to prove the conversation of Cobb and Gurkins that they were planning to rob the deceased, and if necessary kill him; that they were to borrow bicycles so as to escape being trailed by hounds; that the agreement was made; and that Cobb said: "I will put a gun in his face, and we will get that kit. We will get on the bicycles and ride back to town. Damn sure thing; bloodhounds can't track a bicycle." The deceased was shot and killed after this on Saturday night, May 3d.

C. O. Byrd testified that on May 2d he saw Cobb sitting on the steps of the church, and that he engaged the witness in conversation. This witness testified: "He told me 'I saw a thing that looked good to me out in the country yesterday, and all it takes is nerve, and what it takes to get it, I got it.' I said, 'Yes, and you will get got, too.' He said, 'Why, can't you get a job?' I said, 'Yes, I have several jobs here to finish and cannot save any money in Norfolk.' He said, 'I am going Sunday morning, if things have come out as I have planned.'" There is evidence that defendant borrowed two bicycles on the evening of the homicide, and that the bicycle track leading from scene of homicide had eight ridges in the tires, corresponding exactly with the wheel defendant borrowed the same evening from Clyde Taylor. There was evidence of successful trailing with hounds and evidence that the shoe tracks leading from the scene of the homicide were carefully measured and corresponded exactly with those of defendant. Then there is the evidence of Gurkins, and much circumstantial evidence tending strongly to establish defendant's guilt, which it is unnecessary to set out. The whole evidence taken together well warranted his honor in denying defendant's motion, and in submitting the question of his guilt to the jury.

[2] A dozen exceptions were taken to the admission of the declarations of Gurkins. It is first contended that these were made while Gurkins was in custody, and under circumstances tending to show that Gurkins made them under duress. This objection is open to Gurkins only, and cannot be made by this defendant. As Gurkins was acquitted, they are now irrelevant.

[3] It is contended that these declarations were incompetent as against Cobb, and should have been excluded. They were admitted while Gurkins was on trial, and were competent as against him. His honor very explicitly and repeatedly told the jury that Gurkins' declarations were competent against him only, and cautioned them not to let them weigh against Cobb. We think his honor's directions fully complied with the rulings of this court. State v. Collins, 121 N. C. 667, 28 S. E. 520; State v. Brite, 73 N. C. 26.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[4] Eight exceptions also taken to the mode of examination of witnesses, leading questions, etc. This is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial court, and this court will not review it except in cases of a very gross abuse of such discretion. Bank v. Carr, 130 N. C. 481, 41 S. E. 876; Crenshaw v. Johnson, 120 N. C. 271, 26 S. E. 810.

[5] The defendant also complains that when the state rested its case, the solicitor, in the presence of the jury, requested the court to hold Henry Gurkins until the solicitor could send a bill charging him as accessory before and after the fact of the murder of Shaw. This was asked after the state had entered a verdict of "not guilty" as to the defendant Gurkins and had used him as a witness for the state. The request was granted, and the court ordered the sheriff to take Gurkins into custody. This exception is taken to the action of the court in allowing this to be done, and in ordering Gurkins into custody in the presence of the jury. The mode of conducting the trial is in the discretion of the trial judge, and the exercise of discretion is not reviewable unless it appears that there has been an abuse of the discretion. There is nothing in this record to show that there was an abuse of discretion or that the action of the court was prejudicial to the defendant. State v. Moore, 104 N. C. 743, 10 S. E. 183.

It appears to us from an examination of the voluminous record in this case that the defendant has had a fair trial, and that he has no just reason to complain of the rulings, or charge of the court.

No error.

BELL v. NORFOLK SOUTHERN R. CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Sept. 24, 1913.)

1. CARRIERS (§ 45*)—FAILURE TO FURNISH SHIPPING FACILITIES.

Revised 1908, § 2631a, making a railroad company liable to a penalty for its failure to furnish cars upon written demand of shipper, does not affect the common-law duty of the railroad to receive and transport freight tendered it within a reasonable time.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 120, 123-128; Dec. Dig. § 45.*]

2. CARRIERS (§ 44*)—CARRIAGE OF GOODS—REFUSAL TO FURNISH MEANS OF TRANSPORTATION.

Where piling had been delivered and placed by a shipper in the yards of a railroad company and two cars loaded, and the railroad company refused to transport the cars thus loaded or furnish cars for that in the yard which filled it, the shipper was not required to deliver other piling and place it on the highway in order to recover damages for the railroad's refusal to transport same.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 120-122, 230; Dec. Dig. § 44.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Currituck County; Long, Judge.

Action by C. B. Bell against the Norfolk Southern Railroad Company and others. From a judgment in favor of plaintiff, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

This action was brought originally against the receivers of the Norfolk & Southern Railway, and when the receivership was terminated the Norfolk Southern Railroad Company was made a party defendant. The properties of the Norfolk & Southern Railway were sold by the receivers, under an order of the Circuit Court of the United States, and the Norfolk Southern Railroad Company became the purchaser. The decree confirming the sale contains, among others, the following provisions:

"The purchaser or purchasers shall, as a part of the consideration of such sale, and in addition to the purchase price bid, take the property purchased (1) upon the express condition that the purchaser or purchasers, his or their successors or assigns, will pay for and classify all claims and demands heretofore filed under the order of reference heretofore entered herein on the 23d day of October, 1908, etc.; (2) subject to all pending contracts in respect to the property herein described, lawfully made by the receivers, which said contracts shall be assumed and performed by the purchaser or purchasers, his or their heirs and assigns; (3) and upon the express condition that such purchaser or purchasers, his or their successors and assigns, shall pay, satisfy, and discharge any indebtedness and obligations or liabilities which shall have been contracted or incurred by the receivers in respect thereto before the delivery of possession of the property sold."

"It is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that this court reserve the exclusive jurisdiction of this cause for the purpose of enforcing and executing the provisions of said decree of foreclosure and sale entered October 14, 1909, and for the purpose at all times of protecting said grantee, or grantees, their successors or assigns, in the enjoyment of the property, assets, and franchises purchased under the aforesaid decree of foreclosure and sale and to determine any and all controversies as to the character, extent, and validity of the possession of said grantee, or grantees, their successors or assigns, acquired through the execution of said decree and hereunder, and for the purpose of enforcing all the obligations and liabilities assumed by said grantee or grantees, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of the aforesaid decree of foreclosure and sale or any subsequent decree, including this decree."

The evidence on behalf of the plaintiff tends to show that plaintiff was the owner of a lot of piling, and about August 1, 1909, placed a portion of same upon the right of way of defendant at its regular station, at Shawboro, N. C., and applied to the agent of the defendant company for two cars on which to ship the piling; that the cars were put on the siding the next day, and plaintiff commenced on the 5th day of August to load the cars; that defendant's agent objected to the manner in which plaintiff's servants were loading the cars and proceeded to instruct them how to load, and that thereafter the plaintiff's servants followed strictly the instructions of the defendant's agent; that the defendant carried the two flat cars out on the switch, but never moved them from the depot, and refused to issue a bill of lading for the cars; that after this refusal plaintiff verbally applied for cars on which to load other piling which he had placed on the right of way and on the depot grounds and in the lane leading to the depot; that some of the piling was not moved out of the woods, some distance away, because plaintiff had placed on the station grounds and in the station lane as much of the piling as he could; that plaintiff notified the defendant's agent that he had contracted to deliver all this piling, that on the cars, that on and near the right of way, and that in the woods, to a party in Portsmouth, Va., in ten days, and that plaintiff would lose his sale and suffer great loss if cars were not furnished; that defendant refused to furnish any more cars; and that all the piling was damaged or destroyed and the plaintiff lost the sale of the same.

The evidence on the part of the defendant tends to show that the cars were loaded by the plaintiff in an improper manner and could not be moved without great danger to life and property; that plaintiff's attention was called to the fact that the cars were not loaded in the manner required by the rules of the company; and that plaintiff made no demand in writing for cars but his demands were all verbal.

The plaintiff asked for actual damages and for penalties to the amount of several hundred dollars for failure to furnish the cars, but the claim for penalties was abandoned by the plaintiff and only the action for damages was tried.

W. M. Bond, of Edenton, for appellants.
Ward & Grimes, of Washington, N. C., for appellee.

BROWN, J. (after stating the facts as above). The defendants assign 13 errors but these present only three questions: (1) Is the defendant the Norfolk Southern Railroad Company liable for the tort of the receivers? (2) Was it the duty of the defendants to furnish the cars on a verbal demand? (3)

Are the defendants liable for not furnishing cars for the shipment of the piling not actually placed on defendants' right of way? We are of opinion that each of these questions must be answered in the affirmative.

The first question is disposed of by our decision in Lassiter v. Norfolk Southern R. R. Co., 79 S. E. 264, at this term. In addition to what is so well said by the Chief Justice in the Lassiter Case, we think a fair interpretation of the decree of the Circuit Court of the United States is that the court did not intend to in any way interfere with the rights of parties guaranteed to them by the act of Congress. We deduce from the pleadings, the course of the trial, and the brief of the defendant that it does not contend that it is not liable if the receivers are liable, but that the said court is without jurisdiction to determine the liability of the receivers. We cannot for a moment assume that the Circuit Court of the United States intended to enter a decree so plainly violative of a federal statute.

[1] Second. The defendants invoked section 2634a of the Revisal of 1908 to sustain their contention that plaintiff cannot recover damages for failure to receive and ship the piling unless there was a written demand for the cars. But this section applies only to actions to recover penalties and was not intended to in any way relieve the railroad of its common-law duty to transport freight tendered it within a reasonable time. In speaking to this question in Meredith v. Railroad Co., 137 N. C. 480, 50 S. E. 2, Mr. Justice Conner says: "It is to be noted that the basis of this action is the alleged breach of the duty imposed by the common law upon carriers to safely carry and, within a reasonable time, deliver goods tendered them for that purpose. For failure to perform this duty the person injured has a cause of action in which he may recover such damages as he sustained within the reasonable contemplation of the parties to the contract. To this common-law duty the Legislature added a statutory duty, fixing, for that purpose, a definite time within which such duty should be performed, giving to the person injured an action for a fixed penalty." The act does not supersede or alter the duty of the company at common law. The penalty in the case provided for is superadded. The act merely enforces an admitted duty. Branch v. Railroad, 77 N. C. 347.

[2] Third. It is elementary that the law does not require a man to do a vain thing. The plaintiff loaded two cars which the defendants refused to move. He filled the depot yard and the station lane with piling and demanded cars upon which to load it, and the defendants refused to furnish them. He notified the defendants that he had more piling in the woods nearby ready to place for loading, and the defendants still refused to move that which had been loaded or to furnish cars for that which had been placed. Under these circumstances it would have been the acme of folly for plaintiff to have hauled the other piling and scattered it along the highway.

A case directly in point is Houston, E. & W. T. R. R. Co. v. Campbell, 91 Tex. 551, 45 S. W. 2, 43 L. R. A. 225. In that case the court says: "And it is insisted that the plaintiff did not even have the wood prepared for shipment in this case, and that therefore he cannot recover. There was but a small part of the wood ready for shipment at the time the cars were demanded which the defendant failed to furnish. But was the plaintiff bound to provide the wood with which to fulfill his contract with Keller, and to offer it at the depot for transportation, after the agents of defendant had refused to furnish cars for that purpose? We think not. A similar question arose in the case of Texas P. R. Co. v. Nicholson, 61 Tex. 491, and it was there held that a tender of the property was unnecessary where the proposed shipper had been informed in advance that it was not required and would not be accepted. That was a case of a breach of contract to ship at a certain time; but the principle is the same. The rule announced is a general one and applies to all offers and tenders. When the defendant knew that the transportation would not be furnished, he was not bound, in order to recover for the wrong done him, to prepare and offer the wood. As argued by his counsel, it was his duty to pursue that course best calculated to lessen the damage resulting from the wrong."

In Waugh v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Railway Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 131 S. W. 843, the plaintiff demanded cars for the shipment of logs. The railroad failed to furnish the cars and was held liable for special damages incurred by plaintiff in keeping team ready to haul and load the logs, and also for damages to logs that were worm-eaten. It appears from the facts in the above case that a part of the logs had not been hauled at all, but plaintiff had demanded cars and the company had promised to furnish them.

In Ethridge v. Central of Georgia R. R., 136 Ga. 677, 71 S. E. 1068, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 932, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 128, the court says: "It was not necessary that the plaintiff should haul and deposit on the right of way the wood he had cut in order for him to have a right of action because of the company's refusal to receive it. * * * The plaintiff alleged that he had hauled and deposited on the right of way of the defendant company a part of the wood he had cut and corded for the purpose of having it shipped by the defendant company. It would have been a useless expense to have deposited the rest of the wood on the right of way if the company would not receive it there." This case is on all fours with the facts in the case at bar and is a convincing authority.

Upon consideration of the whole case we are of opinion that the judgment of the superior court should be affirmed, and it is so ordered.

DAVENPORT et al. v. COMMISSIONERS OF PITT COUNTY.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1009*)—FINDINGS OF FACT IN EQUITY.

While findings of fact by the trial judge in injunction orders are not binding upon the appellate court, they are entitled to due weight and consideration.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3970-3978; Dec. Dig. § 1009.*]

2. BRIDGES (§ 7*)—ESTABLISHMENT OF BRIDGES—DISCRETION OF COUNTY COURT.

The establishment of a county bridge rests in the discretion of the county commissioners, and, in the absence of fraud or oppression, their discretion cannot be reviewed by the Supreme Court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bridges, Cent. Dig. §§ 9-13, 15, 16; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Pitt County; Allen, Judge.

Suit by J. R. Davenport and others against the Commissioners of Pitt County. From an order dissolving an injunction, plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

The trial court made the following findings of fact:

"(1) That the resolution in controversy was passed by the board of commissioners on November 14, 1912; it being an adjourned meeting from the regular meeting which was held on Monday, November 4, 1912.

"(2) That on the first Monday in December, 1912, there was a motion by plaintiffs to rescind the action of the commissioners in passing the resolution in controversy, and on said motion being made all action on said resolution was deferred.

"(3) That said commissioners in passing said resolution on November 14th acted in good faith and within the discretion vested in them by law.

"(4) That the defendants, the present board of commissioners of Pitt county, have acted in good faith and within the discretion vested in them by law in regard to the resolution in controversy.

"(5) That Boyd's Ferry is a public ferry, and the roads leading up to said ferry on the north and south side of said ferry are public roads.

"(6) That a bridge at Boyd's Ferry is a public necessity."

Albion Dunn and Harry Skinner, both of Greenville, for appellants. Julius Brown, F. G. James & Son, and Jarvis & Wooten, all of Greenville, for appellee.

BROWN, J. The object of this action is to enjoin the defendant from constructing a public bridge in lieu of a public ferry which has been operated for many years across Tar river at Boyd's Ferry, wholly within the county of Pitt.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

We have examined the affidavits printed in the record, and can find no evidence of fraud or corruption, or of a gross abuse of discretion, and we fully concur in the finding of his honor that the defendants have acted in good faith and within the discretion vested in them by law in regard to the wisdom and feasibility of erecting the bridge.

[1] While the findings of fact of the Judge of the superior court are not binding on us in injunction orders, we give them due weight and consideration, and we fully concur in those made in this case.

[2] In adopting the resolution to build the bridge, the defendants acted well within their legal powers. In the absence of fraud, or oppression, it is a matter within their sound discretion, and will not be reviewed by us. Glenn v. Commissioners, 139 N. C. 412, 52 S. E. 58; Brodnax v. Groom, 64 N. C. 245; 7 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 1009; 16 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 423.

In discussing the discretion of county commissioners in building bridges, in Brodnax v. Groom, 64 N. C. 250, Judge Pearson says: "In short, this court is not capable of controlling the exercise of power on the part of the General Assembly, or of the county authorities, and it cannot assume to do so, without putting itself in antagonism as well to the General Assembly, as to the county authorities, and erecting a despotism of five men, which is opposed to the fundamental principles of our government, and the usage of all times past."

The principle laid down in this often cited case has been consistently adhered to, and never departed from by this court where the act is clearly within the power of the county authorities and no fraud, corruption, or oppression is shown.

Affirmed, and action dismissed.

BARKER v. MASSACHUSETTS MUT. LIFE INS. CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 317*)—HEARSAY—STATEMENT OF PERSON SINCE DECEASED.

In an action upon policies of insurance, where the only defense was suicide, testimony of the insured's wife and beneficiary that some 8 or 10 months before his death he stated to her that he needed a pistol as deputy sheriff and was thinking of getting one, and a later conversation as to the need of a pistol to protect her in his absence, offered to rebut the theory of suicide, based on his purchase of a pistol on the day he was killed, were incompetent as hearsay.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1174-1192; Dec. Dig. § 317.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 122*)—RELEVANCY—RES GESTÆ—STATEMENTS BEFORE EVENT.

Such statements could throw no possible light upon the question whether insured had an intention of killing himself at the time he bought a pistol and were no part of the res gestæ.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 339-350; Dec. Dig. § 122.*]

3. EVIDENCE (§ 272*)—DECLARATIONS—DECLARATIONS AGAINST INTEREST.

Declarations against a party's interest are competent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1105-1107; Dec. Dig. § 272.*]

4. EVIDENCE (§ 271*)—DECLARATIONS—SELF-SERVING DECLARATIONS.

In an action on life policies, where the only defense was suicide, his statement to his wife 8 or 10 months before his death that he needed a pistol as deputy sheriff was incompetent as self-serving declarations, where they were not in corroboration of competent statements.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1068-1079, 1081-1104; Dec. Dig. § 271.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1050*)—HARMLESS ERROR—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

In an action on life policies, where the only defense was suicide, held, that the erroneous admission of irrelevant evidence, hearsay evidence, and self-serving declarations as to why deceased bought the pistol by which he was killed was injurious and prejudicial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1068, 1069, 4153-4157, 4166; Dec. Dig. § 1050.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Carteret County; Allen, Judge.

Action by Mamie W. Barker against the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company and another. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. New trial.

Gulon & Gulon, of New Bern, for appellants. A. D. Ward and T. D. Warren, both of New Bern, for appellee.

CLARK, C. J. This is an action by the widow of Joseph C. Barker on two policies issued by the defendants separately upon the life of her husband, in which she was named as beneficiary. The actions were brought separately, but by consent they were consolidated and tried as one; the same questions being presented. Indeed, the only matter at issue is the defense that the insured committed suicide.

[1] The plaintiff was allowed to testify that some 8 or 10 months before her husband's death he stated to her that he needed a pistol as deputy sheriff and was thinking of getting one, and she also gave a conversation on another occasion, later, between herself and husband, as to the need of a pistol to protect herself in his absence. The object of this testimony was of course to rebut the theory of suicide based upon the purchase of the pistol by him on the evening or afternoon of March 7, 1911; the evidence being uncontradicted that the insured was killed by that pistol, in his own hands, 6:30 the next morning. The controversy is as to whether such killing was intentional or accidental.

[2-4] The conversations testified to by the wife as having occurred "8 to 10 months previously" and at the other time were incompetent as hearsay. They could not possibly be a part of the res gestæ. The times were too remote for that purpose. Such conversations were not merely irrelevant but were calculated to prejudice the defense. That the assured had, or had not, an intention to buy a pistol for a legitimate purpose 8 or 10 months previously and on the other occasion referred to, two weeks before the death, could throw no possible light upon the question whether he had an intention to kill himself at the time he bought this pistol. Nor could hearsay evidence of his declarations to his wife in his own favor on those occasions be admissible. Declarations against the party's interests are competent but not self-serving statements, except in corroboration of competent statements.

Suppose the assured had not succeeded in the act and had been indicted therefor, could these declarations have been admitted in his favor? On the other hand, suppose he had been indicted for murder committed with that pistol (the killing of some one else than himself), could these declarations made to his wife weeks and months previously of his disposition to buy a pistol for a legitimate purpose, which purpose was not then executed, be admitted to rebut the presumption arising from the killing with a deadly weapon? Suppose, indeed, on such indictment for homicide the same question had arisen as here whether the shooting was intentional or accidental, would such previous statement by him of an unexecuted intention be competent in his defense? We think not. It follows, therefore, that they were incompetent when the question is whether the killing of himself was accidental or intentional.

[5] We are not disposed to grant a new trial for error in the admission or rejection of testimony unless we can see that it was prejudicial, but we think that the admission of this testimony must have been injurious to the defendants. It was introduced for that purpose.

There must be a new trial.

DANIEL v. DIXON et ux.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

1. CANCELLATION OF INSTRUMENTS (§ 59*)—RELIEF TO DEFENDANT—COMPENSATION FOR IMPROVEMENTS—AMOUNT.

Under Revisal 1906, § 652, providing that any defendant against whom a judgment shall be rendered for land may present a petition stating that he or those under whom he claims, while holding the premises under a color of title believed to be good, have made permanent improvements thereon, and praying that he may be allowed therefor "over and above the value of the use and occupation of such land," and that thereupon the court may impanel a jury to assess plaintiff's damages and the allowance to defendant for such improvements, where, in an action to set aside deeds, it was adjudged that plaintiff was entitled to recover rents and profits, it was error to render judgment against him for the value of the betterments as found by the jury without deducting the rents and profits.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Cancellation of Instruments, Cent. Dig. §§ 119-125; Dec. Dig. § 59.*]

2. CANCELLATION OF INSTRUMENTS (§ 59*)—COMPENSATION FOR IMPROVEMENTS—AMOUNT.

Under such section, in an action against a husband and wife to set aside deeds, where the wife was still a tenant in common with plaintiff after the setting aside of the deeds, it was error to render judgment against plaintiff for the full value of the betterments as found by the jury, as he should have been charged with only one-half thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Cancellation of Instruments, Cent. Dig. §§ 119-125; Dec. Dig. § 59.*]

3. PARTITION (§ 78*)—INCIDENTAL RELIEF—IMPROVEMENTS.

On a partition of land, the party making betterments is entitled to have the part improved by him allotted in his share, in which case he recovers nothing for the betterments.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Partition, Cent. Dig. §§ 211-223; Dec. Dig. § 78.*]

4. IMPROVEMENTS (§ 4*)—COMPENSATION—STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

Under Revisal 1905, § 652, providing that any defendant against whom a judgment shall be rendered for land may present a petition stating that he or those under whom he claims have made permanent improvements thereon, and praying that he may be allowed for the same, and that thereupon the court may impanel a jury to assess plaintiff's damages and the allowance to defendant for the improvements, the right to an allowance for betterments is not restricted to actions of ejectment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Improvements, Cent. Dig. §§ 4, 7-28; Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Pitt County; Allen, Judge.

Action by Sidney Daniel against E. S. Dixon and wife to set aside certain deeds. From a judgment against plaintiff for betterments, he appeals. Reversed.

Jullus Brown, of Greenville, and H. S. Ward, of Washington, N. C., for appellant. T. J. Jarvis and Harry Skinner, both of Greenville, for appellees.

CLARK, C. J. [1, 2] This was an action to set aside and annul certain deeds. There was verdict and judgment in favor of the plaintiff, and the judgment was affirmed in this case, 161 N. C. 377, 77 S. E. 305. The defendants then filed their petition, under Revisal, § 652, for betterments. The jury found that the defendants "had good reason to believe, and did believe, that at the time they were making improvements on the land that they had a good title thereto," and that "the premises had been enhanced in value at this time by reason of said improvements $700."

The only point presented is as to the correctness of the judgment. The court signed judgment against the plaintiff for $700 betterments without any deductions for rents and profits adjudged to the plaintiff in a former trial, which the law provides shall be deducted, and without regard to the fact that the plaintiff and the feme defendant are still tenants in common and that the feme defendant will get the benefit of the improvements equally with the plaintiff. To charge the plaintiff with the whole of the added value would be contrary to law and natural justice as well.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[3] Where there is a partition of property, the party making betterments is entitled to have the part improved by him allotted in his share, in which case he recovers nothing for the betterment which he has placed upon the property which has thus become his own. Pope v. Whitehead, 68 N. C. 191; Collett v. Henderson, 80 N. C. 337; Holt v. Couch, 125 N. C. 456, 34 S. E. 703, 74 Am. St. Rep. 648. But in the present case there is no partition, and one-half of the added value of $700 placed upon the whole property by reason of the betterments inures to the benefit of the defendants whose half interest in the property is increased $350, and they are entitled to recover from the plaintiff only the added value of $350 which by reason of the improvements will enhance the plaintiff's interest in the property. In putting $700 in added value on the property they have spent $350 for their own benefit and $350 for the benefit of the plaintiff.

There was a former judgment in this case at November term, 1912, which was affirmed (161 N. C. 877, 77 S. E. 305), which adjudged that the plaintiff was entitled to one-half interest in the land described in the pleadings charged, however, with the payment of one-half of $771.88, which the defendants had disbursed in paying off a mortgage on the property less one-half the rental value of the property while in the hands of the defendant; the jury having found the average rental value to be $150 per year.

The plaintiff tendered a judgment charging himself with one-half of said $771.88 with interest and for $350, one-half of said betterments, and charging the defendants with one-half of the rents and profits with interest. By this calculation the defendants would recover of the plaintiff $184.39. This calculation and adjustment is correct, and the court should have signed the judgment tendered by the plaintiff. The latest case on the subject of betterments is Whitfield v. Boyd, 158 N. C. 451, 74 S. E. 452, which was like this, a recovery of an undivided interest in land, and the court held that it was in effect a proceeding in ejectment and that betterments could be assessed.

[4] We cannot, however, agree with the contention of the plaintiff that betterments are only allowed, under the statute, in eject-ment. There is no such restriction therein. Indeed, if no petition for betterments had been filed, it is generally recognized that when tenants in common have partition they are entitled to lands on which they have made improvements assigned to them without credit for the improvements placed thereon. Pope v. Whitehead, 68 N. C. 191. This can be done when there is an actual partition; but when there is no partition, or there is a sale for partition, the added improvement goes to swell the value of the whole tract, and the defendants here can only recover, as above stated, their one-half of the betterment which was for the benefit of the plaintiff, deducting therefrom the balance due by them to the plaintiff in accordance with the judgment of November term, 1912.

The amount of rents set off against the claim for betterments does not exceed those accruing within three years before the beginning of this action. The other rents and profits were set off against the lien paid off by the defendants, and an adjustment decreed by the judgment of November term, 1912.

The judgment should be set aside, and a new judgment entered in the court below in accordance with this opinion.

Reversed.

ANDERSON v. HARRINGTON et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

1. TRUSTS (§§ 17, 18*)—DECLARATION OF TRUST—ORAL AGREEMENT—STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

The statute of frauds requiring that a sale of land must be evidenced by a memorandum signed by the party to be charged has no application to a declaration of trust as to land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Cent. Dig. §§ 15-24; Dec. Dig. §§ 17, 18.*]

2. TRUSTS (§ 35*)—CREATION—ORAL AGREEMENT.

It is not necessary that a trust be declared in any particular mode, and where money was loaned a purchaser of land to pay the price, and a deed taken in the lender's name under an oral agreement that when the loan should be repaid each would have a half interest in the land, a trust was thereby created in favor of the purchaser.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Cent. Dig. §§ 45-50; Dec. Dig. § 35.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Craven County; Allen, Judge.

Action by George F. Anderson against W. H. Harrington and another. From a judgment for plaintiff, the defendant named appeals. Affirmed.

This issue was submitted to the jury by the court: "Did the plaintiff and defendant contract and agree as alleged in section 1 of the complaint, and was the deed made to Harrington in accordance with said agreement? Answer: Yes."

Section 1 of the complaint is as follows: That prior to April 11, 1911, the plaintiff had bargained for the purchase of the tract of land herein referred to at the price of $450, and applied to the defendant W. H. Harrington for the money, whereupon it was agreed between the plaintiff and W. H. Harrington that plaintiff should buy the property and draw on the defendant W. H. Harrington for the purchase money, and then the plaintiff was to proceed with the cutting of the standing timber on the tract and sell the same and turn over the net proceeds to the defendant W. H. Harrington, until such payments had amounted to the purchase price, and that they would then sell the land and divide the proceeds then between them, share and share alike, or otherwise they would be equal owners in the land after the said W. H. Harrington had been paid the purchase money.

It is admitted in the answer that the deed to the land and timber was executed to defendant by A. J. Waters and wife on April 11, 1911. It is further admitted "that plaintiff made a draft on defendant W. H. Harrington for the said $450 with which to pay the grantor in the said deed, which draft was paid and honored by the said W. H. Harrington."

Upon these admissions and the finding of the jury, his honor adjudged "that W. H. Harrington be first paid the balance of the $450 purchase money, and the balance be equally divided between the plaintiff and defendant, that costs including this term be taxed against the defendant W. H. Harrington, that for purpose of division D. L. Ward and W. D. McIver be appointed commissioners to make sale of the land and timber according to law." The defendant excepted and appealed.

D. L. Ward, of New Bern, for appellant. W. D. McIver, of New Bern, for appellee.

BROWN, J. In the view we take of this case, it is unnecessary to consider each of the numerous assignments of error. In the briefs the action appears to be treated as one to settle a copartnership, whereas it is in reality an action to set up and establish a parcel trust in land. The defendant requested his honor to charge the jury: "There is no evidence in this case to sustain a recovery of an interest in land. In order to recover land, there must be some memorandum in writing signed by the party to be bound thereby." This is not an action for specific performance of a contract in the sale of land, but one to establish a trust. One of the four methods of creating a trust is by contract, based upon valuable consideration, to stand seised to the use of, or in trust for, another. Wood v. Cherry, 73 N. C. 115.

[1] It is so well settled in this state that the statute of frauds, requiring a memorandum in writing in respect to the sale of land to be signed by the party charged, does not apply to the declaration of trusts that it is a waste of time to discuss the question at this late day. Riggs v. Swann, 59 N. C. 118.

[2] At common law it was not necessary that a trust be declared in any particular mode. In England the statute requires that declarations of trust be evidenced and proved by some writing, but in this state there is no such requirement, and therefore the matter stands as at common law. Riggs v. Swann, 59 N. C. 118; Shelton v. Shelton, 58 N. C. 292. In view of this well-settled principle, it has been held that, where one person buys land under an agreement to do so and to hold it for another until he repays the purchase money, the purchaser becomes a trustee for the party for whom he purchases the land. Cobb v. Edwards, 117 N. C. 244, 23 S. E. 241; Holden v. Strickland, 116 N. C. 185, 21 S. E. 684; Owens v. Williams, 130 N. C. 165, 41 S. E. 93.

The jury have found the facts set out in section 1 of the complaint to be true. Those facts are sufficient to create a trust in the defendant for plaintiff's benefit, and it necessarily follows that the judgment pronounced by his honor is correct.

The motion to nonsuit was properly denied, as there is abundant evidence introduced by the plaintiff tending to establish the trust alleged in the complaint.

No error.

SHELTON et al. v. WHITE et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Sept. 24, 1913.)

1. DRAINS (§ 13*) — DRAINAGE DISTRICTS — RIGHT TO ESTABLISH.

The establishment of levee and drainage districts is a valid exercise of legislative power, based upon the police power, the right of eminent domain, and the taxing power.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Drains, Cent. Dig. § 4; Dec. Dig. § 13.*]

2. DRAINS (§ 14*) — DRAINAGE DISTRICTS — PROCEEDINGS FOR ESTABLISHMENT—APPEAL.

Under Laws 1909, c. 442, §§ 16, 17, providing for the hearing by the clerk of objections by landowners within a proposed drainage district, any landowner may appeal from his decision to the superior court upon the issue as to whether his land will be benefited, and have such issue passed upon by a jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Drains, Cent. Dig. §§ 5, 6; Dec. Dig. § 14.*]

3. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 31*)—DRAINAGE DISTRICTS—ESTABLISHMENT—APPEAL.

Under Laws 1909, c. 442, §§ 16, 17, relating to the formation of drainage districts, if, on appeal to the superior court by a landowner upon the issue as to whether his land will be benefited, the jury finds that his land will not be benefited, the land can, nevertheless, be so included, when necessary for construction purposes, under the right of eminent domain upon an allowance for damages.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 77; Dec. Dig. § 31.*]

4. DRAINS (§ 14*)—DRAINAGE DISTRICTS—PROCEDURE FOR ESTABLISHMENT—OBJECTIONS TO REPORT OF VIEWERS.

Where, upon the hearing of the final report of viewers, under Act 1909, § 9, relating to the formation of drainage districts, a majority of landowners and owners of three-fifths of the lands within the proposed district objected, the proceeding should have been dismissed, notwithstanding some of the objectors signed the original petition for the formation of the district, since the final report may have shown the facts as to cost and benefit of the district to be different from what they appeared to be when they signed the original petition.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Drains, Cent. Dig. §§ 5, 6; Dec. Dig. § 14.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Edgecombe County; Cline, Judge.

Proceedings by B. F. Shelton and others against J. A. White and others to establish a drainage district. Exceptions to the report of viewers were overruled, and, on appeal to the Superior Court, the judgment below was affirmed, and defendants' appeal Remanded.

E. Paul Kitchin, of Scotland Neck, and Manning & Kitchin, of Raleigh, for appellants. H. A. Gilliam and W. O. Howard, both of Tarboro, for appellees.

CLARK, C. J. This is a proceeding under General Drainage Law 1909, c. 442, as amended by Laws 1911, c. 67, to establish the "Deep Creek drainage district" in Edgecombe and Halifax. The original petition asked for the creation of a district, 19 miles long and 3 or 4 miles wide, on both sides of Deep Creek. The board of viewers, appointed by the preliminary decree, recommended a district about 10 miles long, cutting off both ends of the original proposition. The clerk ordered this modification and the establishment of the district as recommended. All the owners of the land in the district who had not signed the petition were notified, as required by the statute. Section 2. The clerk directed the engineer and viewers to make their survey and report with a map the plans, specifications, classification, and cost.

The board of viewers filed their report in accordance with this decree; the total estimated cost of the improvement being about $40,000, and the acreage 6,135 acres. On May 11, 1912, when the final report came on for hearing (section 16, c. 442, Laws 1909) before the clerk, 36 owners of land within the district filed exceptions, and asked that the district be not established, and that the proceedings be dismissed. Some of the objectors were signers of the original petition, alleging that the report showed that the cost would be practically double the original estimate and would exceed the benefit, and that the district was impracticable. They averred that the objectors owned three-fifths of the land in the proposed district. The clerk overruled all exceptions, and confirmed the final report. Exceptions were duly noted, and an appeal was taken to the superior court in term, as provided by the statute.

In the superior court his honor declined to submit any phase of the controversy to the jury. He heard the evidence, and confirmed the judgment of the clerk. It is provided by Laws 1911, c. 67, § 3, amending section 17, c. 442: "Such appeal shall be based and heard only upon the exceptions theretofore filed by the complaining party, either as to issues of law or fact, and no additional exception shall be considered by the court upon the hearing of the appeal."

[1] The authority of the Legislature to provide for the creation of "levees and drainage districts" is based upon the police power, the right of eminent domain, and the taxing power, and has been repeatedly sustained in this court. The act of 1909 was fully considered, and its constitutionality sustained by Hoke, J., in Sanderlin v. Luken, 162 N. C. 738, 68 S. E. 225, and has been followed in White v. Lane, 153 N. C. 14, 68 S. E. 895, Forehand v. Taylor, 155 N. C. 355, 71 S. E. 433, Mann v. Gibbs, 156 N. C. 44, 72 S. E. 82, Carter v. Com'rs (the "Mattamuskeet Lake" Case) 156 N. C. 183, 72 S. E. 380, Forest v. Railroad, 159 N. C. 547, 75 S. E. 798, Com'rs v. Webb, 160 N. C. 595, 76 S. E. 552, Caravan v. Com'rs, 161 N. C. 100, 76 S. E. 681, and In re Drainage District, 162 N. C. 127, 78 S. E. 14. Similar legislation thereto had been affirmed by this court on a former statute in many cases, among them Norfleet v. Cromwell, 70 N. C. 639, 16 Am. Rep. 787; Porter v. Armstrong, 154 N. C. 449, 46 S. E. 997; s. c., 139 N. C. 179, 51 S. E. 926; Adams v. Joyner, 147 N. C. 77, 60 S. E. 725; Staton v. Staton, 148 N. C. 490, 62 S. E. 596. Such legislation has been repeatedly held valid in the U. S. Supreme Court, as in Wurts v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 606, 5 Sup. Ct. 1086, 29 L. Ed. 229, Irrigation District v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 163, 17 Sup. Ct. 56, 41 L. Ed. 369, and in many other cases, as well as by numerous decisions in other states, many of which have been collected. 10 A. & E. (2d Ed.) 223; 14 Cyc. 1024, 1025.

The procedure in the formation of these districts, under Laws 1909, c. 442, may be thus summarized, leaving out details: A petition must be presented to the clerk, signed by a "majority of the resident landowners of the proposed drainage or levee district, or by the owners of three-fifths of all the land which shall be affected by or assessed for the expense of the proposed improvement." Thereupon notice is issued to all the other landowners in said district, and the clerk appoints a surveyor and two freeholders of the county, who shall make a survey, and report whether the proposed improvement is practicable and conducive to the general welfare of the district, whether it will be of benefit to the lands sought to be benefited, and whether all the lands benefited are included in the proposed district. They are required to file with this report a map of the proposed district, showing the location of the ditches, canals, or levees proposed, together with any other information bearing on their conclusion.

On the coming in of this report, if it is adverse to the formation of the district, and the clerk shall approve such finding, the petition is dismissed. If, however, they file a favorable report, and the clerk shall approve the same, he shall give notice of a further date to hear objections. If on such hearing he approves the report, he orders the formation of the district. It is then open to any one, whose land is included in the district, who shall object that he will not be benefited, and who asks that his land shall be excluded, to appeal, under section 8, upon the issue of fact whether his lands will be benefited or not. This issue can be tried by jury on appeal. It is not open to him to contest the practicability of the formation of the district, which is based upon the petition of the majority of the landowners, and approved by the report of the viewers and surveyor, and affirmed by the clerk. As a minority landowner, he cannot contest such action. His rights extend no further than to raise the issue of fact whether his own lands will be benefited. If, on appeal, the jury find against the appellant, the judgment of the clerk is, of course, affirmed. But should the jury find in his favor he is not entitled as of course to have his land excluded, because in some cases this may destroy the formation of the district, which has been ordered on the petition of the majority, and sustained by the report of the board of viewers and surveyor, and approved by the clerk. The judge, upon the finding of the issue of fact by the jury in favor of the appellant, can either order his land excluded from the proposed district, if that can be done without injuring the district, or he can order that such land be retained within the district for the purpose of giving a right of way for the proposed improvements over his lands, upon the payment of damages awarded by the verdict under the right of eminent domain. Laws 1911, c. 67, § 2.

[2, 3] Upon the preliminary order establishing the district, the court, under section 9 of the act of 1909, refers the report of the surveyor and viewers back to them "to make a complete survey, plans, and specifications for the drains, levees, or other improvements," and fixes a date for their report. This report shall contain detailed information, and be accompanied by a map, profile and estimate of cost, the assessment of damages, and the classification of lands according to benefits. When this final report is filed, notice shall be given by publication of a final hearing, at which date objections may be heard. The clerk may then approve or modify the report, or, if the costs of construction and damages prove to be greater than the resulting benefit that will accrue to the lands affected, he may dismiss the proceeding. If the clerk approve the proceeding, any objector, who contends that the benefit to him will be less than the cost and damages, may appeal, under sections 16 and 17, upon that issue, and have it passed upon by a jury in the superior court. It is not open to him to contest the formation of the district which is backed by the majority of the landowners. As a minority landowner, he can only raise the issue of fact whether he will be benefited or not. As in case of an appeal from the preliminary order, under section 8, if the jury find against the objector, the judgment is approved; but if the jury find in his favor, then the court will adjudge whether the lands of the objector can be excluded from the district without injury thereto. If this cannot be done, then the objector's lands will be retained in the district for the purpose of a right of way for the proposed improvements, and he will be allowed damages under the right of eminent domain, to be assessed by the jury at the same time that they pass upon the issue of fact.

On the appeal from the preliminary order, under section 8, it would not seem that any landowner who has signed the petition should be allowed, contrary to his averments in the petition, to object and appeal. But on the report at the final hearing it may well be that from the information afforded by such final report any one who signed the petition may find that, contrary to his previous opinion, the cost of the improvements and damages will amount to more than the benefits accruing, and he should then be entitled to ask that his land be omitted from the district, and for an issue of fact as to whether he will be benefited.

If the finding of the jury is that the lands of any objector will not be benefited by the proceeding, they can, nevertheless, be so included, under the right of eminent domain, upon an allowance for the damages, if the clerk or judge shall so order, or, as provided by Laws 1911, c. 67, § 2, the judge can permit the names of the owners of such lands to be withdrawn from the proceeding; but, if such lands are "so situated as necessarily to be located within the outer boundaries of such district, such fact will not prevent the establishment of the district, and said lands shall not be assessed for any drainage tax, but this shall not prevent the district from acquiring a right of way across such lands for constructing a canal or ditches or for any other necessary purpose authorized by law."

As to all other matters involved in the reports, such as classification of the lands, the assessments, the valuation of the benefit to the respective owners, the location of the ditches and levees, and other incidental matters, these are questions of fact to be determined by the report of the surveyor and board of viewers, and later on by the drainage commissioners, when appointed, subject to approval by the clerk, whose action in these respects can be reviewed on exceptions by appeal to the judge. These are questions of fact, and do not require the intervention of a jury. If they did, the delay and expense would render the system impossible.

After the final report and judgment thereon, the work of construction and administration, including the issuance of bonds, is committed to a board of drainage commissioners, who are appointed by the clerk upon election by the landowners, who in this manner control the execution and maintenance of the work. The drainage commissioners appoint a superintendent of construction.

While the finding of the jury in favor of the objectors as above stated will not entitle them to be excluded from the district, unless the judge is of opinion that they are not necessary to the formation of a district, on the other hand, the fact that a majority of the resident landowners or the owners of three-fifths of the land petition for the district is not sufficient to require its formation, unless the viewers shall make the findings required by section 3, and such findings are approved by the clerk, and on appeal by the judge, also.

[4] In the present case it is alleged that on the appeal, under sections 16 and 17, from the final order a majority of the resident landowners in the proposed district and the owners of three-fifths of the acreage therein objected. This fact is not found by the judge. The case must therefore be remanded to him. If the fact is as alleged, the proceeding should be dismissed, notwithstanding that some of the objectors signed the original petition, for upon the coming in of the final report they may ascertain that the facts are different both as to cost and benefit from what was understood when they signed the petition. But, if the fact is not so found, then the issue of fact raised by the exceptions of the objectors, under section 16, will be submitted to the jury. If that fact is found against the objectors, the judgment should be affirmed. If the fact is found for them, the judge shall then decide, nevertheless, whether the objectors shall be retained as necessary for the formation of the district, with damages, under the right of eminent domain, or shall be excluded.

Upon the facts of this case, each party will pay one-half the cost of appeal in this court. Remanded.

BROWN, J., was not present, and took no part in the decision of this case.

PARKER et al. v. JOHNSON (Supreme Court of North Carolina.
1913.)

DRAINS (§ 14*)—DRAINAGE DISTRICT PROCEEDINGS FOR ESTABLISHMENT—APPEAL.

Under Laws 1909, c. 442, relating to the formation of drainage districts, and for an appeal by any landowner to the court upon the issue as to whether he will be benefited, such issue was by the court properly submitted to a jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Dec. Dig. §§ 5, 6; Dec. Dig. § 14.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wayne County; Lane, Judge.

Action by Surry Parker and others, C. R. Johnson and others. From the judgment of the Superior Court on appeal of the defendants, finding against plaintiffs. Appeal. Affirmed.

Van B. Martin, of Plymouth, as appellee, vs. Bickett and T. H. Calvert, both of Wayne County, for appellants. A. O. Gaylord, of Wayne County, and A. D. MacLean and H. S. Warren, of Washington, N. C., for appellees.

CLARK, C. J. This is a proceeding under the General Drainage Law 1909, c. 442, which provides for the establishment of a "Conaby drainage district" in Wayne County. Substantially the same facts are presented that have been decided in Shelton v. White, 79 S. E. 2d 101, that case is decisive of this.

The record sent up is confusing. The proceedings do not appear in regular order. The defendants were brought in as required by section 2 of said law, and filed answers, denying that they were "benefited by the improvement, and that their lands be not included" in the proposed district. This defense was sustained by the clerk, and the defendants were excluded from the district. On the coming in of the final report, the defendants again excepted, under section 16, because "the cost of construction, with the amount of damages assessed, would be greater than the resulting benefit which would accrue to their lands." The court overruled these objections. Upon the coming in of the final report, the superior court at term time decided the issues of fact and law involved, as required by Laws 1911, c. 67, § 3, the judgment was affirmed. On the above issue with the defendants, the court thereupon rendered judgment, finding that they should be "excluded and enjoined from the creek drainage district from issuing bonds for the construction of the canal upon the lands of the defendants, and the plaintiffs except, on the ground that the judge should have passed upon the issue of fact and law, and should not have submitted the issue to the jury. In this, as already held in Shelton v. White, 79 S. E. 2d 101, his honor committed no error, notwithstanding the finding of the udge might have affirmed the ruling of the clerk, if the formation of the district required such action; the objectors recovering damages. But his honor adjudged otherwise, and directed the exclusion of the objectors. No error.

WESTON et al. v. JOHN L. ROPER LUMBER CO.

Supreme Court of North Carolina. Sept. 24, 1913.)

WAR (§ 29*) — CONFISCATION OF ENEMY'S LAND.

In 1744 the King of England, having bought out the other lords proprietors of Carolina, granted to one of such proprietors one degree southward from the Virginia line; such proprietor releasing his right to participate thenceforward in the government. Section 25 of the Declaration of Rights of 1776 vested the property of the soil in the collective body of the people, excepting only the titles or possessions of "individuals" holding or claiming under the laws theretofore in force or grants theretofore made by the king or the lords proprietors or any of them. The Confiscation Acts (Laws 1777 [2d Sess.] c. 17, and Laws 1779, [2d Sess.] c. 2) confiscated the lands of certain parties without naming the proprietor in question but were not enforced because in violation of the treaty of peace with Great Britain. The Entry Act (Laws 1777 [2d Sess.] c. 1) authorized the entry and grant of all lands which had not been granted by the crown of Great Britain or the lords proprietors of Carolina, or any of them, or which had accrued or should accrue to the state by treaty or conquest, but expressly withheld from entry and grant the lands confiscated. Held that, notwithstanding the release of his right to participate in the government, the lord proprietor in question held the land granted him in the capacity of a quasi sovereign and not as an individual, and his title like that of the king passed to the state government by right of conquest, and the lands to which he held title were subject to entry and grant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see War, Cent. Dig. §§ 186-205; Dec. Dig. § 29.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Pasquotank County; Long, Judge.

Action by C. P. Weston and another against the John L. Roper Lumber Company. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

W. B. Rodman, of Norfolk, Va., A. D. McLean, of Washington, N. C., W. M. Bond, of Edenton, and J. K. Wilson, of Elizabeth City, for appellant. Winston & Biggs, of Raleigh, Ward & Thompson and Meekins & Tillitt, all of Elizabeth City, and Charles Whedbee, of Hertford, for appellees.

CLARK, C. J. This case was here in 160 N. C. 263, 75 S. E. 800. The plaintiffs seek to recover a tract of 1,000 acres swamp land under mesne conveyances from a grant to John Cowper in 1788 and damages for trespass thereon. The question of title by adverse possession does not arise. The defendant admits that it has cut timber on the land in controversy as alleged in the complaint but denies that such cutting was wrongful or unlawful.

The defendant asked the court to submit an issue as to the true location. This contention hinges upon these words, "then running up the river to the head thereof." The plaintiffs contend that the "head of the river" is at a certain point, and that if their contention is correct the tract will contain 1,026 acres, and the outline of its boundaries will coincide almost precisely with the plot and description in the survey of the Cowper patent 125 years ago, in 1788. But that, if the "head of the river" is where the defendant contends the survey shows, there would be only 740 acres in the original grant, and that the outlines of the boundary will not correspond with said grant to Cowper. There was much evidence on this point, and the jury found in accordance with the contention of the plaintiff. We find no merit in the exceptions on this point, and we do not think it is necessary to consider in detail the other exceptions, most of which are in fact determined by the decision of this case (160 N. C. 263, 75 S. E. 800).

The real controversy now before us turns upon this point: "Were the lands of John, Lord Carteret, Earl of Granville, subject to entry and grant in July, 1788?" The plaintiffs claim under such grant and a complete chain of mesne conveyances to themselves. The defendant claims under a conveyance from the State Board of Education October, 24, 1904, to George W. Roper for 38,000 acres, including the locus in quo in consideration of $700. The plaintiffs contend that this is less than 2 cents per acre, and that the conveyance is therefore void because Rev. § 4049, provides that the "State Board of Education * * * shall not sell swamp lands at a price less than $.12½ per acre," and contend that at most this could be nothing more than a quitclaim or release of any interest the State Board might have in said tract. We need not, however, discuss this point if the grant to John Cowper in 1788 covered land which was then subject to entry and grant. The real controversy, therefore, turns upon the proposition whether the lands of Earl Granville were confiscated, which confiscation was rendered invalid by article 6 of the Treaty of Peace with Great Britain in 1783, or became the property of the state as a consequence of Independence.

On June 30, 1605, Charles II granted to the eight lords proprietors all the lands from the present Virginia state line to the thirty-first degree north latitude. In September, 1744, George II set apart to John, Lord Carteret, one degree of latitude southward from the Virginia line; the king having bought out the other seven lords proprietors. The southern line of Lord Granville's territory may still be traced in the southern boundary of the counties of Chatham (until the formation of Lee), Randolph, Davidson, Rowan, and Iredell. The Confiscation Act (chapter 17, Laws 1777 [2d Sess.] 24 State Records, 123, and Laws 1779 [2d Sess.] c. 2, 24 State Records, 263), which was passed during the Revolution and which was not enforced because in violation of the Treaty, named the parties whose lands were confiscated, and among these the name of Lord Carteret does not appear. The Entry Act (chapter 1, Laws 1777 [2d Sess.] 24 State Records, 43) expressly withheld those confiscated lands from entry and grant, and the confiscation, indeed, was never enforced. The act authorized the entry and grant of all lands "which have not been granted by the crown of Great Britain, or the lords proprietors of Carolina, or any of them, in fee, before the 4th day of July, 1776, or which have accrued or shall accrue to this state, by treaty or conquest."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

It is clear from the above language that the lands which were still held by Lord Granville on July 1, 1776, "had not been granted by him or any of the lords proprietors in fee, nor by the crown," and therefore those lands were subject to entry and grant. This was the contemporaneous construction put by the Legislature on section 25 of the Bill of Rights prefatory to the Constitution, adopted at Halifax in 1776. That section vested the property of the soil within the limits of the state, as there laid down, in the "collective body of the people," excepting only "the titles or possessions of individuals holding or claiming under the laws heretofore in force or grants heretofore made by King George III or his predecessors, or the late lords proprietors, or any of them." This is an explicit recognition that whatever titles George III or any of the lords proprietors retained in themselves ungranted at that date had passed to the sovereign people of this state, and by the subsequent act of 1777 above referred to all such lands, having become the property of the state, became the subject of entry and grant.

The point was directly presented to this court in Taylor v. Shufford, 11 N. C. 116, 15 Am. Dec. 512, and the court held: "The sovereign power cannot be estopped. Where the king in 1768 granted lands to A. which he had previously granted to Lord Granville, the grant to A. was void; and, as the state succeeded upon the Revolution to Lord Granville's right to the land, a grant made by the state since shall be preferred to the royal grant to A." It is true that, when the seven lords proprietors conveyed their interest to the king, Lord Granville, while retaining his one-eighth interest in the land, released his right to participate thenceforward in the government. But that did not change the fact that he held the land in the capacity of a quasi sovereign as lord proprietor under the patent of 1665 and as a co-owner with the king, though a partition was made in 1744, and not as an individual. He continued to make grants till 1776.

The contention that the Earl of Granville did not hold the land in this quasi sovereign capacity but that he was a mere individual grantee, and therefore that his rights were protected from confiscation by the Treaty of Peace of 1783, was presented by an action brought in the United States Court for North Carolina in 1802 in the case of Coventry v. State. The contention of the heirs of Earl of Granville was not sustained and they did not appeal, though they were represented by able counsel. The papers are still on file at Raleigh. Some years later Judge Gaston and Judge Duncan Cameron were employed to have the cause renewed, but upon full consideration this was not done. We must presume that those eminent lawyers were satisfied that the contention of their clients could not be maintained. Indeed, though Granville had released to the king his right to share in the government, there was nothing to show that he changed in any wise the quasi sovereign capacity in which he had held the lands. The title of the king as the grantee of seven lords proprietors was on exactly the same footing as the title of the one lord proprietor who retained his lands. All lands ungranted by the king or lords proprietors to individuals on July 1, 1776, became the property of the sovereign state of North Carolina without distinction. This matter has been so long settled that indeed it now possesses only an antiquarian interest. If it were possible to change it, it would affect the titles in at least half the counties of the state except for the protection afforded by the statute of limitations.

We, however, are fully of the opinion that the title of the Earl of Granville passed, like the title of the king, by the right of conquest, and that the new state government became vested of the ungranted lands of the earl in this part of its territory in exactly the same plight and condition that it became vested with the ungranted lands in the rest of the state; i. e., by conquest of the sovereign power.

It is scarcely necessary to discuss more fully this proposition. The other exceptions require no debate. The jury found that the boundaries of the land were, as contended for by the plaintiffs, assessed the damages at $637.50 and held that the damages were not barred by the statute of limitations.

No error.

SMITH v. ATLANTIC COAST LINE R. CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

1. CARRIERS (§ 228*) — CARRIAGE OF LIVE STOCK—CARRIER'S DUTIES—ORAL CONTRACT.

No receipt or bill of lading is necessary to establish a contract for the carriage of live stock, but such a contract may be shown by the fact that the carrier received the stock for shipment and was paid therefor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 957-960; Dec. Dig. § 228.*]

2. CARRIERS (§ 228*) — CARRIAGE OF LIVE STOCK—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.

Where there is no bill of lading containing a valuation clause in evidence in an action for damages to live stock during a shipment, the classification of the Interstate Commerce Commission, based on such a valuation clause, is immaterial and properly excluded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 957-960; Dec. Dig. § 228.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1033*)—HARMLESS ERROR—ERROR FAVORABLE TO APPELLANT—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

In an action for damages to a mule during shipment, where it was undisputed that the mule had its foot through a crack in the side of a car, testimony that there was no other crack in the side of the car large enough for a mule's foot to go through was favorable to the carrier.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4052-4062; Dec. Dig. § 1033.*]

4. CARRIERS (§ 228*) — CARRIAGE OF LIVE STOCK—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.

In such an action, testimony that the plank at the point where the mule's foot had gone through had been split off and that the break was an old one was competent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 957-960; Dec. Dig. § 228.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1050*) — HARMLESS ERROR — ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE — FACTS OTHERWISE ESTABLISHED.

No exception could be taken to the admission of the evidence if it were incompetent, since it appeared that the plaintiff gave the same testimony in another part of his examination without objection.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1068, 1069, 4153-4157, 4166; Dec. Dig. § 1050.*]

6. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1078*)—WAIVER OF ERROR—FAILURE TO ARGUE.

Errors which are assigned but not considered in the brief will be deemed to be abandoned.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4256-4261; Dec. Dig. § 1078.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Pitt County; Allen, Judge.

Action by R. L. Smith against the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company to recover damages for injury to a horse and a mule. Judgment for the plaintiff, and the defendant excepts and appeals. Affirmed.

This is an action to recover damages for injury to a horse and a mule, caused by the negligence of the defendant. The following verdict was returned by the jury: "(1) Was the mule mentioned in the complaint injured and killed by the negligence of the defendant? Answer: Yes. (2) If so, in what amount has the plaintiff been damaged thereby? Answer: $200. (3) Was the mare mentioned in the complaint injured by the negligence of the defendant? Answer: Yes. (4) If so, in what amount has the plaintiff been damaged thereby? Answer: $50. (5) Did the plaintiff file claims with the defendant for said injuries as set out in the complaint? Answer: Yes."

Harry Skinner, of Greenville, for appellant.
W. F. Evans, of Greenville, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. [1] The plaintiff did not introduce a bill of lading, but he offered evidence tending to prove that on January 4, 1911, he purchased several horses and mules in Richmond, which were delivered to a connecting line of railway and were delivered to him at Greenville by the defendant; that he paid the freight to the defendant; and that one mule was dead and a horse injured when the cars reached Greenville. The plaintiff further testified that he was present and saw the stock loaded on the cars in Richmond, and that no bill of lading was given to him. All of this evidence was objected to by the defendant upon the ground that the contract of carriage could not be proven by parol, and at the conclusion of the evidence there was a motion for judgment of nonsuit: the defendant contending that, as no bill of lading had been introduced, the plaintiff could not recover. The position of the defendant cannot be sustained.

In Hutchinson on Carriers, § 118, the author says: "No receipt, bill of lading, or writing of any kind is required to subject the carrier to the duties and responsibilities of an insurer of the goods. As soon as they are delivered to him for present carriage and nothing necessary to their being forwarded remains to be done by the owner, the law imposes upon him all the risk of their safe custody as well as the duty to carry as directed. He is regarded as exercising in some sort the functions of a public office, and the law is said to impose upon him his duties and obligations upon this ground as well as upon the ground of the contract; and, as soon as the delivery to him and his acceptance are shown, the law imposes the duty and responsibility in virtue of his public employment."

The Supreme Court of the United States also said in Mobile & Mon. R. R. Co. v. Jurey, 111 U. S. 591, 4 Sup. Ct. 569, 28 L. Ed. 527: "No particular form or solemnity of execution is required for a contract of a common carrier to transport goods. It may be by parol, or it may be in writing; in either case it is equally binding." And our own court declared in Berry v. Railroad, 122 N. C. 1003, 30 S. E. 14: "Delivery of a bill of lading is not necessary to fix liability upon the defendant. Wells v. Railroad, 51 N. C. 47 [72 Am. Dec. 558]."

[2] No evidence was offered identifying the paper in possession of the plaintiff, or the one held by the defendant, or connecting either with the shipment in controversy; and, as no bill of lading containing a valuation clause was in evidence, the classifications of the Interstate Commerce Commission were immaterial and were properly excluded.

The plaintiff testified that no bill of lading was given to him, and he explained the possession of the paper, in form a bill of lading, by showing that after the defendant filed an answer setting out certain stipulations, which it alleged were in the bill of lading, under which the shipment was made, his counsel wrote to the party from whom the horses and mules were purchased in Richmond, asking for a form of bills for shipments of stock for the purpose of comparison with the allegations in the answer, and that the paper he had was the one sent him in compliance with his request. The paper in possession of the defendant's counsel purported to be a copy of a bill of lading, but no evidence was offered showing when it was made or otherwise explaining it.

[3] The defendant also excepted to the admission of the following question and answer: The plaintiff was asked, "Would it have been possible, from your observation, for that mule's foot to have gone through the crack unless there had been a piece broken out?" He answered by saying that she could not have done so in his opinion; that he noticed the car and that that was the only place that a mule could have gotten its feet through; that the plank at that point had been split off and was an old break. It is not disputed that the foot of the mule was through the crack, and it was favorable to the defendant to show that there was no other hole in the car.

[4] It follows that the only part of the answer of the witness that was material is the statement "that the plank at that point had been split off and was an old break."

[5] This evidence was, in our opinion, competent; but, if not, the defendant could not avail itself of the exception, as the same witness testified to the same facts in another part of his examination, without objection. He said: "When the shipment reached Greenville there was a mule dead in one car, and one of the horses was severely injured in another. The mule had her feet hanging in a crack of the car about waist high from the floor, and she had apparently fallen down on her back while in that position and could not get up. That the car was slatted with narrow cracks between the slats about two inches wide, but at the point where the mule's feet were hung a piece had been broken out, making the crack at that point much larger. The slats of the car were about four inches wide, and at that point about of the slat had been broken out, making an opening about four inches wide, and enough for the mule's feet to catch in." He examined the car thoroughly, and he broke in the slat at the point mentioning the appearance of having been done at that time, as the broken slat was dirty and different from a new break."

The principles announced in Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 101 Ct. 148, 57 L. Ed. 314, and in other cases, allowing it, are not involved in the decision in this case, as no bill of lading containing a valuation clause was in evidence.

[6] The special instructions were predicated on the presence of a bill of lading and the materiality of the classifications of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which were properly refused; and, as the exceptions to the charge are not considered in this case, they are deemed to be abandoned. No error.

No error.

CITY OF RALEIGH v. DUFFY (Supreme Court of North Carolina. 1913.)

1. ADVERSE POSSESSION (§ 10*)—ACQUISITION OF TITLE—MUNICIPALITY.

A city may acquire title to land by adverse possession.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 58-64; Dec. Dig. § 10.*]

2. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 225*)—RIGHT OF PROPERTY—"SIDEWALK"—WALKS—PRESCRIPTION.

Where a municipal corporation owned a market house and placed narrow raised runways in front of the doors of the various market stalls, against which runways were backed up, the runways were used as walks, even though they were sometimes used by travelers for passing and repassing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 626-641, Dec. Dig. § 225.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 7, pp. 6505-6507; vol. 8, p. 10.

3. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 225*)—RIGHT OF PROPERTY—"SIDEWALK"—WALKS—ABUTTING OWNER.

Where a municipality in building a market house placed narrow raised runways against the market house against which were backed up, objecting owners acquired property in the walks, such walks were "sidewalks," although occasionally used by pedestrians for passing and repassing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 626-641, Dec. Dig. § 225.*]

4. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 225*)—WALKS—RIGHT OF CONVEYANCE.

The Legislature may authorize a municipality to convey the sidewalks around land owned by the city, though such sidewalks have become public ways by prescription.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 626-641, Dec. Dig. § 225.*]

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 225*)—SIDE-CONVEYANCE.

ers of land across the street from a block, which had been used for house, have no pecuniary interest in around such market house which will conveyance of the market house, in the walks, when the municipality is duly to convey the same.

te.—For other cases, see Municipal Laws, Cent. Dig. §§ 626-641, 643; Dec. [?]

from Superior Court, Wake County, Judge.

vey without action between the Raleigh and Carey K. Durfey. for plaintiff, and defendant affirmed.

reed statement of facts is as folthe city of Raleigh is a municipal corporation, chartered under chapter 59, Laws of North Carolina, session amended, which charter was adopted the first Tuesday in April, 1913, by a of the then registered and qualified the city of Raleigh, and that James is mayor of the city of Raleigh. at the city has undisputed possession and claims to own property situate teville street, lying between East and East Martin streets, and run- k to Wilmington street, lying be- exchange place north, or Market d Exchange place south, and known market house, together with the lot ch the said building is situate, said measuring 40.2 feet on Fayette- et, running back in a rectangular feet to Wilmington street, measur- feet on Wilmington street.

at subsection 1, section 1, article 5 id charter, relative to the powers board of commissioners of the city h, reads as follows: 'To open new ange, widen, extend and close any t is now or may hereafter be open- dopt such ordinances for the regu- use of the streets, squares, and d other public property belonging y as it may deem best for the pub- e of the citizens of said city.'

at Exchange street south, from line to building line, is 50.4 feet and street north, from building line g line, is 51.6 feet. That the side- the north and south sides of the uilding measure 6.9 feet from the aid sidewalks to the building line uilding, which sidewalks run from le street to Wilmington street on s. That Exchange street north is de from curb to curb and Exchange uth is 35 feet wide from curb to at from building line on the south uth Exchange street to the building he north side of north Exchange a distance of 156.10 feet. Said Exchange streets north and south are only 210 feet long.

"(5) That Exchange streets north and south are now and have for many years been used in connection with the market, produce wagons backing up to the sidewalks on either side of the market, on Exchange streets north and south; the horses to said wagons facing north and south as the case may be, and standing at right angles to the north and south sides of the said market. That the length of a horse and wagon is between 16 and 18 feet.

"(6) The Legislature of North Carolina, session 1913, authorized the city of Raleigh to sell said property, including the sidewalks on the north and south sides of said building, at a minimum price of $80,000, said act forming chapter 315 of the Private Laws of North Carolina, session 1913, a copy of which act is hereto attached and marked 'Exhibit A.'

"(7) Said property was duly advertised for sale and sealed bids requested, together with a deposit of a certified check for $5,000.

"(8) On August 11, 1913, said bids were duly opened by the commissioners of the city of Raleigh, when and where it was found that Carey K. Durfey, as surviving executor and trustee of the estate of Florence P. Tucker, deceased, was the highest bidder, at the price of $90,575, and that his bid was made on condition that the title to said property should be satisfactory; a certified check for $5,000 having accompanied said bid in accordance with the requirement aforesaid.

"(9) That the bid of said Durfey as aforesaid was accepted by the said city, and subsequent to said acceptance he assigned his bid under the same conditions as the bid was made, to Carey K. Durfey, trustee, which assignment was accepted by the said city of Raleigh.

"(10) That after reasonable time had been given the said Durfey, trustee, to investigate the title to said property, a deed in the usual form and with the usual warranty or warranties, conveying the said building and the said lot, including the sidewalks on the north and south sides, in fee simple, was tendered to said Durfey, trustee, and a demand made for the balance of the purchase price, namely $85,575, the payment of which was refused by said Durfey for the reason that he stated that the city of Raleigh had no right, even under the act aforesaid, to sell the sidewalks on the north and south sides of said building, and for the further reason that the city of Raleigh could show no title to part of the property.

"(11) That the old maps of the city of Raleigh show that in 1834 this was a solid block of property, owned by various individuals. On the 12th day of December, 1846 Matthew Shaw gave to the commissioners of the city of Raleigh a deed conveying a tract of land 70 feet by 210 feet, bounded on the west by Fayetteville street, on the south by the line of the late John Marshall, on the east by Wilmington street, and on the north by the line of the city market lot.

"(12) That many years ago the courthouse of Wake county was burned, together with numerous records of conveyances, etc., and that no conveyance of the city market lot referred to in the deed of Matthew Shaw to the commissioners of the city of Raleigh can be found.

"(13) That there is on record a deed, registered in book 11, at page 190, in the office of the register of deeds for Wake county, from William Hill to Fannie Murden, which states that the lot conveyed by Hill's deed to Murden faces on Martin street and runs back 68 feet to the line of lot of Matthew Shaw.

"(14) That it is 70 feet from the northeast corner of the intersection of Fayetteville and Martin streets to the southeast corner of the intersection of Exchange street south, and Fayetteville street. That so far as the records of Wake county show, the aforesaid lot conveyed by Matthew Shaw to the city of Raleigh was the only piece of property that he owned in lot No. 114, which was the south part of the old block as shown by the city maps, bounded by Hargett, Martin, Wilmington, and Fayetteville streets, and measuring about 420 by 210 feet.

"(15) That there is no record as to whether Exchange street north was opened by the city out of the property bought by the city for that purpose, or by condemnation, but the old maps show that Exchange streets north and south were not streets that were laid off by the state of North Carolina, in the plan of the city of Raleigh.

"(16) That Exchange place south covers a part of the property purchased from Matthew Shaw, the balance of said property being occupied by a portion of the market house.

"(17) That old inhabitants state that the present site, together with the streets thereon, were used for the market house prior to 1860, two wooden structures, namely the city market and the fire and police house being situate thereon. That these wooden structures were burned about 1864, and that the present building was built by the city of Raleigh as it now stands about 1867, and has been continuously used as a city market house since that date.

"(18) That the city of Raleigh has been in undisputed adverse possession under known and visible bounds of the land occupied by the market house for at least 60 years, occupying the same and collecting rents for the same.

"(19) That subsequent to the opening of Exchange streets north and south, numerous stores have been erected on the north side of Exchange street north, or Market street, with entrances facing thereon, and likewise numerous stores have been erected on the south side of Exchange street south, with entrances facing on said street, all of which belonged to private parties.

"(20) That for many years both Exchange place north, and Exchange place south, have been shown on the maps of the city of Raleigh as being of the width above set out.

"(21) That while the sidewalks on the north and south sides of the market house are paved and curved, they are used principally by persons trading and trafficking with the produce wagons, and for giving access to the side doors of the market, and to a much less extent by persons passing to and from Fayetteville and Wilmington streets.

"The questions presented in this controversy without action, are as follows:

"(1) Has the Legislature of North Carolina the authority to authorize the city of Raleigh to include in the sale of the market house the sidewalks on the north and south sides of the market house building?

"(2) If the Legislature has no such right, does it make null and void the entire act, authorizing the sale of said property?

"(3) Has the city of Raleigh a good title to the said market property, not including the said sidewalks?

"And the parties hereto submit this controversy without action to the court and agree to abide by the decision and the termination of the same."

W. H. Pace, of Raleigh, for appellant. J. W. Hinsdale, Jr., of Raleigh, for appellee.

BROWN, J. It is contended by the defendant, as a reason why he should not be required to complete his purchase: (1) That the plaintiff has no valid title to part of the property purchased; (2) that the plaintiff has no right under the act of the Legislature to sell the sidewalks on the north and south sides of the market house building.

The property purchased by the defendant is the market house property of plaintiff, situated in the center of Exchange place. The records of Wake county were partially destroyed by fire some years ago, but it is admitted that the plaintiff has a perfect paper title to all of the property sold, except to a portion of it now covered by a part of the market house building.

[1] It is admitted that the plaintiff has been in undisputed actual adverse possession under known and visible lines and boundaries of the entire land and property for 60 years, occupying the same and collecting the rents. Upon these facts it would seem to be plain that plaintiff has acquired an absolute title to the property. One of the methods of acquiring title to land is by adverse possession. Mobley v. Griffin, 104 N. C. 115, 10 S. E. 142. We know of no reason or authority by which a municipality is excluded from that rule and rendered incompetent to acquire title by that method.

[2] The principal controversy seems to be as to whether plaintiff can legally convey the narrow six-foot strip on north and south sides of the market house running from Fayetteville to Wilmington streets. From the facts stated in the case agreed, it is manifest to us that these narrow strips bordering the north and south sides of the market house are not sidewalks in the ordinary acceptance of that term, or parts of the public streets of the city. They were placed there, and evidently elevated a few inches above the street, for the protection of the market house when it was built, and for the convenience of the butchers, hucksters, and other tradesmen who occupy the market house stalls. The doors to a dozen of these stalls open on these strips on each side of the market house, and are used by the occupants and their customers. If the market house itself is removed, these strips would be of no use to any one, but would be a dangerous obstruction in the center of Exchange place. It is admitted in the case agreed that the public streets on both north and south sides of this market house property are known as Exchange place north, and Exchange place south, each being about 50 feet in width. It is thus manifest that this was all an open space at one time, and that the market house was built in the center of it. These narrow strips bordering the market house are not a part of the public street, but are used daily for the numberless carts and wagons to back up against to unload their produce into the stalls opening on the strips. They afford protection as abutments to the market-house building, as well as a convenience to its occupants.

[3] It is contended that the abutting property owners on south and north sides of Exchange place have an interest in the maintenance of these strips as sidewalks which cannot be lawfully taken from them. It is almost beyond the ken of mortal man to see what benefit these narrow borders to the market house can be to those landowners on the north and south sides of Exchange place. There is a spacious sidewalk on each side in front of their property leading from Fayetteville to Wilmington streets. Their interest in these narrow strips is more imaginative than real. But as they are not in any sense public streets, they can have no interest in them.

[4] Assuming for argument's sake that these strips are public streets, the power of the General Assembly to authorize the sale of this property, including the so-called sidewalks, is undoubted; there being no constitutional restriction. Moore v. Meroney, 154 N. C. 158, 69 S. E. 838; Marietta v. Henderson, 121 Ga. 390, 49 S. W. 312, 104 Am. St. Rep. 156, 2 Ann. Cas. 88; Williams v. Carey, 73 Iowa, 194, 34 N. W. 813.

[5] As the landowners abutting on Exchange places are not complaining, and can sustain no possible injury, their pecuniary rights need not be considered. As is said by the Supreme Court of Iowa in a somewhat similar case: "The owners of lots abutting on the west side of the narrowed street could not enjoin the council from carrying their proposed action into effect, on the ground that they would be damaged thereby, inasmuch as the damages relied on by them, and shown by their evidence, were imaginary rather than actual." Williams v. Carey, supra. In this case the court held that the taking of 12 feet from a street, thereby reducing it to 41 feet, was no injury to property owners on the other side of the street. No property is taken from these landowners, and they are not directly damaged; and, as is said in Hyde Park v. Dunham, 85 Ill. 569, "Municipal authorities of cities and villages are vested with complete control over streets, and may contract or widen them when in their opinion the public good shall so require; and any damages sustained in consequence of the exercise of such power when property is neither taken nor directly damaged thereby, are too remote and contingent to be allowed."

The cases of Moose v. Carson, 104 N. C. 431, 10 S. E. 689, 7 L. R. A. 548, 17 Am. St. Rep. 681, and Southport v. Stanly, 125 N. C. 466, 34 S. E. 641, cited by defendant, have no application to the facts of this case.

The judgment is affirmed.

MANN et al. v. HALL et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Sept. 24, 1913.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1024*)—REVIEW—QUESTIONS OF FACT.

On a motion under Revisal 1905, § 513, authorizing the trial judge upon such terms as may be just, at any time within one year after notice thereof, to relieve a party from a judgment, order, verdict, or other proceeding taken against him through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, the facts found by the judge are conclusive, and the Supreme Court can review only the question whether the facts so found constitute mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, authorizing the setting aside of the judgment or verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 820, 3816-3823, 3836, 3837, 4020-4022, 4025-4026; Dec. Dig. § 1024.*]

2. JUDGMENT (§ 364*)—VACATING—MISTAKE.

An owner of a tract of land conveyed to J. a part thereof, set off as a separate tract, amounting to five-sixteenths of the whole tract. J.'s husband conveyed to defendants, and after the death of the husband J.'s heirs brought suit for partition. They did not know the boundaries of the tract, and their attorney in drawing the complaint understood that the description given him by the former owner was that of the larger tract, and that his clients owned therein a five-sixteenths undivided interest, whereas the description was of the smaller tract, the whole of which was owned by them. Defendants made only a formal defense, and with plaintiffs' assent a verdict was rendered that plaintiffs were entitled to five-sixteenths and defendants to eleven-sixteenths of the tract described and judgment entered to the same effect and appointing a commissioner to sell the land for partition. Held, that there was such mistake of fact as justified the setting aside of the verdict and judgment, under Revisal 1905, § 513, authorizing the court at any time within one year after notice thereof to relieve a party from a judgment, order, or verdict taken against him through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 706; Dec. Dig. § 364.*]

3. JUDGMENT (§ 382*)—VACATING—MISTAKE.

Such verdict and judgment were against plaintiffs, within the meaning of Revisal 1905, § 513, since they adjudged that defendants were entitled to eleven-sixteenths of the tract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 684, 722, 723; Dec. Dig. § 382.*]

4. NEW TRIAL (§ 91*)—MISTAKE OF PARTY.

Under Revisal 1905, § 513, authorizing the trial judge to relieve a party from a judgment, order, verdict, or other proceeding taken against him through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, a verdict of a jury may be set aside in cases of mistake or excusable neglect, if rendered since the passage of Laws 1893, c. 81, by which the word "verdict" was included in that section.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 184–187; Dec. Dig. § 91.*]

Walker and Brown, JJ., dissenting.

Appeal from Superior Court, Hyde County; Whidbee, Judge.

Action by T. C. Mann and others against J. M. Hall and others. From an order setting aside a verdict and judgment, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Bond & Bond, of Edenton, for appellants. Ward & Grimes, of Washington, N. C., for appellees.

CLARK, C. J. [1] This is a motion to set aside a verdict and judgment for mistake. Revisal, § 513, empowers the judge, "upon such terms as may be just, at any time within one year after notice thereof, to relieve a party from a judgment, order, verdict or other proceedings taken against him, through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect." On such motion the facts found by the judge are conclusive. This court can review only the question whether the facts so found constitute such mistake, or inadvertence or surprise, or excusable neglect, which would authorize setting aside the judgment or verdict. Norton v. McLaurin, 125 N. C. 185, 34 S. E. 269. The mistake must be one of fact, not one of law. Phifer v. Insurance Co., 123 N. C. 405, 31 S. E. 715; Skinner v. Terry, 107 N. C. 103, 12 S. E. 118.

[2, 3] The facts found by the judge are those set out in the affidavit of H. S. Ward, which are in substance that several years ago one B. B. Sanderson owned a large tract of land in Hyde county and conveyed eleven-sixteenths thereof to his children and conveyed the other five-sixteenths, which had been surveyed and set off by metes and bounds as a separate tract, to his sister, J. Jones; that after her death her son, who was tenant by the curtesy, said last-named tract in fee simple to defendants in this action. After his death the plaintiffs, who are the heirs at law of Josephine Jones, instituted this action to set aside the verdict and judgment, knowing nothing of the bounds of the tract and their lawyer, said H. S. Ward, made a complaint from the description given by B. B. Sanderson. Said Sanderson testified to him the boundaries for the complaint, and his testimony at the trial spoke of "five-sixteenths interest" to which plaintiffs were entitled, and their counsel did not understand that he meant to give or waive the boundaries of the new tract of five-sixteenths of the original tract which was cut off and conveyed to Josephine Jones. Sanderson understood that Sanderson was given the boundaries of the whole of the original tract, and that plaintiffs were entitled to five-sixteenths interest therein. Their counsel being without other information as to the boundaries asked in the complaint for a partition of said tract and an assignment of five-sixteenths to his clients. The complaint was submitted to the jury under the verdict, the defendants made only a formal defense, and with the assent of the jury the verdict was rendered and judgment entered that plaintiffs were entitled to five-sixteenths and that the defendants were entitled to eleven-sixteenths in said tract. A locutory decree was entered in accordance therewith appointing H. S. Ward, commissioner, to sell the premises for partition. The report of the sale. The affidavit of H. S. Ward, which the judge finds to be true, avers that in drawing the complaint he thought he had described the whole of the original Sanderson tract and that the plaintiffs were entitled to an undivided five-sixteenths therein, whereas under this mistake he only described in the complaint the boundaries of the "five-sixteenths tract," which has been cut off and conveyed as a separate tract to Josephine Jones, the whole of the original tract his clients were entitled to receive for which this action was brought.

The judge found as a fact that the complaint was thus drawn by mistake, and that the verdict and judgment had been taken under the same mistake of fact, and that the verdict and judgment should be set aside. It would be difficult to find facts in which the facts would authorize setting aside any verdict and judgment for mistake, if the facts found by his honor in this case are insufficient.

[4] Prior to chapter 81, Laws 1905, the word "verdict" was not in this section of the Revisal, § 513, and there were no cases in which the subsequent judge could not set aside a verdict in such cases when there had been a verdict of a jury. But it has now been dict can be set aside in cases of or excusable neglect if the verdict rendered since the passage of that Marshall v. McDonald, 113 N. C. 327, 704; Brown v. Rhinehart, 112 N. C. 3, E. 840.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep.

In this case the interlocutory judgment for a sale for partition and a report and retaining the cause for further sale was made at fall term of Hyde County November 18, 1912. The plaintiff discovered the mistake before the trial of third parties had intervened and promptly made this motion to set aside the judgment and verdict in January, 1913. The verdict and judgment were against the plaintiff, in that it was adjudged that the defendants were entitled to eleven-sixteenths of the tract, and on the facts found the judge held that there was mistake which entitled the plaintiffs to the relief sought.

Section 513, authorizing the judge to set aside judgment and verdict or other proceeding within one year after notice, is not limited to cases of "excusable neglect," but embraces cases where the judgment or proceeding has been taken "through mistake, inadvertence or surprise." These are not mere surplusage but mean different things, though, of course, the common instance in which this section is invoked has been in cases of excusable neglect. In Skinner v. Terry, 107 N. C. 3, E. 119, it is held that it embraces cases where the party "was reasonably misled by matters of fact," but that it does not embrace ignorance or mistake as to the facts. In this case the counsel was misled by a mistake of fact, in understanding the witness's information he drew the complaint for the cause, to give the boundaries of the larger tract, and that his clients were entitled to five-sixteenths therein (neither the plaintiff nor his other clients having any knowledge of said boundaries); whereas, the fact in fact was giving him the boundaries of the smaller tract, which was five-sixteenths of the larger tract, but which had been sold off, and of which, if his contention was correct, the plaintiffs were entitled to the whole. If this judgment is not set aside, the plaintiff will be deprived by such mistake, of fact, of eleven-sixteenths of land and their heirs (if their contention is right by the law); whereas, if the judgment is set aside, the defendants can lose nothing of their land and the controversy will be decided on its merits.

It is not the invocation of the doctrine of mistake in equity, but a statutory remedy for correcting a "mistake or inadvertence" in legal proceedings whereby an advantage would accrue to a party. In Lutz v. Lutz (N. J. Ch.) 55 Atl. 1041, which was a bill to reform a contract for sale of land and specific performance so as to include 10 feet not in the description of the contract, the counsel overlooked the prayer to include the 10 feet and took judgment omitting it. The court held that this was a case of surprise and that the decree should be opened to allow that matter to be litigated. This case is much stronger because here, as a matter of fact, the counsel misunderstood the description as embracing the whole tract and understood that his clients had an undivided five-sixteenths therein, by reason of such mistake and inadvertence. The defendants who put in a mere formal defense have not been prejudiced and cannot in good conscience claim to hold the land for which they have obtained judgment by such mistake. If they have a good claim to said property, there ought to be opportunity to have it understandingly passed upon by the court and jury.

The party who has obtained judgment for an amount less than his claim is nevertheless entitled to prosecute an appeal therefrom. This is equally true on a motion to set aside a judgment under this section where the judgment by reason of mistake, etc., is for less than it should have been otherwise. This has been held in Montgomery v. Ellis, 6 How. Prac. 326, in New York, in which this section of the Code is the same as ours. It is there said: "A party who has a judgment in his favor may, on application to the court, under section 174 (our section 513) of the Code, have redress, or be relieved, the same as if the judgment was against him." This case is much stronger, for here not only the judgment was for less than the plaintiff was entitled, being for five-sixteenths of the tract when he was seeking to recover the whole tract, but the verdict and judgment go further and adjudge that the defendants are entitled to eleven-sixteenths of the land. This certainly is against the plaintiffs.

His honor properly set aside the verdict and judgment by reason of the palpable mistake made, on the facts as found by the judge, and directed that the real controversy should be tried out on its merits. If the defendants are not entitled to the eleven-sixteenths, they ought not to obtain it by such mistake and inadvertence. Revisal, § 513. If the plaintiffs are not entitled to recover said eleven-sixteenths, they are not entitled to recover anything. The ready assent of defendants to the judgment therefore is significant.

The motion was properly granted.

Affirmed.

WALKER and BROWN, JJ., dissent.

BROWN, J. (dissenting). I regret I cannot agree to the conclusion of my Brethren. I will state the case as I understand it.

This is a motion made by plaintiff to set aside a verdict and judgment rendered at the fall term, 1912, by Lane, judge of the superior court of Hyde county, in favor of the plaintiff against the defendant, and on the ground of excusable neglect. The motion was made before Whidbee, judge, spring term, 1918, and based upon the affidavit of H. S. Ward, the allegations of which were controverted in an affidavit by the defendant.

The complaint reads as follows: "Plaintiffs complain of defendants and allege: (1) That the plaintiff, B. B. Sanderson, on the \_\_\_\_\_ day of \_\_\_\_\_, 1881, conveyed a five-sixteenth ( $\frac{5}{16}$ ) undivided interest in the land hereinafter described, then being the owner of same in fee simple, to one Josephine Jones, née Sanderson. (2) That said Josephine Jones died intestate and without lineal descendants surviving. (3) That the plaintiffs are the owners of said five-sixteenth ( $\frac{5}{16}$ ) interest in said land, referred to in section one, aforesaid, and defined and described as follows: Lying in Hyde county, bounded on the north by the lands of Charlie Jennette, on the east by the Pamlico Sound, on the south by the lands of the heirs of R. B. Carter, and on the west by the public road from Englehard to Middletown. (4) That defendants are in the possession of the entire tract and assert title to same, including the five-sixteenth ( $\frac{5}{16}$ ) interest, adversely to the title of the plaintiffs, and refuse plaintiffs the right of possession. (5) That the annual rental value of said land is \$\_\_\_\_\_. Wherefore, plaintiffs pray judgment that they be adjudged the owners of the five-sixteenths ( $\frac{5}{16}$ ) interest in said land, and that they be let in possession of same and for \$\_\_\_\_\_ for rents and for costs and general relief. Ward & Grimes, Attorneys for Plaintiffs." This complaint is duly verified. The defendants answered under oath, denying the several allegations of the complaint alleging title in plaintiff, and admitting possession of the land described in the complaint.

Upon such pleadings, these issues were submitted by consent as the issues raised by the pleadings:

Are the plaintiffs owners of an undivided five-sixteenth interest as tenants in common with defendants, in that part of land described in complaint conveyed by W. H. Jones to J. M. Hall? Answer: Yes.

Are plaintiffs owners of an undivided five-sixteenth interest as tenants in common with defendants in that part of land described in complaint, conveyed by W. H. Jones to Redmond Turner? Answer: Yes.

Are plaintiffs owners of an undivided five-sixteenth interest as tenants in common with defendants in that part of land described in complaint, conveyed by W. H. Jones to heirs of Arnold Whitfield? Answer: Yes.

Do defendants, according to their respective interests, own the other eleven-sixteenths of said pieces of land? Answer: Yes.

Upon those issues this judgment was rendered upon motion of Ward & Grimes, plaintiffs' attorneys: "Present: Hon. Henry P.

Lane, judge presiding. This cause coming on for trial at this term, and the jury having answered the issues as appears in the record, it is on motion of Ward & Grimes, counsel for plaintiffs, ordered, adjudged and decreed that the plaintiffs are the owners of a five-sixteenth undivided interest in the lands described in the complaint, as tenants in common with defendants, who, according to their respective interests, own the other eleven-sixteenths, plaintiffs' interest in said five-sixteenths being as follows: B. B. Sanderson one-half thereof, T. C. Mann one-tenth thereof, J. B. Mann one-eighteenth thereof, Preston Gibbs, Seth Gibbs, Ella G. and Florence O'Neal one-tenth, Carroll Mann and Clyde Wade one-tenth, Mary Carter, Isabelle Carter, D. M. Carter, Jr., John Carter, and Rufus Carter one-tenth." Then follows a clause appointing H. S. Ward commissioner to sell the land described in the complaint, and by consent the motion to confirm report of sale may be heard at chambers, and "It is adjudged that plaintiffs recover the costs of this action up to and including the recording this judgment. It is further adjudged that plaintiffs recover of defendant J. M. Hall $12.50, of defendant Riley Midgette $62.50, of the other defendant $19.74. Henry P. Lane, Judge Presiding."

It must be admitted that the plaintiff obtained a sweeping victory, and recovered judgment against the defendants for every foot of land and every dollar he claimed. I have stated this case very fully so it can be seen how extraordinary this proceeding is, and how utterly destructive of all stability in judicial procedure it will be if established as a precedent.

The ground upon which the plaintiff bases his motion is that in drawing the complaint in the case his attorney did not claim enough. This is undoubtedly a very novel and unusual accusation to make against a member of our profession; but whose fault was it that he did not claim enough? It was either the fault of the attorney, or of the client (it is immaterial which) that they did not describe the entire land conveyed by Jones to the defendants. The affidavit states: "This affiant all the time believed he had described in his complaint the entire original Sanderson tract, and did not know he had described only the tract conveyed by Jones to the defendants. That he was entitled to recover the land described in his complaint and not a five-sixteenths ( $\frac{5}{16}$ ) interest therein, and this he is informed and believes the defendants knew at the time he wrote the judgment. That he saw the defendant Hall smiling at his attorney when the judgment was written and read, and did not know the meaning of it, and by reason of his mistake in drawing the judgment and in thinking that his complaint described the entire Sanderson tract, as aforesaid, he has failed to have his clients adjudged the owner of the eleven-sixteenths ( $\frac{11}{16}$ ) interest to which they are as justly entitled as to the five-sixteenths ( $\frac{5}{16}$ ) interest recovered. That the said judgment is erroneous by reason of the mistake of the draftsman and the mistake of B. B. Sanderson, who, as above stated, was all the time referring to the land as a five-sixteenth ( $\frac{5}{16}$ ) interest."

It is true that, if the judgment did not conform to the pleadings and issues it could be corrected as an irregular judgment; but it is a carefully drawn decree and conforms closely to the pleadings and issues.

It is unnecessary to consider the question as to whether there is any excusable neglect shown in the affidavit. In my view the statute does not cover the case, and it must be admitted that words should not be read into the statute to make it cover it.

The language of the statute is as follows: Revisal, § 513: "Mistake, Surprise, Excusable Neglect.—The judge shall, upon such terms as may be just, at any time within one year after notice thereof, relieve a party from a judgment, order, verdict or other proceeding taken against him through mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect, and may supply an omission in any proceeding."

The decisions under this section are too numerous to cite, but they all agree that the only party who can avail himself of such relief under the section must be one against whom a judgment is rendered, and no party who has had a trial in court and recovered all he claimed can appeal to this section because he did not claim enough. The decisions are collected in Pell's Revisal, § 513.

Prior to the amendment of the statute as now contained in Revisal, § 513, it was held that the statute applied only to judgments by default, and then only for the relief of a defendant against whom judgment had been taken, and that the statute did not apply to a judgment rendered conformable to a verdict. Morrison v. McDonald, 113 N. C. 327, 18 S. E. 704; Brown v. Rhinehart, 112 N. C. 772, 16 S. E. 840; Beck v. Bellamy, 93 N. C. 129; Clemmons v. Field, 99 N. C. 400, 6 S. E. 790, 6 Am. St. Rep. 529. Afterwards the statute was amended so as to relieve the party from "a judgment, order, verdict or other proceeding" as now set out in Revisal, § 513, but the words, "taken against him through his mistake, surprise or excusable neglect," are now, and always have been, in the statute since it was first enacted. Code, § 274; Acts 1893, c. 8; C. C. P. § 133.

In this case, as appears from the record, no judgment or verdict has ever been rendered against the plaintiff. The issues were formulated and submitted at instance of plaintiffs' counsel, the verdict on each issue was in favor of the plaintiffs, the judgment was drawn by plaintiffs' counsel, and entered up as the court's decree upon their motion.

It is well settled that "a judgment entered by consent of counsel of record in a matter coming within the scope of his authority is regular and binding on the client, and will not be set aside on the ground of excusable neglect." Hairston v. Garwood, 23 N. C. 345, 31 S. E. 653; Westhall v. Hoyle, 141 N. C. 338, 53 S. E. 863; Harrill v. Railroad, 144 N. C. 544, 57 S. E. 382.

The judgment in this case is neither an irregular nor an erroneous judgment. It was rendered after a trial upon the verdict and pleadings, and is strictly conformable to both. It cannot be set aside under this statute. May v. Lumber Co., 119 N. C. 97, 26 S. E. 721. Had it been an erroneous judgment, and rendered for too much or too little, but according to the course of the court, the only remedy is by appeal. Wolfe v. Davis, 74 N. C. 597. So far as the plaintiff is concerned, this is a consent judgment, as it was entered upon his motion and at his request. Therefore it cannot be set aside except for fraud, or the mistake of both parties, and then only by a civil action brought for the purpose, except in a partition proceeding it may be done by petition in the cause, but that does not change the elementary principles governing such cases. Vaughan v. Gooch, 92 N. C. 524; Kerchner v. McEachern, 93 N. C. 447.

This subject is forcibly discussed by Justice Reade in Simmons v. Dowd, 77 N. C. 156, in a case practically on all fours with this, in which he says: "The motion of defendant and the action of the court below were evidently based upon the idea that C. C. P. § 133, now Revisal, § 513, applied to the case, but was a mistake. * * * It is common learning that all judgments and proceedings of the court are in the breast of the court during the term and may be vacated and amended in any way, but after the term closes they are sealed forever. This applies to all proceedings of the court which are regular and according to the course and practice of the court, however erroneous the same may be. And note, that an erroneous judgment may be just as regular as one which is free from error. If I sue a man and recover $100 my judgment is regular. If I ought to have recovered $200, or ought to have recovered only $50, my judgment for $100 is erroneous, but still it is regular. And after the term of the court when it is rendered, I cannot have it increased, and the defendant cannot have it diminished. If this were not so, there would be no end to litigation."

WALKER, J., concurs in this dissent.

BOARD OF COM'RS OF VANCE COUNTY v. TOWN OF HENDERSON.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Sept. 24, 1913.)

1. COUNTIES (§ 21½*)—MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 57*)—GOVERNMENTAL POWER.

Counties, cities, and towns have only such powers and capacities as have been conferred upon them by law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Dec. Dig. § 21½; Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 144, 148; Dec. Dig. § 57.*]

2. HEALTH (§ 16*)—LIABILITY FOR QUARANTINE EXPENSES—STATUTE—CONSTRUCTION.

Laws 1911, c. 62, provides for a system of quarantine by which persons can be isolated and treated, and section 15 provides that the duties of municipal health officer shall be identical with those of the county superintendent of health, and that any city may assign the duties of quarantine officer to such health officer. Section 21 provides that all expenses of quarantine shall be borne by the town or county employing a quarantine officer. Held that, unless a city has appointed a quarantine officer as provided, thus adopting a system of quarantine of its own, it is not liable for quarantine expenses, but such expense is to be borne by the county.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Health, Cent. Dig. §§ 18, 14; Dec. Dig. § 16.*]

3. STATUTES (§ 190*)—CONSTRUCTION—MEANING OF LANGUAGE—LITERAL INTERPRETATION.

Where the language of a statute is free from ambiguity and conveys a definite and sensible meaning, the courts should not hesitate to give it a literal interpretation merely because they may question the wisdom or expediency of the enactment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. §§ 266, 269; Dec. Dig. § 190.*]

4. STATUTES (§ 181*)—CONSTRUCTION—INTENTION OF LEGISLATURE.

If a statute is ambiguous so as to be fairly susceptible of more than one interpretation, then the courts may exercise the power of construing its language so as to give effect to the intention of the Legislature, but such intention is to be ascertained by reasonable construction of the act and not founded on mere arbitrary conjecture.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. §§ 259, 263; Dec. Dig. § 181.*]

5. HEALTH (§ 16*)—STATUTES—EXPENSE OF QUARANTINE—IMPLIED REPEAL.

If Revisal 1905, § 4503, providing that the expense of quarantine shall be borne by the householder in whose family the case occurred, if able, otherwise by the city, town, or county of which he is a resident, imposes a liability upon a city which has no quarantine officer, it is incompatible with and repealed by Laws 1911, c. 62, § 21, providing that all expenses of quarantine shall be borne by the town or county employing a quarantine officer.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Health, Cent. Dig. §§ 18, 14; Dec. Dig. § 16.*]

6. STATUTES (§ 159*)—IMPLIED REPEAL.

Where two statutes are in conflict and cannot reasonably be reconciled, the later one repeals the one of earlier date to the extent of the repugnance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. §§ 259, 263; Dec. Dig. § 159.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Vance County; Cline, Judge.

Action by the Board of Commissioners of Vance County against the Town of Henderson. From a judgment in favor of plaintiff, defendant appeals. Reversed.

This action was brought to recover certain expenses incurred and paid by the county of Vance in executing the provisions of law in regard to quarantine during an outbreak of smallpox in said county and in the town of Henderson, which is in the said county, in the years 1911 and 1912. The complaint is lengthy, and necessarily so, but we need not set out even the substance of all the allegations in order to show clearly the matter involved in the appeal. Defendant demurred, and, as the complaint is thereby admitted for the purpose of deciding the question of law presented in the case, it may be briefly stated, as appears therefrom, that the county, between June 1, 1911, and October 1, 1912, removed to its pesthouse outside the corporate limits of Henderson, and cared for, a number of smallpox patients from the town, and also had under its care in the town, at the same time, other patients who were treated at their homes in Henderson under the county quarantine; the total number of patients being 62. The county paid out for the care and cure of these patients the sum of $1,514.12 and made a proper demand for the same, but payment was refused by the defendant. What is actually due would, of course, have to be ascertained by a jury or otherwise if the defendant is liable at all. The county had a quarantine officer, but the city of Henderson had none at the time stated. The court overruled the demurrer, and defendant appealed.

Henry T. Powell and T. M. Pittman, both of Henderson, for appellant. A. O. & J. P. Zollicoffer, of Henderson, for appellee.

WALKER, J. (after stating the facts as above). Our opinion is that the city of Henderson is not liable for the amount paid by the county of Vance on account of the maintenance and care of the persons afflicted with smallpox, while they were quarantined, nor for any part of it. The plaintiff's claim is based upon the provisions of Revisal, § 4508, and this, with the statute cited by defendant (Acts of 1911, c. 62, § 2, ratified March 7, 1911), will be discussed presently.

[1] The counties, cities, and towns of the state have only such powers and capacities as have been conferred upon them by law. Dillon on Mun. Corporations (5th Ed.) § 59; Fidelity Co. v. Flemming, 132 N. C. 337, 43 S. E. 899; State v. Webber, 107 N. C. 962, 12 S. E. 598, 22 Am. St. Rep. 920; Harrington v. Greenville, 159 N. C. 634, 75 S. E. 849. "It has been too often decided to be now questioned that the liability of towns to support poor persons is founded upon and limited by statute and is not to be enlarged or modified by any supposed moral obligation." Smith v. Colerain, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 492. In an action to recover the expenses of caring for a smallpox patient, Justice Hoke, for this court, said: "So far as municipal obligation is concerned, it is accepted doctrine that the care and support of the indigent and infirm is a matter of statutory provision." Copple v. Commissioners, 138 N. C. 131, 50 S. E. 574. But it is unnecessary to pursue this line of thought any further, as the plaintiff bases his right of recovery upon the statute. The Legislature, some years ago, provided an entire scheme for the preservation of the public health in the proper exercise of its police power, and especially for quarantining and caring for persons afflicted with smallpox and other contagious and infectious diseases. This statute will be found in Revisal of 1905, vol. 2, c. 95. In section 4508 of that chapter it is enacted that "the expense of the quarantine and of the disinfection shall be borne by the householder in whose family the case occurs, if able, otherwise by the city, town or county of which he is a resident." There was a superintendent of health for Vance county, who was also quarantine officer of the county, duly appointed according to law, and there was a superintendent of health for the town of Henderson, but he had not been appointed quarantine officer.

[2] By the Acts of 1911, c. 62, the Legislature adopted a new scheme for the preservation of the public health, and especially for a system of quarantine by which persons are allowed to be isolated and treated, for the purpose of preventing the spread of contagious and other diseases, and it concludes with this section: "All laws and clauses of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed." It is provided by section 15 of the act as follows: "The duties of the municipal health officer, within the jurisdiction of the town or city for which he is elected, shall be identical with those of the county superintendent of health for the county, with the exception of the duties of the county superintendent of health pertaining to the jail, convict camp, and county home. The authorities of any city or town shall have the power to assign the duties of quarantine officer to the municipal health officer, and in such cases the municipal health officer shall faithfully perform the duties of the quarantine officer as prescribed in sections twenty and twenty-one of this act." And in section 21 there is this provision: "All expenses of quarantine and disinfection shall be borne by the town or county employing a quarantine officer."

We conclude from a perusal of the two statutes (Revisal, c. 95, § 4508, and Acts of 1911, c. 62, § 21) that, if the former statute ever imposed any liability upon a city without a quarantine officer, the Legislature intended to establish a new rule of liability by the latter section for the expenses of quarantining diseased persons and to require that they shall be paid by the county which has a quarantine officer, unless the town in that county, where the expenses are incurred, has appointed a quarantine officer and undertaken for itself, by a system of quarantine, to isolate or segregate persons having contagious and other diseases, which are mentioned in the act, within its corporate limits, or, if possible, to take charge and supervision of the patients at their respective homes; but if it should elect, as in this case, not to exercise its power of appointing a quarantine officer for said purpose, it is the duty of the county to perform this service, the expenses thereof to be paid by the county which has a quarantine officer. In other words, the town is entitled, under the provisions of the new act, to the same rights in respect to quarantine and the prevention of the spread of diseases as any other part of the county, if it has not assumed to act for itself in the matter of the appointment of a quarantine officer. This, no doubt, was deemed by the Legislature more just than the former provision, if the true construction of the latter be that it imposed the burden of paying quarantine expenses upon the town, whether it had its own quarantine system or not. It may have occurred to the legislative mind that there was no reason why the town should pay the expense of its own indigent residents, when it was required by law to contribute its full proportion to the taxes of the county, and should therefore be entitled to its proper share in the benefits of the county quarantine without any additional charge.

[3] Where the language of a statute is free from ambiguity and conveys a definite and sensible meaning, the courts should not hesitate to give it a literal interpretation merely because they may question the wisdom or expediency of the enactment. In such a case, these are not pertinent inquiries for the judicial tribunal. If there be any unwisdom or injustice in the law, it is for the Legislature to remedy it. For the courts, the only rule is ita lex scripta est.

[4] If, though, the statute is ambiguous, so as to be fairly susceptible of more than one interpretation, then the courts may rightfully exercise the power of construing its language, so as to give effect to the intention of the Legislature, as the same shall be ascertained and determined from relevant and admissible considerations. But it should be understood that the intention of the law-making power is to be ascertained by a reasonable construction of the act and not one founded on mere arbitrary conjecture. And it is always the actual meaning of the Legislature which must be sought out and followed, and not the judge's own idea as to what the law should be. Finally, although every law must be construed according to the intention of the makers, as evidenced by the language employed to express it, that intention is never resorted to for any other purpose than to ascertain what, in fact, was meant to be done, and not for the purpose of ascertaining what they have done, with the view of determining whether it is politic or expedient, for with that we have nothing to do. We have reached the limit of our jurisdiction when we have certainly found and declared the meaning, as the object is to ascertain what the Legislature intended to enact and not what is the legal consequence and effect of what they did enact. Black's Interpretation of Laws, pp. 38 and 41. We think the purpose of this statute is clear and free from uncertainty, but, if it is doubtful, the application of the well-settled rule of construction just stated leads us to think that it was not intended to charge the town with the expenses of the quarantine service, unless it has adopted a system of its own, in which latter case it appears reasonable and just that it should be so charged.

[5] We are also of the opinion that the provision in section 21 of the Acts of 1911, c. 62, for paying the expenses of the quarantine is incompatible with the like provision in section 4508 of the Revisal, if the latter imposes a liability for the same upon the town in which there is no quarantine officer, for the act of 1911 explicitly provides that the expenses shall be paid "by the town or county employing a quarantine officer," and the town of Henderson has not employed one, though the county has.

[6] Where two statutes are thus in conflict and cannot reasonably be reconciled, the later one repeals the one of earlier date to the extent of the repugnance. State v. Perkins, 141 N. C. 797, 53 S. E. 735, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 165. We believe that our view of the law in this case accords with the clear intent of the Legislature and responds also to the dictates of justice and right. There is no good reason why the town or city should be charged with the double burden of paying its full lawful share of the county taxes and also the expenses of quarantine within its limits, from which it receives no more benefit or advantage than other sections of the county. But if it is not satisfied with the county system of quarantine or for any other reason it establishes one of its own, and thus chooses to regulate its own affairs in this respect, it is proper that it should bear the expense and not the county. It is not just that the county should pay the expenses of the city quarantine when it can have no part in fixing or controlling the amount to be incurred or in adopting regulations or methods for the economical administration of the law, and the same rule applies with equal force to the city, when entire control is in the hands of the county authorities. Taxation without representation often leads to the exercise of arbitrary and even despotic power and is not tolerated or permitted in our system of government. He who pays the taxes should have some voice, directly or indirectly, in deciding how they should be laid and how and for what purposes they should be expended. The Legislature evidently did not intend that the county should place this burden upon the city, as a separate corporation, without its consent or its participation in the exercise of the power by which it was created or imposed. In respect to this matter, the county and the city must be treated, under the statute, as distinct bodies; each exercising its own powers of taxation, within its prescribed sphere, and each liable for its own expenses. When the city does not elect to act for itself by appointing a quarantine officer, it must be regarded as a part of the county and is entitled to its share of benefits as such in return for its contribution to the county revenue; it is otherwise, though, when it undertakes to exercise sole authority with respect to quarantine within its corporate limits by virtue of the powers given in the act of 1911. These reasons, of course, have influence with us only when there is ambiguity in the statute, but we think it clear that the later provision in the act of 1911 was intended to take the place of the earlier one in the Revisal and to repeal the latter.

But we are also of the opinion that Revisal, § 4508, will not bear the construction upon which the plaintiff relies. It will be seen that by section 4509 the city health officer is also quarantine officer of the city just as the county health officer is quarantine officer of the county. This throws a flood of light upon the language of section 4508 and clearly reveals its true meaning to be that, when the householder is indigent and unable to pay the expenses of patients in his family, they shall be borne by the city, if he resides therein, and, if not, by the county, but the city is not liable to the county for the expenses of its patients any more than the county is to the city for the expenses of its patients. Each provides for its own patients and pays their expenses, but not to the other. It could not mean that one of them can officiously pay the expenses of the other and recover them from the latter. Neither one of them is charged with the duty of attending to the affairs of the other in this respect, but each must provide for and pay its own expenses in such cases. But, as we have said, this is all changed by the act of 1911, and the town is not liable if it has not employed a quarantine officer. The general subject is discussed in McNorton v. Val Verde County (Tex. Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 653, which presented somewhat an analogous case, and the court reached the same conclusion as we do now. If the city of Henderson was not liable and the county, therefore, paid the expenses officiously, it cannot recover them of the city. This we decided in Copple v. Commissioners, 138 N. C. 131, 50 S. E. 574.

It seems that section 21 of chapter 62 of the act of 1911 has been repealed by Acts 1913, c. 181, § 9. This matter was not called to our attention, and we suppose the learned counsel attached no importance to it, as the county paid the expenses for which it now sues in 1911 and 1912, before the passage of the act of 1913, which should be given prospective operation. We merely refer to it to show that we had not overlooked the repealing act.

It follows that, in any view, the court erred in overruling the demurrer. It should have been sustained and the action dismissed. This result makes it unnecessary to consider more particularly the question raised on the argument as to whether the payment by the county of the quarantine expenses incurred in Henderson was officious, nor need we refer to the other matters discussed by counsel.

Reversed.

McKEEL v. HOLLOMAN et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

1. PARTITION (§ 48*)—PROPER PARTIES.

Revisal 1905, § 410, provides that any person may be made defendant who claims an interest adverse to the plaintiff or who is a necessary party to a complete determination of the questions involved. Section 414 provides that, when a complete determination cannot be had without the presence of other parties, they must be brought in, while section 76 provides that, whenever land which is sought to be sold is claimed by another person, such claimant shall be heard as a party. Held, that one claiming to be a tenant in common of land which plaintiffs desired sold for partition was properly made a defendant by the court upon motion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Partition, Cent. Dig. §§ 118-129; Dec. Dig. § 48.*]

2. PARTITION (§ 68*)—PROCEEDINGS—BURDEN OF PROOF.

Where defendant, who claimed to be the owner of one-third interest in land which plaintiffs desired sold for partition upon being brought in as a party defendant, set up his claim in derogation of plaintiff's title to one-third of the property, he has the burden of proof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Partition, Cent. Dig. §§ 183-185; Dec. Dig. § 68.*]

3. PARTITION (§ 63*)—EVIDENCE—ADMISSIBILITY—WILL—IDENTIFICATION.

In partition for land of which defendant claimed to be a tenant in common of one-third, a will under which defendant claimed is properly rejected, where there was no sufficient identification of the land described in the will as being that in controversy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Partition, Cent. Dig. §§ 183-185; Dec. Dig. § 63.*]

4. TENANCY IN COMMON (§ 15*)—ADVERSE POSSESSION.

While the possession of one tenant in common is, in law, the possession of all, one may oust the others, and a tenant who makes no demand for possession or participation in the rents and profits for 20 years loses his right to the land by adverse possession.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Tenancy in Common, Cent. Dig. §§ 42-52; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

5. WITNESSES (§ 240*)—EXAMINATION—LEADING QUESTIONS—DISCRETION OF TRIAL COURT.

The trial court may in its discretion exclude leading questions.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 795, 837-839, 841-845; Dec. Dig. § 240.*]

6. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1170*)—REVIEW—HARMLESS ERROR.

Technical errors will be considered harmless where a reversal could not result in a different verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4032, 4060, 4075, 4098, 4101, 4454, 4540-4545; Dec. Dig. § 1170.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Greene County; Allen, Judge.

Action for petition by John O. McKeel, as administrator, against W. J. Sawry and others, in which Henry Holloman was made a party, on motion. From a judgment against defendant Holloman, he appeals. Affirmed.

This is a proceeding for the sale of land for partition and to pay the debts of the two original tenants in common out of the proceeds of sale; the balance to be divided among the tenants according to the several and respective interests. All parties have been duly brought into court by the service of process, as the court finds and adjudges in its order, October 15, 1912. It was ascertained that one Henry Holloman claimed a one-third interest in the land, as heir to Nancy Holloman, daughter of himself and his wife, Rachel Holloman (formerly Rachel Evans), who was the daughter of John Evans and his wife, Harriet Evans (formerly Harriet McKeel), who was one of the original tenants in common. Henry Holloman's wife predeceased him. The court, on motion, ordered that Henry Holloman be made a party to the end that his claim might be determined and the land sold free from any claim upon the title. He was brought in and pleaded that he was owner of one-third of the land. The court thereupon directed the following issue to be submitted to the jury: "Has the defendant, Henry Holloman, any interest in the land?" Under the instructions of the court, the jury answered this issue in the negative. There was no objection to the issue. Judgment on the verdict, and appeal by Henry Holloman, the intervener. The other facts are stated in the opinion of the court.

Geo. M. Lindsay, of Snow Hill, and L. I. Moore, of Greenville, for appellant. Finch & Connor, of Wilson, and L. V. Morrill, of Snow Hill, for appellee.

WALKER, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] We find no error in the record. The court properly ordered or permitted Henry Holloman to be made a party. The Code provides that any person may be made a party who has or claims an interest in the controversy adverse to the plaintiff or whose presence is necessary to a complete determination or settlement of the questions involved therein, and any person claiming title or right of possession to real estate may be made a party, as the case may require, to any such action. Revisal, § 410. When a complete determination of the matter cannot be had without the presence of other parties, the court must cause them to be brought in. Revisal, § 414. The power to make an adverse claimant a party to proceedings for the sale of land for assets, as this is in part, is expressly recognized. Revisal, § 76. It would be strange if it were not so under our wise and liberal system of procedure, which seeks to settle all controverted matters in one action and without circumlocution, and further it is better for all parties concerned that it should be so, in an action of this kind, in order that a good title to the land may be sold, as it will secure a better price.

[2] The order being valid, the issue, submitted without objection, both in form and substance necessarily placed the burden of proof upon Henry Holloman, who asserted his title and ownership to a one-third interest in the property, and the judge ruled correctly in this respect. Holloman virtually admitted that plaintiffs had the other two-thirds interest, and the whole if he is not their cotenant, and the real question was whether they were entitled to the whole or to only two-thirds. Their proof tended to show, and at least made out a prima facie case, that they were entitled to all of it. One test by which to determine where the burden of proof rests has been said to be: Which party would be successful, in law, if no evidence or no more evidence were given? Amos v. Hughes, 1 M. & Rob. 464. This court has once adopted the rule laid down by Taylor, for it says in Walker v. Carpenter, 144 N. C. at page 676, 57 S. E. 461, quoting from Bailey's Onus Probandi, p. 2: "In every mode of litigation an assertion of fact avails nothing without proof. Some party to it must commence by producing proof to sustain his allegation. The first rule laid down in the books on evidence is to the effect that the issue must be proved by the party who states an affirmative, not by the party who states a negative. Of course such affirmative must be one in substance and not merely in form. An eminent writer on the law of evidence says: 'This rule of convenience, which in the Roman law is thus expressed, "Si incumbit probatio, qui dicit, non qui negat," has been adopted in practice, not because it is impossible to prove a negative, but because the negative does not admit of the direct and simple proof of which the affirmative is capable; and moreover it is but reasonable and just that the party who relies upon the existence of a fact should be called upon to prove his own case.' See, also, Cox v. Lumber Co., 124 N. C. 78, 32 S. E. 381.

Plaintiffs were owners of the property, according to the proof in the case, by reason of their continuous adverse possession for more than 20 years, unless Holloman was their cotenant. He alleged that he is the owner of one-third, and they denied it. It was therefore a claim by him to be let into possession of his one-third, from which they had ousted him, and practically an action of ejectment for that purpose; plaintiffs denying that he ever had any interest in the land. Whitfield v. Boyd, 158 N. C. 451, 74 S. E. 452; Daniel v. Dixon, 79 S. E. 425, at this term. In this case Holloman is substantially an intervener, asserting his right to one-third of the property, and has the affirmative of the issue as to the title. Redman v. Ray, 123 N. C. 502, 31 S. E. 831; Maynard v. Insurance Co., 182 N. C. 711, 44 S. E. 405; Manufacturing Co. v. Tierney, 133 N. C. 630, 45 S. E. 1026. He asserts title to one-third as tenant in common, and the other parties deny his right and plead sole seisin (non tenent in simul), and the case is thus brought within the principle of Huneycutt v. Brooks, 116 N. C. 788, 21 S. E. 558. The burden, according to the facts and circumstances as they appear and in any view of them, was upon Holloman.

[3] As the burden was upon Holloman, he failed to show any title. He relied on the will of R. D. S. Dixon; but as the evidence by which he offered to show his interest, under the will, was properly excluded, there was nothing left upon which his claim could stand. There was no sufficient identification of the land described in the will. Some of the evidence rejected did not have sufficient probative force to show what land it was. There was no evidence that Dixon owned the land.

[4] The undisputed evidence of plaintiffs shows that they are the owners of the land. If Holloman ever had any interest as tenant in common with them, he lost it by their adverse possession for more than 20 years; he admitting that he did not make any claim to be let into possession of his share nor any demand for his share of the rents and profits within said time. Dobbins v. Dobbins, 141 N. C. 214, 53 S. E. 870, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 185, 115 Am. St. Rep. 682.

[5] It may be well to say, before concluding, that the court had a discretion to exclude leading questions, and we will not review the ruling for that reason. We may safely place our decision upon the single ground that the answer of Holloman shows that the title of his adversaries is not denied unless he is owner of one-third as tenant in common, and it further appears in the case that they have held possession of the premises adversely and have been in the perancy of the rents and profits for more than 20 years, title being out of the state, and he has taken no steps to recover possession of his alleged share, or his share of the rents and profits, within that time, although he had visited them occasionally. If they kept him out of possession of his share of the land and the rents, he was put to his action, and, if not prosecuted within the 20 years, the law raised a legal presumption of title in those having the possession and barred his entry. Dobbins v. Dobbins, supra; Bullin v. Hancock, 138 N. C. 198, 50 S. E. 621; Whitaker v. Jenkins, 138 N. C. 476, 51 S. E. 104. "The possession of one tenant in common is in law the possession of all the tenants in common. One may, however, dislodge or oust the others, and from the time of such ouster the possession of him who keeps out the rest is not their possession but is adverse to their claims of possession. The sole silent occupation by one of the entire property, without an account to or claim by the others, is not in law an ouster, nor furnishes evidence from which an ouster can be inferred, unless it has been continued for that length of time, which furnishes a legal presumption of the facts necessary to uphold an exclusive possession."

[8] If there were any technical errors in the rulings upon the evidence, the facts so plainly appear, and the legal inference thereupon is so well settled by the cases, that a reversal, if there was error in the respects indicated, would be vain and useless. The court would again reach the same result. We therefore sustain the judgment.

No error.

STATE et al. v. ATLANTIC & N. C. R. CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

1. RAILROADS (§ 95*)—REGULATION—VALIDITY OF ORDINANCE.

An ordinance requiring railroads on a certain street to fill the ditches beside the tracks and maintain the right of way on a reasonable grade with the street, so as to render it safe to cross the same at all points, is reasonable and valid where, although the ditches are necessary for drainage, they can be covered over or tiled at moderate expense.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 274-283; Dec. Dig. § 95.*]

2. RAILROADS (§ 94*)—REGULATION—VALIDITY OF ORDINANCE.

A railroad, though operating under legislative franchise, is subject to all reasonable police regulations that are lawfully enacted for the protection of life and property, and the acceptance of its charter is upon the implied condition that it will comply with all reasonable regulations of a town regarding the use of its streets.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 266-273; Dec. Dig. § 94.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Carteret County; Allen, Judge.

The Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad Company and the Norfolk Southern Railway Company appealed from a conviction of violating the following ordinance of Morehead City: "Be it ordained that all railroad companies having ditches along its right of way and along Arendell street are hereby required to fill the same up to a grade with the streets, and further required to maintain such right of way in a reasonable grade with said street as to render it in a condition that it can be crossed at all points with ease and safety." Affirmed.

J. F. Duncan, of Beaufort, and L. I. Moore, of New Bern, for appellants. The Attorney General and the Assistant Attorney General, for the State. E. H. Gorham, of Morehead City, for Morehead City.

BROWN, J. [1] The only matter of law presented by the several assignments of error relates to the validity of the above ordinance.

The defendant the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad was incorporated in 1854 and constructed its railroad in 1858. The defendant the Norfolk Southern is its lessee and of course bound to observe any municipal regulation that would bind its lessor. At the time the road was constructed, Morehead City was not in existence. It was incorporated in 1860 and has since grown up on both sides of the railroad for some considerable distance until it has become a flourishing town of 3,000 inhabitants.

All the evidence shows that from Twelfth street to the corporate limits of the town, at Twenty-Fourth street, ditches were opened on each side of the railroad track on the right of way, and that these ditches were necessary for the drainage of the roadbed, but that they could be covered and closed up or tiled at moderate expense. This would not only beautify the town by closing up unsightly ditches but would render the crossing of the railroad at any point by pedestrians very much safer.

[2] When the defendant accepted its charter from the state, it did so upon the condition, necessarily implied, that it would conform at its own expense to all reasonable and authorized regulations of the town as to the use of the streets and thoroughfares rendered necessary by its growth for the safety of the people and the promotion of the public convenience. It is settled beyond controversy that railroad corporations, although operating under a legislative franchise, come necessarily within the operation of all reasonable police regulations that are lawfully enacted for the protection of life and property. Railway v. Connersville, 218 U. S. 336, 31 Sup. Ct. 93, 54 L. Ed. 1060, 20 Ann. Cas. 1206.

The Supreme Court of the United States has said: "The power, whether called police, governmental, or legislative, exists in each state by appropriating enactments not forbidden by its own Constitution or by the Constitution of the United States to regulate the relative rights and duties of all persons and corporations within its jurisdiction and therefore to provide for the public convenience and the public good." Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. Ed. 336; Railroad v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 19 Sup. Ct. 465, 43 L. Ed. 702.

We think the validity of this ordinance and its reasonableness is fully sustained by the decision of this court in Railroad v. Goldsboro, 155 N. C. 356, 71 S. E. 514. It is no great hardship upon the defendants to require them to tile these ditches at their own expense. Railways not only expect cities and towns to grow up along their lines but they do much to promote their development, because they get the benefits to be derived from such growth in greatly increased business. It is simple justice, therefore, to require them to conform to such reasonable regulations of such municipalities as are necessary for the safety and convenience of the public.

No error.

BIRD v. BELL LUMBER CO. et al.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§§ 101, 102*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—MACHINERY—DUTY OF MASTER.

A master operating machinery such as is used in cotton gins must supply his servants with such equipment and appliances as are known, approved, and in general use, and a failure so to do will constitute negligence, or afford evidence from which negligence may be inferred.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 135, 171, 174, 178-184, 192; Dec. Dig. §§ 101, 102.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 238*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

Where a servant who had charge of a cotton gin, and whose duty it was to attend to repairs, used a hoe handle to shift the power belt after the shifting levers were broken, and was injured, he cannot recover from the master, as his injury was due to his own failure to have the levers repaired.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 681, 743-748; Dec. Dig. § 238.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 297*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—COMPLIANCE WITH COMMANDS.

While the orders of the master may sometimes justify conduct of a servant which would otherwise be contributory negligence, where the question of whether the master had given orders was submitted to the jury, the jury, in finding that the master was not negligent, must necessarily have determined that no order was given, and the servant cannot recover.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 1195-1198; Dec. Dig. § 297.*]

4. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 267*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—ACTIONS—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.

In an action by a servant for injuries received in his employment, there was no error in permitting the master to state when he first received notice of the servant's claim, as the time elapsed has a direct bearing on the recollection of the witnesses, and may be a relative circumstance affecting the validity of the claim.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 909, 911; Dec. Dig. § 267.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1062*)—REVIEW—HARMLESS ERROR—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

Error, if any, in the admission of certain testimony tending to show contributory negligence of plaintiff was harmless, where the jury found that defendant was not negligent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4171-4177; Dec. Dig. § 1062.*]

6. TRIAL (§ 295*)—INSTRUCTIONS—CONSTRUCTION AS A WHOLE.

In passing upon objections to the instructions, the charge as a whole is to be considered; and, where every position available to appellant was correctly referred to the jury, that portions of the instructions standing by themselves might be open to criticism does not constitute reversible error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 703-717; Dec. Dig. § 295.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wayne County; Carter, Judge.

Action by J. W. Bird against the Bell Lumber Company and others. From a judgment for the defendants, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

The action was to recover damages from defendant company for physical injuries caused by reason of the alleged negligence of said defendant in failing to supply safe and suitable equipment for a cotton gin owned by the company and operated for their benefit. The cause was submitted on the three issues: First, of negligence; second, of contributory negligence; third, damage. The jury answered the first issue in favor of defendant.

W. C. Munroe and G. B. Hood, both of Goldsboro, for appellant. Dortch & Barham and Langston & Allen, all of Goldsboro, for appellees.

HOKE, J. [1, 2] We find no reversible error on the record, assuredly none which gives plaintiff any just ground of complaint. From the facts in evidence it appears: That on the 29th day of November, 1911, plaintiff received serious physical injuries while engaged in running a cotton gin for defendant company; the said injuries being caused by reason of the endeavor on part of plaintiff to shift the power belt of the gin, using a hoe handle for the purpose. That the gin when in order was equipped with levers for the purpose, and by which the belt could be shifted without appreciable risk. We have repeatedly held that in the operation of machinery of this character the employer must supply his employés with equipment and appliances which are known, approved, and in general use, and that a failure to do so will amount to negligence, or will afford evidence from which such negligence may be inferred. In the present case, however, it was further made to appear that defendant com-med and controlled by the other de-John R. Bell and L. A. Bird, were in an extensive business, operating three large farms, two cotton gins, or three sawmills, etc.; that at the his occurrence the plaintiff, who was of one of the defendants, was over-one of these farms, having separate of the same and the gin situate as foreman and general manager;

ntiff was fully aware of the dan-dent to the defect, and while the thereby much increased, the device ple in structure, and plaintiff had ority and it was part of his duty to s and other necessary repairs made, material, tools, and facilities were for the purpose, or could have been procured. There is also evidence on of the defendant unchallenged in d that a repair shop was accessible, n this a machinist or mechanic could n had to do this work. In this aspect testimony it could very properly be ed that the plaintiff has suffered by of his own default, the case coming in the decision of Lane v. N. C. R.
54 N. C. 91, 69 S. E. 780, as follows:
loyé whose duty it is to make a secection of freight cars before they e railroad yards in a train, and to the car doors are properly fastened, and in condition, assumes the risks employment, and cannot recover damaged by a car door swinging loose n at one end of the rail at the top, ich the door runs upon wheels, when nished with appliances sufficient to defect at the bottom of the door, discernible, and when its repair ave prevented the injury complain-was insisted for plaintiff that this should not prevail against him by certain testimony tending to show acted at the time under the immedimand of the proprietors, or one of ing him at the same time assurances repairs would be made. The prinound under certain conditions. We quently held that the orders of a may, at times, justify conduct which berwise be imputed for contribuligence (Allison v. Railroad, 129 N.
0 S. E. 91; Patton v. Railroad, 96
1 S. E. 863), but there is no doubt if interpretation of the evidence is le in the present case. Speaking matter the plaintiff, a witness in his half, having stated that he was in the farm and gin, and had the rede, etc., testified that on one occa-Bell was down there when one of s had broken off, and he asked withis made it very dangerous, and eplied, "No, not very" and Mr. Bell
If you can do so, keep on and maybe things will slack up and you can fix it." Recalled, the witness in reference to this conversation said, "Mr. Bell asked me if there was any danger about the broken lever," and witness replied, "Not very much," and Mr. Bell replied, "Well, go ahead, and maybe there will come a rainy day and we could catch up and fix it." Witness further said that on one occasion his brother, Mr. Bird, was down there when both levers had broken, and witness told him about it, and he said he didn't have any timber, and would have Mr. Summerlin to fix them next morning and for witness to go ahead. It does not distinctly appear at what time this conversation with Bird took place, whether at the time of the occurrence or not. Both of the proprietors deny that they had any such conversation, and testify that, being there on different occasions, they noted that the levers were broken, and suggested or directed that they be properly repaired. It does not seem that either one of them was intending to take charge of matters, or that they were acting in displacement of plaintiff's authority as manager. Certainly under the circumstances indicated the only view of the case that would justify imputing responsibility to defendant for the injury would be that plaintiff acted on the requirement of the proprietors, or one of them, and this question was referred to the jury under a proper charge on the first issue, and they have determined the fact against the plaintiff. They have necessarily said that no such command was given, and, this being true, the plaintiff has shown no right to redress. There are objections to the rulings of the court on questions of evidence, but they do not affect the result.

[4] The defendant was allowed to ask the witness Bell when he first received notice that any claim was made against the company, and who made answer, "Nearly a year later." The time elapsed in preferring a claim has direct bearing on the recollection of the witnesses, and under certain conditions may, in itself, be a relevant circumstance affecting the validity of the claim. Wigmore on Evidence, § 284.

[5, 6] It was earnestly urged that the court improperly allowed reception of testimony tending to show careless conduct of plaintiff about the machinery on other occasions. This was evidence chiefly bearing on the second issue, that in reference to contributory negligence; and, the jury having answered the first issue in favor of plaintiff, the error if committed has become harmless. It is true his honor referred to this testimony in charging the jury on the first issue, but a perusal of the record will show that his honor was then giving a general statement of the defendants' contentions, and that he only gave the testimony legal significance in his charge on the second issue. Considering the charge as a whole, and it is right so to consider it (Kornegay v. Railroad, 154 N. C. 390, 70 S. E.

731; State v. Exum, 138 N. C. 599, 50 S. E. 283), we are of opinion that every position available to plaintiff has been fairly and correctly referred to the jury, and no reason appears for disturbing the results of the trial.

No error.

O'HAGAN et ux. v. JOHNSON et al.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

REMAINDERS (§ 16*) — SALE FOR REINVESTMENT.

Where land was limited to plaintiff for life, remainder to the heirs of his body, with a remainder over in case of death without issue, it may, under Revisal 1906, § 1590, authorizing the sale of contingent interests, be sold for reinvestment in a proceeding in which the contingent remaindermen are parties and any heirs of plaintiff's body now in esse, as well as those who may be born, are represented by a guardian ad litem.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Remainders, Cent. Dig. § 11; Dec. Dig. § 16.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Pitt County; Allen, Judge.

Action by Charles J. O'Hagan and wife against Adelaide Johnson and others to sell land for reinvestment. From a decree of sale, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

This is an action instituted for the purpose of selling certain lands for reinvestment under the provisions of section 1590 of the Revisal. The land ordered by the court to be sold for reinvestment was devised in item 1 of the last will and testament of Elvira O'Hagan, and said devise is in words as follows: "I give, devise and bequeath to my children who shall survive me, if any, all my estate, real, personal or mixed, of every kind and description, to have and to hold unto them and the heirs of their bodies forever. And should they die without heirs of their body surviving them, then and in that event, I give, devise and bequeath the same to all my brothers and sisters equally, share and share alike, and if any of my brothers and sisters shall die before my decease or the decease of my children, if I leave any, then and in that event it is my will and desire that the bodily heirs of such brother or sister shall have such a part of my estate as their parent would have taken had they been living."

The testatrix left surviving her one child, Charles J. O'Hagan, Sr., one of the parties plaintiff, who is now living, and such estate as he has by reason of said devise in said property he has conveyed to his wife, the other plaintiff herein; and the said plaintiffs commenced this action against the defendants, who are the brothers and sisters of the late Elvira O'Hagan, and the children of certain brothers and sisters, as fully set out in the complaint, and summons has been duly served upon all of the defendants as required by the statute, together with all persons who in any event may become interested in the property sought to be sold upon the happening of any contingency, and these latter persons are duly represented by a guardian ad litem, who has filed an answer in the cause.

All parties who would be interested in said land, provided the plaintiff, Charles J. O'Hagan, Sr., should die without issue, have been made parties defendant, and have been duly served with process; and all parties who might hereafter become interested in said land upon the happening of said contingency have been made parties defendant and are represented herein by a duly appointed guardian ad litem. Upon the filing of the answers the court rendered a judgment directing the sale of the property, from which the defendants appealed.

Don Gilliam, of Tarboro, for appellants. Harry Skinner and Abblon Dunn, both of Greenville, for appellees.

ALLEN, J. We have examined the record, and see no reason for disturbing the decree entered in the superior court. The proceedings are regular, and have been prepared with great care, indicating patient investigation and a familiarity with the legal principles involved. The decree is fully sustained by Springs v. Scott, 132 N. C. 548, 44 S. E. 116, Hodges v. Lipscomb, 133 N. C. 199, 45 S. E. 556, and Trust Co. v. Nicholson, 162 N. C. —, 78 S. E. 152; and upon the authority of these cases the judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

HOLT v. WELLONS.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

1. CONTRACTS (§ 10*)—CONSIDERATION—MUTUALITY.

That letters of the seller evidencing a contract of sale do not bind the purchaser to pay the consideration does not make the contract unilateral, where the letters are merely in confirmation of an agreement for the sale, and the complaint contains other allegations showing the buyer's promise to pay, which is a sufficient consideration.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 21-40; Dec. Dig. § 10.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1060*)—REVIEW—HARMLESS ERROR—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

In an action by a buyer for breach of a contract of sale, the admission of evidence that an agent of the seller asked to be notified if the buyer ever wanted any cotton, if incompetent, was harmless, as the conversation was only preliminary or preparatory to the negotiations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1068, 1069, 4153-4157, 4166; Dec. Dig. § 1050.*]

3. GAMING (§ 49*)—GAMBLING CONTRACTS—ACTIONS—EVIDENCE—ADMISSIBILITY.

In an action by the buyer for breach of a contract for the sale of cotton for future de-sideration. The contract is not void, but valid, on its face. It is argued that the plaintiff is bound by the form of the contract as contained in the letters copied into the complaint. If this be so, it does not help the defendant. The contract is still not unilateral, a nudum pactum, or otherwise void on its face, but, on the contrary, is apparently valid and binding. The letters merely confirm the sale, implying that one had already been made, and its validity was then recognized. But in the complaint distinct allegations of a binding contract are made, apart from the letters, so that in any view the demurrer must fail of its purpose. Defendants cited Rankin v. Mitchem, 141 N. C. 277, 53 S. E. 854, in support of the demurrer; but we do not see how it applies to the question now raised. The promise of the seller in that case to take the cotton back at a given price on a certain date was clearly unilateral, not binding the buyer. That is not the contract here, for this one is mutually binding.

[2, 3] 2. The testimony of W. H. Austin, manager of the Austin-Stephenson Company, as to his conversation with Allen K. Smith, president of the Keen Company, objected to by defendant and admitted, was harmless, if incompetent. It tended to prove only a request by Smith of Austin to notify the Keen Company if his company ever wished to buy any cotton. It was a mere preliminary, and only preparatory to negotiations. The contract itself was afterwards made by the Austin Company with the Keen Company, through J. W. Keen, its secretary, treasurer, and general manager. It also was relevant, as bearing upon the issue of the lawfulness of the contract, which was raised by the defendant. It tended, even if slightly, to show that an actual delivery of the cotton was intended by the parties.

3. The objection that the court admitted the indorsement on the contract to show the transfer is not meritorious. There was proof of the genuine execution of the same by the Austin-Stephenson Company to plaintiff. The handwriting was properly shown.

[4] 4. The charge on the first issue, as to the making of the contract by the parties, was correct. The court told the jury that the evidence must be believed by them, and produce in their minds a conviction that the contracts were made as alleged by the plaintiff, before they were authorized to answer the issue in favor of the plaintiff, and, if it did not produce such a conviction, they should answer the issue, "No;" if it did, their answer would be "Yes." This is sufficient, as the judge, later in the charge, distinctly placed the burden of that issue upon the plaintiff.

[5, 6] This exception is that the charge on the third issue, as to whether the contracts were founded upon a gaming consideration—a dealing in "futures"—was also sufficiently full and explicit. The burden was put upon the plaintiff to establish that they were not, or the negative of the issue, in accordance with the terms of the statute. Revisal, §§ 1689, 1690, 1691. The charge, in substance and effect, was that if the jury believed the evidence, and were convinced thereby that the parties to the contract really and in good faith contemplated an actual delivery of the cotton, and that they were not merely gambling transactions under the guise of fair and lawful dealings between them, they should answer, "No;" otherwise, their answer should be, "Yes," that they were gambling contracts, forbidden by law. This, while briefly expressed, was sufficient, and the jury could not well have failed to understand from it what was the law of the case. We think the instruction stated the general rule correctly. The contract, by its terms, not disclosing any gambling element, the matter is to be settled by ascertaining the true underlying purpose of the parties. Was it the intention of both parties that the cotton should not be delivered, and did they conceal, in the deceptive terms of a fair and lawful contract, a gambling agreement, by which they contemplated no real transaction as to the article contracted to be delivered. Edgerton v. Edgerton, 153 N. C. 167, 69 S. E. 53; Harvey v. Pettaway, 156 N. C. 375, 72 S. E. 364; Rodgers v. Bell, 156 N. C. 378, 72 S. E. 817; Burns v. Tomlinson, 147 N. C. 645, 61 S. E. 614; Rankin v. Mitchem, supra. Of course, the law deals only with realities, and not appearances—the substance, and not the shadow. It will not be misled by a mere pretense, but strips a transaction of its artificial disguise, in order to reveal its true character. It goes beneath the false and deceitful presentment to discover what the parties actually intended and agreed, knowing that "the knave counterfeits well—a good knave." It always rejects the ostensible for the real, in looking for fraud or a violation of law. The essential inquiry, therefore, in every case, is as to the necessary effect of the contract and its true purpose. We said in Edgerton v. Edgerton, supra: "The form of the contract is not conclusive in determining its validity, when it is assailed as being founded upon an illegal consideration, and as having been made in contravention of public policy. If, under the guise of a contract of sale, the real intent of the parties is merely to speculate in the rise or fall of the price, and the property is not to be delivered, but only money is to be paid by the party who loses in the venture, it is a gambling contract, and void." The rule is fully stated in 20 Cyc. 930. See, also, Williams v. Carr, 80 N. C. 295; State v. McGinnis, 138 N. C. 724, 51 S. E. 50; State v. Clayton, 138 N. C. 732, 50 S. E. 866. The principle was strongly and tersely expressed by the court in Dillaway v. Alden, 88 Me. 230, 33 Atl. 981: "When, however, there is no real transaction, no real contract for purchase or sale, but only a bet upon the rise or fall of the stock, or article of merchandise, in large or market, one party agreeing there is a rise, and the other party to pay if there is a fall in price, is a pure wager. No business is done, nothing is bought or sold, or contract. There is only a bet." Other cases on the subject are cited in Harvey v. Harvey, supra. We think the court stated correctly substantially at least.

The defendant objected because the court instructed the jury that, "if they believe the evidence," their answer to the issue should be "Yes." That issue was the corporate power of Keen Company to make the contracts. The words, "if they believe the evidence," are specially asserted, on the ground of being a dictum in the verdict; but we do not think it so construed. The evidence was all in favor of the plaintiff and besides was practically undisputed. There was but one inference to be drawn from it, and while we have often said in other cases that such form of expression is more desirable, resort to such words is not reversible error, if it has worked no prejudice. There is no harm done in this case to the jury by the use of these words, even if they are liable to commend them for general use.

In Merrell v. Dudley, 139 N. C. 777, Justice Brown (referring to the case) said: "The plaintiff also excepted to certain expressions used by the court in charging the jury: 'If you believe the evidence,' * * * is an expression urged upon our attention by the plaintiff as erroneous and prejudicial. It is in the language is inexact, and this expression should be eschewed by the court in charging juries. This court has called attention to it in a number of cases. * * * We do not regard the use of such language as reversible error, unless it appears that the appellant was prejudiced thereby, which does not appear in this case. We trust the court of the superior court will in future be content to these views as repeatedly expressed by this court"—citing cases. See Edwin v. Edwin, 145 N. C. 461, 59 S. E. 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

consideration of the whole case, no reversible error appears.

r.

SOUTHERN POWER CO. v. CASSELS.
(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Sept. 28, 1915.)

1. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 849*)—ACTIONS FOR DEFICIENCY—MODE OF PLEADING DEFENSES.

Where a purchaser of land brought an action for an alleged deficiency which was discovered upon the subsequent survey, the purchaser having the burden of proving the deficiency, the defendant might under a general denial show that the survey was only partial, and it was unnecessary to set up that fact by way of counterclaim or an answer containing new matter.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 1033, 1039-1042; Dec. Dig. § 349.*]

2. WATERS AND WATER COURSES (§ 89*) — RIGHTS OF RIPARIAN OWNER.

An owner of land abutting on a nonnavigable stream owns to the middle of the bed of the stream, and upon conveyance of his land as including a given number of acres, the submerged land should be included in the survey.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Waters and Water Courses, Cent. Dig. §§ 91, 92, 107; Dec. Dig. § 89.*]

3. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 343*)—ACTION BY PURCHASER—DEFICIENCY—WAIVER.

Where a vendor of land, upon being informed that there was a deficiency, insisted that land underneath the nonnavigable stream upon which the tract bordered should be surveyed and included, there was no waiver on his part of the right to have such land included, though he was not present at the survey, for he was entitled to assume that the surveyor would include the whole tract and everything within the metes and bounds of the deed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 1023-1029; Dec. Dig. § 343.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Fairfield County; Ernest Moore, Special Judge.

Action by the Southern Power Company against B. F. Cassels. From a judgment for defendant and from an order denying defendant's motion for new trial, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Plaintiff's requested charge that the defendant might waive having a survey made over that portion of the property conveyed which was covered by a nonnavigable stream was refused.

Osborne, Lucas & Cocke, of Charlotte, and McDonald & McDonald, of Winnsboro, for appellant. James W. Hanahan and McCants & McCants, all of Winnsboro, for respondent.

WATTS, J. This was an action tried before Special Judge Ernest Moore and a jury at the September term of court for Fairfield county. It was for an alleged deficiency of $1,692 overpaid in the purchase of a tract of land purchased by the plaintiff appellant from the defendant respondent.

[1] The jury found for the defendant, a motion for new trial was duly made and refused, and plaintiff appeals and by six exceptions challenges the correctness of his honor's ruling. By the first three he complains of error on the part of his honor in his charge to the jury; and by the fourth exception he complains of error on the part of his honor in not charging plaintiff's request as to the law of waiver; and by his fifth and sixth exceptions complains of error in not granting a new trial on the grounds set out in the motion for new trial. The appellant contends that the defendant should have answered by way of counterclaim, or set up by way of new matter, the fact that the resurvey, by which the alleged deficiency was ascertained, was partial or incomplete before he could offer evidence challenging the correctness of the survey. Plaintiff by complaint alleged that the number of acres paid for was not in the tract purchased, that it paid for 832½ acres, whereas there was only 738½, a deficiency of 94 acres. This was denied by the defendant, and defendant by his second defense alleged that there was no deficiency, but all the land he conveyed, to wit, 832½ acres, was there, and there was no deficiency under the issuable facts as made by the pleadings. The defendant could offer testimony to show there was no deficiency. The defendant asked for no judgment against the plaintiff. He had no counterclaim. He by answer denied the allegations of plaintiff's complaint as to deficiency and set up, as a special defense, that within the boundaries conveyed there was 832½ acres; and, plaintiff having alleged there was a deficiency of 94 acres within the boundaries conveyed, the burden was on it to show the deficiency. In showing this it should have had all of the boundaries resurveyed, not part. It comes into court with a partial survey of the lands purchased. It is admitted that Wateree river at this point is a nonnavigable stream. The appellant by its deed from the respondent owns to the middle of stream, and in the resurvey the land covered by this stream is not included in the resurvey. The appellant claims a deficiency, has a resurvey, and does not include in the resurvey all of the land that it purchased and is entitled to possess. We think his honor clearly was right in his construction of the pleadings and in his charge to the jury in the matters complained of and made by these exceptions. Long v. Railway Co., 50 S. C. 53, 27 S. E. 531; Latimer v. Cotton Mills, 68 S. C. 139, 44 S. E. 559; Hutchings v. Manufacturing Co., 68 S. C. 514, 47 S. E. 710. These exceptions are overruled.

[2, 3] The fourth exception complains of error on the part of his honor in not charging the plaintiff's request as to the law of waiver, etc. There was an agreement to sell, first in writing, and later a deed of conveyance made in pursuance of this agreement. Both the agreement to sell and the deed of conveyance contain the same description and boundaries. These agreements and deeds speak for themselves; and an examination of what his honor said when the request was made of him to charge the jury by the appellant convinces us that he was not in error and did or said nothing that was prejudicial to the appellant. The defendant was present and assisted at first survey. He was not present at the resurvey. He had a right to assume that the surveyor knew his business and would include the whole tract and everything in the metes and bounds set out in the deed of conveyance made by him to the appellant. There was nothing on his part to show an intentional relinquishment of a known right or such conduct on his part as to warrant such an inference. That the land was not included in the survey that was under the water of the river was the act of the surveyor and not his act. When defendant was notified that survey was unsatisfactory, he insisted that this stream be surveyed and included. This the appellant has not done, but is now in court claiming a deficiency, and does not have all that it is entitled to surveyed, and give to the court the exact deficiency, if any, although it was in its power to do so. There is no doubt that Cassels, when he conveyed, owned the land to the middle of the stream. This doctrine is fully recognized in Shands v. Triplet, 5 Rich. Eq. 76; Noble v. Cunningham, McMul. Eq. 294; State v. City of Columbia, 27 S. C. 137, 3 S. E. 55; McDaniel v. Power Co., 95 S. C. 268, 78 S. E. 980. This exception is overruled. The fifth and sixth exceptions, which complain of error in not granting a new trial, are overruled for the satisfactory reasons set out by the circuit judge in his order refusing the same.

Judgment affirmed.

GARY, C. J., and HYDRICK and WATTS, JJ., concur.

ANSLEY v. DAVIS et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 27, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

ACTION (§ 50*)—JOINDER OF CAUSES.

A plaintiff cannot join in one action two separate claims against separate defendants.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 511-547; Dec. Dig. § 50.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Action by William S. Ansley against William J. Davis and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Anderson, Felder, Rountree & Wilson, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. E. V. Carter and Roasser & Brandon, all of Atlanta, for defendants in error.

ATKINSON, J. The allegations of the petition take a wide scope, and state much that need not be alleged upon any theory of the case. The grounds of demurrer are numerous, extending to various phases of the case. The petition was dismissed on demurrer, upon what grounds it is not stated; but, if the ruling was proper upon any ground, the judgment will be affirmed.

Some of the grounds of demurrer complained that the petition was multifarious. The petition was open to that criticism. In affirming the judgment, we will not enter into a discussion of the separate claims of the plaintiff, which ought not have been joined in the first instance. One claim which the plaintiff makes by his allegations is against Davis individually. This is based upon an alleged enterprise in the nature of a partnership between the plaintiff and Davis, whereby the two were to divide in certain proportions the net profits of land bought from the Ontario Land Company, the deed conveying which was taken in the name of Davis, who paid the whole of the purchase price under the agreement between them for division of net profits after the sale of the property and deduction of the costs and expenses of the development and sale. On the strength of the allegations setting forth such relation to Davis, it was sought, among other things, to compel him to enter into an accounting with the plaintiff, and to have a court decree in favor of plaintiff for a third interest in the profits. Under the plaintiff's theory it was not an interest in the land which he was seeking to recover, but it was merely an interest in the net profits from the sale of the land, based on the alleged contract forming the joint enterprise.

Another claim of the plaintiff was that based on his right as a stockholder in the West End Park Company. It was alleged that the corporation had acquired a large amount of land, 80 per cent. of which was a part of the land included in the Ontario purchase, which had been obtained from Davis, and that the corporation had conducted a real estate business, developing and selling its property, realizing large sums from the sales, and the like. Based on such allegations, and others complaining of improper conduct on the part of Davis, Wesley, and Campbell, as officers of the company, it was sought to reduce the capital stock of the corporation, and to protect the corporation from maladministration or misfeasance of its officers. It is needless to analyze the case further to ascertain what else the plaintiff would have the court decree. The case clearly falls within the principle of Civil Code, § 5515, which prevents the joining in one action of distinct and separate claims against different persons. White v. North Ga. El. Co., 128 Ga. 539, 58 S. E. 83; Ramey v. O'Byrne, 121 Ga. 516, 49 S. E. 595; Martin v.

Brown, 129 Ga. 562, 59 S. E. 302. See, also, 16 Cyc. 239, G, (4).

It is not decided that the allegations relative to the claim against Davis, or those against the West End Park Company, set forth a cause of action, but merely that the claims were improperly drawn in one petition. If we should pass upon the merits of the several claims, it would be possible for a plaintiff to include in one action a multitude of disconnected claims against as many separate persons, and thus procure a decision upon the merits of each, and in effect avoid the rule above announced against joining in one action separate claims against separate persons.

Inasmuch as we affirm the judgment dismissing the action on the ground alone that it was multifarious, direction is given that the judgment be so modified as to rest upon that ground only, and so as not to prejudice any right of the plaintiff as to other grounds as being adjudicated by reason of the general form of the judgment originally entered.

Judgment affirmed, with direction. All the Justices concur.

SOUTHERN RY. CO. v. GARLAND.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 24, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The exceptions to the charge of the court and to the rulings made during the trial are without merit.

2. SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The evidence is sufficient to support the verdict.

Error from Superior Court, Stephens County; J. B. Jones, Judge.

Action between the Southern Railway Company and N. L. Garland. Judgment for the latter, and the former brings error. Affirmed.

Fermor Barrett and De W. Owen, both of Toccoa, and A. G. & Julian McCurry, of Hartwell, for plaintiff in error. Claude Bond, of Toccoa, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

ROBINSON v. FURR.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 979*)—REVIEW—DISCRETION OF TRIAL COURT—MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

No error of law being complained of, and the evidence being sufficient to support the verdict, the discretion of the trial judge in refusing a new trial will not be disturbed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3871-3873, 3877; Dec. Dig. § 979.*]

Error from Superior Court, White County; K. B. Jones, Judge.

Action between M. L. Robinson and W. P. Furr. From a judgment for Furr, Robinson brings error. Affirmed.

G. S. Kytie and C. H. Edwards, both of Cleveland, for plaintiff in error. J. C. Edwards, of Clarkesville, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

MACKLE-CRAWFORD CONST. CO. v.
WARD.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 24, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PETITION NOT SUBJECT TO DEMURRER.

All of the Justices are of the opinion that the petition was not subject to general demurrer.

2. SPECIAL DEMURRER—PROPRIETY OF RULING ON—CURE BY AMENDMENT.

Fish, C. J., and Beck and Atkinson, JJ., are of the opinion that the special demurrers should have been sustained. Evans, P. J., and Lumpkin and Hill, JJ., are of the opinion that the special demurrers were properly overruled.

(a) As to the demurrer based on the ground that conflicting theories were presented, it is conceded in the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error that this was cured by amendment.

3. SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

All of the Justices are of the opinion that there was sufficient evidence to authorize the verdict.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Action by Andrew Ward against the Mackle-Crawford Construction Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Smith, Hammond & Smith, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. W. R. Hammond, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

PER CURIAM. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

BUTLER v. TATTNALL BANK et al.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 24, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

FALSE IMPRISONMENT (§ 7*)—ARREST ON ORDER ABSOLUTE—GOOD FAITH—PERSONS LIABLE.

A judge of the superior court made an order in a case against a sheriff for failing to pay over money in his hands and directed the clerk of the court to issue instantan "an attachment for contempt of court against the said * * * sheriff, as provided in section 4774 of the Civil Code" of 1895 (Civ. Code 1910, § 5346), and in pursuance of the order the clerk issued an attachment absolute against the sheriff named, which was directed to the coroner and to all and singular the sheriffs of the state, except the sheriff of the county against whom the attachment was issued, and the sheriff of an adjoining county executed the attachment by arresting the sheriff named therein and placing him in jail. Upon habeas corpus proceedings being brought against the jailor, the judge hearing the case discharged the sheriff. The sheriff then brought suit against the clerk of the superior court issuing the attachment, the sheriff making the arrest, and the bank ordering the arrest, for damages for false imprisonment. There was no allegation in the petition that the proceedings against the sheriff were not in good faith, nor was there anything in the petition to show bad faith on the part of the defendants. A demurrer to the petition was filed by all of the defendants, which was sustained by the court. Held, that the order directing the clerk of the superior court to issue an attachment for contempt is to be construed as an order absolute.

(a) The clerk of the court was authorized and required to issue the attachment absolute under which the plaintiff was arrested, and his doing so would not subject him to a suit for damages.

(b) Neither the bank directing the arrest to be made nor the sheriff making the arrest was liable in damages therefor; no bad faith being alleged against either.

(c) The court did not err in sustaining the demurrer.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see False Imprisonment, Cent. Dig. §§ 5-61, 79; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

Error from Superior Court, Bryan County; W. W. Sheppard, Judge.

Action by C. C. Butler against P. I. Rimes and others. A demurrer to the petition was sustained, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

C. C. Butler brought suit against P. I. Rimes of Bryan county, J. A. Kennedy of Tattnall county, and the Tattnall Bank, and alleged substantially as follows: The defendants have damaged him in the sum of $10,129.75, as hereinafter set out. On the 16th day of December, Judge Seabrook, of the Atlantic circuit, upon the petition of the Tattnall Bank, issued an order directing P. I. Rimes, as clerk of the superior court of Bryan county, to issue an attachment for contempt of court against the plaintiff as sheriff of Bryan county, under section 4774 of the Civil Code of 1895. The Tattnall Bank caused P. I. Rimes, as clerk, to disobey the order of the judge and caused the clerk to issue a process or proceeding directed to the coroner of Bryan county and to the sheriffs of the state, excepting the county of Bryan, commanding them to arrest the body of petitioner and imprison him in the common jail of Bryan county. Kennedy, the sheriff of Tattnall county, at the instance of the Tattnall Bank, came to Bryan county and arrested petitioner and placed him in Chatham county jail. A writ of habeas corpus was sued out before Judge Charlton, of the superior court of Chatham county, and he sustained the grounds of the habeas corpus and ordered petitioner discharged. No exceptions were taken to the order of discharge. The Tattnall Bank had no legal right to cause the clerk of the superior court of Bryan county to issue any process or proceeding for the imprisonment of the plaintiff and had no right to cause the sheriff, Kennedy, of Tatt-nall county to arrest and imprison him in the jail of Chatham county. Rimes, the clerk, had no legal right to issue process for the imprisonment of plaintiff, and Kennedy had no legal right to come to Bryan county and arrest plaintiff and imprison him. All these acts were done at the instance of the Tatt-nall Bank and its officers for the purpose of enforcing the collection of a debt and in furtherance of a desire on the part of the defendants to imprison the plaintiff. At the time of his imprisonment plaintiff's time was worth $2 per day, and he was imprisoned 12 days. While he was in prison he was forced to employ counsel at an expense of $100 and to pay the sum of $5.75 costs, etc. By reason of the illegal arrest and imprisonment plaintiff was subjected to public ridicule, scorn, and contempt, and thus he suffered great humiliation, mortification, shame, and mental pain in the sum of $10,000.

The petition for habeas corpus, addressed to Judge Charlton, of the superior court of the Eastern judicial circuit, together with the proceedings thereunder, was attached to the petition as an exhibit and showed in substance that petitioner was the duly elected, commissioned, and bonded sheriff of Bryan county for and during the years 1909 and 1910, and that he was restrained of his liberty under a certain attachment or process issued by the clerk of the superior court of Bryan county commanding them to arrest the body of petitioner and to commit him to jail until he purged himself of an alleged contempt of court. He was arrested under this attachment by Kennedy, the sheriff of Tatt-nall county. On May 5, 1910, petitioner was served with a rule nisi to show cause, on May 21st, why he should not pay over to the Tatt-nall Bank certain money held by him and claimed by the bank to be due on a fi. fa., or why, in default thereof, he should not be attached for contempt. On May 21st, in obedience to the rule nisi, the plaintiff appeared before the court and filed his sworn answer to the rule and denied that the money had ever been demanded of him by the Tatt-nall Bank or that he had ever refused to pay over the money. He also showed that certain claims had been lodged with him against the money, and that he had declined to pay it over except by direction of court.

At the November term, 1910, of Bryan superior court (Judge Parker presiding), the following order was passed: "Upon the answer filed by the sheriff, and Solomon Moody by his attorney, R. F. C. Smith, Esquire, consenting, it is ordered that the funds in the hands of Charles C. Butler, sheriff, $427.50 be paid out as follows: ——— dollars and cents costs of this rule, $28 to the satisfaction of balance due upon the fi. fa. the Tatt-nall Bank v. Solomon Moody, Maker, and R. H. Levant, E. J. Stafford, and Jackson Bacon, Endorsers, and that the remainder of said $427.50 be paid over to the Tatt-nall Bank, or its attorneys of record, Kelly & Smith, on the execution of the Tatt-nall Bank v. E. J. Stafford, Maker, Alex Nail and Solomon Moody, Endorsers. It is further ordered by the court that the funds herein directed to be paid be paid within ten days from this date. This November 8, 1910. T. A. Parker, Judge Waycross Circuit, presiding. R. F. C. Smith, Attorney for Solomon Moody, consenting."

On December 16th Judge Seabrook made the following order: "It appearing to the court that on November 8th, and during the November term, 1910, of the superior court of Bryan county, the honorable T. A. Parker, judge of the Waycross circuit, presiding, the court in the foregoing stated proceedings granted an order absolute, directing Charles C. Butler, sheriff of Bryan county, to pay over to the Tatt-nall Bank or its attorneys of record, Kelly & Smith, $427.50, and that said amount should be paid within ten days from the date of said order, and it further appearing that no part of said amount has been paid except $28, and of said amount ordered to be paid over the said Charles C. Butler has failed and refuses to pay over the sum of $399.50 so ordered to be paid, it is therefore, upon motion of movant's attorneys, ordered that the clerk of this court do issue instantan an attachment for contempt of court against the said Charles C. Butler, sheriff, as provided in section 4774 of the Civil Code. This December 16, 1910. Paul E. Seabrook, Judge S. C., A. J. C. Ga."

On December 19, 1910, the clerk of the superior court of Bryan county issued the following attachment and process: "Georgia, Bryan County. To the Coroner of Said County of Bryan and to All and Singular the Sheriffs of said State, Excepting the Sheriff of the County of Bryan—Greeting: A rule absolute, having, at the November term, 1910, of the superior court of said county, held on the 8th day of November, 1910, been granted against Charles C. Butler, sheriff of said county of Bryan, requiring him to pay over, within ten days from the date of said order, November 8, 1910, to the Tatt-nall Bank or its attorneys of record, Kelly & Smith, the sum of $399.50, and he having made default in the payment of said funds, and the honorable Paul E. Seabrook, judge of the superior court of Bryan county, having ordered an attachment for contempt of court to issue: These are therefore to command you to arrest the body of the said Charles C. Butler, sheriff of Bryan county, as aforesaid, and commit him to the common jail of said county, or to such jail as in which the prisoners of Bryan county are usually kept, and there to be confined and safely kept without bail or mainprize until he purge himself of the said contempt aforesaid by paying over the aforesaid sums of money with 20 per cent.

interest thereon from December 19, 1910, to the said Tattnall Bank or its lawful attorneys. Witness the honorable Paul E. Seabrook, judge of said court, this the 19th day of December, 1910. P. I. Rimes, Clerk Superior Court, Bryan County, Ga. J. A. Kennedy, Sheriff, Tattnall County." By virtue of this attachment, J. A. Kennedy, the sheriff of Tattnall county, arrested petitioner and placed him in Chatham county jail.

The petition for habeas corpus alleges that the attachment proceedings against petitioner were not called in open court at the November term, 1910, of Bryan superior court; that he was not a party to the consent order as taken by the attorneys for the Tattnall Bank and the attorneys for Solomon Moody; that he did not know that the order or rule absolute for the payment of the money had been taken until afterwards; that, after his answer of May 21, 1910, had been filed, the jail and jailor's residence in Bryan county were destroyed by fire, and the money which he was holding was burned up and destroyed in the fire, along with his household and other personal effects; that the money has not been and is not now in his possession, custody, or control since the fire, and it is not within his power to produce it, and from his poverty he cannot replace it; that his answer of May 21st has never been amended, and he has never pleaded as a defense that the money was destroyed by fire, etc.; that the rule nisi as served upon him has never been concluded against him, except in so far as making the rule absolute, requiring the payment of the money within ten days; and that there has never been any rule absolute in attachment for contempt of court against him, nor has he ever been adjudged in contempt of court upon such proceedings, etc.

A demurrer to the suit for damages was filed by all of the defendants. It was sustained, and the case was dismissed, whereupon the plaintiff excepted.

J. H. Smith and R. F. O. Smith, both of Eden, for plaintiff in error. P. W. Meldrim, of Savannah, and Kelley & Smith and H. H. Elders, all of Reidsville, for defendants in error.

HILL, J. (after stating the facts as above). Section 4447 of the Civil Code provides as follows: "False imprisonment consists in the unlawful detention of the person of another, for any length of time, whereby he is deprived of his personal liberty." Section 4448 provides: "If the imprisonment is by virtue of a warrant, neither the party bona fide suing out nor the officer who in good faith executes the same is guilty of false imprisonment, though the warrant be defective in form, or be void for want of jurisdiction. In such cases the good faith must be determined from the circumstances of each case. The same is true of the judicial officer issuing the warrant, the presumption being always against him, as to good faith, when he has no jurisdiction."

The process issued by the clerk of the superior court of Bryan county, under which the plaintiff was arrested and placed in jail, was in the nature of a warrant. Williams v. Sewell, 121 Ga. 685 (6), 49 S. E. 266; Berger v. Saul, 113 Ga. 869, 871, 326; Page v. Citizens' Banking Co., 73, 86, 86 S. E. 418, 423 (51 L. R. A. 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

The order being held to be an order absolute, and it directing the clerk to issue an attachment for contempt of court," etc., the clerk was within his authority in issuing the attachment absolute, which the plaintiff was arrested. As being so, he would not be subject to a writ of damages brought against him for issuing an attachment absolute. Nor would the clerk who arrested the plaintiff under this order, nor the bank which directed the attachment to be made, be liable in damages for acting in good faith in so doing, believing the order to be a valid one. The ground of Judge Charlton's decision in the habeas corpus case, by which the plaintiff was released from jail, does not appear; but, on the basis of that decision, neither the plaintiff nor the defendants was a party to that case, and they are not bound by the judgment there rendered. It is not alleged in the petition for damages that the sheriff who made the arrest, nor the bank which ordered the attachment in bad faith, and there are no facts in the record tending to show that either of them, acted otherwise than in good faith; and, this being true, the petition does not set forth a good cause of action. Code, § 4448. It follows from what is

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 436-444; Dec. Dig. § 176.*]

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1758-1765; Dec. Dig. § 397.*]

3. TIME (§ 9*)—COMPUTATION — DAYS — NOTICE OF DEPOSITIONS.

In taking depositions of certain witnesses, there was no compliance with the statute in regard to the time of giving notice to the opposite party, and on appropriate objection it was erroneous to admit the depositions in evidence at the trial of the case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Time, Cent. Dig. §§ 11-32; Dec. Dig. § 9.*]

4. EVIDENCE (§ 434*)—PAROL—FRAUD—NOTES.

Testimony tending to show that the defendant was induced to sign the note for the stock by false statements of the agents of the payee, in regard to the financial worth of the corporation, and the personnel of its directors, was not inadmissible on the ground that the evidence failed to show fraud in the procurement of the note, or that it tended to vary the terms of the written contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2005-2020; Dec. Dig. § 434.*]

5. TRIAL (§ 252*)—INSTRUCTIONS—APPLICABILITY TO EVIDENCE.

There was no evidence of failure of consideration. There was evidence of fraud upon the maker, practiced by the agent of the payee, which induced execution of the note; but there was no evidence to show notice thereof to the plaintiff at the time it took the note, or to charge it with notice of the fraud. There being no evidence to authorize it, the judge erred in charging on subject of failure of consideration, and on the subject of fraud perpetrated by the payee upon the maker of the note.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 505, 598-612; Dec. Dig. § 252.*]

Error from Superior Court, Franklin County; D. W. Meadows, Judge.

Action by the Bank of Lavonia against G. F. Bush and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

The Bank of Lavonia, a corporation located in Franklin county, Ga., instituted an action in the superior court of that county upon a negotiable promissory note against George F. Bush, as principle, the Ulaca Company, a corporation of the county of Fulton, as indorser, and Moorefield & Bishop, a partnership of Fulton county, as sureties. The note was dated February 16, 1910, and due December 16, 1910. It was signed by Bush, as maker, was payable to the order of the Ulaca Company, and recited the consideration "for value received." It was alleged in the petition that the note was indorsed over to the plaintiff on the 5th day of March, 1910, and that on the same day it was signed by Moorefield & Bishop, as sureties. No defense was filed except by Bush, who interposed an answer alleging, among other things, that the Ulaca Company, through its agents, represented to the defendant that the company was solvent, and had $40,000 or $50,000 cash in bank with which to do business, did not need the money from defendant's note, and would not discount it, and that the agent in the name of the company entered into a contract with the defendant that the stock was bought upon the condition that, if defendant was dissatisfied with the stock by the fall of 1910, the note would be returned to him, and the subscription canceled, and further guaranteed to defendant a dividend of 15 per cent. on the stock, and agreed that, if the dividend was not paid, the note would be returned and canceled. Other allegations were: That the agent represented that designated persons were directors of the company; that defendant knew the persons to be of high integrity and financial responsibility, and was influenced thereby to give the note; that all of the representations so made by the Ulaca Company, through its agent, were false and fraudulently made to procure the note, and defendant rescinded the transaction entirely as soon as he learned that he had been deceived; that the consideration for which the note had been given entirely failed; and that the plaintiff bought the note, at a discount of about 33½ per cent. from the face value, from an entire stranger, knowing that the defendant was entirely solvent, and having notice that there were conditions which, if not fulfilled, would relieve defendant of liability, and notice of defendant's defenses to the note before it purchased the same. A verdict was returned in favor of the defendant. The plaintiff made a motion for a new trial, which contained the usual general grounds, and by amendment others which complained of rulings on the admissibility of evidence and the charge of the court. Other facts will sufficiently appear from the opinion.

H. H. Chandler, of Lavonia, and Jas. H. Skelton, of Hartwell, for plaintiff in error. Watkins & Lattimer, of Atlanta, George L. Goode and W. R. Little, both of Carnesville, for defendants in error.

ATKINSON, J. [1] 1. The general grounds are not referred to in the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error, and will be treated as abandoned.

[2] 2. The fourth, fifth, and sixth grounds of the amended motion for new trial complain of the admission of the testimony of the defendant, to the effect that the company guaranteed him a specified dividend, and if it was not paid his note would be returned, and that if he became dissatisfied at any time before the note became due the company would return his note, and take up the stock. The objection urged to the admissibility of the testimony was that it was irrelevant, and sought to vary the terms expressed in the note. The note was an unconditional promise to pay a specified sum for value received, and apparently expressed the entire agreement between the parties. The testimony would in effect ingraft conditions upon it which would materially change the contract, and there was no pleading or evidence that the conditions thus sought to be ingrafted were intended to be put in the note and were omitted therefrom through fraud or mistake. It was erroneous, therefore, to admit the evidence. Smith v. Baker, 137 Ga. 298, 72 S. E. 1093; L. & N. R. Co. v. Willbanks, 133 Ga. 15, 65 S. E. 86, 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 374, 17 Ann. Cas. 860.

[3] 3. The seventh and eighth grounds complain that the court erred in admitting the depositions of designated witnesses over objection made by plaintiff's attorney, which was that the depositions were taken without giving the plaintiff the five days' notice as required by section 5910 of the Civil Code. The notice was given on the 19th, and it appointed the 23d day of the same month for taking the depositions of witnesses. It thus appeared that the statute was not complied with. The plaintiff, being the party notified, did not waive the point, but made objection to the taking of the depositions at the commencement of the examination of the witnesses, and thereafter on the trial appropriately objected to the testimony.

[4] 4. The next three grounds complain of the admission of evidence which tended to show that the Ulaca Company did not have on hand at any time as much money as defendant testified the agents of the company represented to him the company had at the time he took the stock and gave his note. The objection to this testimony was that it was irrelevant. The twelfth ground complains of the court's ruling in allowing the defendant to testify as to the circumstances under which he was induced to give the note. He testified that the agent of the company represented to him that the company was organized at $100,000 capital stock, and had about $40,000 or $50,000 to do business on, that this amount was in cash in the treasury, that there were several men that he (the agent) wished to become stockholders, including defendant, so that he would get stock scattered throughout north Georgia in order to strengthen the influence of the corporation, and that designated persons were directors; and, in response to the question of how much stock any one person could hold, the agent replied to the defendant, "Not over $6,500." As to the effect that the statement that designated persons were stockholders had on the defendant, "that was one of the main points why [he] agreed to take the stock." This evidence was objected to on the ground that it did not show fraud in the procurement of the note, and that it was in conflict with the terms of the note, and sought to vary the contract between the parties. When considered in connection with other evidence in the case, to the effect that the Ulaca Company did not have the amount of money which the agent represented to defendant, and that the persons designated as directors were not such, and that the defendant was induced to take the stock and execute the note on the strength of such representations, the objection to the evidence was not well founded.

[5] 5. The thirteenth ground of the amended motion complains that the judge charged the following: "Now, if you believe that the circumstances under which this note was bought by the bank were sufficient to put the bank on notice that these defenses existed, and if you believe that the bank by proper inquiry could have determined before purchasing the notes that these defenses did exist from any of these circumstances, why, then, in that event, you go further in your investigation, and determine whether or not the signature was procured by fraud, whether or not the maker of this note could defend, under the rules of law, against the payees of the note, the Ulaca Company. If you should determine there was such fraud in the procurement of the signature of this note practiced by the Ulaca Company or its agents, and such failure of consideration as is pleaded, and believe that the other pleas filed in the case are sustained, any one or all of them, then the defendant could resist the payment of this note; and if you believe they were such as to make this note uncollectible against the defendant in the hands of the Ulaca Company, and the Lavonia Bank had notice or could have had it of the existence of this, then you would be authorized to find for the defendant in this case." The criticism upon the charge was that it was unauthorized by the evidence. In that portion of the charge the judge made reference to the plea of failure of consideration. There was no evidence to authorize the charge on failure of consideration. The defendant bought the stock of the corporation, for which he gave the note, and received and retained the stock. It would not constitute a failure of consideration merely because the purchase of the stock was not a good investment. The charge also invoked the question raised by the defendant as to fraud of the Ulaca Company perpetrated on defendant, by which he was induced to buy the stock, for which he gave the note. Concerning this question, there was evidence to the effect that the agent of the corporation, in making the sale of the stock to the defendant, and procuring the note, falsely represented that designated persons of good character and financial standing were directors of the corporation, whose connection with the corporation would give it prestige, and that the agent also made false representations to the effect that the corporation had ample capital with which to conduct its business, and thereby induced the defendant to have faith in the enterprise, and subscribe for its stock. Evidence to this effect did not tend merely to contradict the note, or vary its terms; but its effect was to go behind the note, and show that defendant was induced to make it on account of false representations, upon which he acted to his injury. Other evidence was to the effect that the company did not at any time have money on hand approaching even remotely the amount that it was represented to have, and was never able to declare a dividend, but, after being engaged in business for about a year, was insolvent, and to avoid being closed up sold out to a new corporation, taking in payment the stock of such corporation, and the latter company was then declared a bankrupt. It could not be said that there was no evidence of fraud. Fraud of this character, however, would not affect the plaintiff, who was shown to be a purchaser of the note for value before its maturity, unless the plaintiff had notice or was charged with notice of the fraud at the time it became the holder. The burden of showing notice to the plaintiff was on the defendant, the maker of the note. There was no evidence of actual notice. It is contended that the facts shown to have been known by the plaintiff were sufficient to charge notice. The evidence on this subject was to the following effect: Moorefield and Bishop were partners. They, with others, applied for a charter in the superior court of Fulton county for the Ulaca Company, and organized thereunder for the manufacture and sale of nonalcoholic drinks. The amount of capital stock authorized to be issued was $100,000. Several agents were sent out to sell stock in the state at large. The defendant resided in Franklin county. He and a number of other citizens were canvassed, and became purchasers of the stock. Notes were generally taken in payment for the stock, and afterwards sold by other agents, including Moorefield and Bishop, wherever they could get them discounted. Moorefield applied to the plaintiff, a bank located in Franklin county, to discount the note of the defendant and a number of notes of other citizens of the county, amounting in the aggregate to about $5,000, and they were all discounted at the same time. This was about the time Moorefield met the cashier of the bank, and was his first transaction with him, though not Bishop's first transaction with that institution. The cashier knew that the Ulaca Company was selling stock in that county through Moorefield and Bishop, and knew the defendant by reputation. The defendant's note was for $1,000, payable to the Ulaca Company one year after date, and was discounted shortly after its execution, according to the testimony of Moorefield, at about 25 per cent. from its face value. Moorefield also testified that the cashier knew that the note was given for the stock in the Ulaca Company, and assigned as a reason for charging a high discount that it was "stock paper," and there was risk about it, and "the thing may bust." The cashier testified that before taking any of the notes he tried to telephone each of the several makers to inquire about their respective notes, and each stated that his note was all right, except the defendant and one other whom he could not reach. He inquired of another to know if the defendant's note was good for $1,000, and was informed that it was. Two days after the notes were discounted the cashier wrote defendant a letter, advising him that the bank held the note which it had bought and paid for, and asked to be advised "if there were any conditions to it." Two days later a reply came, announcing that "there are conditions which I expect to be fulfilled before paying the note." There is nothing in these facts pointing to the fraud of which the defendant complains, namely, fraud of the agent of the Ulaca Company in misrepresenting to the defendant the personnel of the directors of the corporation, and the amount of its cash assets. Representations of this character primarily were in the breast of the original parties, and would remain so unless communicated to others. While the plaintiff's cashier made some inquiry about the notes which he discounted, the responses so far as obtained were favorable to the negotiability of the notes. And whatever weight might be attributed to the circumstances that, two days after discounting defendant's note, the cashier wrote to the defendant to know if there were any conditions to it, the answer received did not suggest that there had been representations as to the personnel of the directorship, or as to the cash of the corporation on hand, or that any representations made by the agent selling the stock were false. The circumstances were insufficient to charge notice of the fraud.

The plaintiff being holder for value, and there being no evidence to show that it took the note with notice of fraud perpetrated on the maker by the agent of the payee, or evidence to charge notice of such fraud. It was error to charge on the subject. Civil Code, §§ 4288, 4291; Morrison v. Hart, 122 Ga. 660, 50 S. E. 471; Oliver v. Miller, 130 Ga. 72, 60 S. E. 254. This ruling disposes also of the fourteenth and fifteenth grounds of the motion for new trial, which complain of the charge of fraud, and notice thereof.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

HODGES v. STUART LUMBER CO.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. July 19, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. JUDGMENT (§ 668*)—RES JUDICATA—ACTIONS AGAINST CORPORATIONS—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.

The court did not err in excluding from evidence the following entry of service of another suit previously brought by the plaintiff in the present case against another party: "Georgia, Decatur County. I have this day served H. M. Graham personally with a copy of the within original, and T. C. Wainman by leaving a copy of the within original at his most notorious place of abode. This May 8, 1902. A. W. Fordham, Sheriff." This entry of service did not show service upon the defendant so as to make it bound by the judgment in the other suit, under the provision of the Civil Code 1910, § 5579.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 1181-1183, 1188; Dec. Dig. § 668.*]

2. PROCESS (§ 148*)—SERVICE—EVIDENCE AS TO SERVICE—CONTRADICTORY RETURN.

Nor did the court err in refusing to permit one who was the attorney at law for the plaintiff in the other suit to testify that he had instructed the sheriff to serve the defendant in the present suit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Process, Cent. Dig. § 201; Dec. Dig. § 148.*]

3. PROCESS (§ 164*)—PROOF OF SERVICE—AMENDMENT.

The court did not err in refusing to allow an amendment of the entry of service (the entry of service just quoted above) so as to show that the "service was on the Stuart Lumber Company by serving H. M. Graham, the general manager."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Process, Cent. Dig. §§ 176, 239-248; Dec. Dig. § 164.*]

4. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS (§ 130*)—PROPERTY—RIGHT OF POSSESSION—EVIDENCE.

The plaintiff having failed to produce any evidence to establish facts which were held, when this case was formerly before the Supreme Court, to be essential for him to show in order to make out a case, he was not entitled to recover on the last hearing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 535, 537-540; Dec. Dig. § 130.*]

Error from Superior Court, Decatur County; Frank Park, Judge.

Action by C. S. Hodges, administrator, against the Stuart Lumber Company. Judgment for the defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

G. G. Bower, Russell & Custer, and Bower & Bower, all of Bainbridge, for plaintiff in error. M. E. O'Neal, Donalson & Donalson, and Erle M. Donalson, all of Bainbridge, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. Hodges, as administrator of Alley Huguley, brought suit against the Stuart Lumber Company to recover damages for alleged trespass, which consisted in the cutting of timbers on certain described lands. There was proof submitted showing that the defendants had cut and removed timber of the alleged value. At the conclusion of the evidence the court directed a verdict for the defendant, and the plaintiff excepted.

[1] 1. Suit had been previously brought against Sharpe & Drake by the plaintiff in the present case to recover the land from which it is alleged timber had been cut and carried away. That suit resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff. Upon the petition in that former suit there was the following entry: "Georgia, Decatur County. I have this day served H. M. Graham personally with a copy of the within original, and T.

C. Wainman by leaving a copy of the within original at his most notorious place of abode This May 8, 1902. A. W. Fordham, Sheriff." And when this was offered in evidence by the plaintiff, it was objected to on the ground that it was irrelevant and immaterial, and this objection was sustained. We think the court correctly held that the evidence was inadmissible. The purpose of offering the entry of service in evidence was to show that the defendant in the present case was bound by the judgment in the former suit of Hodges, Administrator, v. Sharpe & Drake, under the provision of the Civil Code, § 5579, which reads as follows: "A plaintiff in ejectment may in all cases make the true claimant defendant by serving a copy of the pending action upon him, and the person so notified shall be bound by the judgment." But the service upon Graham personally, or upon Wainman personally, was not service upon the Stuart Lumber Company, and did not make the Stuart Lumber Company a party to that suit, so as to have the effect of making the judgment rendered in that suit binding upon the defendant in the present suit.

[2] 2. Nor did the court err in refusing to permit one who was the attorney at law for the plaintiff in the other suit to testify that he had instructed the sheriff to serve the defendant in the present suit.

[3] 3. The plaintiff then introduced the following evidence: "Amos Fordham, sworn for the plaintiff, testified: 'I wrote that entry myself. I think I served H. M. Graham. Mr. Graham was working with the Stuart Lumber Company. I left a copy with him; he was at his office at Brinson, the office of the Stuart Lumber Company.' C. S. Hodges, recalled for the plaintiff, testified: 'That Graham was in charge of the Stuart Lumber Company's business as general manager.'" And after this evidence was introduced, the plaintiff moved the court "to allow Amos Fordham, as sheriff of Decatur county, to amend his original entry of service [the entry of service just quoted] in the suit of Hodges, Administrator, v. Sharpe & Drake, so as to show that said service was on the Stuart Lumber Company by serving H. M. Graham, the general manager." The court refused to allow the amendment, and this is excepted to. Even if it would have been competent to make an amendment of this character to the entry of service by one shown to be in office at the time of making the amendment, the court did not err in refusing to allow this amendment in the absence of proof that Fordham was at the time of the trial the sheriff of Decatur county. The motion to allow Fordham, "as sheriff of Decatur county," was not evidence that he was in fact sheriff at that time, nor did the fact that Fordham was sheriff in 1902 afford a presumption that he was sheriff on the 14th day of November, 1911, at which time it was proposed to have him amend the entry of service.

[4] 4. Having failed to amend the entry of service upon the petition in the case of Hodges, Administrator, v. Sharpe & Drake, there was no competent evidence in the case that Stuart Lumber Company had been served with a copy of that action, and, that being true, the Stuart Lumber Company was not bound by the verdict and judgment therein. Hence the Stuart Lumber Company was let into its defense, and had the right to show that the administration of Hodges was a stale administration, and it was actually shown by evidence introduced by the defendant in this case that the will of Alley Huguley had been probated in the year 1847, that the executor qualified, and that the present administrator, Hodges, took out the letters of administration in the year 1900. The administrator, Hodges, testified that he knows the lot of land No. 186 in the Twenty-First district of Decatur county; that the same belongs to the estate of Alley Huguley; that the same is in the possession of the administrator; that the timber was cut on this lot of land by the Stuart Lumber Company while the lot was in his possession as administrator in 1903 and 1904; that the damage to said land was the value of the timber, which he estimated to be worth $1,200, and he knew how to estimate timber, and knew the value of the timber at that time; that at the time that the original suit was brought for the lot of land he was in the turpentine business, and needed the lot for turpentine purposes; that he got appointed administrator; that no one asked him to become administrator; that he went to Wilkes county to see about it; that he never saw any of the heirs of Alley Huguley; that there were no debts against the estate of Alley Huguley that he knew of, nor were there any debts owing to the estate of Alley Huguley; and that he did not know how long Alley Huguley had been dead when he was appointed administrator.

When this case was here before, on a bill of exceptions sued out by this same plaintiff in error to review the judgment of the court below granting the defendant in the present case a new trial, it was said, in the course of the decision affirming that judgment, that: "The case turns upon the question whether the administrator with the will annexed is vested with the right to recover the possession of the land. If not, he cannot bring an action of trespass. The administrator with the will annexed has all the power of the executor, except such as arises from personal trust and confidence. Civil Code [1895] § 3309. When an executor assents to a devise or a legacy, all interest of the estate in the property passes out of him. The assent is generally irrevocable, and this is true although the remainder of the assets are insufficient to pay the debts. Watkins v. Gilmore, 121 Ga. 488 [49 S. E. 598]. After the lapse of 20 years there is a presumption that the executor has assented to a legacy. Flemister v. Flemister, 83 Ga. 79 [9 S. E. 724]; Phillips v. Smith, 119 Ga. 556 [46 S. E. 640]. After the lapse of 20 years it is legitimate to presume that all the debts of the estate have been paid. Coleman v. Lane, 26 Ga. 515. Should there not be, also, after such lapse of time, a presumption that there has been a distribution, either in kind or in money, if the will requires a sale and a division of the proceeds? * * * Certainly it must be the law that as against a second administration, granted more than 20 years after the death of the decedent and the time for final settlement under the first administration, it is legitimate to presume, in behalf of a possessor, that there has been a final settlement, and that the right of the legal representative to recover had passed out of him, either by assent to legacies or sales in conformity to the provisions in the will, or in some other way known to the law, and cast upon the legal representative, whose appointment was so long delayed, the burden of showing that there had been no final settlement by his predecessor. See, in this connection, Bullock v. Dunbar, 114 Ga. 754, 40 S. E. 783; Woolfolk v. Beatty, 18 Ga. 520; Daniel v. Sapp, 20 Ga. 514. To quiet title such a presumption is absolutely necessary." Hodges v. Stuart Lumber Co., 128 Ga. 735, 58 S. E. 355. We think that the doctrine here announced is entirely sound, and an examination of the record shows that the administrator, Hodges, failed entirely to carry the burden which this decision declared rested upon him, and, having failed to carry the burden, he has failed to show that he is entitled to recover in this case. The Stuart Lumber Company relied, in part, upon a deed in this case from Wainman, which was executed in the year 1901, before service of a copy of the action of Hodges, administrator, against Sharpe & Drake was effected upon Wainman. And, even if the entry of service of that suit should have been admitted to show that Wainman was bound by the judgment in the Sharpe & Drake Case, this would not have affected the Stuart Lumber Company's case, or their right to rely upon the deed of Wainman for whatever it was worth. But we are of the opinion that, independently of this deed from Wainman, the Stuart Lumber Company could rely upon a defense that Hodges, as administrator, had no right, under the facts and circumstances of this case, to maintain, as administrator (whatever are his rights now as a party in possession), an action against them for the recovery of the land or any timber that they may have cut from it.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur

JAMES G. WILSON MFG. CO. v. CHAMBERLIN-JOHNSON-DU BOSE CO.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 26, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MECHANICS' LIENS (§§ 191, 253*)—FORECLOSURE—DEFENSE—PROPERTY SUBJECT TO LIEN.

"Want of title in the defendant to the premises on which the lien is claimed, and alleged title in a third person, who is no party to the suit, will not bar an action for foreclosing and enforcing the statutory lien of a materialman." If the defendant "has any interest in the premises upon which the lien can take effect, that interest is bound." Ford v. Wilson, 85 Ga. 109, 11 S. E. 559; Porter v. Wilder, 62 Ga. 521 (6), 527. See Jennings v. Huggins, 125 Ga. 338, 340, 54 S. E. 169.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. §§ 333, 444-446; Dec. Dig. §§ 191, 253.*]

2. EXECUTION (§ 31*)—PROPERTY SUBJECT TO SEIZURE AND SALE.

"Every legal interest in real and personal property can be" seized and sold. "The debtor and defendant will not be permitted to deny the title, or set it up in any one else." Pitts v. Hendrix, 6 Ga. 452; Whitley v. Newsom, 10 Ga. 74; Jackson v. Graham, 3 Caines (N. Y.) 188. An estate for years may be bought and sold as any other estate. Clark v. Herring, 43 Ga. 227.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 76-82, 86, 87; Dec. Dig. § 31.*]

3. MECHANICS' LIENS (§ 191*)—PROPERTY SUBJECT—LEASEHOLD ESTATE—"TRUE OWNER."

The words "true owner," as used in Civil Code 1910, § 3352, providing for liens of materialmen and all persons furnishing material for the improvement of real estate, are sufficiently comprehensive to include the owner of a leasehold estate, and the liens therein provided for may attach to the interest of a lessee, who has an estate for years in the demised premises, subject to the conditions of the lease. 2 Jones on Liens, § 1272; Phillips on Mechanics' Liens, § 39; 27 Cyc. 30; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 301, 303; the numerous cases cited by these authorities in support of the proposition announced; also the note to Crutcher v. Block in 14 Ann. Cas. 1029 (19 Okl. 246, 91 Pac. 895). That a laborer or mechanic is entitled to a lien on whatever interest his employer had in the property at the time the work was done or the materials were furnished has been recognized by this court in a number of cases, namely: Harman v. Allen, 11 Ga. 45; Callaway v. Freeman, 29 Ga. 408, 410; Breed v. Nagle, 46 Ga. 112 (3); Walker v. Burt, 57 Ga. 20 (2); Gaskill v. Davis, 61 Ga. 645 (3); Reppard v. Morrison, 120 Ga. 28, 47 S. E. 554; Central of Ga. Ry. Co. v. Shiver, 125 Ga. 218, 53 S. E. 610.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 333; Dec. Dig. § 191.*]

4. MECHANICS' LIENS (§ 191*)—LEASE—ESTATE FOR YEARS—MATERIALMAN'S LIEN.

In 1910 a private corporation leased from the owners thereof certain city lots for a term of 21 years, agreeing to pay specified annual rentals, and, after the first year, all taxes, assessments, insurance premiums, and expenses for repairs, and agreeing, further, to tear down the building then on the premises, and to erect in its stead a building in accordance with certain plans and specifications, with the right to add improvements thereto, or to replace it with a building or buildings to cost not less than the one replaced, and equally adaptable to general business purposes; also stipulating to keep the building or buildings insured to three-fourths of their value and for the lessor's protection, and, should the same be injured or destroyed by fire or other casualty during the term, to have them repaired or replaced, and, at the expiration of the lease, to deliver the premises in good condition to the lessors, the building then on the premises to become their property; the lessee having the right to sublet the premises, provided "the business to be conducted therein be not of an objectionable character." Held, that the lessee had an estate for years in the leased premises, and that a materialman's lien could attach to and be enforced against such interest, subject to the conditions of the lease.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 333; Dec. Dig. § 191.*]

5. NONSUIT—ERROR.

Under the evidence for the plaintiff, the court erred in granting a nonsuit.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; W. D. Ellis, Judge.

Action by the James G. Wilson Manufacturing Company against the Chamberlin-Johnson-Du Bose Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Leonard Haas, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Smith, Hammond & Smith and Dodd & Dodd, all of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

FISH, C. J. Judgment reversed.

ATKINSON and HILL, JJ., disqualified. The other Justices concur.

PENTON et al. v. HALL.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

RECEIVERS (§ 77*)—CUSTODY OF PROPERTY—BAILMENT—RESTORATION TO OWNER.

Where the status of a receiver with respect to property which has come into his hands by virtue of the receivership is that of a mere bailee, equity will restore possession of the property to one whom it has permitted to file an intervention setting up a claim thereto, where the latter establishes the right of possession and a title superior to all others, except the owner of a note and agreement of conditional sale, who has the legal title until a balance of the purchase price is paid by the intervenor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Receivers, Cent. Dig. §§ 91, 138-144; Dec. Dig. § 77.*]

Error from Superior Court, Chatham County; W. G. Charlton, Judge.

Action by George R. Penton against Leo G. Hall and others in which a receiver was appointed and J. R. Hall intervened. Judgment for intervenor, and plaintiff and the receiver bring error. Affirmed.

Edward S. Elliott, of Savannah, for plaintiffs in error. Thos. F. Walsh, Jr., of Savannah, for defendant in error.

HILL, J. In proceedings brought by George R. Penton against Leo G. Hall and others, a receiver was appointed, who took charge of certain property as being that of the defendants. By leave of court, J. R. Hall filed an intervention, setting up that two horses which thus went into the custody of the receiver belonged to him, and asked that they be taken from the custody of the receiver and returned to him, alleging that the defendants had no interest, title, or property therein. Upon the trial of the intervention the court directed a verdict finding the two horses to be the property of the intervenor. A motion for a new trial, made by the plaintiff and the receiver, was overruled, and they excepted.

The only testimony introduced on the trial was that of the intervenor, which was to the effect that he bought one of the horses from a named person, and that it belonged to him; that he bought the other horse under a conditional sale agreement, and still owed a portion of the purchase price to the holder of the note and agreement; and that he had loaned the horses to the defendants. The special assignments of error were to the effect that the intervenor could not recover without showing title in himself; that as to one horse the evidence showed the title was in the holder of the conditional sale agreement; and that, possession being shown in the receiver, the intervenor was not entitled to possession without showing title in himself, or a higher right than the receiver's, which he failed to do, having shown title to a third person. Under the evidence, one of the horses belonged outright to the intervenor; and the question is whether the court was authorized to direct a verdict in favor of the intervenor for both horses, the legal title to one of them being in a third person.

In an ordinary claim case, where an execution has been levied on property, it has been held that "the interest which will support a claim under our statute is any interest which renders the property not subject to the levying fi. fa. or attachment, or which is inconsistent with the plaintiff's right to proceed in selling the property." Wade v. Hamilton, 30 Ga. 450. And see Hurley v. Epps, 89 Ga. 611; Rowland v. Gregg, 122 Ga. 819, 50 S. E. 949. Under these decisions, had the property been levied on while in the custody of the defendants, for whom the receiver was appointed, J. R. Hall (the intervenor) would have had such an interest therein that he could have arrested the proceedings by filing a claim to the property. Property duly acquired by a receiver is in custodia legis. Tindall v. Nisbet, 113 Ga. 1114, 39 S. E. 450, 55 L. R. A. 225; Wikle v. Silva, 70 Ga. 717. The receiver, of course, took only such rights in the property as were held by those for whom he was appointed receiver (Moise v. Chapman, 24 Ga. 249; Crine v. Davis, 68 Ga. 138), and, according to the evidence, the defendants were mere bailees of the horses, as borrowers from the intervenor. Equity, of course, will protect the receiver's possession from unauthorized interference. Marshall v. Lockett, 76 Ga. 289; Woodburn v. Smith, 96 Ga. 241, 22 S. E. 964.

But where, as in this case, it permits one claiming the property to file his intervention, seeking to have its possession restored to him, and on the trial it is made to appear that the only right of the receiver is that of a mere bailee, as successor to the status of those from whom he acquired the property, and the intervenor further shows in himself a right of possession and a superior title as against every one other than the holder of a note and agreement of conditional sale, who retains the legal title pending the payment of the balance of the purchase money by the intervenor—facts which would be sufficient to sustain a claim at law—equity will restore the possession where it rightfully belongs, to wit, to the intervenor. It follows that the court properly directed a verdict awarding the property to the intervenor.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

PEEPLIES et al. v. WILSON.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 26, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1052*)—RULINGS ON EVIDENCE—PREJUDICE.

By Civil Code 1910, § 4212, it is declared: "If the original deed be lost, a copy from the registry, if duly recorded, shall be admitted in evidence whenever the court is satisfied of the fact of loss or destruction; and to this fact the party may be a witness."

(a) No question as to the correctness of the record being involved, it is not proper, over objection, to admit the original record to show the contents of a lost deed; but the admission of such record will not require a new trial, where a certified copy of the record was subsequently introduced in evidence during the trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4171-4177; Dec. Dig. § 1052.*]

2. ADVERSE POSSESSION (§ 79*)—COLOR OF TITLE—SHERIFF'S DEED.

A sheriff's deed to land, executed to one who purchases at a tax sale, though not accompanied by the tax fi. fa. under which the land was sold, is good as color of title. Beverly v. Burke, 14 Ga. 70; Burkhalter v. Edwards, 16 Ga. 593 (2), 596, 60 Am. Dec. 744; Hester v. Coats, 22 Ga. 56 (1), 58; Sutton v. McLoud, 26 Ga. 638 (2); Hammond v. Crosby, 68 Ga. 767 (1); Wade v. Garrett, 100 Ga. 270, 84 S. E. 572.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 450-462; Dec. Dig. § 79.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1041*)—PLEADINGS—AMENDMENTS—HARMLESS ERROR.

Even if an amendment to the plaintiff's petition, praying that the defendant be required to bring his title deeds under which he claimed the land in controversy into court to be surrenceeded, ought not to have been allowance was not error requiring a re the jury did not find in favor illation, and the court did not de deeds be canceled.

—For other cases, see Appeal and Dig. §§ 4106-4109; Dec. Dig. §

POINTS OF ERROR—EVIDENCE—VER-

er assignments of error are with- evidence required a verdict for and the court did not err in re- trial.

a Superior Court, Murray Coun- ite, Judge.

between William Peebles and others Wilson. Judgment for the latter, ner bring error. Affirmed.

g and W. W. Sampler, both of e, for plaintiffs in error. Mad- ny & Shumate, of Dalton, and of Spring Place, for defendant in Judgment affirmed. All the cur.

ON FIRE INS. CO. OF PHIL- ELPHIA v. BRACKIN.

Court of Georgia. Oct. 2, 1913.)

Syllabus by the Court.

E (§ 618*)—CONSTITUTIONAL LAW 19, 305*) — VENUE OF ACTIONS COMPANIES — STATUTORY PROVI- E PROCESS OF LAW — PRIVILEGES S—EQUAL PROTECTION OF LAWS. e 1910, § 2563, provides that suit and against an insurance com- agencies or more than one place of in this state may be brought in re an agent or place of doing busi- company was located at the time the ion accrued, or the contract was which said cause of action arose, company may have no agent or gress business in such county at the on is instituted. Held:

is portion of said section is not in the provision of the Constitution requiring that all civil cases, other pecifically excepted, shall be tried ty where the defendant resides. tral R., etc., Co., 17 Ga. 323; Ga. 52 Ga. 410 (2); Merritt v. Cotton ns. Co., 55 Ga. 103, 110; Savan- Co. v. Atkinson, 94 Ga. 780-783, 0; Gilbert v. Ga. R., etc., Co., 104 415, 30 S. E. 673; Ga. R., etc., feld, 138 Ga. 670, 75 S. E. 981. f Empire State Insurance Co. v. a. 376, and Atlanta Home Insur- Tullis, 99 Ga. 225, 25 S. E. 401, ted on and explained in Peters v. ance Co., 137 Ga. 440, 73 S. E.

ws that the portion of the Code e referred to does not contravene n in the Constitution of this state on shall be deprived of property ex- process of law.

it in conflict with the clause of the of the United States which de- state shall make or enforce any all abridge the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liber- ty, or property without due process of law, nor deny any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." The part of the Code section under consideration applies a like to all insurance companies doing business in this state, domestic as well as foreign.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1536-1539; Dec. Dig. § 618; * Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 625-648, 710, 925-927; Dec. Dig. § 203, 249, 305.*]

2. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 309*)—"DUE PRO- CESS OF LAW"—SERVICE OF PROCESS.

Civ. Code 1910, § 2564, provides that, in an action of the character referred to in the preceding note, service may be perfected upon the insurance company by leaving a copy of the petition or writ where the agency or place of doing business was located in the county at the time the cause of action accrued, or the contract was made out of which the same arose. This provision of the Code section is unconstitutional, because violative of the due process clause of both the state and federal Constitutions. One of the essential elements of "due process of law," to which every one is entitled before he can be lawfully deprived of his property, is notice of the procedure against him. This notice must not be dependent upon chance, and must at least be such as with reasonable probability will apprise him of the pendency of the proceeding. McElreath of the Constitution of Georgia, § 1104; 3 Words and Phrases, 2227 et seq. Manifestly, leaving a copy of the petition or writ at the place where the insurance company had formerly an agency or place of doing business in a county, but where the company had no agent or place of doing business at the time of the bringing of the suit, cannot be such notice as in this respect will constitute due process of law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitution- al Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 929, 930; Dec. Dig. § 309.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 3, pp. 2227-2256; vol. 8, p. 7644.]

3. INSURANCE (§ 626*) — ACTIONS AGAINST COMPANIES—SERVICE OF PROCESS.

An action was brought against a foreign insurance company on a fire policy, in the superior court of the county wherein an agent and place of doing business were located when the policy was issued and the cause of action arose thereon; there being, however, no agent or place of doing business in such county at the time the suit was instituted. The petition alleged that the defendant company had duly appointed and authorized a named person resident in another county of the state to acknowledge or receive service of process and upon whom process might be served in suits against the company. A second original and process thereon were issued by the clerk of the court in which the suit was brought, for the county in which such agent resided, the process being directed to the sheriff and his deputies of that county; and such agent was there duly served, and the second original and process, with entry of service, were duly returned to the court wherein the suit was pending. Held, that this constituted legal service upon the defendant, and that a motion to dismiss the case for want of lawful service was properly denied. See Devereux v. Atlanta Railway, etc., Co., 111 Ga. 855, 36 S. E. 939, wherein, as the record filed in this court shows, service was perfected in exactly the same way as in the case at bar; also Ga. R., etc., Co. v. Bennefield, 138 Ga. 670, 75 S. E. 981, and cases cited. There was no ruling made in the case of United States Casualty Co. v. Newman, 137 Ga. 447, 73 S. E. 667, which conflicts with what we now hold. In that case no question was made as to the constitutionality of the provision in Civ. Code 1910, § 2564, for effecting service by leaving a copy of the original suit and process at the agency or place of doing business of a defendant insurance company at the time of the making of the contract out of which the suit arose, and therefore it was said that, as the statute provided a plain method of perfecting service in the county where the suit was brought, there was no necessity or authority for the issuance of a second original for service upon the person resident in another county, who had been designated by the defendant company as its agent and attorney upon whom service could be made. As we have now held such method of service not to be lawful, there is a necessity, as was held in Devereux v. Atlanta Railway, etc., Co., supra, that service be perfected by the issuance of a second original, as was done in the present case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 1572; Dec. Dig. § 628.*]

Evans, P. J., dissenting.

Error from Superior Court, Decatur County; Frank Park, Judge.

Action by J. B. Brackin against the Jefferson Fire Insurance Company of Philadelphia. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Smith, Hammond & Smith, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. T. S. Hawes, of Bainbridge, for defendant in error.

FISH, C. J. Judgment affirmed. The other Justices concur, except EVANS, P. J. (dissenting). I cannot agree that the Legislature may constitutionally enact that the venue of an action against a corporation may be located in a county other than where the corporation is doing business at the time suit is filed. I agree that the Legislature may fix the residence of a corporation which it creates, but this privilege and right is subordinate to the constitutional command that suits (with certain exceptions) must be located in the county of the defendant's residence. The Legislature may declare a corporation to be a resident of a county where it is engaged in business at the time of the suit, but cannot declare a corporation to be a resident of a county for purposes of suit, where it neither has property nor agency or agent, nor is engaged in transacting any business, without violating the Constitution.

BROTHERS et al. v. HORNE.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 27, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 596*)—DEGREE OF PROOF—NATURE OF ACTION.

"In all civil cases the preponderance of testimony is considered sufficient to produce mental conviction. In criminal cases a greater strength of mental conviction is held necessary to justify a verdict of guilty." Civ. Code 1910, § 5730.

(a) Trover being a civil case, a preponderance of evidence in favor of the plaintiff is sufficient to authorize a recovery, although the contention of the plaintiff be that the defendant came into possession of the property sued for by committing a crime. Atlanta Journal v. Mayson, 92 Ga. 640, 18 S. E. 1010, 44 Am. St. Rep. 104; Drakeford v. Adams, 98 Ga. 722, 25 S. E. 833.

(b) The court in such a case having correctly instructed the jury as to the meaning and application of the rule of preponderance of evidence, it was not cause for a new trial to refuse a written request to give a charge to the effect that, before the plaintiff could recover, the evidence must be sufficient to establish the crime and that the defendants committed it, not beyond a reasonable doubt, but to the reasonable satisfaction of the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2446-2448; Dec. Dig. § 596.*]

2. TROVER AND CONVERSION (§ 25*)—PERSONS LIABLE—STOLEN PROPERTY—CONSPIRACY.

If two persons conspire to steal certain personality, and one of them actually commits the larceny, while the other is present aiding and abetting the theft in pursuance of the conspiracy, both are liable in trover brought by the owner against them; and the fact that the abettor never takes actual possession of the stolen property, or any portion thereof, but all of it is appropriated to his own use by the one who actually commits the theft, does not relieve the abettor from liability in trover for all of the stolen property. See Merchants', etc., Transportation Co. v. Moore, 124 Ga. 482, 52 S. E. 802, wherein it was held: "Any distinct act of dominion wrongfully asserted over another's property in denial of his right, or inconsistent with it, is a 'conversion.' It is unnecessary to show that the defendant applied it to his own use, if he exercised dominion over it in defiance of the owner's right, or in a manner inconsistent with it. It is in law a conversion, whether it be for his own or any other's use." The instructions on this theory of the case were not erroneous for any reason assigned.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trover and Conversion, Cent. Dig. §§ 173-180; Dec. Dig. § 25.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 2, pp. 1562-1570; vol. 8, p. 7618.]

3. TRIAL (§§ 194, 252*)—DUTY TO PRODUCE—EFFECT OF FAILURE—INSTRUCTIONS.

The following instruction was given to the jury: "The defendant Wilson contends that the diamond introduced in evidence is not the diamond of the plaintiff, but is the diamond he received from one Rembert. * * * I charge you * * * that if he chooses to rely upon his own evidence, and not produce the witness Rembert, if within his power, the presumption of law is that Rembert would not so swear if he were here; the presumption is against him, and you would consider that as a circumstance in determining whether or not he is liable in this case." The judge then read to the jury Civ. Code 1910, § 5749, which is as follows: "Where a party has evidence in his power and within his reach, by which he may repel a claim or charge against him, and omits to produce it, or, having more certain and satisfactory evidence in his power, relies on that which is of a weaker and inferior nature, a presumption arises that the charge or claim is well founded; but this presumption may be rebutted." It appeared on the trial that Rembert was not, at the time of the trial, a resident of the county of Whitfield, where the case was tried. There was no positive evidence as to where he resided, though a witness for the plaintiff testified that he thought Rembert was then in Atlanta; but it does not appear that Wilson knew where

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Rembert then resided. It further appeared that Wilson on previous trials where the ownership of the diamond was in issue, stated that he got it from Rembert. The presumption against a party for withholding or suppressing evidence within his control or reach is not one of law, but of fact. Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Gray, 77 Ga. 440, 3 S. E. 153, citing Starkie's Evidence, 486. See Weinkle v. Brunswick, etc., R. Co., 107 Ga. 367 (4), 372, 33 S. E. 471. There was nothing to show that Rembert was in any way under the power and control of the defendant Wilson, or that as a witness, if he were accessible at all, he was not as much so to the plaintiff as to Wilson. It was therefore reversible error, as to Wilson, to read the Code section to the jury. Anderson v. Southern Ry. Co., 107 Ga. 500 (2), 508, 33 S. E. 644; Central Ry. Co. v. Bernstein, 113 Ga. 175 (5), 180, 38 S. E. 394.

Moreover, the instruction was erroneous for the reason that it informed the jury, in effect, that the testimony of the defendant Wilson was of a weaker and inferior nature than the testimony of Rembert would have been, had he testified in the case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 413, 436, 439-441, 446-454, 456-466, 505, 596-612; Dec. Dig. §§ 194, 252.*]

4. EXCEPTIONS—INSTRUCTIONS.

The exceptions to other instructions were not meritorious.

5. TROVER AND CONVERSION (§ 40*)—REQUISITES OF ACTION—POSSESSION.

There was no evidence that the defendant Brothers was ever in possession of any of the jewelry for which the action was brought; nor was there any evidence connecting him with its theft, sufficient to authorize a verdict against him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trover and Conversion, Cent. Dig. §§ 232-244; Dec. Dig. § 40.*]

6. RIGHT TO NEW TRIAL.

Both defendants should have been granted a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Whitfield County; A. W. Flite, Judge.

Action by Mrs. M. M. Horne against Frank Brothers and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants bring error. Reversed.

Maddox, McCamy & Shumate, of Dalton, for plaintiffs in error. M. C. Tarver, of Dalton, for defendant in error.

FISH, C. J. Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

SEDLMEYR v. CITY OF FITZGERALD. (Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 27, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

ELECTRICITY (§ 19*)—ELECTRIC LIGHT WIRES—DEFECTIVE INSULATION—DEATH—ACTION—PETITION.

Bertha Sedlmeyr instituted suit against the city of Fitzgerald for damages on account of the homicide of her 16 year old unmarried son, on whom she was dependent, and who contributed substantially to her support, alleging in substance as follows: The defendant owned and operated an electric light system, and maintained certain electric wires stretched on poles along a designated alley, 20 feet and 4 inches above and parallel with the ground, which wires on a designated day were heavily charged with electricity. J. J. Terry owned a house, 20 feet high, which he decided to remove to a new location, and in order to do so it was necessary to cross the alley at a designated place. He obtained permission from the defendant, through its mayor, "who was authorized to grant such permission," to move the house across the alley to a new location. Plaintiff's son was employed by Terry's contractor as a common laborer to assist in moving the house. In moving the house across the alley, the chimney came in contact with the wires, and it became necessary to lift them over the chimney. The contractor furnished plaintiff's son with a wooden stick, about 3 feet long, and directed him to go upon the house and lift the wires above the chimney. He proceeded to execute the command, and touched the wires with the stick, releasing them, whereupon they rebounded and came in contact with him, and an electric current passed through his body, killing him instantly. The wires, at the place of the catastrophe, were not insulated at all; the insulation having rotted or worn off, and having been permitted to exist in such condition for a sufficient length of time to bring notice home to the city of the defective condition. They had been permitted to remain with the same insulation from the time they were insulated in 1899 until 1909, without any inspection or repairs. If the wires had been properly insulated, the injury could not have occurred. Ordinary inspection by the city would have disclosed the defective insulation of the wires. The dangerous condition of the wires left without insulation was the proximate cause of the injury. Plaintiff's son was inexperienced and unacquainted with the dangers incident to electricity, and of coming in contact with wires of an electric plant, and could not by the exercise of ordinary care have known that it was dangerous for him to touch the wires with a wooden stick, when the defendant's wires were in the condition in which they were afterwards ascertained to be. Held:

1. The petition as amended set forth a cause of action, and was not subject to general demurrer. See Atlanta Con. St. Ry. Co. v. Owings, 97 Ga. 663, 25 S. E. 377, 33 L. R. A. 798; Denson v. Ga. Ry. & El. Co., 135 Ga. 132, 68 S. E. 1113; Shearman & Redfield on Negligence, § 698; Minneapolis Gen. El. Co. v. Cronon, 166 Fed. 651, 92 C. C. A. 345, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 816; Cyc. 475 (III).

2. The several grounds of special demurrer were met by amendment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Electricity, Cent. Dig. § 11; Dec. Dig. § 19.*]

Beck, J., dissenting.

Error from Superior Court, Ben Hill County; W. F. George, Judge.

Action by Bertha Sedlmeyr against the City of Fitzgerald. From an order sustaining a demurrer to the petition, plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Max Isaac, of Brunswick, for plaintiff in error. Elkins & Wall, of Fitzgerald, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur, except BECK, J., dissenting.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rev'r Indexes

ARNOLD GROCERY CO. v. SHACKELFORD.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 24, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS (§§ 21, 29*)—CONTRACTS—ACCOUNT—ACTIONS BY TRUSTEE IN BANKRUPTCY.

The statute of limitations for the institution of actions on open accounts or for breach of contract, express or implied, as set forth in the Civil Code 1910, §§ 4362, 4368, does not apply to an action by a trustee in bankruptcy, under section 60b of the Bankruptcy Act (Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, 30 Stat. 562 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3445]), against a transferee for value of goods received from the bankrupt in payment of a pre-existing debt less than four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, Cent. Dig. §§ 90-99, 532; Dec. Dig. §§ 21, 29.*]

2. BANKRUPTCY (§ 298*)—BANKRUPT'S TRUSTEE—ACTIONS—LIMITATIONS.

The Bankruptcy Act (July 1, 1898, c. 541, 30 Stat. 544 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3418]), which conferred upon trustees in bankruptcy the right to institute actions of the character mentioned in the preceding note, also fixed a statute of limitations applicable to such cases. (a) The action was not barred.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Cent. Dig. §§ 430-443; Dec. Dig. § 298.*]

Error from Superior Court, Clarke County; C. H. Brand, Judge.

Action by T. J. Shackelford, trustee, against the Arnold Grocery Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

On March 15, 1907, upon an involuntary petition in bankruptcy, T. H. Wofford upon his admission of insolvency was adjudged a bankrupt. T. J. Shackelford was duly appointed trustee. On February 8, 1907, the Arnold Grocery Company received from Wofford various and sundry dry goods, clothing, hats, etc., from his stock of merchandise in settlement of a pre-existing debt. Before the estate in bankruptcy was closed, the trustee filed a suit in the superior court against the Arnold Grocery Company on March 4, 1911, for the recovery of the alleged value of the goods, on the ground that the transfer of the goods was preferential and fraudulent as against the creditors, and void under the bankrupt act. The defendant filed an answer, which, so far as material to be stated, alleged "that, as more than four years have elapsed between said date (the date of transfer, February 8, 1907) and the time of the filing of this suit, said claim of trustee, if any ever existed, became barred by the statute of limitations, and this defendant pleads that fact in bar of the plaintiff's cause of action in this case." When the case came on for trial, it was submitted to the judge for decision, without the intervention of a jury, on an agreed statement that the facts were to the effect above stated, and that settlement of the account by delivery of the goods constituted a preference voidable under the bankrupt act, if the action was brought within the proper time. Judgment was rendered against the plea, setting up the bar by the statute of limitations, and in favor of the plaintiff for the amount set forth in the agreed statement of facts. The defendant excepted.

Cobb & Erwin, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. G. A. Johns, of Winder, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. [1] 1. The defendant below, who became the plaintiff in error in the Supreme Court, contends that under the statute of limitations of this state (Civil Code, §§ 4362, 4368), more than four years having intervened between the date of the transfer of the goods and the date of the commencement of the action by the trustee for the recovery of their value, the action was barred. The plaintiff below, who became the defendant in error, insisted that, on account of the provision of section 11d of the bankrupt act of 1898, "Suits shall not be brought by or against a trustee of a bankrupt estate subsequent to two years after the estate has been closed," the trustee was not barred. In the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error it was stated that the question for decision is whether the suit instituted by the trustee is barred under the four-year limitation act of the state statute, or whether the trustee has two years after the closing of the estate in which to bring suit, regardless of the running of the state statute of limitations, and regardless of the length of time that may issue before the estate is closed. This was conceded in the brief of the plaintiff in error to be the only question involved, and no other was discussed. Civil Code, § 4362, declares: "All actions upon open account, or for the breach of any contract not under the hand of the party sought to be charged, or upon any implied assumpsit or undertaking, shall be brought within four years after the right of action accrues;" and section 4368 declares: "All other actions upon contracts express or implied, not hereinbefore provided for, must be brought within four years from the accrual of the right of action." The limitations for the institution of actions provided for by these statutes of the state do not apply to the present case. The Arnold Grocery Company bought the goods in payment of a pre-existing debt, and consequently there was no contract, either express or implied, to pay for them. It was not suggested that the purchase was made to defraud creditors, or for other reasons that it was void at common law or under the statutes of this state. The action was therefore in no sense upon the open account, or for breach of contract, either express or implied, and would not be barred under state law as embodied in the above sections of the Code. Except for the Bankruptcy Act, the trustee could have had no action on account of the purchase of these goods by the Arnold Grocery Company. That act contained provisions under which the trustee was authorized to sue the Arnold Grocery Company for the value of the goods, merely by reason of the fact that the transfer was made within less than four months from the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, notwithstanding it was made in pursuance of a sale in payment of a pre-existing debt, which was in other respects valid.

[2] 2. It was declared in section 60b of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898: "If a bankrupt shall have given a preference within four months before the filing of a petition, or after filing the petition or before the adjudication, and the person receiving it, or to be benefited thereby, or his agent acting therein, shall have had reasonable cause to believe that it was intended thereby to give a preference, it shall be voidable by the trustee, and he may recover the property or its value from such person." 30 Stat. 532 (1 Fed. Stat. Ann. 674, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3445). This was amended in 1903 (32 Stat. part 1, p. 799, 10 Fed. Stat. Ann. 47, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1506) by adding thereto the following: "And for the purpose of such recovery any court of bankruptcy, as hereinbefore defined, and any state court which would have had jurisdiction if bankruptcy had not intervened, shall have concurrent jurisdiction." Section 60b, thus amended, was further amended by the act of 1910. 36 Stat. 342 (1 Fed. Stat. Ann. Supp. 1912, p. 729, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1507). The last amendment added new matter not affecting the case, without repealing any of the existing provisions of the act. The transfer was made in 1907, and all the right the trustee had to sue the transferee was by virtue of section 60b of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, as amended in 1903. The action was brought under this law. Article 1, § 8, par. 4, of the Constitution of the United States, confers upon Congress the power "to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcy throughout the United States." In pursuance of this power Congress has established the law hereinbefore designated, upon which the plaintiff's action is based. Had it not been for this law, conceding, as the plaintiff does, that the Arnold Grocery Company received the goods in good faith, in payment of the debt, unaffected with fraud against creditors, the act of the Arnold Grocery Company would not have been actionable, and, except for this law, the trustee in bankruptcy would have had no power to sue. The law so adopted by Congress, in addition to conferring upon a trustee in bankruptcy the right to sue a transferee of the property received from the bankrupt under specified conditions, also expressly declared that the state courts and bankruptcy courts should have concurrent jurisdiction of suits under the Bankrupt Act, and also provided, as set forth in section 11d, a statute of limitations for actions against the trustee or by the trustee.

Counsel for plaintiff in error concede that, if the terms of the statute are to be construed as conflicting with the state law on the subject of limitations of actions, it will prevail over the state law. Relative to conflicting laws of this character, see Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 4 Sup. Ct. 170, 312, 28 L. Ed. 279; Arnsen v. Murphy, 109 U. S. 238, 3 Sup. Ct. 184, 27 L. Ed. 920; State v. Gatzweiler, 49 Mo. 17, 8 Am. Rep. 119; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. Ed. 606. But counsel insist that under a proper construction there is no conflict, and that section 11d of the bankrupt act does not affect the statute of limitations adopted by the state. The burden of argument of counsel is upon the construction of this statute. Attention is called to the policy of the law to have the causes speedily determined, and of the hardships that might occur where a trustee should keep a bankrupt estate open for a great length of time. Under the bankrupt act of 1867 (Act March 2, 1867, c. 176, 14 Stat. 517; Revised Stat. U. S. 5057) the actions by or against an assignee in bankruptcy, touching any property transferred to or invested in such assignee, were required to be brought within two years from the time when the cause of action accrued for or against the assignee. This was applied as a statute of limitations. Freeland v. Holloman, 9 N. B. R. 331, Fed. Cas. No. 5081; Avery v. Cleary, 132 U. S. 604, 10 Sup. Ct. 220, 33 L. Ed. 469; Jenkins v. International Bank, 106 U. S. 571, 2 Sup. Ct. 1, 27 L. Ed. 304; Bailey v. Glover, 88 U. S. (21 Wall.) 342, 22 L. Ed. 636. In the last case the statute was construed, and the policy of the law declared: Mr. Justice Miller, among other things, saying that, to prevent the estate being wasted in litigation and delay: "Congress has said to the assignee: You shall commence no suit two years after the cause of action has accrued to you, nor shall you be harassed by suits when the cause of action has accrued more than two years against you. Within that time the estate ought to be nearly settled up and your functions discharged, and we close the door to all litigation not commenced before it has elapsed." After the decision of that case, when the bankrupt act of 1898 was adopted, it contained no provision limiting the time of commencing the actions by or against the trustee in bankruptcy to two years from the time the cause of action originated, but in lieu thereof contained the provision hereinbefore set forth, section 11d, which was substantially different, particularly in that the time in which suits were to be instituted by or against the trustee was restricted to two years from the time of the closing of the estate. Like the former statute, this was undoubtedly intended as a statute of limitations, relatively to actions by the trustee, growing out of the bankrupt act, and to enforce that law; but it contemplated a change of the time concerning such matters as to which a trustee might sue or be sued, so that there would be no bar relatively to them while the estate was being administered by the trustee, nor until two years after it had been closed. Section 60b of the bankrupt act was not designed in any event to give the bankrupt a cause of action against the transferee, and therefore a case under that statute would stand on a different footing from a suit on some right of the bankrupt which might, by operation of law under section 70a of the bankrupt act, have passed from the bankrupt to the trustee. Section 11d was manifestly intended to apply, among others, to cases falling under section 60b of the act, to the exclusion of any other statute of limitations. Under this view the action was not barred, and the judge committed no error in so holding.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

KELLY et al. v. WHITLEY et al.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 2, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

EXECUTION (§ 168*)—STAY—AFFIDAVIT OF ILLEGALITY—DISMISSAL IN VACATION.

The court did not err in granting the interlocutory injunction prayed for.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 487, 490-496; Dec. Dig. § 168.*]

Error from Superior Court, Douglas County; Geo. L. Bell, Judge.

Action by T. R. Whitley and others against W. P. Kelly and others. From an interlocutory injunction granted to petitioners, defendants bring error. Affirmed.

Anderson, Felder, Rountree & Wilson, of Atlanta, and W. T. Roberts and J. R. Hutcheson, both of Douglasville, for plaintiffs in error. J. S. James and Scott & Davis, all of Atlanta, for defendants in error.

BECK, J. T. R. Whitley filed his petition in the superior court of Douglas county against W. P. Kelly, A. S. Baggett, sheriff, and Mrs. M. L. Duke, praying for an injunction to prevent the enforcement of a certain fi. fa. issued upon a judgment obtained by Kelly against Whitley in September, 1909, which judgment was based on a note given by Whitley to Mrs. M. L. Duke and indorsed by her to Kelly. This fi. fa. was levied on the 8th day of February, 1912; that levy was dismissed; and afterwards, on the same day, it was levied on other property as belonging to Whitley, who, on February 17, 1912, filed his affidavit of illegality. This affidavit was accepted by the sheriff, filed with the clerk, and entered upon the proper docket in the superior court, where the questions raised by it stood for trial until the March term, 1912. On May 17, 1912, Hon. Price Edwards, judge of the superior court, passed the following order: "This case came up to be heard at the regular March term, 1912, of said superior court, and thereupon counsel for plaintiff in the fi. fa. moved to dismiss said affidavit of illegality, for the reason that none of the grounds set forth therein was valid, and constituted no reason why said execution and the proceedings thereon should not proceed, and after argument of counsel, and upon the request of counsel for said T. R. Whitley, defendant in execution, who desired to submit additional authorities, the further hearing of said case was postponed and the decision of the court reserved; and upon the consideration of the argument and authorities cited by counsel, and of the pleadings, and it appearing to the court that none of the grounds in said affidavit of illegality are meritorious are [or?] valid, it is thereupon ordered and adjudged by the court that said affidavit of illegality be and the same is hereby dismissed, and the sheriff of said county is directed to proceed with the collection of said fi. fa."

The petition for injunction in the present case was heard by Hon. George L. Bell, judge of the superior court of Atlanta circuit, on May 2, 1912; he taking jurisdiction on the ground that Judge Edwards was disqualified on account of relationship to one of the parties. It is alleged in the petition that the order dismissing the illegality was granted at chambers; and on the hearing evidence was introduced to show that neither the defendant in fi. fa. nor his sole counsel knew of the granting of the order until the day upon which the petition for injunction was heard. The petition attacks the order dismissing the affidavit of illegality as being void, and prays that it be set aside and annulled. Notwithstanding the pendency of the affidavit of illegality, the sheriff proceeded to advertise the property levied upon for sale on the first Tuesday in May, 1912. On the 2d day of May Judge Bell granted a temporary order restraining the sheriff from proceeding to advertise and sell the property levied upon; and at the interlocutory hearing upon the petition at chambers, on July 30, 1912, he passed the following order: "The case coming on to be heard, after hearing the evidence and argument of counsel, and considering the same, it is ordered that the temporary injunction be and the same is hereby granted as prayed for, and the restraining order heretofore granted is continued until the further order of the court."

The court below did not err in granting the interlocutory injunction. We do not think that the sheriff should have been permitted to proceed with the sale of the property by virtue of the fi. fa. while an affidavit of illegality was still pending in the court, undisposed of. The order of Judge Edwards, set forth above, dismissing the affidavit of illegality, was apparently granted in vacation. It does not appear that any order was taken fixing the time and place at which the judge would in vacation hear and dispose of this matter after giving the notice provided for in the Civil Code, § 4853. Nor was any order granted in term, reserving the right to render a judgment in vacation, under the provisions of section 4854. This being true, the judge was without jurisdiction to pass the order disposing of the affidavit of illegality in vacation, and the order dismissing it was void and of no effect.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

BROCK et al. v. BROCK.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 24, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. WITNESSES (§ 92*)—COMPETENCY—INTEREST—PROBATE OF WILL.

The propounder of a will, who is also named in the will as executor and as one of the legatees under the will, is not disqualified from testifying to the fact of the signing of the will by the testator in the presence of the subscribing witnesses.

(a) The interest of the witness in the case affects merely his credit, leaving the question as to what weight should be given the testimony of the witness for determination by the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. § 221; Dec. Dig. § 92.*]

2. WILLS (§ 293*)—PROBATE—EVIDENCE.

Where the subscribing witnesses to a propounded will testify that they cannot remember whether the testator signed the will in their presence, or even where one or more of the subscribing witnesses deny that the testator did sign in their presence, the fact that the will was duly signed in their presence may be shown by other competent testimony.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 666-672, 675-678; Dec. Dig. § 293.*]

3. WILLS (§ 324*)—PROBATE—INSTRUCTIONS—ISSUES.

Where an instrument was propounded for probate as a will, and a caveat was filed, setting up want of testamentary capacity and undue influence, and denying the factum of the will, and where upon the trial abundant evidence was introduced by the propounder to show the testamentary capacity of the maker, and no evidence at all was introduced by the caveators tending to conflict therewith, and there was nothing, either in the will itself or in the facts disclosed by the evidence, authorizing an inference of want of testamentary capacity, but the issue raised by conflicting evidence was confined solely to the question of the factum of the will, it will not require a new trial that the presiding judge, after charging fully as to the question upon which the conflicting evidence was introduced, charged the jury that the question of whether the testator was of sound mind and memory was not an issue in the case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 225, 767-770; Dec. Dig. § 324.*]

4. NEW TRIAL (§ 124*)—MOTION—SUFFICIENCY.

A motion for a new trial, which complains that the judge charged the jury on the subject of the impeachment of witnesses, without stating, at least in substance, the charge as given, raises no question for determination.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 250-253; Dec. Dig. § 124.*]

5. VERDICT SUSTAINED.

The evidence authorized the verdict.

Error from Superior Court, Banks County; S. P. Gilbert, Judge.

Hattie O. Brock offered for probate the will of Lila M. Brock, and a caveat was filed by C. H. Brock and another. From a judgment for the propounder, the caveators bring error. Affirmed.

W. W. Stark and W. A. Stevenson, both of Commerce, and A. J. Griffin, of Homer, for plaintiffs in error. J. J. Strickland, of Athens, and R. L. J. Smith & S. J. Smith, Jr., of Commerce, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. Hattie O. Brock offered for probate in solemn form the will of her sister, Lila M. Brock. The propounder was named in the will as executor, and was also a legatee under the will. A caveat was filed by C. H. Brock and Mrs. Stovall, containing several grounds, among them that the will was not duly executed, that the testator did not have sufficient mental capacity to execute a will, and that at the time of the execution of the will she was unduly influenced to make the will offered by the chief beneficiary under the provisions of the instrument. On the trial of the case in the superior court, the jury rendered a verdict in favor of the propounder, and the caveators made a motion for a new trial, which was overruled.

[1, 2] 1, 2. On the trial of the case all of the subscribing witnesses were called by the propounder and sworn. One of them testified that he did not remember whether the testator signed the will in the presence of the subscribing witnesses or not. The other two attesting witnesses denied that the testator signed the will in their presence. The propounder of the will was sworn as a witness in her own behalf, and testified positively that the testator did sign the will in the presence of the attesting witnesses. No objection was made to the introduction of the witness, nor is there any ground of the motion for a new trial based upon the contention that this evidence was improperly admitted; but counsel in his brief contends that the evidence of the propounder was illegal and had no probative value. We think otherwise. Her interest in the case may go to her credit, but it did not render her incompetent, nor did it entirely destroy the probative value of her testimony, the weight of which was a question for the jury. They had a right to believe her testimony, and, believing it, to find that the testator did sign the will in the presence of the subscribing witnesses. Civil Code, § 5858; Gillis v. Gillis, 96 Ga. 1, 15, 23 S. E. 107, 30 L. R. A. 143, 51 Am. St. Rep. 121; Buchanan v. Simpson Grocery Co., 105 Ga. 393, 31 S. E. 105; Deupree v. Deupree, 45 Ga. 415.

[3-5] 3-5. The rulings made in the third, fourth, and fifth headnotes require no elaboration.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

FARMERS' GINNERY & MFG. CO. v. THRASHER et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 4, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. WAREHOUSEMEN (§ 22*)—LOSS OF GOODS—LIABILITY—FAILURE TO INSURE.

Where a warehouseman for hire receives goods for storage, and under an express contract or custom of trade, is under duty to insure them against loss by fire, if he commits a breach of duty imposed by the express contract or custom of trade, and his customers are damaged thereby, he will be liable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Warehousemen, Cent. Dig. § 17; Dec. Dig. § 22.*]

2. WAREHOUSEMEN (§ 22*) — INSURANCE — RIGHT TO PROCEEDS.

If the warehouseman insures goods for his customers, and collects money from the insurer for the loss of the goods, he will hold the fund so collected for the benefit of the insured customers, or those who may have succeeded to their rights, subject to legitimate charges.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Warehousemen, Cent. Dig. § 17; Dec. Dig. § 22.*]

3. WAREHOUSEMEN (§ 22*)—INJURY TO GOODS—DAMAGE BY FIRE.

If at the time of the fire there be on storage goods of customers, some of which are insured and others not, and some of them, though not destroyed, are damaged and rendered incapable of identification, and in such condition they are sold by the warehouseman, the fund thus derived from the sale of the salvage will be held by the warehouseman for the benefit of all the owners of the goods, whether they be included among the insured or uninsured class.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Warehousemen, Cent. Dig. § 17; Dec. Dig. § 22.*]

4. ACTION (§ 50*)—MULTIFARIOUSNESS—PARTIES PLAINTIFF.

Where two funds were raised in the manner indicated in the second and third headnotes, but were insufficient to cover the losses of all the parties at interest, an equitable suit at the instance of a number of the customers (of whom there was a large number), suing in behalf of themselves and others similarly situated, against the warehouseman for an accounting, was not subject to demurrer on the ground that it was multifarious, or that there was a misjoinder of parties plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 511-547; Dec. Dig. § 50.*]

5. WAREHOUSEMEN (§ 22*)—LIABILITY — INSUFFICIENCY OF INSURANCE.

If there were a breach of a duty to insure, by failure to insure for as much as the duty required, the warehouseman would be liable in damages to the insuring customers to the extent of the deficiency of the insurance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Warehousemen, Cent. Dig. § 17; Dec. Dig. § 22.*]

6. ACTION (§ 50*)—JOINDER OF ACTIONS.

As it would be necessary, in order to recover the amount of damages recoverable from a warehouseman by each customer for the duty to him to insure, to take into consideration the amount apportionable to each under the accounting, equity will enjoin a suit for an accounting with all the suits for individual recoveries of damages, and beyond the amounts apportioned to the customers under such accounting.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 511-547; Dec. Dig. § 50.*]

7. WAREHOUSEMEN (§ 34*)—LOSS OF GOODS—ACTIONS—PETITION—SPECIAL DEMURRER.

Where it appears from the allegations in the petition, in a suit of the character alleged in the preceding notes, that the insurance covered only a period of 30 days, and the date of storage of the goods was erroneous to overrule a special demurrer, claiming that the petition failed to state several dates on which the goods were stored.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Warehousemen, Cent. Dig. §§ 71-85; Dec. Dig. § 34.*]

8. WAREHOUSEMEN (§ 34*)—LOSS OF GOODS—ACTIONS—PETITION—SUFFICIENCY.

In a suit of the character alleged in the preceding notes, which was not founded on certain allegations by the warehouseman for the goods, time they were received on storage, and the loss was not demurrable on the ground that the receipt in form or substance was not set forth.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Warehousemen, Cent. Dig. §§ 71-85; Dec. Dig. § 34.*]

9. WAREHOUSEMEN (§ 34*)—ACTIONS—PETITION—SUFFICIENCY.

In such an action against a warehouseman based on an alleged parcel contract for insurance on the goods, the petition was not subject to special demurrer on the ground that it failed to allege the name of the corporation who made the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Warehousemen, Cent. Dig. §§ 71-85; Dec. Dig. § 34.*]

10. WAREHOUSEMEN (§ 34*)—PETITION—SUFFICIENCY.

There being no allegation that the warehouseman was insolvent, or had been guilty of a breach of duty relatively to the fund alleged to hold for the plaintiffs, or ceased to exercise its franchise or business, or that there was danger to the property, the petition did not allow for the grant of injunction or appointment of a receiver.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Warehousemen, Cent. Dig. §§ 71-85; Dec. Dig. § 34.*]

Error from Superior Court, Tully; Frank Park, Judge.

Suit by C. E. Thrasher and others against the Farmers' Ginnery & Manufacturing Company. Judgment for the plaintiffs. Defendant brings error. Affirmed in part, reversed in part.

Perry, Foy & Monk, of Sylvestre, for plaintiffs; Lawson, of Abbeville, for plaintiffs; J. A. Comer, of Ashburn, and Crum, of Cordele, for defendants in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment in part and reversed in part. All the Justices concur.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & 1

v. GEORGIA RY. &amp; ELECTRIC CO.

rt of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

illabus by the Court.)

STREET RAILROADS (§ 98*)—INJURIES TO —CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE——STATUTES.

tion against a street railway commonal injuries, the court instructed e effect that if they believed from that the plaintiff's own negligence mate producing cause of his ind not recover, and, further, that f was injured by his own neglid not recover, and that "the law e plaintiff the duty of exercising to protect himself, and ordinary ed to him, means just that care udent man would have exercised ne or similar circumstances, and exercise such care on his part ute negligence." These instruc-ged to be erroneous, because they he unqualified rule that if the injured by his own negligence he over, and required the plaintiff, qualified terms, to exercise ordiwhereas, as movant contends, the that even the failure to exercise would not entirely defeat the t to recover, unless such failure the defendant's negligence was he plaintiff, or should have been prehended." The exceptions to as were not meritorious. Civil 2781, declares that "no person damage from a railroad company himself or his property, where one by his consent, or is caused negligence." If the plaintiff's in-caused by his own negligence, he er, whether his negligence was equivalent to negligence of the defendant.

For other cases, see Street Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 204-208; Dec. Dig. §

§ 141*) — INSTRUCTIONS —
—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

struction excepted to was to the the plaintiff could by the exercise are have avoided the consequences the defendant's negligence, if the negligent, there could be no restruction was in effect the Civil Code 1910, § 4426, and was "in not limiting the plaintiff's which would be a complete bar to a at which occurred after the defendant's negligence became apparent to the should have been reasonably apprehended."

For other cases, see Negligence,
Cent. Dig. §§ 382-399; Dec. Dig. § 141.*]

STREET RAILROADS (§ 118*)—INJURIES TO —CARE REQUIRED — DUTY TO —LISTEN.

It was also taken to the following
"The law declares that the pret every man is bound to do be-upon a railroad (and that applies roads, as well as other railroads) every prudent man would do under circumstances; and if you believe that that man would look and listen, so me else, or take the consequences, consequences may have been avoided." This instruction was substantially the language used in Metropolitan

Street Railroad Co. v. Johnson, 90 Ga. 500 (5), 504, 16 S. E. 49, and was not subject to the criticism that it "measured the duty of the plaintiff to stop and listen by what was required of 'every prudent man,' without specifi-ing the degree of prudence required; whereas, all the law requires * * * is the exercise of ordinary care or prudence."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Street Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 258-269; Dec. Dig. § 118.*]

4. CHARGE TO JURY—STATEMENT OF ISSUES.

The court in the charge to the jury fully and accurately stated the contentions of the plaintiff as set out in the petition.

5. STREET RAILROADS (§ 118*)—INJURIES TO TRAVELERS — CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE —AVOIDANCE.

A further instruction was to the effect that, if the plaintiff and the defendant company were both negligent, the plaintiff could recover if his negligence was not equal to or did not exceed the negligence of the defendant, and if he could not by the exercise of ordinary care have avoided the consequences to himself of the defendant's negligence, but that in such case the damages should be diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the plaintiff. This instruction was not subject to the exception taken, which is similar to that dealt with in the first headnote.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Street Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 258-269; Dec. Dig. § 118.*]

6. TRIAL (§ 236*)—INSTRUCTIONS—CREDIBIL-ITY OF WITNESSES.

After stating to the jury the language of Civil Code 1910, § 5732, for determining the credibility of witnesses, the following charge was given: "You should reconcile all the testimony of all the witnesses, so as to impute perjury to no one, where it can be done. If, however, there is testimony so irreconcilable that you cannot do this, it is your duty to give the greater weight—the most credit—to that witness or those witnesses whose testimony seems to you to be the most reasonable and credible." This instruction was not erroneous, because, as was contended, "the true rule is that in cases of irreconcilable conflict the question of reasonableness and credibility is not the only criterion, but there are other elements that ought to be taken into consideration by the jury, such as interest, opportunity, manner of testifying, and others; whereas, the court restricted them to one way alone of solving the question of credibility in cases of conflict." The charge of the Code section above cited covered all the circumstances to be considered in judging the credibility of witnesses.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent.
Dig. §§ 531-533; Dec. Dig. § 236.*]

7. VERDICT—EVIDENCE.

There was no contention that the verdict was not authorized by the evidence.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; Geo. L. Bell, Judge.

Action by G. W. Collum against the Georgia Railway & Electric Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error.
Affirmed.

W. R. Hammond, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Colquitt & Conyers, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

HILL, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

ARLINGTON OIL & GUANO CO. v.
SWANN.

SWANN v. ARLINGTON OIL & GUANO
CO. (Nos. 4,882, 4,900.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. AGRICULTURE (§ 7*)—NOTE GIVEN FOR FERTILIZER—VALIDITY.

A promissory note for the purchase price of fertilizer, executed after Act Dec. 18, 1901 (Civ. Code 1910, § 1771 et seq.), went into effect, is not void merely because the tax tags required by law were not attached to the packages in which the fertilizer was contained.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Agriculture, Cent. Dig. §§ 13, 14; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

2. AGRICULTURE (§ 7*)—SALE OF INFERIOR FERTILIZER—DAMAGES.

Under Act Aug. 22, 1911 (Acts 1911, p. 172), if the actual value of the fertilizer sold falls more than 3 per cent. below the guaranteed commercial value, the seller can recover only the actual value of the fertilizer, and is liable to the purchaser in damages to the extent of 25 per cent. of the purchase price.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Agriculture, Cent. Dig. §§ 13, 14; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

3. AGRICULTURE (§ 7*)—NOTE GIVEN FOR FERTILIZER—VALIDITY.

The branding of the words "High Grade" upon a package of fertilizer which actually contains less than 1.65 per cent. nitrogen does not render an obligation given for the purchase price of the fertilizer entirely void. The remedy of the purchaser is to recover the damages prescribed by the act of 1911 (Acts 1911, p. 172), and to reduce the amount of the recovery to the actual value of the fertilizer, if it falls more than 3 per cent. below the guaranteed commercial value.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Agriculture, Cent. Dig. §§ 13, 14; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

4. AGRICULTURE (§ 7*)—SALE OF INFERIOR FERTILIZER—DAMAGES RECOVERABLE.

Where the purchaser of fertilizer executes a promissory note, in which the seller expressly declines to warrant the quality of the fertilizer, but only warrants that the laws of the state have been complied with, the purchaser cannot recover damages, other than those provided by the act of 1911 (Acts 1911, p. 172) because of the inferior quality of the fertilizer, and the consequent failure of his crops.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Agriculture, Cent. Dig. §§ 13, 14; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

5. AGRICULTURE (§ 7*)—SALE OF INFERIOR FERTILIZER—ACTION FOR PRICE—EVIDENCE.

A certified copy of the official analysis of a brand of fertilizer registered with the department of agriculture is admissible in evidence in any of the courts of this state, in any case where the question of the actual ingredients contained in the fertilizer is material. After a brand of fertilizer is registered with the department of agriculture, the grade cannot be lowered, and it is therefore to be presumed that all fertilizer of that brand sold after it is thus registered with the commissioner contains substantially the same ingredients; and a certified copy of an analysis of the brand so registered, made at any time by the state chemist, is admissible in evidence. It is not essential that it should appear that the analysis was made from a sample taken from the particular lot of fertilizer for the purchase price of which recovery is sought.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Agriculture, Cent. Dig. §§ 13, 14; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

6. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1042*)—HARMLESS ERROR—RULINGS ON DEFENSES.

As the verdict indicates that it could not have been based upon any of the defenses which the court erroneously refused to strike, the judgment overruling the plaintiff's motion for a new trial will not be reversed. The defendant's motion for a new trial was properly overruled, under the principle announced in the first headnote.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4110-4114; Dec. Dig. § 1042.*]

Error from City Court of Blakely; R. H. Sheffield, Judge.

Action by the Arlington Oil & Guano Company against J. W. Swann. Judgment for plaintiff, and both parties bring error. Affirmed.

Smith & Miller, of Edison, and Glessner & Park, of Blakely, for plaintiff in error. G. D. Oliver and Rambo & Wright, all of Blakely, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. The Arlington Oil & Guano Company sued Swann on two promissory notes, one for the principal sum of $397.58, with interest at 8 per cent. per annum from October 1, 1912, and the other for $840 principal, with interest at 8 per cent. per annum from October 1, 1912. There was no defense as to the smaller of the two notes. The consideration of the larger note was 400 sacks of 10-2-2 commercial fertilizer. It was recited in the note that "the said payee expressly refuses to make any warranty of the same or any representation as to its quality or value, leaving me to rely solely on the fact that the laws of this state have been complied with." The defendant by answer set up the following defenses: (1) That the fertilizer was in sacks of 200 pounds each, branded "Arlington High Grade Guaranteed Analysis Available Phosphoric Acid 10.00%, Nitrogen 1.65%, Potash 2.00%," with a guaranteed commercial value of $21 per ton, at which price the same was sold to the defendant; that the fertilizer actually contained 10 per cent. phosphoric acid, 1.32 per cent. nitrogen, and 2.04 per cent. potash, determined by an official analysis made on or before the 1st day of March, 1913, by authority of the state of Georgia from samples taken by an inspector of the state; that the actual value of the fertilizer was $19.78 per ton, or $1.22 less than the guaranteed commercial value, and more than 3 per cent. below such value, and for this reason the consideration of the note has failed to the extent of the difference between the guaranteed commercial value and the actual commercial value of the fertilizer. (2) That on account of the difference as above set forth between the guaranteed commercial value and the actual commercial value of the fertilizer, the plaintiff is liable to the defendant, in addition to the difference between the two values, in the sum of $5.25 per ton, as a penalty in accordance with the provisions of section 2 of the act of the General Assembly, approved, August 22, 1911 (Laws 1911, p. 172). (3) That the note sued on is void, because the sacks did not have marked or branded thereon the sources and the ingredients from which the available phosphoric acid and nitrogen and potash were generated and obtained. (4) That the note sued on is void and uncollectible, because 150 of the sacks of fertilizer were not tagged with tax tags as the law provides. (5) That the note sued on is uncollectible because the words "High Grade" were branded upon each of the sacks, when the same was not a complete fertilizer, as indicated by the guaranteed analysis branded upon said sacks as hereinbefore set forth. (6) That the fertilizer was inferior in quality, and, by reason of the deficiency in the value of the crops which the defendant made below those which he would have made had the fertilizer been as guaranteed, he has been damaged in the sum of $3,000, for which sum he prays judgment against the plaintiff.

The plaintiff demurred to the answer upon the following grounds: (1) That no meritorious defense is set forth; (2) that the defendant seeks to claim double damages by way of penalty, and also damages by reason of the fact that the commercial value of the fertilizer was more than 3 per cent. below the guaranteed value; (3) that the allegation in reference to the actual percentage of nitrogen which the fertilizer contained as determined by an official analysis is a bare conclusion of the pleader, there being no facts set forth to show that the analysis was such as by law had any binding force or effect upon the plaintiff; (4) that the defense that the plaintiff failed to brand on the sacks the sources from which the ingredients of the fertilizer were taken is not good in law; (5) that the paragraph of the answer which avers that some of the sacks of fertilizer were not tagged set forth no valid defense; (6) that the paragraph in the answer averring that the note was void because the words "High Grade" were branded upon the sacks set forth no valid defense; and (7) that the paragraphs of the answer claiming damages by reason of a deficiency in the crops set forth no defense, and, if valid as a defense at all, the defendant should be required to elect whether he will recover the penalty prescribed by the act of August 22, 1911, or actual damages. The trial judge sustained the ground raising the point that the plaintiff was not required to mark upon the sacks the sources and ingredients from which the acid, potash, and nitrogen were generated and obtained, and overruled all of the other grounds of the demurrer. To this ruling the plaintiff excepted pendente lite. The trial resulted in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $978 principal, $33.64 interest, and $98.19 attorney's fees. The plaintiff and the defendant each filed a motion for a new trial, and both motions were overruled. Each excepted. The plaintiff assigns error upon the overruling of its demurrer to the defendant's answer, and upon the overruling of its motion for a new trial, and the defendant complains of the overruling of his motion for a new trial, which was based solely upon the ground that a verdict in his favor was demanded, because the undisputed evidence showed that some of the fertilizer had not been tagged as required by law.

[1] 1. We have already held that a note given for fertilizer is not void merely because the tax tags were not attached to the packages containing the fertilizer. Hillis v. Comer, 13 Ga. App. —, 78 S. E. 1107. That decision was based upon the construction of the act of December 18, 1901 (Civil Code, § 1771 et seq.). The decision in Zipperer v. Doyle, 124 Ga. 895, 53 S. E. 505, holding that no recovery could be had for the purchase price of fertilizer which was not tagged as required by law, dealt with a sale made prior to the date upon which the act of 1901 went into effect. Under the law as it stood prior to the passage of that act, an obligation for the purchase price of fertilizer could not be collected if it appeared that the fertilizer had not been tagged as required by law. This is not true, however, under the act of 1901, nor is there anything in the act of August 22, 1911 (Acts 1911, p. 172), rendering uncollectible an obligation for fertilizer merely because it has not been tagged as required by law.

[2] 2. By the Civil Code, § 1774, it is provided that, if the commercial value of fertilizer shall fall 3 per cent. below the guaranteed total commercial value of the fertilizer, any note or obligation given in payment therefor would be collectible by law only for the amount of actual total value as ascertained by an official analysis of the fertilizer made by the department of agriculture. By section 2 of the act of August 22, 1911, it is provided that, if the actual value of the fertilizer fall more than 3 per cent. below the guaranteed commercial value, the vendor shall be liable in damages to the purchaser in the sum of 25 per cent. of the purchase price, plus the shortage of such commercial fertilizer. It is thus expressly declared that the purchaser may both recover the penalty and set off the difference between the actual value and the guaranteed value, if such difference is more than 3 per cent.

[3] 3. Section 1775 of the Civil Code provides that "the words 'High Grade' shall not appear upon any bag or other package of any complete fertilizer which complete fertilizer contains by its guaranteed analysis less than 10 per cent. available phosphoric acid, 1.65 per cent. nitrogen, * * * or a grade or analysis of equal total commercial value." Section 643 of the Penal Code makes it a misdemeanor to sell any fertilizer without having complied with the provisions of law as to inspection, analysis, and sale of the fertilizer. This section seems to be broad enough to include a false brand of the words "high grade" upon a fertilizer which contains less than 10 per cent. of available phosphoric acid and 1.65 per cent. nitrogen, or a grade not of equal total commercial value. Sections 3 and 4 of the act of 1911 provide that, if there shall be a deficiency of more than 10 per cent. below the guaranteed analysis of the fertilizer as published and branded on the sacks or packages, the vendor so publishing the analysis and the fertilizer shall be liable to the purchaser in the sum of 25 per cent. of the purchase price, plus the shortage of the fertilizer. While the section of the Penal Code above referred to makes it a misdemeanor to violate any of the laws in reference to the analysis, sale, and inspection of fertilizer, yet, in construing this section in connection with the existing laws upon the subject of inspection, analysis, and sale of fertilizer, we do not think that the mere fact that the words "High Grade" were branded upon a package of fertilizer which contained less than 1.65 per cent. nitrogen renders an obligation given for the purchase price of the fertilizer entirely void. Under the act of 1901, a deficiency of less than 3 per cent. was regarded as immaterial, and as not affecting the right of the seller to recover the full amount of the purchase price. It has always been illegal for the seller of fertilizer to brand upon the package an analysis showing a value more than 3 per cent. above the actual value of the fertilizer. But in such a case the remedy of the purchaser is not to defeat collection of the entire purchase price, but simply to reduce it to an amount which would represent the difference between the guaranteed value and the actual value of the fertilizer. The act of 1911 gives an additional remedy, to wit, the collection of a penalty from the seller. Under that act, if any fertilizer shall prove deficient in any of its ingredients as guaranteed or branded thereon, and if, by reason of such deficiency, the commercial value of the fertilizer shall fall 8 per cent. below the guaranteed value, then the vendor is liable in damages to the purchaser in the sum of 25 per cent. of the purchase price, plus the shortage, and, if the vendor brand a false or incorrect analysis on the fertilizer, and there is a deficiency of more than 10 per cent. below the guaranteed analysis thus branded, he is liable to the purchaser in the sum of 25 per cent. of the purchase price plus the shortage. Where there has been a false branding, and where the fertilizer sold proves deficient, the remedy of the purchaser is to recover the damages provided for by the act of 1911, plus the difference between the actual commercial value and the guaranteed commercial value of the fertilizer. We do not think the mere marking of the words "High Grade" on a package of fertilizer which contains less than 1.65 per cent. nitrogen would have the effect to defeat the collection of the entire purchase price. Taking all of the provisions of law upon the subject together, the remedy of the purchaser is simply to reduce the amount of recovery as provided for in the Code and the act of 1911.

[4] 4. The defendant accepted the fertilizer upon the express stipulation in the note that the payee refused to make any warranty or representation as to quality of the fertilizer, but left the purchaser to rely solely upon the fact that the laws of the state had been complied with. If, therefore, the seller had complied with all of the laws in reference to the analysis, inspection, and sale of the fertilizer, the purchaser could not defend upon the ground that the fertilizer was deficient in quality, and that he had been damaged by reason of the fact that his crops were poor. If the seller complied with the laws, then the purchaser got what he bought, that is, a fertilizer which had been sold after compliance with all the laws of the state by the seller. The seller expressly declined to warrant the quality of the fertilizer. The purchaser accepted the limited warranty. He is bound by his contract, and the only defenses available to him, in the absence of fraud, are that the seller failed to comply with some of the laws of the state, and that for this reason the purchaser has been damaged. Jackson v. Langston, 61 Ga. 392; Allen v. Young, 62 Ga. 617; Patterson v. Ramspeck, 81 Ga. 808, 10 S. E. 390; Pryor v. Ludden & Bates, 134 Ga. 288, 67 S. E. 654, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 267. The measure of the purchaser's damages is fixed by law, and is limited to a recovery of the difference between the guaranteed commercial value of the fertilizer and the actual commercial value, together with the penalty prescribed by the act of 1911. This being true, it is unnecessary to determine whether, if there had been no such stipulation in the note limiting the warranty, the defendant might have recovered the penalty and also damages for a breach of the implied warranty.

[5] 5. Error is assigned upon the admission in evidence of a certified copy, from the office of the commissioner of agriculture, of what purported to be an official analysis made by the state chemist of certain fertilizer. Upon the face of this document it appeared that the Arlington Oil & Guano Company had registered with the commissioner of agriculture during the season of 1911 and 1912 a brand of fertilizer known as the "Arlington High Grade," with a guaranteed analysis of available phosphoric acid of 10 per cent., nitrogen 1.65 per cent., and potash 2 per cent.; that upon the analysis made by the state chemist the brand thus registered actually contained 10 per cent. phosphoric acid, 1.65 per cent. nitrogen, and 2.04 per cent. potash; that the guaranteed commerwas $17.37, and the actual value, as determined by the state chemist, was $16.15. The law provides that all persons desiring to sell fertilizer in this state must file with the commissioner of agriculture the name and brand of fertilizer and the guaranties thereof, and before offering for sale must brand on each package the guaranteed analysis of the fertilizer. The law fixed by the statute the analysis thus fixed by the law to remain uniform throughout the state for which it is registered, and shall the grade be lowered, though the proportions of the constituents may be changed, that the decrease of one may be offset in value by the increase in another, such change, however, to receive the approval of the commissioner of agriculture. Civil Code, §§ 1771, 1772, 1777. The brand of fertilizer thus registered and analyzed by the state chemist, a certified official analysis on file in the department of agriculture is admissible in any of the courts of this state on an issue involving the merits of a fertilizer. Civil Code, § 1773. The law made by the objection to the certified copy of the analysis it does not appear to have been made of any fertilizer sold to the defendant, we do not understand the law to require an official analysis made by the state chemist is admissible in evidence, but that some of the particular fertilizer sold to a purchaser has been shown, sent to the department of agriculture and analyzed by the state chemist, the fertilizer sold under the same name is presumed to contain substantially the same ingredients in the same proportions. It is forbidden by law to change the grade after the registration of the particular brand of fertilizer. When, therefore, a fertilizer is registered with the commissioner of agriculture the brand of fertilizer is the "Arlington High Grade," the law is that all of the fertilizer of that brand contains substantially the same elements of fertilizer after the brand has been registered, but will indulge the contrary presumption that no such change has been made, and that the fertilizer sold to the defendant actually contained the same constituent elements as did the fertilizer analyzed by the state chemist. Of course, as suggested by counsel for the fertilizer company, it would be quite an easy matter for every purchaser of fertilizer to withdraw a sample, and have it analyzed by the state chemist, and retain the analysis for use at any time it might become material to his interest. But we do not understand that the law places this burden on a purchaser of fertilizer. He has a right to assume that the seller has complied with the law, and that the guaranteed analysis as branded upon the package is substantially the same as would appear from an actual analysis of the fertilizer. The official analysis made by the state chemist of any of the fertilizer at any time, which is of record in the department of agriculture, is available to any person who may desire to use it, and a certified copy of such analysis is admissible in any of the courts of this state when it becomes material to determine the actual ingredients contained in the fertilizer. Any other rule would entirely destroy the right of the purchaser to plead and prove the deficiency, if he had failed to withdraw from the particular lot sold to him a sample for the purpose of analysis by the state chemist. And we do not think the law was designed to have this effect. There is no law which prohibits a seller or manufacturer of fertilizer from raising the grade after it has been registered with the commissioner of agriculture. So that, if in a particular case the seller could show that, since the analysis relied on by the purchaser was made, the grade of the fertilizer had been raised, and the fertilizer actually sold to the purchaser did contain ingredients which were equal to those contained in the guaranteed analysis, this would be a complete reply to the official analysis made by the state chemist. There was no attempt, however, in the present case to meet the evidence of the constituent elements of the fertilizer as shown by the official analysis, and, in the absence of something to impeach its correctness, it would be conclusive upon the parties.

[§] 6. While, under our view of the law, the trial judge erred in not striking certain portions of the answer, the verdict indicates that it could not have been based upon any portions of the answer which should have been stricken, and one of the principal errors made by the court was corrected by overruling the defendant's motion for a new trial. For these reasons, the judgments overruling both motions for a new trial will be affirmed.

Judgment in both cases affirmed.

OCILLA SOUTHERN R. CO. v. MORTON.
(No. 4,888.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Aug. 25, 1913.
Rehearing Denied Oct. 8, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 123*)—DRAFT EXECUTED BY PRESIDENT—LIABILITY OF CORPORATION.

Recovery may be had against a railway company upon an obligation signed merely by one describing himself as "president," upon proof that both parties to the contract understood that it was the obligation of the railway company, and that the company received the consideration furnished by the other party, and either authorized the execution of the contract in its behalf or ratified it thereafter.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 260-267, 393; Dec. Dig. § 123.*]

2. CORPORATIONS (§ 426*)—CONTRACT OF PRESIDENT—RATIFICATION.

The president of a corporation has no authority, by virtue of his office alone, to contract in its behalf. But knowledge of the president is imputable to the corporation. If, therefore, the president, without authority, execute in behalf of the corporation a contract, and the corporation retain and use the consideration furnished by the other party, it cannot repudiate the contract. The principal cannot ratify so much of an unauthorized contract as operates in his favor and repudiate the obligation assumed in its behalf by the person claiming to act as its agent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1586, 1702-1704, 1707, 1708, 1710-1716; Dec. Dig. § 426.*]

3. DENIAL OF CERTIORARI.

No material error was committed by the city court, and the judge of the superior court did not err in refusing to sanction the certiorari.

Error from Superior Court, Berrien County; W. E. Thomas, Judge.

Action by J. G. Morton against the Ocilla Southern Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

J. D. Lovett, of Nashville, Elkins & Wall, of Fitzgerald, and H. J. Quincey, of Ocilla, for plaintiff in error. Hendricks & Christian, of Nashville, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. Morton sued the Ocilla Southern Railroad Company upon a draft of which the following is a copy: "Nashville, Ga., March 22, 1912. After ten days pay to the order of Hendricks & Christian, in trust for J. G. Morton, ($500.00) five hundred dollars. Value received. Charge to account of J. A. J. Henderson, President. To First National Bank, Ocilla, Ga." At the bottom of the draft was the following notation: "Arbitration as to consideration of this check to be had in ten days." The draft was, before suit, delivered to Morton by Hendricks & Christian, the trustees. The petition as amended made substantially the following allegations: The draft sued on is the obligation of the defendant railway company, being executed by its president, Henderson. The consideration for the draft was a right of way for the railroad company through and adjacent to lands of plaintiff's wife, for whom he was agent in the transaction. Henderson, the president of defendant company, had exclusive control of securing rights of way for the company, and by the execution and delivery of the draft it was enabled to and did construct its road through the property of plaintiff's wife, by means of which the company was enabled to complete its railway line into Nashville. After giving said draft the company, with full knowledge thereof, built its line through the property of plaintiff's wife, and thereby ratified the contract made by its president, and it continues to ratify said contract by using the line of railway. The stipulation in the draft, for arbitration, was intended by the parties to mean that an arbitration in reference to the amount to be paid by the company should be had within 10 days. Plaintiff selected his arbitrator within due time, and the defendant neglected and refused to arbitrate. The draft was duly presented to the drawee bank and to Henderson, and payment refused by both. Henderson, in giving the draft, and Morton and his wife, in receiving it, knew and believed that it was the obligation of the defendant railway company. Demurrers to the petition as amended were overruled. At the conclusion of the evidence the court directed a verdict for the plaintiff. The defendant applied for a certiorari and the sanction of the petition was refused.

[1] 1. The main insistence of the plaintiff in error is that the draft sued on was the individual obligation of Henderson, the addition of the word "president" being merely descriptive of the person, and that no suit upon the draft can be maintained against the defendant railroad company. Where one executes a contract, it is presumed to be his individual undertaking, even though he may add after his signature such a word of description as "agent," or "president," or "administrator," and the like. Civil Code, § 3570. An obligation so signed is presumptively the individual undertaking of the person signing, and it has been held that, when sued upon it as an individual, he is estopped to deny that it is his individual undertaking, if there is nothing in the writing to indicate that he was contracting in behalf of another. Graham v. Campbell, 56 Ga. 262. But it does not follow that, if the individual executing the instrument in fact and within the knowledge of the other party did so in behalf of another, the real party may not be sued upon proof of these facts. The general rule and the qualification thereto are thus stated in Burkhalter v. Perry Brown, 127 Ga. 438, 56 S. E. 631, 119 Am. St. Rep. 343: "If an agent make a note in his own name, and add to his signature the word 'agent,' and there is nothing on the note to indicate who is the principal, the word 'agent' will be treated as descriptio personae, and he will be liable just as if the word 'agent' was not added. As a general rule, where a negotiable instrument is executed by an agent, with no indication on the face of the instrument who the principal is, the principal will not be liable thereon, although the agent, in executing the instrument, add the word 'agent' to his signature." In the opinion the law is thus stated: "A well-recognized exception to the general rule stated springs from the law merchant. Where a negotiable instrument is executed by an agent, without sufficiently indicating on its face who the principal is, parol evidence cannot be introduced to charge the principal, although he executed the instrument as agent and added the word 'agent' to his signature. This exception to the rule is based upon the reason that 'each party who takes a negotiable instrument makes his contract with the parties who appear on its face to be bound for its payment. It is a "courier without luggage," whose countenance is its passport; and in suits upon negotiable instruments no evidence is admissible to charge any person as a principal thereto, unless his name in some way is disclosed upon the instrument itself.' 1 Clark & Skyles on Agency, 328a; 1 Daniel, Neg. Inst. § 803. But this exception in favor of negotiable instruments itself contains an exception; and that is, as between the immediate parties to a bill or note, it may be shown by parol that the instrument was, to the knowledge of the parties, intended to be the obligation of the principal, and not of the agent, and that it was given and accepted as such. Metcalf v. Williams [104 U. S. 93, 26 L. Ed. 665]; Mechem on Agency, § 443." This decision is decisive of the controlling question in the case. It is averred in the petition that in making the draft Henderson was acting for his principal, the defendant railroad company, that the draft was not his individual obligation, that all parties at interest so understood it, and that the railroad company, and not Henderson, received the consideration furnished by the payee in return for the execution of the draft. These allegations bring the case squarely within the decision above cited.

[2] 2. It is claimed, however, that it does not appear that Henderson had authority to contract in behalf of the defendant corporation. The president of a corporation has not, by virtue of his office alone, power to contract in its behalf. His presumptive authority extends only to presiding and voting as a director. Minnesota Lumber Co. v. Hobb, 122 Ga. 20, 24, 49 S. E. 783; Swindell v. Bainbridge Bank, 3 Ga. App. 365, 370, 60 S. E. 13; Great Southern Accident Co. v. Guthrie, 79 S. E. 162. The petition alleges, however, that Henderson, as president, was by the corporation, given exclusive control over the matter of obtaining rights of way for the railroad company, and that, by building the line through the property of plaintiff's wife, it ratified the contract of sale. It is insisted, however, that the proof does not show that authority was conferred upon Henderson to contract with plaintiff. Even if this be true, the evidence does show ratification of the contract. Ratification must of course be with knowledge of the facts; but the knowledge of the president Henderson was imputable to the company. Johnson v. Aetna Ins. Co., 123 Ga. 404, 51 S. E. 339, 107 Am. St. Rep. 92; Diamond Power Co. v. City of West Point, 11 Ga. App. 533, 75 S. E. 908. The company was chargeable with knowledge that it had no right to take or damage the property of the plaintiff's wife without first paying just compensation. Hence it must have known that permission to use the property had been acquired, and it was bound to inquire into the terms and conditions upon which the permission had been granted. It could not, by using the property, ratify the act of Henderson in acquiring it, and then repudiate his promise to pay for its use. The defendant did not deny that Henderson was its president, and there was enough evidence to justify the inference that he was. The deeds objected to were not an essential part of the plaintiff's case, but their admission did the defendant no harm.

[3] There was no material error committed by the city court, and the judge of the superior court did not err in refusing to sanction the petition for certiorari.

Judgment affirmed.

GRANTHAM v. LANCE. (No. 4,666.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. POSSESSORY WARRANT (§ 2*)—PROPERTY IN HANDS OF AGENT.

Where personal property has been left by the owner with an agent, to be kept by the latter until called for, and the agent refuses to deliver it on demand, a possessory warrant will lie for its recovery. Meredith v. Knott, 34 Ga. 222; Sheriff v. Thompson, 116 Ga. 436, 42 S. E. 738; Allen v. Wheeler, 121 Ga. 277, 48 S. E. 923. In such a case the general rule that the possession must have been acquired either violently or fraudulently does not apply.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Possessory Warrant, Cent. Dig. § 2; Dec. Dig. § 2.*]

2. POSSESSORY WARRANT (§ 3*)—LAWFUL POSSESSION BY DEFENDANT—PRESUMPTIONS.

Under the evidence it did not appear that the defendant in the possessory warrant had been in peaceable possession of the property in question, in his own right, for four years prior to the suing out of the warrant; and the dismissal of the warrant would not have been authorized upon the theory that the defendant's possession must be presumed to be lawful. It appeared without dispute, from the allegations of the petition for certiorari, that it had not been as much as two years since the plaintiff in the possessory warrant had the right to demand the return of the deed. New v. Le Hardy, 46 Ga. 616; McLeod v. Bozeman, 26 Ga. 177.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Possessory Warrant, Cent. Dig. § 3; Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

3. ERRONEOUS RULING.

The court erred in refusing to sanction the certiorari.

Error from Superior Court, Fannin County; N. A. Morris, Judge.

Possessory warrant by W. M. Grantham against C. W. Lance. Warrant dismissed, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Thos. A. Brown and Samuel Allen, both of Blue Ridge, for plaintiff in error. Wm. Butt, of Blue Ridge, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment reversed.

ALEXANDER v. PATTERSON. (No. 4,993.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

SALES (§ 472*)—CONDITIONAL SALES—OPERATION AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

A contract of conditional sale, which is in writing and duly attested, and recorded within 30 days from the date of the delivery of the property, becomes effective as against third persons from the date of the delivery of the property, even though the date of the execution of the contract does not appear therein. Civil Code 1910, §§ 3318, 3319; Tremere v. Barfield, 12 Ga. App. 774, 78 S. E. 729; Bond v. Brewer, 96 Ga. 443, 23 S. E. 421; Rowe v. Spencer, 140 Ga. 540, 79 S. E. 144.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 1366-1376; Dec. Dig. § 472.*]

Error from City Court of Blakely; R. H. Sheffield, Judge.

Action between Base Alexander and C. L. Patterson. There was a judgment for the latter, and the former brings error. Affirmed.

Glessner & Park, of Blakely, for plaintiff in error. Rambo & Wright, of Blakely, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment affirmed.

TYLER & TOMLINSON v. ARNETT.

(No. 5,031.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. NEW TRIAL (§ 154*)—SERVICE OF RULE NISI—DISMISSAL OF MOTION.

A rule nisi was granted on a motion for a new trial, and ordered served, and the motion set to be heard at the next regular term of the court; and when it was duly called at that time it appeared that the rule nisi had not been served, nor service waived, and no excuse for failure to serve was shown. Held, that the judge did not abuse his discretion in dismissing the motion, for want of service. McMullen v. Citizens' Bank, 123 Ga. 400, 51 S. E. 342; Smedley v. Williams, 112 Ga. 114, 37 S. E.

111; Connor v. State, 7 Ga. App. 482.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Cent. Dig. §§ 312, 313; Dec. Dig. § 154.*]

2. NEW TRIAL (§ 156*)—MOTION TRIAL—FAILURE TO SERVE RULE NISI.

Where, in the case stated, the court to continue the hearing of a new trial, in order that service be perfected, and no reason was then shown for the failure to perfect service of the rule nisi as previously ordered, and the court signed why the continuance should be granted, except for the purpose of perfecting service, the trial judge did not err in refusing a motion for a continuance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Cent. Dig. § 316; Dec. Dig. § 156.*]

Error from City Court of Blakely; R. H. Sheffield, Judge.

Action between Tyler & Tomlinson and J. B. Arnett. A motion for new trial was dismissed, and Tyler & Tomlinson bring error. Affirmed.

Rambo & Wright, of Blakely, for plaintiff in error. A. H. Gray, of Blakely, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment affirmed.

COLUMBIAN NAT. LIFE INS.

MULKEY. (No. 4,998.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Affirmed. Rehearing Denied Sept. 16, 1913. Motion for Rehearing Denied Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

INSURANCE (§ 349*)—FORFEITURE—NONPAYMENT OF PREMIUM NOTE.

"The failure to pay a premium note in payment of an insurance policy, if it is stipulated in the note that the policy shall be void if the same at maturity will avoid the policy, will not forfeit the policy, where the condition in the policy itself providing for the nonpayment of notes, is in addition to the condition as to forfeiture for nonpayment of a note given for the policy, and the note is contained only in the note, the maturity of the note is not paid at maturity itself avoid the policy. Such a condition subsequent, of which the insured must avail itself by clear and unequivocal action, is not a condition precedent. The decision in Arnold v. Empire Life Co., 8 Ga. App. 685, 60 S. E. 477, is controlling. There is no conflict between the decision in that case and the decision of the Court in Stephenson v. Empire Life Co., 139 Ga. 82, 76 S. E. 100. In the Stephenson case the provision for forfeiture for nonpayment of premium was contained in the policy itself, in addition to the condition as to forfeiture. In the instant case the condition was not in the policy contract, but only in the note, and is therefore within the ruling in Arnold. Case. Joyce on Insurance, § 121; Insurance, § 349a.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Cent. Dig. §§ 891, 895-902, 913; Dec. Dig. § 349.*]

Error from City Court of Atlanta; R. H. Reid, Judge.

Action by Janie Mulkey against National Life Insurance Company, for plaintiff, and defendant brings demurrer.

& Latimer, of Atlanta, for plaintiff. Anderson & Rountree and Horst Burress, all of Atlanta, for defendant.

J. Judgment affirmed.

GASKINS v. GASKINS et al.

GASKINS et al. v. GASKINS.

(Nos. 4,979, 5,014.)

Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

REDEMPTION AND CONVERSION (§ 13*)—NATURE OF ACTION—RECOVERY OF WRITTEN INSTRUMENT.

The court did not err in sustaining the demurrer and dismissing the plaintiff's action. Trover will not lie to recover possession of a deed executed to a defendant, or of notes and certificates of deposit of the defendant, upon the ground that the same were improperly taken in the hands of the defendant, when they should have been delivered to the plaintiff. The present action is brought to recover an apparent moneys due to the defendant, two certain notes payable to her, and a time deposit issued to her, and in none of them did the name of the plaintiff appear. Furthermore, under the allegations of the complaint, the case was one in which affirmative relief would have been required, and the plaintiff's remedy, if any, lay in a pro quo to which all persons interested parties.

—For other cases, see Trover and Conversion, Cent. Dig. §§ 103-106; Dec. Dig. §§ 103-106.

ALL DISMISSED.

Decision upon the main bill of exceptions controlling, the cross-bill is dismissed.

(Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

(§ 189*)—CITY COURT OF NASHVILLE—EQUITABLE JURISDICTION.

Action of trover in the city court of Nashville, Tennessee, for an amendment changing the action from trover to equitable relief is not permissible where the court is without equitable jurisdiction.

—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. §§ 412, 413, 429, 453; Dec. Dig. §§ 412, 413, 429, 453.

From City Court of Nashville; C. H. Johnson, Judge.

J. B. Gaskins against Docia Gaskins. Another. There was a judgment against the action, and plaintiff brings demurrer, and cross-bill of exceptions.

Chastain & Gaskins, of Nashville, for plaintiff in error. E. K. Wilcox, of Valdosta, for defendant in error.

L. J. B. Gaskins brought an action of trover against Docia Gaskins.

and W. T. Rigell, Sr., to recover possession of a deed to a certain house and lot in the town of Ray's Mill, two notes of $500 each, executed by one W. D. Lee, and a certificate of deposit for $1,380, issued by the Bank of Milltown. The action was dismissed upon demurrer, and to this judgment exception is taken in the main bill of exceptions. Prior to the judgment of dismissal the trial judge allowed an amendment to the petition for bail, and the allowance of this amendment is the subject of a cross-bill of exceptions.

[1] In the original affidavit of the plaintiff the property sought to be recovered was described as "one warranty deed conveying one house and lot in the town of Ray's Mill, * * * taken by Docia Gaskins and W. T. Rigell, Sr., his [the plaintiff's] money having paid for said property; also two notes for $500 each, signed by W. D. Lee, which notes had been taken payable to Docia Gaskins to defraud J. B. Gaskins out of his land and money, the same being part of the purchase money of 100 acres of land sold by said J. B. Gaskins to said W. D. Lee;" and also a certificate of time deposit issued by the Bank of Milltown for $1,380 to Docia Gaskins, or to W. T. Rigell, Sr., for money which belonged to J. B. Gaskins. In the amendment the petitioner set forth at length the transaction by means of which the defendants came into possession of $3,000 as the purchase price of the tract of land, which it was alleged the plaintiff had authorized them to sell to W. D. Lee; and it was averred that the house and lot at Ray's Mill, which should have been conveyed to J. B. Gaskins, represented a portion of the $3,000, the $1,000 in notes another portion, and the remainder had been deposited as evidenced by the certificate of deposit.

It is very apparent, if the allegations of the amendment to the petition are true, that the plaintiff is the victim of misplaced confidence, and is entitled to recover the proceeds of the sale made by his agents, which they have converted to their own use. But the description of the $2,000 in cash is insufficient to supply that certainty of identification which in an action of trover is essential to a seizure. The money is not otherwise described than as "$2,000 in cash." In McElhannon v. Farmers' Warehouse & Commission Co., 95 Ga. 370, 22 S. E. 686, the money in question was described as "$3,500 lawful money of the United States," and this description was held to be too vague and indefinite. There was some reference in the McElhannon case to the fact that bond had been given, as a bond has been given in the present case, and this is adverted to by counsel for plaintiff in error; but as was well said by Justice Lumpkin (referring to the McElhannon case, supra), in Harper v. Jeffers, 139 Ga. 761, 78 S. E. 174: "Now, does the fact of the giving or not giving of a bond appear [on demurrer to the sufficiency of the allegations of the petition], unless alleged in the petition?" That there is no pertinency in the fact that bond may have been given by the defendant in trover is settled by the ruling of the Supreme Court in Cooke v. Bryant, 103 Ga. 727, 730, 731, 30 S. E. 435, as well as in Harper v. Jeffers, supra. We think the lower court could properly have held that the description of the money in the amendment was insufficient.

[2, 3] In the view we entertain of this case, however, it is not necessary to rule upon the question of the propriety of the amendment raised by the cross-bill of exceptions. Whether the amendment was correctly allowed or not, the allowance of the amendment had the effect of transforming the action to a proceeding equitable in its nature, and one which requires affirmative relief. The city court of Nashville was without jurisdiction for such a proceeding. However, the plain defect which authorized the dismissal of the action upon general demurrer, either before or after the allowance of the amendment, was the fact that the plaintiff himself shows that the title to the papers which he seeks to recover is in the defendant. Even if he could recover the deed, the notes, and the certificate of deposit, he would be in no better position than before. The deed does not convey title to him, but conveys title to Docia Gaskins. Upon it he could not recover possession of the land, and, indeed, the petition alleges that he himself is in possession of the lot at Ray's Mill. The plaintiff could not recover upon notes payable to Docia Gaskins, nor collect from the bank upon a certificate of deposit issued to Docia Gaskins and W. T. Rigell. There is no question that trover will lie to recover deeds. Gay v. Warren, 115 Ga. 734, 42 S. E. 86, 90 Am. St. Rep. 151. And it may be used as a proper proceeding to recover possession of promissory notes. Rushin v. Tharpe, 88 Ga. 779, 15 S. E. 830; Fisher v. Jones, 108 Ga. 490, 34 S. E. 172. It may also be used to recover a bond with interest coupons attached. Bank v. Trustees, 62 Ga. 271; Hoyle v. Jones, 35 Ga. 40, 89 Am. Dec. 273; Nutting v. Thomasson, 57 Ga. 418. Under these decisions we doubt not that Gaskins could by trover have recovered the notes mentioned in the present case, if they had been payable to Docia Gaskins or bearer; but according to the record they were payable to Docia Gaskins, and would not be negotiable without her indorsement. Nor could he recover the certificate of deposit. If any of the writings mentioned in the present suit should be canceled or reformed, this phase of the case would be properly cognizable only in a court of equity.

Judgment upon the main bill of exceptions affirmed. Cross-bill of exceptions dismissed.

COX v. MANNING. (No. 4,808.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.
Rehearing Denied Oct. 3, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1138*)—HARMLESS ERROR.

The direction given to this case by the trial judge secured substantial justice, and the judgment will not be reversed in order that the same result may be more technically reached by regular procedure at a later stage in the trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4456-4461; Dec. Dig. § 1138.*]

2. PARTNERSHIP (§ 320*)—TROVER AND CONVERSION (§ 17*)—RIGHT OF ACTION—ACTION FOR PARTNERSHIP ACCOUNTING—VENUE.

Under the undisputed evidence trover was not available to the plaintiff as a remedy to settle the matters in dispute between the members of a partnership composed of the plaintiff and the defendant. The testimony of the plaintiff himself showed that title to the property sought to be recovered was in the partnership, and that his interest therein could not be determined until after a full accounting had been had between the parties. Miller v. Freeman, 111 Ga. 654, 36 S. E. 961, 51 L. R. A. 504. An action for the purpose of having such an accounting, being equitable in its nature, must be brought in the superior court in the county of the defendant's residence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Partnership, Cent. Dig. § 741; Dec. Dig. § 320;* Trover and Conversion, Dec. Dig. § 17.*]

Error from City Court of Leesburg; H. L. Long, Judge.

Action by C. N. Cox against A. E. Manning. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

W. G. Martin, of Leesburg, for plaintiff in error. R. J. Bacon and R. H. Ferrell, both of Albany, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

MONK v. NATIONAL BANK OF TIFTON. (No. 4,859.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

INSTRUCTIONS—NEW TRIAL.

The court did not err in the instruction of which complaint is made, nor in refusing the instruction requested. The evidence authorized the verdict, and there was no error in refusing a new trial.

Error from City Court of Tifton; R. Eve, Judge.

Action between S. S. Monk and the National Bank of Tifton. From an adverse judgment, Monk brings error. Affirmed.

See, also, 76 S. E. 278.

R. D. Smith, of Tifton, for plaintiff in error. Fulwood & Skeen, of Tifton, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

AMERICAN MFG. CO. v. CHAMPION MFG. CO.
(No. 4,939.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

SALES (§§ 370, 392*)—GOODS TO BE MANUFACTURED—BREACH OF CONTRACT—REMEDY OF SELLER.

Where goods are sold for future delivery and prior to the time for delivery the purchaser notifies the seller that he will not take and pay for the goods, the seller may treat the contract as rescinded and sue for whatever damages he has sustained up to the time of its repudiation by the vendee. If the goods bought are to be manufactured by the seller, and, upon the repudiation of the contract by the purchaser, the seller fails or refuses to manufacture the goods so as to have them ready for delivery at the time fixed in the contract, his only remedy is to bring an action against the purchaser for damages for the breach of the contract. He cannot sue upon open account either for the purchase price of the goods or for the contract price less the cost of manufacture. Before an action of this kind will lie, the seller must have put himself in a position where he could deliver and have either actually delivered the goods or have stored and retained them for the vendee. If the contract be an entire one for the manufacture of a quantity of articles, the remedy of the seller to store and retain the goods for the vendee and sue for the purchase price is not available, unless the entire quantity of articles contracted for has been manufactured.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 1085, 1128-1131; Dec. Dig. §§ 370, 392.*]

Error from City Court of Macon; Robt. Hodges, Judge.

Action by the American Manufacturing Company against the Champion Manufacturing Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Miller & Jones, of Macon, for plaintiff in error. J. E. Hall and Jno. R. L. Smith, both of Macon, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. The American Manufacturing Company brought suit on open account against the Champion Manufacturing Company, a partnership composed of two named persons. The account was made up of 6,333 bag holders which had been delivered to and accepted by the defendants at the agreed price of 17½ cents each, of 4,360 bag holders on hand which the defendants refused to accept, and 39,307 bag holders which the defendants agreed to take but which had not been manufactured by the plaintiff. Against these items the plaintiff credited the expense of manufacturing the bag holders which had not been made up. There was also in the account several items for a number of cane strippers and an item for the cost of extra material. The total amount claimed to be due on the account was $9,306.46, less a credit of cash paid of $1,820.13, together with a deduction of $409.27, the estimated expenses of completing the contract, and credit memoranda of shortage of $1.55, making the net balance claimed to be due on account of $6,989.51. The items of the account for the purchase price of the bag holders was based on a written contract dated June 2, 1911, in which the plaintiff agreed to sell and the defendants to buy 50,000 bag holders, of certain dimensions, at 17½ cents each f. o. b. Chattanooga, Tenn.; deliveries to begin on July 15th and the entire number shipped out by September 15, 1911. The terms of payment were $1,000 within five days from date of the contract and the balance to be paid for 30 days after shipment. The shipments were to be made direct to customers upon the defendants' orders, and any bag holders remaining on hand on September 15, 1911, were to be shipped to the defendants at Macon, Ga. In the event the stakes for the bag holders were lengthened, the defendants were to pay for the additional cost of the material. The defendants admitted the execution of the contract, admitted the delivery of the 6,333 bag holders, averred that the plaintiff had been paid in full for these bag holders, and denied all of the other material allegations in the petition.

From the evidence offered in behalf of the plaintiff, it appears that in August, 1911, the plaintiff had manufactured and delivered in accordance with the contract 6,333 bag holders and had on hand 4,360, for which no shipping instructions had been given by the defendants. The defendants notified the plaintiff that they would be unable to use the remainder of the bag holders contracted for and requested that some arrangements be made by which they might be relieved from the contract or have its completion postponed until a year later. No agreement was reached by correspondence, and on August 26th one of the defendants went to Chattanooga to take up the matter in person with the president of the plaintiff company. The plaintiff declined to release the defendants from the contract, but it was finally agreed that if the defendants would pay the amount then due, and pay for the 4,360 bag holders on hand, and also pay for the material on hand which had been bought for the purpose of manufacturing the bag holders contracted for, the plaintiff would extend the time for the completion of the contract for one year. The past-due account then owing by the defendants to the plaintiff amounted to $820. Subsequently the defendants paid the plaintiff this amount but have never paid for the material on hand nor for the 4,360 bag holders. The plaintiff could have completed the contract on September 15th if it had not been notified by the defendants that they would not take and pay for the remainder of the bag holders. After the agreement between the parties on August 26th, several letters passed between them as to what was the real agreement entered into on August 26th. Propositions of settlement were made by the defendants but were not accepted by the plaintiff. Finally, on November 3, 1911, the plaintiff notified the defendant that it would go forward and complete the contract and hold the remainder of the bag holders, as well as the 4,360 bag holders then on hand, subject to the defendants' order. Later on the plaintiff again wrote, submitting a further proposition and stating that if it was accepted the plaintiff would defer completion of the contract until the next year. This proposition was, however, rejected by the defendants. The parties being unable to reach an adjustment, suit was brought on November 12, 1912, more than a year after the time when the contract was to have been completed, under the agreement of August 26, 1911. The trial judge granted a nonsuit, and the plaintiff excepted.

1. Where the purchaser of goods refuses to take and pay for them, the seller may pursue one of three remedies: He may retain the goods and recover the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time and place of delivery; or he may sell the goods, acting as agent for the purchaser, and recover the difference between the contract price and the price on resale; or he may store and retain the property for the vendee and sue him for the entire price. Civil Code, § 4131. The contract between the parties in the present case was an entire one. The plaintiff bought 50,000 bag holders, and the remedy of the seller to store and retain the goods and sue the purchaser for the entire price would not be available unless all of the bag holders not delivered had been manufactured. The seller could not manufacture a portion of the goods and store and retain them and sue for the purchase price of the goods so retained and decline to manufacture the remainder of the bag holders called for by the contract. When the plaintiff was notified by the defendants in August that they would not take and pay for the remainder of the bag holders under the contract, the plaintiff had a right to treat the contract as rescinded, decline to manufacture any more bag holders, and sue for whatever damages it had sustained up to the time the purchaser repudiated the contract. Or the plaintiff could have declined to agree to the rescission, proceed with the manufacture of the bag holders, and if, at the time they were to have been delivered, the defendants refused to accept and pay for them, the plaintiff could then, under the provisions of the Civil Code, § 4131, after notice to the defendants, have resold the goods at the place of delivery and recovered from the defendants the difference between the contract price and the price on resale, or the plaintiff could have stored the goods for the defendants and sued them for the entire price. Southern Flour Co. v. St. Louis Co., 11 Ga. App. 401, 75 S. E. 439. By failing to manufacture the remainder of the bag holders bought by the defendants, the plaintiff agreed to the rescission of the contract. This is true whether the original contract providing for final delivery on September 15, 1911, was operative or whether the time for the completion of the contract was extended one year by the agreement of August 26, 1911. The undisputed evidence shows that the remainder (39,307) of the bag holders were never manufactured by the plaintiff. For this reason the plaintiff was not in a position to avail itself of the remedies provided for in the section of the Code above referred to.

Having agreed to a rescission of the contract by failing to complete it, the plaintiff's only remedy was to sue for damages for a breach of the contract. If such a suit had been brought, the plaintiff might have been entitled to recover the difference between the contract price and the market value at the time and place of delivery of the 4,360 bag holders which it had manufactured, together with such other items of damage in the way of lost profits and special expenditures on account of the contract, etc., as it might be able to prove. But the plaintiff did not adopt this remedy. It elected to sue on open account as for goods sold and delivered. This form of action is based upon the theory that there was a completed contract between the parties and that the defendants failed to pay in accordance with its terms. It is not available where goods bought have not been delivered and where there has been a breach of the contract of sale by reason of the defendants' refusal to accept goods bought, except that the indebtedness might be stated in the form of an account, if the plaintiff has stored the goods for the vendee as provided by the section of the Code above cited. Black v. Kaplan, 9 Ga. App. 811, 72 S. E. 303; Linder v. Cole, 10 Ga. App. 102, 72 S. E. 719; Oklahoma Co. v. Carter, 116 Ga. 141, 42 S. E. 378, 59 L. R. A. 122, 94 Am. St. Rep. 112; Rounsaville v. Leonard Mfg. Co., 127 Ga. 735, 56 S. E. 1030. The plaintiff could not, under the evidence, recover on open account without reference to whether its cause of action was for the breach of the original agreement or upon the agreement of August 26, 1911, treated either as an extension of the original agreement or as an accord and satisfaction of it.

It was argued by counsel for the plaintiff in error that some items of the account sued on were not connected with the contract of purchase of the bag holders, and that certainly as to these items the nonsuit was erroneous. It appears, however, from the undisputed evidence, that the defendants had paid to the plaintiff $1,820.13. This amount more than paid for the bag holders which had been delivered and for all of the other items on the account for which a recovery could be had in this form of action. The plaintiff was not entitled to recover either for the 4,860 bag holders on hand or for the $9,307 bag holders which had not been manufactured. There was not error in awarding a nonsuit.

Judgment affirmed.

HARVEY v. ROME SCALE & MFG. CO.

(No. 4,907.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 285*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE—DEFECTIVE APPLIANCES—NEGLIGENCE OF FELLOW SERVANT.

The allegations of the petition were substantially proved as laid, and it was error to grant a nonsuit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 1002, 1003, 1007, 1008, 1016, 1035, 1043, 1053; Dec. Dig. § 285.*]

Error from City Court of Floyd; J. H. Reece, Judge.

Action by Nolan Harvey against the Rome Scale & Manufacturing Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Eubanks & Mebane, of Rome, for plaintiff in error. Dean & Dean and J. M. Hunt, all of Rome, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Nolan Harvey sued the Rome Scale & Manufacturing Company for damages for personal injuries. At the conclusion of the evidence in his behalf the trial judge awarded a nonsuit, and this is the error complained of. Plaintiff was employed as a helper by the defendant, and, while helping a blacksmith at the forge in the defendant's shop in bending iron, his eye was injured by a piece of metal flying in his eye. In his petition he alleges, as the specific cause of his injury, that the blacksmith whom he was helping struck with his hammer a piece of iron on the anvil, "and as he did so a piece of iron chipped or peeled from said hammer, said piece of steel being about the size of a shot, with rough and ragged edges, and same flew into the right eye of petitioner, going completely through the eyeball, and lodging at the base of the eye, and destroying the sight thereof." He alleged that the "hammer was defective, and not sound, nor was same fitted for said work, for the reason that said hammer was brittle, fragile, and unstable, and, when same came in contact with hard substances, would break, scale, and peel off as said hammer did * * * on said occasion; all of which was unknown to petitioner before said injury, and all of which was known to the defendant or should have been known, and of which the defendant could have known by the use of ordinary care.

The burden was on the plaintiff to establish that the injury which he complained of was caused as he alleged in the petition, and it is distinctly alleged, as above stated, that a piece of iron chipped or peeled from the hammer when it struck the metal on the anvil, and that this piece of iron flew into the right eye of the petitioner, causing his injury. In support of this allegation, he testified as follows: "While I was holding it there [meaning a wrought iron cuff], and he [the blacksmith] was hammering, when he struck, a piece flew off of something, and hit me in the right eye, and knocked me over backwards. I could not tell at that time what it flew off from; but we looked at the hammer afterwards, and saw it was chipped off. I did not look at the piece of iron he was hammering afterwards to see if it came off of it. I saw the piece that came out of my eye, and it could not have come off of it. It came off of something in a round circle; showed where it had sloughed out of the side of something; could not have come off of the piece of iron he was striking, because the piece of iron was not in a round circle. * * * When I examined that hammer the appearance of the face of that hammer was this: Around the edges of that hammer it was chipped off, little pieces all around the edges of it, in several places, all around the edges in a kind of brittle-looking state. The piece that came out of my eye compared with the face of that hammer in this, that one side was rounding, and the other was rugged, just like if it had been chipped out of something." From this evidence the jury would have been authorized to infer that the piece of iron came from the hammer, and not from the iron or anvil, although the evidence is not clear and distinct on the point. It nevertheless makes a question for the jury, and could not have been determined as a matter of law.

The next question arising is whether the hammer was defective in the manner alleged. Several witnesses in behalf of the plaintiff testified that the hammer was defective. It is fundamental that one of the nondelegable duties of the master is to exercise reasonable care in furnishing safe instrumentalities with which his employes or servants are to do the work required of them. Under the evidence in the present case the question was issuable whether this duty had been fully performed by the master.

It is also urged by learned counsel for defendant that the nonsuit was proper because the evidence showed that the blacksmith and the plaintiff were fellow servants, and that the injury was due to the negligence of the blacksmith in striking the anvil instead of the hot iron. If the evidence conclusively showed that the injury was caused by the negligence of a fellow servant, the contention would be sound; but there are circumstances from which the jury might reasonably have inferred that the fault was in the defective condition of the hammer, or in the defective material of which the hammer was made, and that but for these defects, one or both, the injury would not have occurred. These are matters for determination by the jury. After giving the case a careful consideration, we have come to the conclusion that the plaintiff proved prima facie the allegations of his petition, and therefore that he should not have been nonsuited. This case differs from that of Georgia R. Co. v. Nelms, 83 Ga. 70, 9 S. E. 1049, 20 Am. St. Rep. 308, in that the defects complained of in the present case were not latent and not in a hammer apparently sound. According to the plaintiff's allegations and evidence, the defects were such as the master could have discovered in the use of ordinary care by inspection.

Judgment reversed.

EUBANKS v. CENTRAL OF GEORGIA RY. CO. (No. 4,830.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

RAILROADS (§ 400*)—INJURY TO PERSON ON TRACK—REBUTTING PRESUMPTION OF NEGLIGENCE.

The jury was authorized to infer that plaintiff's minor son was killed by the running of the locomotive and cars of the defendant company, and therefore the statutory presumption of negligence as charged in the petition was raised against the company. The defendant company introduced evidence tending to rebut this presumption. The evidence was not of such probative weight and effect as clearly to rebut the presumption of negligence, and leave the question to be determined as one of law. A direction of a verdict for the defendant was therefore erroneous. Civil Code 1910, § 5926; Davis v. Kirkland, 1 Ga. App. 5, 58 S. E. 209; Ellenberg v. Sou. Ry. Co., 5 Ga. App. 389, 63 S. E. 240; Bryson v. Sou. Ry. Co., 3 Ga. App. 407, 59 S. E. 1124.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1365-1381; Dec. Dig. § 400.*]

Error from City Court of Sandersville; E. W. Jordan, Judge.

Action by Mollie Eubanks against the Central of Georgia Railway Company. A verdict was directed for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Evans & Evans, of Sandersville, for plaintiff in error. F. H. Saffold, of Swainsboro, and J. J. Harris, of Sandersville, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment reversed.

GIPSON v. LOUISVILLE & N. R. CO. (No. 5,042.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

JURISDICTION—LAW OF ANOTHER STATE.

The first count of the petition in this suit, brought under the Alabama statute, is controlled by the decision of this court in Tennessee Coal Co. v. George, 11 Ga. App. 221, 75 S. E. 567. Under the ruling announced in that decision, it was erroneous for the trial judge to sustain the demurrer to the first count of the petition. The second count was properly stricken.

Tennessee Coal Co. v. George, 11 Ga. App. 221, 75 S. E. 567. Under the ruling announced in that decision, it was erroneous for the trial judge to sustain the demurrer to the first count of the petition. The second count was properly stricken.

Error from City Court of Atlanta; H. M. Reid, Judge.

Action by C. Gipson against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Gibson & Davis, of Birmingham, Ala., and Atkinson & Born, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Tye, Peeples & Jordan, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment reversed.

SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH CO. v. GLAWSON. (No. 4,073.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 8, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1195*)—SUBSEQUENT PROCEEDINGS—LAW OF THE CASE.

A judgment of the Court of Appeals affirming a judgment overruling a general demurrer to a petition is the "law of the case" throughout all subsequent stages of the trial, and is binding upon the parties, even though, after its rendition, and before final judgment in the case, the Supreme Court in another case renders a decision which conflicts with that announced by the Court of Appeals.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4631-4635; Dec. Dig. § 1195.*]

2. SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The evidence was sufficient to support the averments in the petition in reference to the measure of damages and the right of the plaintiff to recover, if the defendant was negligent as alleged. (Pottle, J., dissenting.)

3. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§§ 45, 66*)—INADEQUATE SERVICE—DAMAGES—BURDEN OF PROOF.

Telephone companies are required to exercise only ordinary care promptly to furnish a subscriber means of communication over their lines with other subscribers. Failure to exercise such care authorizes the recovery of whatever damages may proximately result from this breach of duty. Where, however, suit is brought against a telephone company for damages alleged to have resulted from the negligent failure to give a subscriber telephonic connection, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove negligence. Even if proof of a failure to give the connection raises an inference of negligence, the inference is removed when it appears that the telephone company has exercised all ordinary care and diligence, and that, notwithstanding the performance of this duty, some portion of the delicate mechanism comprising the telephone system got out of order from some unknown and unforeseen cause against which ordinary care could not guard.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 16, 20½, 61-63; Dec. Dig. §§ 45, 66.*]

Error from City Court of Americus; Z. A. Littlejohn, Judge.

Action by J. L. Glawson against the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

For opinion of Supreme Court answering certified questions, see 79 S. E. 136.

Glawson brought his action against the telephone company to recover damages alleged to have resulted from the death of his wife. Plaintiff resided in the country, a distance of some seven miles from Americus, and had in his house a telephone connecting with a switchboard in Americus, through which communication could be had with other subscribers. On the night of October 2, 1909, the plaintiff's wife was threatened with a miscarriage, and about 3 o'clock in the morning of October 3, the plaintiff obtained telephone connection with his physician, who resided in Americus, and was advised by him to apply certain remedies. Plaintiff then hung up the receiver, which closed the circuit. Shortly after 3 o'clock, the condition of the plaintiff's wife becoming alarming, he again signaled the telephone operator for the purpose of obtaining communication with the doctor, to advise him to come at once. He made repeated efforts to obtain the connection, but received no response from the operator until the lapse of more than two hours, when the connection was given, and the physician urged to come immediately. The physician left at once, but reached the plaintiff's house too late to relieve his wife, and she died in consequence of a post partum hemorrhage, following a miscarriage. It is alleged that the telephone mechanism was in good order, and that the defendant was grossly negligent in that its servants in charge of the switchboard negligently, willfully, and wantonly failed and refused to respond to plaintiff's call, and that but for this negligence the physician could and would have reached the plaintiff's house in time to save the life of his wife. More particularly the petition charges the defendant with negligence (1) in failing to give plaintiff connection with the physician's telephone; (2) in failing to answer the plaintiff's signal and give the desired connection; and (3) in that the servants of the defendant, who knew or ought to have known that the plaintiff would desire to communicate with his physician, either wantonly or of their own fault failed to hear, or else willfully refused to answer the signal and give the desired connection. A general demurrer to the petition was overruled, and the trial resulted in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $5,000. The defendant's motion for a new trial was denied.

H. E. W. Palmer, B. J. Clay, and McDaniel & Black, all of Atlanta, and W. P. Wallis, of Americus, for plaintiff in error. Robt. L. Berner, of Macon, and J. A. Hixon, of Americus, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. [1] 1. The judgment overruling the demurrer was affirmed by this court at a previous term. Glawson v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co., 9 Ga. App. 450, 71 S. E. 747. That decision became "the law of the case," binding upon the parties throughout all subsequent stages of the trial. We cannot, therefore, upon the present writ of error, even if we were disposed to do so, review the former decision. Southern Bell Telephone Co. v. Glawson, 140 Ga. 507, 79 S. E. 136. It follows that, if the plaintiff proved his case substantially as laid in the petition, the evidence is sufficient to support the verdict in his favor; otherwise not.

[2] 2. The writer is of the opinion that the evidence is not sufficient to support the averment in the petition that, if the plaintiff had obtained telephone connection with his physician, he would have immediately responded, and could and would have reached the plaintiff's home in time to save the life of his wife, and that the remedies which he would have applied would have had this effect. Upon this point the writer is of opinion that the evidence is too speculative and conjectural, and that the decisions of the Supreme Court in Seifert v. Western Union Tel. Co., 129 Ga. 181, 58 S. E. 699, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1149, 121 Am. St. Rep. 210, and Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Reynolds, 139 Ga. 385, 77 S. E. 388, are controlling. These two decisions have been recently expressly approved by the Supreme Court. Southern Bell Telephone Co. v. Glawson, 140 Ga. —, 79 S. E. 136. The majority of this court are, however, of the opinion that the evidence substantially supports the averments of the petition upon the question of damage, and that the law relating to this question is settled in the plaintiff's favor by the decision of this court affirming the judgment overruling the demurrer.

[3] 3. We are all agreed that the evidence did not authorize a finding that the death of the plaintiff's wife was due to any act of the defendant's, of either omission or commission, which in law amounted to negligence. It appears from the evidence that, under the rules and regulations of the defendant at the Americus office, the night operator is allowed to go to sleep in a room situated a few feet from the switchboard. In the daytime and at night, until the pressure of business is over, the operator remains at the switchboard, and subscribers signal the operator by means of a small disk or drop, which is visible to the operator as soon as the connection is made by the subscriber, either by removing the receiver from his telephone or by turning a crank, according to the system in use. At night there is on the switchboard a night bell circuit. Throughout the day this circuit is not in service, but is put on when the operator retires for the night. When the night circuit is in operation, upon a signal from a subscriber, the visual signal or drop on the switchboard comes in contact with the night circuit and causes a gong or bell to ring loudly enough to arouse the operator. The contact touches on a very small circuit very lightly, and is considered a delicate mechanism. It frequently gets out of order, and the cause of the disturbance is rarely discovered. At about 6 o'clock on the evening before the husband sought to obtain connection with the physician, the night circuit was tested and found to be in good working order. The night signal system used by the defendant was the one in general use by telephone companies and the best known to the service. When Glawson communicated with his physician the first time, the operator had not retired, and had not put on the night circuit. After his conversation was over, the night circuit was put on, and the operator retired. She did not hear the bell ring, and did not know that Glawson had signaled again until 5:20 in the morning, when she was called by a signal on another circuit, and she then saw the drop signal at Glawson's number. She immediately called him, and connected him with the physician's telephone. When the operator retired she supposed the night circuit was in order, and knew nothing to the contrary until she saw the day signal as above stated.

Early in the morning, after it was found that the night bell would not ring, the mechanism was inspected. The condition then found is thus described by the inspector: "The night bell contacts were slightly bent, just enough to keep the night alarm from operating, a very small fractional part of an inch. The distance between that contact of the bell wouldn't be the thickness of a newspaper. The effect of that slight lack of contact with the gong would be when the phone was rung the night alarm would fail to operate; it wouldn't ring. We have a little shutter in the office connected with the subscriber's line which operates, when the subscriber rings the bell, to notify the operator that she is wanted on that line, and the night bell contacts are, you may say, an emergency arrangement for the use of the night operator during the hours when she is supposed to be asleep. She connects on a night bell, in which there is a fine spring and wire, and when the shutter falls it pushes the spring over to the wire, and closes the contact, and causes the emergency bell to ring. Now, if this spring gets bent, and fails to connect with the wire, it would cause the night bell to fail to ring. The shutter that I spoke of is a little metal arrangement about an inch square, and there is one at each line, and, when the subscriber turns his crank, that causes the little catch that holds the shutter to lift up, and the shutter drops down, disclosing a surface of a different color to the operator, and shows her that that party is calling. If she was not present, and the night gong was on, that would not disclose that fact to her. As to the operating at night on that particular line, we have a switch on the switchboard which the night operator cuts when she retires, and which is in connection with the night bell, and which causes the night bell to operate during her absence from the switchboard. Dropping that little shutter that I spoke about when the subscriber has rung his bell by turning his crank causes the night bell to ring; the shutter falls down, and causes the little spring to come into contact with the wire, and completes the circuit, and causes the night bell to ring. On the next morning I found that spring a very small part of an inch, a fractional part, less than the thickness of a sheet of paper, from the wire, and in that condition the night bell would not operate, and the operator could not get the signal. I made the adjustment in that same spring so that it would ring the bell. The apparatus that was in use on that occasion was the standard equipment for that class of service." The inspector also testified: "There are several ways in which that spring could get bent so as to keep it from making the contact that I have just described. It doesn't take much force to bend one, if it comes from the right direction. It could be bent very easily by any slight force, and be done in such a manner that it would not make the contact. It could have been hit by some of the operators on the switchboard while the operator was at work on the switchboard, and that could be done without the operator detecting it. She wouldn't know until it was called to her attention by the night bell failing to operate while she was looking at it. It would be practically concealed from her. There is nothing to disclose it to her attention. It doesn't take much force to make the contact with that spring. It is a very fine spring, very delicate, necessarily so. That shutter might fall with about the weight of a half dollar, the force of a half dollar placed perpendicularly and allowed to drop on the flat surface, or a little bit less—about the same force as a half dollar set upon a table and allowed to turn over."

There is nothing in the evidence to justify the conclusion that the operator willfully refused to respond to the plaintiff's signal. She testified, and her testimony is undisputed, that she gave the plaintiff a connection about 2 o'clock; that about 5 o'clock she was awakened by a night signal on another "position," and then for the first time discovered that plaintiff had been calling; that she did nothing to put the night circuit out of order, and did not know when it got out of order; and that she answered her night calls as usual. The company was bound only to ordinary diligence. The only evidence of a failure to exercise this degree of care is the fact that the night circuit got out of order, and the bell failed to ring. The burden was on the plaintiff to prove his allegations of negligence. It appears from the testimony that the failure of the gong or bell to ring was due to the fact that the "night bell contacts" were slightly bent, so slightly as not to be observed except upon a close inspection. The mechanism was inspected at 6 o'clock, and found to be in good working order. Just what force bent the night contact does not appear. According to the evidence, the mechanism was delicate, and human ingenuity has been unable to attain absolute perfection or to construct a device for night service which will never get out of order. Ordinary care did not require the defendant to keep the operator on duty all night at an exchange where there was only a small demand for service during the latter part of the night. The operator was up at 2 o'clock. The company had in use the best contrivance human experience and ingenuity had been able to discover. It was inspected and found to be working properly. It got out of order from some unknown and unforeseen cause. The mere fact that it was out of order did not of itself alone prove negligence.

Telephone subscribers take the risk of a failure to obtain connection due to any disarrangement or disturbance of the mechanism not caused by negligence on the part of the telephone company. In other words, if the company furnishes facilities equal to those in general use, and uses ordinary care to keep them in proper working order, and to furnish the subscriber the service for which he has contracted, he cannot hold the company responsible for the failure to make prompt connection in a given instance. The evidence discloses (and it is a matter of common knowledge) that frequently a subscriber cannot obtain a connection, and the cause of the trouble is not discovered until after a most minute inspection. Nor is the fact that trouble exists generally discovered until a connection is sought and not obtained. To hold these companies responsible for the consequences ensuing from a failure to make a connection, because an inspection afterwards made shows that some part of the mechanism was out of order, would be equivalent to making them insure a connection whenever called for, and render them liable for any damage which may result from the failure to furnish promptly the service called for. This would be holding them to the very highest possible degree of diligence; whereas, they are, under the law, bound only to exercise ordinary care. The time may come when the instrumentalities may be so perfected that a higher degree of care should be imposed upon those undertaking to furnish telephone service; but that time has not yet arrived.

Questions of negligence are generally for the jury; but where, as in this case, there is no evidence of negligence, a verdict finding that there was negligence is contrary to law, and should be set aside. The plaintiff contends, however, that the evidence authorized the jury to find, either that the operator saw the shutter or drop in a condition which would indicate that the plaintiff was signaling, or that she was lacking in ordinary diligence in failing to see the signal or hear the noise made by the drop of the disk. The operator testifies positively that she did not see the shutter down, and did not hear the noise made by the drop of the disk, and there was not a particle of evidence to justify the inference that she was telling an untruth. The presumption is that, if she had known the plaintiff was signaling, she would have responded. There is nothing in the evidence to suggest any reason why she should not have done so. She appears to have been a faithful and competent employe, diligent, and attentive to her duties, and there is nothing to warrant the conclusion that she willfully and wantonly refused to give the plaintiff the connection which he desired. The plaintiff testified that he signaled the operator about 10 or 15 seconds after he had finished his conversation with the doctor and hung up the receiver. He said, however, that the telephone was in the hall on the facing of the door that entered his wife's room; that he hung up the receiver, walked 10 or 12 feet to the foot of his wife's bed, stopped long enough to see that she was in labor, then walked back to the telephone, and signaled the operator. The operator testified that, after the plaintiff had finished the conversation with the doctor, she disconnected them, and retired "as soon as the connection was completed, and the call taken down, and left the room as soon as I could walk from one room into the other—about a minute, I suppose." The evidence shows that the room in which the operator retired was located just west of the switchboard, about 10 or 12 feet away.

Counsel for the plaintiff contend that, as the plaintiff said the time which elapsed between the end of his conversation and the effort to signal the operator was but 10 or 15 seconds, and the operator admitted that she remained in the room a minute after the conversation ended, the jury were authorized to find either that she willfully refused to give the connection, or else that she negligently failed to see or hear the plaintiff's signal. Neither the plaintiff nor the operator made any exact computation of time. It is manifest that both were giving merely an estimate of the time which elapsed between the two occurrences to which they referred. The physical facts show that the time probably required was about the same in each instance. The plaintiff was obliged to hang up the receiver, walk 10 or 12 feet to his wife's bedside, remain long enough to see that she was in labor, return the same distance to the telephone, and take down the receiver, and signal the operator. He says positively this required not more than 10 or 15 seconds. Without using the technical terms referred to in the evidence, it is perfectly plain that all that the operator was required to do could have been done in at least as short a time and probably in less time than was required for the plaintiff to do what he says he did. At any rate, the operator says positively and unequivocally that she immediately left the switchboard after the conversation ended, and retired to her room, some 10 or 12 feet away; that she did not see or hear the plaintiff signal; and that she did not know that he had signaled until 5:20 the next morning. She had no reason to anticipate that the plaintiff would call again. Ordinary care did not require her to remain at the switchboard. She had a right to rely upon the fact that the night gong was in good order, and that by this means she would be advised of any call made by a subscriber. There is nothing in the evidence to justify the conclusion either that the operator wantonly refused to recognize the plaintiff's signal, or that she was lacking in ordinary care in failing to observe it. For these reasons, we are clear that the verdict was not authorized by the evidence, and that a new trial should have been granted.

Judgment reversed.

BLACKBURN et al. v. MOREL. DONALDSON et al. v. SAME.

(Nos. 4,744, 4,747.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Sept. 23, 1913.
On Motion for Rehearing, Oct. 3, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PRINCIPAL AND SURETY (§ 117*)—VIOLATION OF CONTRACT—DISCHARGE OF SURETY.

This was an action against the principal and the sureties on the bond of a building contractor, conditioned that he would faithfully perform the stipulations of a building contract. It was admitted by the plaintiff in his testimony that the principal in the bond had not complied with the contract in certain material particulars, and that the plaintiff made payments to him, from time to time, in excess of the amount authorized by the contract and prior to the times when they were due, and failed to require of him the affidavits provided for in the contract in reference to work done and material furnished for the building. Held, this conduct on the part of the plaintiff tended to increase the risk of the sureties on the bond, and operated to discharge them from all liability thereon. It follows that the verdict against the sureties was contrary to the evidence and should have been set aside.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Surety, Cent. Dig. §§ 283-285; Dec. Dig. § 117.*]

2. SUFFICIENCY OF PETITION.

The petition as amended was not subject to any of the demurrers filed thereto.

3. VERDICT AGAINST PRINCIPAL OBLIGOR APPROVED.

The verdict against the principal obligor in the bond was authorized by the evidence, and no error of law was committed which would require a reversal of the judgment overruling the motion for a new trial as to him.

4. COSTS (§ 238*)—APPEAL—UNNECESSARY RECORD.

Where a suit is brought against the principal and sureties on a bond, and the plaintiff obtains verdict and judgment, and one writ of error is prosecuted to this court by all of the defendants, and another writ of error by the sureties only, the questions involved in both records being identical so far as the sureties are concerned, and the judgment against them is reversed, the second writ of error will be dismissed, and the costs thereof assessed against the plaintiffs in error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Costs, Cent. Dig. §§ 908-919; Dec. Dig. § 238.*]

On Motion for Rehearing.

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

5. PRINCIPAL AND SURETY (§ 100*) — DISCHARGE OF SURETY—BUILDING CONTRACT—CONSTRUCTION.

That a building contract provided for changes in the structure to be erected did not authorize a change as to the method and amount of the payments without consent of the sureties on the contractor's bond.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Surety, Cent. Dig. §§ 162-165; Dec. Dig. § 100.*]

Error from City Court of Statesboro; H. B. Strange, Judge.

Two actions, both by J. J. B. Morel, one against L. R. Blackburn and others, the other against J. H. Donaldson and others. From the judgment, defendants bring error. In the former action judgment reversed in part, and in part affirmed. In the latter, writ of error dismissed. Motion for rehearing denied.

J. J. E. Anderson and R. Lee Moore, both of Statesboro, and Hitch & Denmark, of Savannah, for plaintiffs in error. White & Lovett, of Sylvania, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. In case No. 4,744, judgment reversed in part and in part affirmed. In case No. 4,747, writ of error dismissed.

On Motion for Rehearing.

(a) The court did not overlook the fact that there was testimony to the effect that the amount of work done at the time of several of the payments referred to in the record may have exceeded in value the amount actually paid by the owner; but, in our opinion, the sureties were entitled, as a matter of law, to have the contract strictly construed, because the liability of a surety is stricti juris, and it is undisputed that the payments made by the owner were not made in conformity with the contract, in that it appears that payments in excess of those provided for by the contract had, in each instance, been made before the completion of specific portions of the building, as provided in the contract. In other words, while it appears from the testimony that the payments made by the owner at a particular time were less than the value of the work done and the material furnished for the building as a whole, the particular portion of the building which, under the terms of the contract, should have been completed before any payment was made at all had not been so completed. The record shows, without dispute, that though at the time payment was made for the completion of the first story of the building, work had been done on a portion of the second story and up to the roof joists, still nothing had been done on the front end of the first story of the building, and, in fact, scarcely anything had been done on this portion of the building at the time the contractor abandoned the contract.

(b) For this reason, although there was an issue upon the point, it is immaterial whether the payments were in excess of the work done. There was no dispute that the payments were made in advance of the completion of the first story, according to the terms of the contract, and likewise in advance of the completion of the second story.

(c) As to the failure of the owner to require the statutory affidavit from the contractor, the mere fact that the affidavit was taken when the last payment was made was not material. As stated above, the liability of a surety is stricti juris, and cannot be extended, and a surety is relieved by any act which tends to increase his risk; and whether in fact there is an increase of his risk or not, there is a breach of the contract. Nothing ruled in Adams v. Haigler, 2 Ga. App. 99, 58 S. E. 330, affects this proposition.

(d) The fact that there was testimony that at the time the contractor suspended his work and abandoned the contract installments amounting to $2,500 would have been due if the work had proceeded in regular stages as provided by the contract, and that the payments amounted to a less sum than $2,500, does not affect the undisputed fact that the building was in a very different condition, so far as the liability of the sureties to complete it was concerned, at the time the contractor abandoned his work than it would have been if the contract had been complied with and if the work had proceeded as stipulated in the contract. The sureties, not having consented to this change of the contract, were entitled to claim a discharge, regardless of how it affected them, and even if the change had inured to their benefit.

[5] (e) The fact that the contract provided for change and alteration in the plans of the building has no bearing on the proposition to which we have referred, for there is a marked difference between a change as to the method and amount of the payments and a stipulation providing for changes in the structure to be erected. Nothing in the ruling in Wiley v. Stanford, 22 Ga. 385, or in Ward v. McLamb, 118 Ga. 811, 45 S. E. 688, which authorizes the discharge of a surety pro tanto, is in point. In fact, under the provisions of the code section, we do not see how such a judgment is possible. A surety is either liable or not, and if any act is done which increases or which tends to increase his risk he will be discharged.

The court fully considered the rulings in Adams v. Haigler, 123 Ga. 659, 51 S. E. 638, and in Aetna Indemnity Co. v. Town of Comer, 136 Ga. 24, 70 S. E. 676, and the motion for rehearing upon this point presents nothing new. Motion denied.

McDUFFIE v. LUMMUS COTTON GIN CO. (No. 5,018.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. TRIAL (§ 139*)—DIRECTION OF VERDICT.

"A verdict should not be directed unless there is no issue of fact, or unless the proved facts, viewed from every possible legal point of view, can sustain no other finding than that directed." Davis v. Kirkland, 1 Ga. App. 5, 58 S. E. 209.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 332, 333, 338-341, 365; Dec. Dig. § 139.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

2. SALES (§ 363*)—ACTION FOR PRICE—QUESTION FOR JURY.

Where, in an action on a promissory note for the price of a gin outfit, under a contract obliging plaintiff to superintend putting it in place, defendant relied on failure of the machine to work satisfactorily, and the evidence showed that such failure was due to the misplacement of two pulleys, but did not show whether such misplacement was the fault of plaintiff or of defendant, it was error to direct a verdict for plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. § 1064; Dec. Dig. § 363.*]

Error from City Court of Abbeville; W. H. Lasseter, Judge.

Action by the Lummus Cotton Gin Company against D. McDuffie. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Max E. Land, of Cordele, for plaintiff in error. Hal Lawson, of Abbeville, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. The Lummus Cotton Gin Company sued McDuffie upon a promissory note for the purchase price of a gin outfit, which he had bought under a written contract of purchase, in which the seller agreed to furnish a competent man to superintend the erection of the machinery, and the purchaser agreed to "properly put up and operate the machine according to the printed directions furnished by the manufacturers." Attached to the contract is a drawing applicable to the order, and a statement that blueprints of building plans and machinery, identified by certain letters and numbers, have been sent; but these blueprints do not appear in the record. The defendant admitted the execution of the note, and assumed the burden of proving his plea of partial failure of consideration; but at the conclusion of the testimony, upon motion of the plaintiff's counsel, the court directed a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount sued for. In the bill of exceptions error is specifically assigned upon the order of the court directing the verdict, upon the ground that there was such an issue of fact presented by the evidence that the jury would have been authorized to find a verdict in favor of the defendant, under the plea of partial failure of consideration, or at least to have returned a verdict for a less amount than that which the court directed the jury to find in favor of the plaintiff.

[1, 2] We are of the opinion that the trial judge erred in directing the verdict. There is ample evidence in the record that the machinery failed to work satisfactorily. The particular in which the operation of the machinery was defective was that the fans failed to suck the cotton up and blow the seed away as fast as it should. By reason of this condition the seed fues became clogged up, and it was necessary to remove the seed by hand, and frequently the belts would be torn. According to some of the testimony, the delay in clearing the seed fues by hand greatly reduced the daily ginning capacity of the outfit, to say nothing of the expense entailed by the breakage of the belts. It appears to have been undisputed that the failure of the gin to operate properly was due to the fact that a 20-inch pulley was put where a 24-inch pulley ought to have been put, and the 24-inch pulley was fitted on where the 20-inch pulley should have been placed, for one of the witnesses transferred these pulleys, exchanging their positions, and after the change there was no recurrence of the difficulty as to the seed fue. It is perhaps upon the strength of the fact that the testimony upon this point was uncontradicted that the court adjudged that there was no issue to be submitted to the jury, for this undisputed testimony indicates that the machinery is perhaps of good quality and reasonably suited for its purpose, and thus it might superficially appear that the defendant had failed to carry the burden assumed by him of establishing a partial breach of the contract of purchase. Having admitted a prima facie case, it devolved upon the defendant, in order to warrant a verdict in his favor, or in order to obtain a reduction below the amount mentioned in the note, to establish that there had been a breach of the contract in some respect, and that this breach had resulted in subjecting him to pecuniary loss.

At first sight it would seem that, since the defendant was to have the machinery put up, and since the defective operation of the machinery which subjected the defendant to loss was due to the misplacement of two pulleys, and might have been avoided if, in putting up the machinery, these two pulleys had been properly placed, the defendant was the author of his own wrong, and that no matter what might have been his loss of patronage, or his expense for broken belting, he would not be permitted to recoup either. It appears, however, that the very first stipulation in the contract under which the defendant purchased this gin is an agreement on the part of the F. H. Lummus Sons Company (now Lummus Cotton Gin Company) to furnish a competent man to superintend the erection of the gin machinery which was being purchased. The contract must be construed as a whole. The agreement of the purchaser is to properly put up and operate the machinery according to the printed directions furnished by the manufacturers. When this is construed with the undertaking of the seller to furnish a competent man to superintend the erection of the machinery, it is very evident that a proper construction of the contract compels the conclusion that the purchaser was to do nothing more than to furnish the necessary laborers to erect the machinery under the direction, control, and superintendence of a man (competent to erect such machinery) who was to be furnished by the seller. In fact, construing the undertaking of the seller as to the erection of the gin outfit in connection with the undertaking of the buyer in this case, the language of the contract as to the erection of the gin cannot be given other force than this, so far as it relates to the purchaser, and it is apparent that this stipulation and the agreement of the purchaser more especially relate to the operation of the machinery, so far as he is concerned, than to its erection.

It is not disputed that the defendant gave notice of the failure of the gin to operate properly, and that in response to his notice the plaintiff company sent a man to correct the defect. It was for the jury to say whether he was a man competent to deal with the situation, for he failed to discover the misplacement of the pulleys, and the jury might be authorized to find that neither he nor the other agent of the plaintiff company, who was sent to superintend the original erection of the ginning outfit, was competent. Under the contract it is a jury question whether the F. H. Lummus Sons Company complied with its undertaking to furnish a competent man to superintend the erection of the machinery, as it agreed to do, and whether, if the defendant suffered from the defective operation of the machinery, it was his fault, or whether it was due to the failure of the plaintiff to supply a proper superintendent. It does not appear from the record that the defendant did not erect the ginning outfit, so far as it was his duty to aid in its erection, in accordance with the blueprints, because there are no blueprints in the record.

Two facts are undisputed: That the gin did not operate properly, and that it was due to the misplacement of the two pulleys. It would certainly be for the jury to say whether, under the contract, the misplacement of these pulleys was the fault of the plaintiff or of the defendant. We do not deal with the other questions sought to be presented because, if there were any errors, they are not likely to recur upon another trial of this case, which we feel constrained to order.

Judgment reversed.

HOUSTON v. STRACHAN & CO.
(No. 4,937.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

EXCEPTIONS, BILL OF (§ 43*)—TIME FOR FILING.

In this case the bill of exceptions was certified by the trial judge on April 30, 1913, and it was filed in the office of the clerk of the lower court May 17, 1913. Not having been filed in the clerk's office within 15 days from the date of the judge's certificate, this court is without jurisdiction, and the writ of error must be dismissed. Civil Code 1910, § 6167; Woods v. State, 11 Ga. App. 383, 75 S. E. 491; Foote & Davies v. Evans, 10 Ga. App. 194, 72 S. E. 1098.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see *Exceptions, Bill of, Cent. Dig. § 72½; Dec. Dig. § 43.**]

Error from City Court of Savannah; Davis Freeman, Judge.

Action between Frank Houston and Strachan & Co. Writ of error by Frank Houston dismissed.

Twiggs & Gazan and Morris H. Bernstein, all of Savannah, for plaintiff in error. Osborne & Lawrence and Edmund H. Abrahams, all of Savannah, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Writ of error dismissed.

LUDDEN & BATES SOUTHERN MUSIC HOUSE v. HALE (No. 4,904.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 208*)—CERTIORARI—REVIEW—BURDEN OF PROOF.

The plaintiff had a written contract with the defendant, authorizing him to sell pianos as its agent, and providing that the agent should receive a half of the difference between the cost of the piano, including freight, stool, and scarf, and the selling price as shown on the defendant's price list. The plaintiff's agency had terminated, and he was succeeded by another agent. The defendant employed the plaintiff to sell to a certain person a piano, upon the understanding that the plaintiff was to receive "his commission as under his old contract." Plaintiff sold the piano at the price of $550 and upon terms approved by the defendant. Upon the trial, a price list introduced in evidence showed the selling price of the piano sold by the plaintiff to be $700. The plaintiff testified, however, that this price list was not the price list of the defendant, but was that of Chickering & Sons, the makers of the instrument; that he did not know what was the price of the piano as shown on the price list furnished him by the defendant, but that he did not think a piano of the style sold by him was ever sold by the defendant for more than $650. A witness for the defendant testified that $700 was the selling price. The certiorari record disclosed that a verdict was returned in the justice's court in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount sued for, but the summons is not in the record, and the amount sued for is nowhere disclosed therein. The defendant admitted that the plaintiff was entitled to recover some amount. The record fails to disclose the amount actually recovered. The burden was on the plaintiff in certiorari to show error, and, having failed to show what amount the plaintiff recovered, there was no error in overruling the certiorari.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see *Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 807-817; Dec. Dig. § 208.**]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; Geo. L. Bell, Judge.

Certiorari by the Ludden & Bates Southern Music House against H. H. Hale to review a judgment in favor of Hale rendered by a justice of the peace. Writ overruled, and plaintiff in certiorari brings error. Affirmed.

Arnaud & Donehoo, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Etheridge & Etheridge, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. Judgment affirmed.

RUSSELL v. STATE (No. 4,820.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EXECUTION (§ 129*)—"LEVY"—SUFFICIENCY—ESSENTIALS.

To constitute a valid levy upon personalty there must be an actual or constructive seizure of the property by the officer. A legal "levy" is not made by merely posting upon a mound of dirt, which the officer supposes to contain potatoes, a notice of levy on a specified quantity of potatoes; the officer not having seen the potatoes or reduced them to possession, and merely estimating the quantity of potatoes which should be in the mound, basing his estimate upon what he thinks the defendant's crops should have produced.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see *Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 290-304; Dec. Dig. § 129.**

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 5, pp. 4101-4106; vol. 8, p. 7705.]

2. LARCENY (§§ 3, 40*)—VARIANCE—OWNER-SHIP—ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

This being a prosecution for larceny, in which the title to the property alleged to have been stolen was laid in the levying officer, and it appearing, from the undisputed evidence, that no legal levy was made, no title was shown in the officer, and the conviction was unauthorized. The case, at best, was extremely weak on the question of criminal intent, even if it authorized a finding at all that the accused took and carried away the property described in the accusation with intent to steal the same. It was especially erroneous and prejudicial to charge the jury, in substance, that if they believed the defendant fraudulently violated the rights of the levying officer he would be guilty, and to fail to charge that the taking must have been with the intent to steal the same.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see *Larceny, Cent. Dig. §§ 3-10, 102-126, 160; Dec. Dig. §§ 3, 40.**]

Error from City Court of Louisville; W. L. Phillips, Judge.

L. O. Russell was convicted of larceny, and brings error. Reversed.

M. C. Barwick, of Augusta, for plaintiff in error. J. R. Phillips, Sol., of Louisville, for the State.

POTTLE, J. Judgment reversed.

CHITTY v. OLIVER. (No. 4,694.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 628*)—WRIT OF ERROR—DISMISSAL.

It affirmatively appears from the certificate of the clerk of the lower court that the delay in the transmission of the bill of exceptions was not due to any act of omission or commission on the part of counsel for the plaintiff in error; and the failure to transmit a transcript of the pleadings, as appears from the recitals of the bill of exceptions, was due to the fact that the case was tried upon an agreement in open court as to the contents of the originals, which had been lost or destroyed, which were not shown to have been in the possession of counsel for the plaintiff in error. For this reason the writ of error should not be dismissed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2750-2764; Dec. Dig. § 628.*]

2. PRIOR DECISION FOLLOWED—NEW TRIAL.

This case is controlled by the ruling of this court in Hodges v. Gillespie, Shields & Co., 13 Ga. App. —, 78 S. E. 832. The judge erred in refusing a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Toombs County; B. T. Rawlings, Judge.

Action between L. A. E. Chitty and W. C. Oliver. From an adverse judgment, Chitty brings error. Reversed.

H. H. Elders, of Reidsville, for plaintiff in error. Williams & Giles, of Lyons, and Hines & Jordan, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment reversed.

WILLINGHAM v. BUCKEYE COTTON OIL CO. (No. 4,418.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Aug. 25, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 380*)—BOND—QUALIFICATION OF SURETY.

The agent of a corporation is not, by reason of his agency, disqualified to become its surety upon an appeal bond. If he be solvent, his relation to his principal would not in any way diminish the right or power of the appellee to recover upon the bond.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2023-2028; Dec. Dig. § 380.*]

2. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§§ 92, 97, 171, 174*)—TRIAL DE NOVO—PLEADING—AMENDMENT.

An appeal is an investigation de novo. Patterson v. Sama, 2 Ga. App. 753, 59 S. E. 18; Abrams v. Lang, 60 Ga. 218, 221; Civil Code, § 5014. Where an action in a justice's court is not founded upon an unconditional contract in writing, the plea of the defendant need not be sworn to; and unless the answer is a dilatory plea, or a defense to an unconditional contract in writing, it need not be filed at the first term. When a case is appealed from a justice's court to a superior court, it becomes the duty of the defendant (if he relies upon any defense other than the general issue) to reduce his defense to writing before the case proceeds to trial. The performance of the duty of reducing his defense to writing may be in effect a mere amendment on the part of the defendant to the plea originally filed by him in the justice's court. But, even if this be the case, he will not thereby be precluded from the right of further amending upon the trial. Civil Code, § 473H.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 324, 325, 333, 655-657, 665-693; Dec. Dig. §§ 92, 97, 171, 174.*]

3. JUDGMENT (§ 594*)—SPLITTING CAUSE—ACTIONS ON CONTRACT.

Where the contract is entire, but one suit can be maintained for a breach thereof, and all the breaches occurring up to the commencement of the action must be included therein. Johnson v. Klassett, 9 Ga. App. 733, 72 S. E. 174; Puffer Manufacturing Co. v. Rivera, 10 Ga. App. 154, 73 S. E. 20; Thompson v. McDonald, 84 Ga. 5, 10 S. E. 448; Civil Code, § 4389.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 1109; Dec. Dig. § 594.*]

4. JUDGMENT (§ 594*)—BREACH—RIGHT OF ACTION.

One who claims a breach of the contract under which he was hired as a clerk for a period of one year, and contends that he was wrongfully discharged 4½ months before the expiration of the contractual relation, but who fails to institute his action to recover the amount of his monthly salary until after the expiration of the period covered by the contract, and then brings an action for only the other half of the salary for that month for which he has been paid half, is thereafter estopped to sue for the salary for the succeeding 4 months. The case is not affected by the reason of the fact that the amount claimed for the 4½ months is too large to be within the jurisdiction of the justice's court, for the reason that the plaintiff, and not the defendant, selects the forum in which their respective rights shall be investigated and determined.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 1109; Dec. Dig. § 594.*]

Error from Superior Court, Richmond County; H. C. Hammond, Judge.

Action by B. H. Willingham against the Buckeye Cotton Oil Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Wm. K. Miller, of Augusta, for plaintiff in error. Bryan Cumming, of Augusta, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

ROLL et al. v. SMITH et al.

Court of North Carolina. Oct. 8, 1913.)

SES (§§ 149, 159*)—COMPETENCY—

ACTION WITH DECEDENT.
An action by the widow and heirs of a decedent to recover land conveyed to him by his devise, where the delivery of the deed in controversy, the widow was permitted to testify that she saw her husband place the deed in his trunk and the trunk, notwithstanding Revisal 31, which provides that a party or interested party shall not be examined in his own interest or interest against the executor, administrator, or survivor of a deceased person, in a personal transaction or contract between the witness and the decedent, since she testified to no communication or transaction with the deceased, and no evidence against the personal reputation of the deceased or against any one under him.

—For other cases, see Witnesses, §§ 555, 556, 558, 560, 562, 563, 570, 582, 664, 666-669, 671-682; Dec. Dig. § 159.*]

(§ 273*)—DECLARATIONS AGAINST ADMISSIBILITY.

An action involving the delivery of a decedent's devise, the testimony of a party to the action or interested party that the devise said he gave the deed because he was his dependent, properly admitted; this not being a declaration but one against interest, the defendants acquired their title.

—For other cases, see Evidence, §§ 1108-1120; Dec. Dig. § 273.*]

(§ 110*)—ACTIONS—INSTRUCTIONS—DELIVERY.

An action involving the delivery of an undelivered deed, where the court properly charged the burden of proof, his refusal to deliver the deed, his possession of the presumptive evidence that it had been delivered was not error, since, while there is a presumption where nothing else is shown, this only means that the burden of proof is on the grantee to prove delivery, and it could add nothing to a charge on the court to say that there was a presumption against delivery.

—For other cases, see Ejectment, §§ 319-326; Dec. Dig. § 110.*]

AND ERROR (§ 928*) — PRESUMPTIONS—SUPPORT OF JUDGMENT.

In an action involving the delivery of an undelivered deed, the court refused to charge the burden of proof to the grantor's possession by the grantor's possession, that it had not been delivered, charged that this was a circumstance which the jury might consider, but the charge was not sent to the Supreme Court, and would be assumed that the court properly charged the burden of proof; no exception to such charge.

—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, §§ 3749-3754; Dec. Dig. § 928.*]

(§ 110*)—ACTIONS—INSTRUCTIONS—DELIVERY.

An action involving the delivery of an undelivered deed, where there was evidence that the court properly charged that the burden of the deed by the grantor was a circumstance which the jury could consider.

—For other cases, see Ejectment, §§ 319-326; Dec. Dig. § 110.*]

See same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep't Indexes

Appeal from Superior Court, Sampson County; Allen, Judge.

Action by Nellie Gertrude Carroll and others against Henry E. Smith and others. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendants appeal. Affirmed.

This is an action to recover a tract of land of 37 acres, which the plaintiffs claim Henry Carroll, from whom the defendants derive their title by devise, conveyed by deed to their ancestor, Albert Carroll, and the only issue in controversy is as to the delivery of the deed. The deed was probated but not registered, and there was evidence that it was delivered to the grantee at the time it was signed and placed by him in his trunk. After the death of Henry Carroll, the deed was found in his trunk with other papers.

Lillie Carroll, widow of Albert Carroll, testified that she saw Albert Carroll place the deed in his tin trunk and saw the deed in the trunk, and defendant excepted.

Geo. Melvin, father of Lillie Carroll, testified that he heard Henry Carroll say he had given Albert his deed because he was his dependent, and defendant excepted.

The defendant requested the court to charge the jury: "That the fact of Henry Carroll having the possession of the deed for the 37 acres of land along with his other title papers, if found by the evidence to be the fact, would be presumptive evidence that the deed had not been delivered." The court refused to so charge the jury and stated that there was no such presumption, but that it was a circumstance only, which the jury might consider. Defendant excepted.

The jury answered the issue in favor of the plaintiffs, and from the judgment rendered the defendant appealed.

Falson & Wright and G. E. Butler, all of Clinton, for appellants. Fowler & Crumpler, of Clinton, for appellees.

ALLEN, J. [1] The evidence of the widow was objected to under section 1631 of the Revisal, but she did not testify to a communication or transaction with the deceased (Johnson v. Cameron, 136 N. C. 243, 48 S. E. 640), nor was her evidence against the personal representative of the deceased or against any one claiming under the deceased. Bunn v. Todd, 107 N. C. 267, 11 S. E. 1043. She simply told what she saw and against one claiming under Henry Carroll and not under Albert Carroll.

[2] We can see no objection to the evidence of George Melvin, and none is shown in the brief. He is not a party to the action, has no pecuniary interest in the result, and was not testifying to a self-serving declaration but to one made against interest and before the defendants acquired any title.

[3,4] There is authority for the position taken by the defendant that there is a presumption that a deed found in possession of the grantor has not been delivered; but, properly understood, this can mean no more than that the burden of proof is on the grantee to prove delivery; and we must assume that his honor charged correctly as to the burden of proof, as the charge is not sent to this court, and there is no exception that he did not do so. Delivery is essential to the validity of a deed, and in the absence of registration, if the deed is found in possession of the grantor, nothing else appearing, the law says it has not been delivered and casts the burden of proof on the grantee who alleges a delivery, and it adds no additional force to the charge on the burden of proof to say there is a presumption against delivery.

[5] There is, however, evidence in this case of a delivery to the grantee, and it was therefore proper for his honor to charge that possession of the deed by the grantor, if found to exist, was a circumstance which the jury could consider.

In Tuttle v. Rainey, 98 N. C. 513, 4 S. E. 475, there was a controversy as to the delivery of a deed, and the court said, while commenting upon an instruction given to the jury: "If it was intended to say that the law presumed a delivery from the possession of the deed instead of that the law authorizes the jury from that fact to infer a delivery and, in the absence of rebutting evidence, to act upon it, it would be error."

We are therefore of opinion, on the whole record there is no error.

No error.

THIRD NAT. BANK OF ST. LOUIS v. EXUM et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 8, 1913.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 537*)—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE—BONA FIDE PURCHASER.

In an action by a bank upon notes procured by fraud and indorsed to it, evidence held sufficient to take to the jury the question whether the bank was a bona fide holder for value, or merely held the notes for collection.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 1862-1893; Dec. Dig. § 537.*]

2. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 356*)—BONA FIDE PURCHASER—HOLDER FOR COLLECTION.

Where a bank habitually credits a depositor's accounts with negotiable instruments indorsed to it by him, but charged against the account all such instruments as were not paid, the bank was a bailee for collection, and not a bona fide holder for value.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. § 908; Dec. Dig. § 356.*]

3. TRIAL (§ 191*)—INSTRUCTIONS—ASSUMING CONTROVERTED FACTS.

Where the indorsement of a note by the payee to a bank was expressly denied, it was error for the court to state to the jury that it was proved and not denied that the note went into the hands of the bank before it was due.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 420-431, 435; Dec. Dig. § 191.*]

4. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 497*)—BURDEN OF PROOF—BONA FIDE PURCHASERS.

Under Revisal 1905, § 2208, providing that, when it appears that the title of any one who negotiated an instrument was defective, the burden was upon the holder to show that he was a holder in due course, evidence that there was fraud in the execution of a note casts upon the holder the burden of proving that he was a bona fide purchaser for value.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 1448, 1675-1681, 1683-1687; Dec. Dig. § 497.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Lenoir County; Justice, Judge.

Action by the Third National Bank of St. Louis against W. P. Exum and others. Judgment for the plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Reversed, and new trial granted.

G. V. Cowper and T. O. Wooten, both of Kinston, for appellants. Loftin & Dawson, of Kinston, and McLean, Varner & McLean, of Lumberton, for appellee.

CLARK, C. J. This is another of the numerous actions upon notes to McLaughlin Bros. for the purchase of an "Imported French coach horse," of which so many have appeared in our reports. At this term in a case of this kind (Trust Co. v. Ellen, 163 N. C. —, 79 S. E. 283) we quoted Winter v. Nobs, 19 Idaho, 28, 112 Pac. 525, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 302, where that court took judicial notice that suits of this nature in behalf of McLaughlin Bros. were numerous throughout the country.

[1] In this case the defendant tendered an issue, "Is plaintiff the bona fide owner of the note in due course?" The assignment of error on the exception for refusal to submit such issue must be sustained if there was any evidence, and we think there was, to require the issue. Besides the inherent improbability that a bank in St. Louis would buy outright, or take as collateral, the large number of notes of this nature which McLaughlin Bros. were placing with them, signed by distant and unknown parties, as in this state and elsewhere, with the knowledge the bank had of litigation over such notes, there is other evidence for consideration. Among other evidence, there is the letter of September 26, 1908, from McLaughlin Bros. to the plaintiff bank, in which they say: "The writer will be in St. Louis some time next week, and will make some sort of arrangement and will give you a special account for these due notes, or a demand note, for the amount, and then you can collect them for us." The letters of November 24, 1908, by the attorneys of McLaughlin Bros. to the plaintiff bank, and the letter of November 28th in reply, show that the litigation in regard to the collection of this note was under the supervision and control of the lawyers for McLaughlin Bros. There is evidence that a large number of like notes for McLaughlin Bros. were taken over by the bank, amounting to about $50,000, and that plaintiff knew nothing of the makers. It was also in evidence that under instructions from McLaughlin Bros. when any of these notes were not paid the plaintiff sent them to the attorneys of McLaughlin Bros., as was this case. There is no evidence that the bank has ever paid, or been charged with, any expenses on account of the collection of these notes. McLaughlin Bros. deposited funds in bank, and the bank charged back the amount of any of these notes which were not paid. It would seem that the understanding was that if a note was not paid the bank was to bring suit in its own name under McLaughlin Bros.' instructions, and through their attorneys, and the bank was to look finally to McLaughlin Bros. for payment of any note which was not collected. One of the McLaughlin Bros. told a witness a number of times that they would remain liable on the notes whether protested or not, and the bank was given instructions not to protest the notes, and also held a general waiver of protest. Not only this, but McLaughlin Bros. guaranteed the payment of the notes. It was in evidence that the bank had been doing business with McLaughlin Bros. for a number of years, and knew the kind of business they were in, and were aware of the abundant litigation arising on contested notes. It was not likely, therefore, that the bank purchased the notes, or took them as collateral. It is true this may have been done. But there was evidence sufficient to go to the jury to pass upon the fact whether or not the true transaction was that the bank in effect merely held the notes for collection. It was at the request of McLaughlin Bros. that this and other suits upon these notes were brought in the name of the bank under the general supervision of the attorneys for McLaughlin Bros.

[2] In Packing Co. v. Davis, 118 N. C. 548, 24 S. E. 365, it was held: "When a bank habitually credited a depositor's account with negotiable instruments indorsed to it by such depositor, giving permission to the depositor to draw against such credits, but charged up to the depositor all such papers as were not paid on present action, or deducted them from such deposit, such a course of dealing stamps the transaction with reference to the title to instruments so indorsed as being unmistakably a bailment for collection simply, and no greater title is vested in the bank." To same effect, Boykin v. Bank, 118 N. C. 567, 24 S. E. 357; Davis v. Lumber Co., 180 N. C. 176, 41 S. E. 95; Cotton Mills v. Well, 129 N. C. 452, 40 S. E. 218; Latham v. Sprague, 163 N. C. —, 78 S. E. 282.

[3] The indorsement of the note was expressly denied, and the court erred in stating to the jury that it was proved, and not denied, that the note went into the hands of the plaintiff before it was due. This point has been recently and fully discussed by Hoke, J., in Park v. Exum, 156 N. C. 230, 72 S. E. 309, upon facts almost identical with this case.

[4] When there is evidence tending to show fraud in the execution of the note, the burden is thrown upon the plaintiff to show that it was a bona fide purchaser, and not upon the defendants to show the negative of that proposition. Bank v. Fountain, 148 N. C. 590, 62 S. E. 738; Park v. Exum, 156 N. C. 231, 72 S. E. 809; Vaughan v. Exum, 161 N. C. 494, 77 S. E. 679; Bank v. Waiser, 162 N. C. 53, 77 S. E. 1006; Trust Co. v. Ellen, 163 N. C. —, 79 S. E. 263; Rev. § 2208.

It is unnecessary to discuss the evidence of fraud in this case, as the above errors entitle the plaintiff to a new trial, and we only refer to the proposition because it is contended by the counsel for the plaintiff that the above rulings had been overturned by the decision in Bank v. Brown, 160 N. C. 23, 75 S. E. 1086. But reference to this last case will show that there was no evidence tending to show fraud, and therefore the burden was not shifted upon the defendant to show a purchase before maturity, and without notice of the defect. Revised 1905, § 2208.

New trial.

GRIFFIN v. COMMANDER et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 8, 1913.)

1. WILLS (§ 600*)—CONSTRUCTION — ESTATE CREATED—DEVISE WITH POWER OF DISPOSITION.

A devise generally of real estate, with a power of disposition, passes the fee without restriction, but a devise for life with power of disposition creates only a life estate with the power annexed; the test whether the fee or merely a life estate passes is whether the testator expressly limits the devise to the first taker to a life estate by specific language.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 1335-1339; Dec. Dig. § 600.*]

2. WILLS (§ 601*)—CONSTRUCTION — ESTATE CREATED—FEE SIMPLE — GENERAL DEVISE WITH POWER OF DISPOSITION.

A devise generally of real estate, "with power to give and devise the same after her (the devisee's) death, to our beloved children and grandchildren," not expressly restricting the devisee's estate to a life estate, passes the fee without restriction, and the words quoted are to be regarded as mere surplusage, as the right to devise is incident to the fee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 1340-1350, 1608; Dec. Dig. § 601.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Pasquotank County; Bragaw, Judge.

Controversy submitted without action, by Elizabeth G. Griffin against C. E. Commander and another. From a judgment for defendants, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

Ward & Thompson, of Elizabeth City, for appellant. J. C. Brooks, of Elizabeth City, for appellees.

CLARK, C. J. This is a controversy submitted without action to determine whether or not the plaintiff can make a good and valid title to the defendants for certain real estate in Elizabeth City which she has contracted to convey to them. W. W. Griffin died October 1, 1897, owning said realty in fee and leaving his widow, who is the plaintiff, two children, M. R. Griffin and Blanche Temple, each of whom had living children, and seven grandchildren, who were the children of his deceased son, Wm. J. Griffin. In March, 1901, said widow and her son, M. R. Griffin, instituted a special proceeding against Blanche Temple and the seven children of W. J. Griffin, deceased, for sale of the premises for partition. Such sale was made and confirmed, and a deed was made to the plaintiff as purchaser. In that proceeding the children of M. R. Griffin and Blanche Temple were not made parties, and this is now urged as a defect.

[1] The effect of such partition proceedings need not be discussed, for we are of opinion that under the will of W. W. Griffin the plaintiff took a fee simple in the locus in quo, and has a right to convey a good and indefeasible title to the defendants, to whom she has contracted to sell the same.

W. W. Griffin by his will devised and bequeathed to his widow, the plaintiff, "Elizabeth G. Griffin, all the remainder of my estate, real and personal, with power to give and devise the same after her death, to our beloved children and grandchildren, that inasmuch as they are and should be our lawful heirs and that they are equally our own and well beloved by each of us, as their joint parents, she has the same right of distribution of our estate, as I have, knowing no partiality nor discrimination in the same."

The rule governing this case is clearly stated in Borden v. Downey, 35 N. J. Law, 77: "Where an estate for life is expressly given, and a power of disposition is annexed to it, in such case the fee does not pass under such devise, but the naked power to dispose of the fee. It is otherwise in case there is a gift generally of the estate, with a power of disposition annexed. In this latter case the property itself is transferred."

[2] In the will of W. W. Griffin there is no limitation for life, and the words annexed do not restrict it to a life estate, but are merely an expression of the opinion of the testator that his wife, after his death, should have complete right of distribution of said estate as fully as he had himself, and would exercise it impartially.

In McKrow v. Painter, 89 N. C. 437, the testator gave the property to his wife "if she remains a widow; and if she marries she is only to have a child's part * * * and I do authorize my wife, * * * at her death, to divide this property among our children as she sees proper." The court held that under the act of 1784, now Revisal 3138, this language vested the absolute title in the wife of the testator, distinguishing Alexander v. Cunningham, 27 N. C. 430.

In Parks v. Robinson, 138 N. C. 269, 50 S. E. 649, it is held, citing 2 Underhill on Wills, § 686, that "a devise to a person for life only, with power of disposition, gives the devisee an estate for life, with power to appoint in fee simple."

In Jackson v. Robins, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 588, it is held to be settled law that: "Where an estate is given to a person generally, or indefinitely, with power of disposition, it carries a fee; and the only exception to the rule is, where the testator gives to the first taker an estate for life only, by certain and express words, and annexes to it a power of disposal. In that particular and special case, the devisee * * * will not take the estate in fee." This case is cited and approved in Bass v. Bass, 78 N. C. 374, where it was held that a devise to the testator's wife of his property "to be disposed of by will, or in any manner she may deem best," did not impose a limitation upon the gift, and that the words of appointment cannot be held to have such effect, and, further, that where an estate is given to a person generally, with the power of disposal, it is in fee unless the testator gives to the first taker an estate for life only, and annexes thereto a power to dispose of the reversion, citing 2 Jarman, Wills, 171, note 2; 4 Kent, Comm. 349; Sugden on Powers, 96.

Jackson v. Robins, supra, is also cited with approval in Patrick v. Morehead, 85 N. C. 62, 39 Am. Rep. 684, where it is laid down: "It has been settled upon unquestionable authority that, if an estate be given * * * to a person generally, with the power of disposition or appointment, it carries the fee; but if it be given to one for life only and there is annexed to it such a power, it does not enlarge the estate, but gives him only an estate for life." Bass v. Bass and Patrick v. Morehead, both supra, are cited with approval in Long v. Waldraven, 113 N. C. 337, 18 S. E. 251.

The test in cases of this kind is whether the testator expressly limits the devise of the first taker to a life estate by specific language. No such specific language is used in this case. The plaintiff took a fee simple absolute, and the phrase, "with the power to devise after her death to our children and grandchildren," does not limit the prior fee-simple estate devised to her. Such words were mere surplusage, because the right to devise is incident to her fee simple. Indeed the words, "she has the same right of distribution of our savings as I have," intimate a clear intention to devise the fee simple to her. In effect he said that, the property acquired by the toll of both of intended that his wife after his death should have the same power of disposing of such property as full and himself.

gment of the court below to the effect of this opinion is reversed.

WHITFORD v. NORTH STATE LIFE INS. CO.

Court of North Carolina. Oct. 8, 1913.)

§ 190*)—CONSTRUCTION.

of a statute are to be construed in the ordinary understood, and where the language is plain and admits of but one meaning there is no room for construction; only when the terms of the statute are ambiguous or the grammatical construction is doubtful that courts can exercise power of controlling the language in order to give effect to the supposed real intention of the Legislature.

e.—For other cases, see Statutes, §§ 266, 269; Dec. Dig. § 190.*]

§ 191*)—COMPETENCY—HUSBAND WIFE—"COMMUNICATE"—"COMMUNICATION."

In 1908, § 1636, declares that no husband shall be compellable to disclose confidential communication made by one to the other during marriage. Held, that the word "communicate" means to bestow, convey, recount, to impart, as to communication to any one, the word "communication" meaning the act of communicating; hence, a paper written by a husband to his wife, just prior to his suicide, giving her directions as to what she should do with reference to various matters after he was dead, and which he intended she should see until after his death, was not a communication during marriage and was therefore admissible in an action to prove suicide.

e.—For other cases, see Witnesses, §§ 738; Dec. Dig. § 191.*

r definitions, see Words and Phrases, §§ 1341, 1342; vol. 8, p. 7608.]

§ 272*)—DECLARATIONS AGAINST

ing by deceased, addressed to his wife, not intended to come into her hands after the writer's death, directing her to destroy certain business matters, held admissible in an action on a policy to show declarations against interest.

e.—For other cases, see Evidence, §§ 1105-1107; Dec. Dig. § 272.*] from Superior Court, Craven County. Judge.

by G. A. Whitford against the North State Life Insurance Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals.

an action to recover upon a policy of life insurance issued by the defendant on the 10th day of December, 1910. The insured died on the 13th day of May, 1911. The defendant denied liability, and set up as a defense that W. B. Burgess, the insured, in his application therefor, committed suicide, and the further defense that the policy was void for the reason that the applicant, W. B. Burgess, had made material false representations in his application for the insurance.

The defendant introduced in evidence on the issue of suicide, the following papers:

"To My Wife:

"Telegraph Joe Latham to come to you at once.

"Look out for my Royal Arcanum and Heptasophs.

"My Union Central policy is in the hands of the company as collateral for $180, there is a thousand available on it.

"Look into one of the little drawers and you will find a policy in the North State Mutual for $1,500, they hold my note for the premium but the interest is paid on it up to May 30th, see if you can collect on it.

"Tell Joe to write Carey J. Hunter for instruction in regard to the Union Central.

"I owe Sam King $20.

"I owe Gus Pritchard, (colored) $50. Allan Jenkins, colored, $20.

(over)

"Sell the place for what you can get, pay Mr. Cannaday and take the rest and do the best you can.

"God bless you and the children. Goodbye.

"Bat.

"Sam can tell you of the other colored people."

This note was in an envelope and on the back of the envelope the following was written:

"To Mam Important.

"Mrs. W. B. Burgess.

"See Eugene Wood and get him to bury me and wait until you get insurance."

Plaintiff excepted.

Notice was duly served on the plaintiff to produce said papers on the trial. The papers were written by the husband, but were not delivered by the insured to his wife, nor did she know of the existence of either until after the death of her husband, when they were brought to her from the private desk of the husband by one of her children. She then gave them to G. A. Whitford before his qualification as administrator, and he retained them until a few days before the trial, and after notice had been served on him, when he returned them to the wife. The indorsement on the envelope was shown to Eugene Wood, who was undertaker and coroner, and upon request the papers were delivered to the coroner's jury at the inquest, but it does not appear that the paper inclosed in the evidence was read.

The jury returned the following verdict:

"(1) Did the defendant insure the life of W. B. Burgess in the sum of fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500.00) as alleged in the complaint? Answer: Yes.

"(2) Did the insured, W. B. Burgess, die by his own hand, with intent to commit suicide? Answer: Yes.

"(3) Did the assured, W. B. Burgess, represent that he had had no serious illness or disease other than that stated in the application? Answer: Yes.

"(4) Was said representation untrue? Answer: Yes.

"(5) Was such representation material? Answer: Yes.

"(6) What sum, if any, is the plaintiff entitled to recover? Answer: ———"

Judgment was entered in accordance with the verdict, and the plaintiff excepted and appealed.

Guion & Guion, of New Bern, for appellant.
Rouse & Land, of Kinston, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. The statute of this state as to communications between husband and wife provides that "no husband or wife shall be compellable to disclose any confidential communication made by one to the other during their marriage," and it is by this statute, construed in connection with the rules of the common law as to what communications are confidential, that the admissibility of the papers introduced in evidence is to be tested. The inquiry naturally resolves itself into two propositions: (1) Are the papers communications from the husband to the wife during marriage? (2) If so, are they confidential?

We will consider the two propositions together. The reasons for the rule preventing the disclosure of confidential communications between husband and wife, as enforced at common law, are well stated by Taylor, C. J., in Mercer v. State, 40 Fla. 216, 24 South. 154, 74 Am. St. Rep. 135: "Society has a deeply rooted interest in the preservation of the peace of families, and in the maintenance of the sacred institution of marriage; and its strongest safeguard is to preserve with jealous care any violation of those hallowed confidences inherent in, and inseparable from, the marital status. Therefore the law places the ban of its prohibition upon any breach of the confidence between husband and wife, by declaring all confidential communications between them to be incompetent matter for either of them to expose as witnesses. * * * The reason of the rule for excluding the confidences between husband and wife as incompetent matter to be deposited by either of them, though they may be competent witnesses to testify to other facts, is found to rest in that public policy that seeks to preserve inviolate the peace, good order, and limitless confidence between the heads of the family circle so necessary to every well-ordered civilized society"—and Judge Daniel admonishes us in Hester v. Hester, 15 N. C. 228, that "the rule should not be extended, to the exclusion of truth, beyond the limits within which the reason of the law calls for it."

[1] Words in a statute are to be construed as they are ordinarily understood, and where "the language is plain and admits of but one meaning, the task of interpretation can hardly be said to arise. It is therefore only in the construction of statutes whose terms give rise to some ambiguity, or whose grammatical construction is doubtful, that courts can exercise the power of controlling the language in order to give effect to what they suppose to have been the real intention of the lawmakers. Where the words of a statute are plainly expressive of an intent, not rendered dubious by the context, the interpretation must conform to and carry out that intent. It matters not, in such a case, what the consequences may be. It has therefore been distinctly stated, from early times down to the present day, that judges are not to mold the language of the statutes in order to meet an alleged convenience or an alleged equity; are not to be influenced by any notions of hardship, or of what in their view is right and reasonable, or is prejudicial to society; are not to alter clear words, though the Legislature may not have contemplated the consequences of using them; are not to tamper with words for the purpose of giving them a construction which is 'supposed to be more consonant with justice' than their ordinary meaning." Endlich, Inter. Stat. § 4. "The object of all interpretation and construction of statutes is to ascertain the meaning and intention of the Legislature, to the end that the same may be enforced. This meaning and intention must be sought first of all in the language of the statute itself. For it must be presumed that the means employed by the Legislature to express its will are adequate to the purpose, and do express that will correctly. If the language of the statute is plain and free from ambiguity, and expresses a single, definite, and sensible meaning, that meaning is conclusively presumed to be the meaning which the Legislature intended to convey." Black on Inter. Statutes, pp. 35 and 36.

[2] The words of the statute under consideration are "communications made by one to the other during marriage." "Communicate," as defined by Webster, is to bestow, to convey, to make known, to recount, to impart, as to communicate information to any one, and "communication" is the act of communicating, and it would seem that a paper, although directed to the wife, of which she had no knowledge, and which it was not expected she would see until after the death of the husband, is not a communication during marriage. The language indicates either that the information should be actually imparted, or, at least, that there should be an expectation of doing so, during marriage. If, however, the papers introduced in evidence are communications from the husband to the wife, the statute does not render them incompetent unless they are confiden-usal of the papers discloses that statements made are in regard to matters, that the directions given be performed without disclosing of the papers, and that the husband this would be done, and in acts the papers are testamentary in

c. 2355, the author says: "Com- between husband and wife in purely business matters are not and the text is supported by cases. Spitz's Appeal, 56 Conn. 776, 7 Am. St. Rep. 303; Park- dell, 110 N. Y. 386, 18 N. E. 123, Rep. 384; Hanks v. Van Gardner, 81, 18 N. W. 103; Sedgwick v. Ind. 281.

also not without authority upon the our own state. In the Hester e referred to, Judge Daniel says: upon the subject of confidential ions is not denied; the sanctity of unications will be protected. Per- ted by the marriage tie have, as t the bar, the right to think aloud ence of each other. But the ques- ns, What communications are to onfidential? Not those, we think, made to the wife, to be by her ted to others; nor those which the akes to the wife as to a matter of which a thing is to operate after when it must be the wish of the at the operation should be accord- ruth of the fact, as established by tion. Suppose a husband were to his wife, that he has given to one ildren a horse, can she not after rove that as against the executor? so, that the declaration to which as called had been made to her r; there is no reason why she, if ay not testify to it, as well as the y? Because it is then apparent not confidential between the hus- wife in the sense of the rule. The n equally applies when from the the conversation it is obvious he ash he concealed, but on the con- t have desired to make it known, h her, if he found no other means ." Note that the learned and ac- ge says, among other things, that es not apply to those communica- "the husband makes to the wife tter of fact upon which a thing is after his death," and it will be fits each statement in the papers . This case was approved in Gas- , 34 N. C. 213, in which the widow ted to testify that her husband deed in question to her, and told e care of it for Anson, and have and recorded for him, whenever , that she then took it, and put it in her trunk, separate from her husband's papers, and he never saw it afterwards to her knowledge, and that he died in 1836, and shortly afterwards she had the deed proved and registered.

[3] We are therefore of opinion, having in view the reason for the rule—the language employed in the statute, the fact that the wife had no knowledge of the papers until after the death of her husband, that it appears from the papers and the attendant circumstances that she was not expected to do so, and the subject-matter of the papers—that they are not confidential communica- tions made by the husband to the wife during marriage, within the meaning of the statute, and were properly admitted in evidence as declarations against interest.

We at first thought the case of State v. Wallace, 162 N. C. —, 78 S. E. 1, at the last term, was decisive of this in favor of the defendant, but the two cases rest upon differ- ent principles, and the distinction between the two is that in the Wallace Case the letter reached the wife during the life of the hus- band, and came into the hands of a third person without the connivance or consent of the wife, while in this the wife knew nothing of the papers until after the death of her husband, and she gave them to another person.

This disposes of the only material excep- tion upon the second issue; and, as the find- ing on that issue precludes a recovery by the plaintiff, it is not necessary to discuss the exceptions arising on the other issues.

No error.

JONES et al. v. WHICHARD et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 1, 1913.)

1. ESTATES (§ 8*)—RULE IN SHELLEY'S CASE.

Under the rule in Shelley's Case, when a person takes an estate of freehold, legal or equi- table, under a deed, will, or other writing, and in the same instrument there is a limitation by way of remainder, with or without interposition of another estate, of an interest of the same legal or equitable quality to his heirs, or heirs of his body, as a class of persons to take in succession, from generation to generation, the limitation to the heirs entitles the ancestor to the whole estate.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Estates, Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

2. ESTATES (§ 8*)—RULE IN SHELLEY'S CASE.

In order to make the rule in Shelley's Case apply, the word "heirs" or "heirs of the body" in the limitation to the heirs must be used in a technical sense, carrying the estate to such heirs as an entire class, to take in succession from generation to generation; and, where the words are simply intended as a descriptio personarum, or if the estate is conveyed in any other man- ner than it would descend, the rule does not ap- ply.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Estates, Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

3. DEEDS (§ 129*)—CONSTRUCTION — ESTATE CREATED—RULE IN SHELLEY'S CASE.

Land was deeded to J. and wife for life, "then to their legal bodily heirs provided they leave any, and if not, to be equally divided among my nearest of kin." Held, that the word "heirs" was not used in its technical sense, but meant children and grandchildren, and the fee did not pass to J. and wife under the rule in Shelley's Case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 413-415, 419-421, 427; Dec. Dig. § 128.*]

4. DEEDS (§ 133*)—CONSTRUCTION — ESTATE CREATED—REMAINDERS — VESTED OR CONTINGENT.

The remainder to the heirs was contingent on their being alive when the life estate terminated, and the husband of one of the heirs, whose wife and their only child died before the life tenants, could claim no interest in the remainder.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 368-371; Dec. Dig. § 133.*]

5. CURTESY (§ 9*)—REQUISITES — SEISIN OF WIFE.

A husband could not claim as tenant by curtesy because his wife never had the seisin requisite to the validity of such a claim.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Curtesy, Cent. Dig. §§ 20-30; Dec. Dig. § 9.*]

6. DEEDS (§ 97*)—CONSTRUCTION — CONFLICT BETWEEN THE PREMISES AND HABENDUM.

It is the usual province of the habendum of a deed to define the quantity of the estate, or to explain or qualify the premises, but it cannot be allowed to create an estate entirely repugnant to the interest conveyed in the premises.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 287-273, 434-447; Dec. Dig. § 97.*]

7. DEEDS (§ 97*)—CONSTRUCTION — CONFLICT BETWEEN THE PREMISES AND HABENDUM.

Where the premises of a deed standing alone conveyed the fee, but the habendum limited the estate to a life estate, they are not to be construed as entirely repugnant, but each is to be used in explanation of the other; and, it being clear that it was only intended to create a life estate, it will be construed accordingly.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 287-273, 434-447; Dec. Dig. § 97.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Pitt County; Allen, Judge.

Agreed case by R. E. Jones and others against Jarvis Whichard, C. F. Page, and another. From a judgment for the plaintiffs and a codefendant, the defendant Page appeals. Affirmed.

On the hearing it was made to appear: That in August, 1866, Major Jones made a deed to his son, R. M. Jones, etc., for 40 acres of land, in terms as follows: "This indenture made this the 11th day of August, A. D. 1866, between Major Jones of the first part and Robert M. Jones of the second part both of the county of Pitt and state of North Carolina: Witnesseth, that the said Major Jones, for and in consideration of natural love and affection which he has unto the said Robert M. Jones, his son, has given, granted, aliened, released and confirmed, and by these presents do give, grant, alien, release and confirm unto the said Robert M. Jones, his heirs and assigns, a certain tract or parcel of land situate as follows: * * *

To have and to hold the said tract or parcel of land and all the appurtenances thereof to him, the said Robert M. Jones and Martha F. Jones, his wife, during their natural life, and then to their legal bodily heirs, provided they leave any, and if not, to be equally divided among my nearest of kin." etc. That on November 27, 1900, said R. M. Jones made a deed for the land to his wife for life, remainder to seven of his nine children, and not including a son, S. L. Jones, or a daughter, Huldah, intermarried with C. F. Page. That Huldah Page had issue born alive, a son, and she and son died before R. M. Jones and wife, and these last having also died, present suit was instituted for sale of land for division. Plaintiffs are the seven children of R. M. Jones and wife, who were grantees in the deed of R. M. Jones to his wife, etc. Defendants are S. L. Jones, another son, and C. F. Page, surviving husband of Huldah. On these facts it was contended for plaintiffs that, under the rule in Shelley's Case, the deed from Major Jones conveyed a fee simple, and that when R. M. Jones conveyed the property to his wife for life and remainder to seven of their children, plaintiffs, the deed passed the entire interest, and defendants were thereby excluded. Defendant S. L. Jones, contended that the deed of Major Jones conveyed only a life estate, remainder to his children or issue in the sense of children or grandchildren, and that he, as one of them, was entitled to a child's interest. It was insisted for C. F. Page that the deed from Major Jones conveyed a life estate to R. M. Jones and wife, remainder to their issue, in the sense of children and grandchildren, and that this remainder was vested in such children, and that on the death of his wife, Huldah, leaving an infant son, her interest descended to such son, and on his death without issue and without brother or sister the share passed to C. F. Page, the father, under 6 Canon Descent, Revisal, c. 30. The court below, being of opinion that the deed of Major Jones conveyed a life estate, remainder to the children and grandchildren, contingent on their surviving their parents, entered judgment that defendant S. L. Jones was entitled to a share in the fund and that C. F. Page was excluded; his son having died before R. M. Jones and wife. From this judgment said C. F. Page, having duly excepted, appealed.

Julius Brown, of Greenville, for appellant. Harding & Pierce, of Greenville, and Ward & Grimes, of Washington, N. C., for appellees.

HOKE, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1, 2] A very full and satisfactory statement of the rule in Shelley's Case is given in Preston on Estates as follows: "When a person takes an estate of freehold, legally or equitably, under a deed, will, or other writing, and in the same instrument there is a limitation by way of remainder, either with or without interposition of another estate, of an interest of the same legal or equitable quality to his heirs or heirs of his body, as a class of persons to take in succession, from generation to generation, the limitation to the heirs entitles the ancestor to the whole estate." In approval and illustration of the rule, as stated, there are many decisions here and elsewhere to the effect that, in order to its proper application, the words "heirs" or "heirs of the body" (these last by reason of our statute, Revisal, § 1578) must be used in their technical sense, carrying the estate to such heirs as an entire class, to take in succession from generation to generation, and they must have the effect to convey "the same estate to the same persons, whether they take by descent or purchase," and, whenever it appears from the context or from a perusal of the entire instrument that the words were not intended in their ordinary acceptance as words of inheritance, but simply as a descriptio personarum designating certain individuals of the class, or that the estate is thereby conveyed to "any other person in any other manner or in any other quality than the canons of descent provide," the rule in question does not apply, and interest of the first taken will be as it is expressly described an estate for life. Puckett v. Morgan, 158 N. C. 344, 74 S. E. 15; Smith v. Proctor, 139 N. C. 314, 51 S. E. 889, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 172; Wool v. Fleetwood, 136 N. C. 460-470, 48 S. E. 785, 67 L. R. A. 444; May v. Lewis, 132 N. C. 115, 43 S. E. 550; Whitesides v. Cooper, 115 N. C. 570, 20 S. E. 295; Mills v. Thorne, 95 N. C. 362; Ward v. Jones, 40 N. C. 404.

[3] In the recent and well-considered case of Puckett v. Morgan, supra, the language of the instrument was: "To M. . . . during her life, then to her bodily heirs, if any; but, if she have none, back to her brothers and sisters"—well-nigh in the exact terms of the present deed and it was held that, by reason of the context, the words "bodily heirs" were so qualified as to indicate that they were used merely as a descriptio personarum, and that M. took only a life estate. The authority is, in our opinion, controlling, and fully supports the judgment of his honor in denying the application of the rule. The cases of Morrisett v. Stevens, 136 N. C. 160, 48 S. E. 661, and Whitfield v. Garria, 134 N. C. 24, 45 S. E. 904, and others cited by counsel, when properly understood, do not militate against this construction. In Whitfield's Case and in Morrisett's Case the ulterior disposition of the property was not, and was not intended as, a limitation on the estate conveyed to the first taker, but was a provision whereby one stock of inheritance on certain contingencies was substituted for another, the second to hold as purchasers direct from the grantor and original owner. Seasoms v. Seasoma, 144 N. C. 121, 56 S. E. 687. The case of Puckett v. Morgan is also authority for the position that this deed of Major Jones conveys an estate for life to R. M. Jones and wife, remainder to their issue in the sense of children and grandchildren. This meaning has not infrequently prevailed when it appeared to be the clear intent of the instrument. Smith v. Lumber Co., 155 N. C. 389-393, 71 S. E. 445; Sain v. Baker, 128 N. C. 256, 38 S. E. 858; Rollins v. Keel, 115 N. C. 68, 20 S. E. 209, etc., and we concur also in the view of his honor that this remainder is contingent on these devisees being alive to fill the description at the time of the falling in of the particular estate. This construction is also sustained by Puckett v. Morgan, and the well-reasoned cases of Latham v. Lumber Co., 139 N. C. 9, 51 S. E. 780, 111 Am. St. Rep. 764, and Bowen v. Hackney, 136 N. C. 187, 48 S. E. 633, 67 L. R. A. 440, are to like effect.

[4] It was contended for defendant that this was a vested remainder, relying on certain expressions in Ex parte Dodd, 62 N. C. 97, quoted by the court in Springs v. Scott, 132 N. C. 552, 44 S. E. 116, but the position is not well taken. In Springs v. Scott, the court was dealing with the power to sell contingent remainders, and, in using the expression that "such power existed whensoever one was born in whom the estate can vest," the judge delivering the opinion did not intend that the remainder thereby became vested, but that the power in question arose whenever one of the class was born in whom the estate would vest on the happening of the contingency. Those cases, in the aspect suggested, have no bearing on the question presented. The remainder in our case was contingent and, applying the doctrine as above stated, it was properly held that defendant S. L. Jones was entitled to a child's portion of the estate, he being alive to claim it when the life estate terminated; thus filling the description as devisee, and that Huldah Page and her son, both having died before the life tenants, did not fill such description, and had no interest or estate which the father, C. F. Page, could inherit.

[5] The suggestion that C. F. Page could claim as tenant by curtesy is without merit; the existence of the life estate in R. M. Jones and wife would, in any case, prevent the seisin required for the validity of such a claim. In re Robert Dixon, 156 N. C. 26, 72 S. E. 71; Redding v. Vogt, 140 N. C. 562, 53 S. E. 337, 6 Ann. Cas. 312.

[6] We are not inadvertent to the fact that the deed of Major Jones in the premises, if it stood alone, would convey a fee simple, nor to the legal position that at common law, while it was the usual province of the habendum to define and determine the quantity of the estate, or to explain or qualify the promises, it was not allowed to create an estate entirely repugnant to the interest conveyed in the premises, an instance of this appearing in Hafner v. Irwin, 20 N. C. 570, 34 Am. Dec. 390, where the premises conveyed an estate to A. and his heirs, habendum to B. and his heirs. Such a position is still recognized here in proper cases, as appears in Wilkins v. Norman, 139 N. C. 41, 51 S. E. 797, 111 Am. St. Rep. 767, and other cases of like kind.

[7] But in the case of Triplett v. Williams, 149 N. C. 394, 63 S. E. 79, 24 L. R. A. (N. S.) 514, this court, in a well sustained opinion by Associate Justice Brown, announced the decision that, although a deed in its premises professed to convey an estate to the grantee and his heirs, it would not have the effect to convey a fee simple when it clearly appeared from the habendum or other portions of the instrument that it was the intent to convey only a life estate; that in such case it was not proper to construe the clauses as entirely repugnant, but that the one was in explanation of the other, adopting on that question the rule as given in 1 Devlin on Deeds, § 215, as follows: "It may be formulated as a rule that where it is impossible to determine from the deed and surrounding circumstances that the grantor intended the habendum to control, the granting words will govern, but if it clearly appears that it was the intention of the grantor to enlarge or restrict the granting clause by the habendum the latter must control."

There is no error, and the judgment of the lower court must be affirmed.

Affirmed.

CABLE PIANO CO. v. STRICKLAND.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 8, 1913.)

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT (§ 119*) — SELLING AGENT—MODIFICATION OF CONTRACT—AUTHORITY.

Where, in an action to recover a balance due on a piano, defendant relied on a parol agreement of plaintiff's selling agent that defendant was to have a credit of $50 for a recommendation in case he found the piano satisfactory, and the contract of sale in bold type provided that it was agreed that plaintiff was not to be bound by any provisions other than those printed in the contract, unless approved by plaintiff, and that no salesman or agent was authorized to make alterations therein, etc., the salesman not being a general agent, the burden was on defendant to prove that such agent had authority to waive the provisions of the written contract and to make the oral agreement.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. §§ 391-401; Dec. Dig. § 119.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Sampson County; Lyon, Judge.

Action by the Cable Piano Company against Archie H. Strickland. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

This is an action to recover possession of a piano. Defendant admitted his signature to the contract of sale, which retained title to the piano until the purchase price was paid in full, but averred that plaintiff's selling agent, S. A. Kell, agreed with him at the time of the sale that if the piano came up to Kell's representations and Strickland gave him a letter of recommendation, he would credit the note with $50 when it became due. Defendant paid the balance, except $50 due at the time of the payment, and tendered the recommendation. The written contract contains the following clause in bold type: "It is expressly agreed that the Cable Piano Company is not to be bound by any provisions other than those printed in the contract, unless the same shall be approved by the Cable Piano Company at ———.

This contract subject to the approval of the Cable Piano Company"—and the following indorsed thereon: "Notice.—This conditional contract is subject to the approval of the Cable Piano Co., at Richmond, Va., and contains all the agreements pertaining thereto. No agent or salesman is authorized to make any alterations herein, to vary in any way the interest clause nor to give copies thereof not bearing the approval of the Cable Piano Company at Richmond, Va. Factory warranties do not include tuning." The officers of the plaintiff testified that Kell had no instructions to make any such contract, nor any such authority; that they did not know, nor had there been reported to the company any such contract as claimed by the defendant. That the contract approved by the company was the written one without change. There was no evidence on the part of the defendant tending to prove authority in Kell to make the agreement alleged by the defendant. The plaintiff excepted to the introduction of all evidence offered to prove the agreement with Kell. The defendant alleged in his answer, among other things: "That at the end of the period agreed upon, to wit, on the 26th day of September, 1909, the defendant, finding that said piano came up to the recommendations of said Kell, and was in fact a very desirable instrument, came to Clinton, paid to said Kell the sum of $114.80, the same being the balance due on said contract, less the sum of $50, and delivered to said agent a written testimonial in full accordance with the agreement hereinbefore stated, and demanded his contract and receipt in full for said payments. That said Kell accepted said payment and said testimonial, but refused to deliver to the defendant the contract signed by him, claiming that the same was at Richmond, Va., the home office of the plaintiff." His honor charged the jury: "If you find from the evidence that at the time of signing the written contract, or before that time, that plaintiff's agent, S.

A. Kell, acting in the scope of his authority, promised defendant to deduct the sum of $50 from the price of the piano, and to credit that sum on the contract, provided that defendant would make the recommendation that the piano bought was a good one and up to the representations, then you will answer the first issue, 'No,' the second, 'Yes,' issue 1½, 'Yes.'" The plaintiff excepted. The second issue and the answer thereto was as follows: "(2) Did the plaintiff's agent, S. A. Kell, while acting within the scope of his authority, promise and agree to deduct the sum of $50 from the price of the piano, provided the defendant would make the recommendation referred to in the answer? Answer: Yes." The plaintiff requested his honor to instruct the jury, if they believed the evidence, to answer the second issue "No," which was refused, and the plaintiff excepted. There was a verdict in favor of the defendant and the plaintiff appealed from the judgment rendered thereon.

Faison & Wright, of Clinton, for appellant.
H. A. Grady, of Clinton, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. The agent from whom the defendant bought the piano was not a general agent of the plaintiff, and the burden was therefore on the defendant to prove that he had authority to waive the provisions of the written contract. It was so held in Machine Co. v. Hill, 136 N. C. 128, 48 S. E. 575, and in Medicine Co. v. Mizell, 148 N. C. 387, 62 S. E. 511. In the first of these cases, the plaintiff was suing upon a contract for the sale of sewing machines, which contained the provision: "It is understood that no claim or any understanding or agreement of any nature whatsoever between this company and its dealers will be recognized, except such as is embraced in written orders or is in writing and accepted by said company at its office"—and the defense was that the agent who made the sale made a verbal agreement with them to have the sole agency for sale of the plaintiff's machines in Franklin county, and that they incurred considerable expense, employing an experienced salesman to handle the machines and purchased a horse and wagon for him, but that in violation of such contract, the plaintiff shipped machines to said county to rivals in business of the defendants, who undersold the defendants, causing them to sell the machines bought of the plaintiff at a loss, besides causing the loss of salary paid their salesman and the cost of equipping themselves for the handling of the machines under their contract for an exclusive agency, and the court said: "It is true on one hand that the plaintiff had the right to restrict the powers of its agents by the notice quoted above, and printed on the orders signed by the defendants, and on the other that this restriction could be waived. But the burden to prove that such waiver was within the scope of the agent's authority was upon the defendants. It could not be proved by the agent's own declaration. It must be proved allunde. Taylor v. Hunt, 118 N. C. 173 [24 S. E. 359], and cases there cited; Summerrow v. Baruch, 128 N. C. 204 [38 S. E. 861]." In the second case the action was brought to recover the price of goods sold and delivered to the defendant under a written contract containing the following stipulation: "This order is not subject to countermand, and we will receive said goods promptly on arrival at the station named above. There is no agreement, verbal or otherwise, affecting the terms of this order than is specified herein." The court, over the plaintiff's objection, permitted the defendant to testify that at the time he signed the written contract or order, the agent who sold the goods said he would ship them, and the defendant could keep them for 90 days, and if at the expiration of that time they were unsold, he could ship them back to the plaintiff. This court held the evidence incompetent, and said: "If the agent had the authority to make the oral agreement, the burden was upon the defendant to show it, even if evidence of such agreement was otherwise competent. Machine Co. v. Hill, 136 N. C. 128 [48 S. E. 575]." The last case of Medicine Co. v. Mizell, has been approved in Woodson v. Beck, 151 N. C. 146, 65 S. E. 751, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 235, Briggs v. Ins. Co., 155 N. C. 78, 70 S. E. 1068, Bowser v. Tarry, 156 N. C. 38, 72 S. E. 74, and Simpson v. Green, 160 N. C. 301, 78 S. E. 237.

It follows, therefore, as there was no evidence of authority upon the part of the agent to waive the provisions of the written contract and to make the oral agreement, that his honor was in error in refusing the instruction prayed for, and in assuming in his charge that there was evidence of authority by the agent.

A new trial is ordered.

New trial.

In re PIERCE.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 8, 1913.)

1. WITNESSES (§ 22*)—DAMAGES FOR FAILURE TO OBEY SUBPENA.

Under Revisal 1905, § 1643, providing that a witness summoned to appear in any court shall appear and continue to attend until discharged, and that in default thereof he shall forfeit to the party at whose instance the subpoena issued $40 and full damages sustained by such party for the want of his testimony, the statute does not require that the failure to attend should be willful.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 42, 43; Dec. Dig. § 22.*]

2. WITNESSES (§ 22*)—DAMAGES FOR FAILURE TO OBEY SUBPENA—"WILLFUL."

If under Revisal 1905, § 1643, prescribing the penalty for the failure of a witness duly summoned to attend court as a witness, the failure must be willful, an intentional failure, although under the belief that he had a right to absent himself for the protection of his client's interests in other pending cases, was "willful," since "willful" means "intentional," and is used in contradistinction to "accidental" or "unavoidable" (8 Words and Phrases, 7473).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 42, 43; Dec. Dig. § 22.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 8, pp. 7468-7481; vol. 8, pp. 7835, 1836.]

3. WITNESSES (§ 5*)—DAMAGES FOR FAILURE TO OBEY SUBPOENA.

Under Revisal 1905, § 1643, providing that a witness duly summoned shall appear and continue to attend court until discharged, and that in default thereof he shall forfeit $40 to the party at whose instance the subpoena issued, and the damages sustained by such party, a practicing attorney was not excused from obeying a subpoena because cases in which he appeared were ready for trial in another court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. § 8; Dec. Dig. § 5.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Duplin County; Allen, Judge.

On notice to show cause judgment was entered against W. W. Pierce as a defaulting witness, and he appeals. Affirmed.

H. L. Stevens, of Warsaw, for appellant.

CLARK, C. J. Judgment nisi for $40 having been entered against W. W. Pierce as defaulting witness under Revisal, § 1643, on notice to show cause, the judgment was made absolute. The court found the facts: "W. W. Pierce was duly subpoenaed as a witness for the defendant in the case of I. F. Hill et al. v. W. M. Faison et al. to attend the term of the Superior court of Duplin which began November 25, 1912. He was notified that he need not attend till Friday, November 29th, on which day he attended. He was a practicing lawyer and appeared in cases which were ready for trial in Wayne superior court which was then in session, and at his request the judge of that court postponed the trial of his causes till Saturday, November 30th. The case in Duplin superior court in which he was subpoenaed as a witness was not reached on Friday, and he applied to the judge of that court for a discharge. His honor referred him to counsel for the defendant, who declined to excuse him but paid him his per diem and mileage as required by Revisal, § 1298. The witness thereupon, without being excused either by the judge or the counsel for the defendant, returned to Goldsboro, and on the following day, being called as a witness and failing to appear, judgment nisi was rendered, and upon this motion the court, finding that he did not show sufficient cause of incapacity to attend on said Saturday, November 30th, of Duplin superior court, rendered judgment absolute for said penalty, and that Winifred Faison, for whom he had been duly subpoenaed, should recover of the respondent W. W.

Pierce the sum of $40, together with the costs of the motion."

[1, 2] This judgment was correct. It is true that the judge also found that the witness believed that he had a right to return to Wayne superior court to represent his clients, and therefore that his failure to attend the trial in Duplin superior court was not willful. Revisal, § 1643, does not require that the failure to attend should be "willful." Besides, if it did, his honor's finding of law to that effect was incorrect and could not be sustained. Willful means intentionally, and of that there was no question in this case. Willful is used in contradistinction to accidental or unavoidably. See numerous cases cited 8 Words and Phrases, 7478. Indeed, the only definition given of "willfully" in Bouvier's Law Dictionary is "intentional." It has some additional meaning in certain circumstances, but not under this statute, which besides does not use the word.

The defense that the appellant had a right to look after his practice as a lawyer in preference to obeying the subpoena of the court cannot be sustained. "Ignorance of law is no excuse." Least of all could it be tolerated in an attorney who has a license which certifies that he is "learned in the law."

[3] "Equality before the law" is a fundamental principle of our system of government. The law is no respecter of persons. While in one sense a lawyer is an officer of the court, that means simply that in the discharge of his duties he is subject to its control and discipline. But this does not excuse him from obedience to legal precepts to which he owes exactly the same respect and obedience as any other citizen. If a lawyer can be excused from obeying a subpoena because he prefers to attend to his business as a lawyer, then a doctor would be equally excused for attending the bedside of his patients, or a locomotive engineer would take his seat in his cab, and a farmer would be equally entitled to pull fodder or pick cotton when those duties are pressing. A banker or a business man might well prefer attending some important meeting which would serve his pecuniary interests to a far greater extent than this witness would have been benefited by being present at the trial of his causes. The public authority has preference over private interest.

When the witness found that he was not discharged on Friday afternoon and was required to attend as witness again on the next day, he should either have gone to Goldsboro that night to have seen the judge to procure a continuance of his causes or have procured a brother attorney to represent him, and he could have returned next morning in time for court, or he could have discharged this matter probably equally as one or wire. Certainly he could not subpoena from any supposed his personal duty to his client in on of a fee received, or expected, ect of his duty to the public. The uses cannot be conducted without of the court to compel the attend- itnesses, for this duty is rarely r desired by the witnesses them- hom it means also often a pecuni- s well as an inconvenience. So is requirement that a defaulting not only liable for a fine of $40 but he is "further liable for the ges which may be sustained for of such witness' testimony." Re- 13.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

§ 1645, authorizes the reading of n in certain cases, as where the he President of the United States, or of the state, or judge of the ing a session of his court at the trial, and other officials named in n whose public duties are deemed nt as presence at a trial. But the es not enumerate lawyers in this and it is apprehended that no state- e passed to give them such exemp- nt including every other class of nity to whom their personal inter- s important as the functions of a ndeed, the latter can often more cure a continuance of his cause lices of a substitute than a doctor, a merchant, a locomotive engineer, other callings and professions. ment absolute is affirmed.

EWELL v. EWELL et al.

Court of North Carolina. Oct. 8, 1913.)

§ 3*)—LEGITIMACY—PRESUMP-
EVIDENCE IN REBUTTAL.

a child is born in wedlock, the law t to be legitimate, and, unless born circumstances as to show that the uld not have begotten it, the pre- s conclusive, but such presumption butted by facts and circumstances y that the husband could not have father, as that he was impotent or ave had access.

e.—For other cases, see Bastards, § 4, 5; Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

§ 3*)—LEGITIMACY—PRESUMP-

issue as to the legitimacy of a child dlock, access between husband and resumed until otherwise plainly prov- g being allowed to impugn the legiti- e child short of proof by facts show- impossible for the husband to have other.

e.—For other cases, see Bastards, § 4, 5; Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

§ 287*)—HEARSAY—PEDIGREE—RECORD.

age and time and place of birth and ot in themselves questions of pedigree or genealogy, are connected therewith in such a way as to render declarations concern- ing them admissible, entry in the family Bible, made by a person since deceased, showing his own birth and its date, is admissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1145, 1146; Dec. Dig. § 287.*]

4. EVIDENCE (§ 355*)—BEST AND SECONDARY EVIDENCE—COPY OF PEDIGREE RECORD.

Where an original entry of the birth of a person and its date in the family Bible is proved to have been lost or destroyed, an authentic copy thereof is admissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1444, 1484-1491; Dec. Dig. § 355.*]

5. EVIDENCE (§ 222*) — ADMISSIONS — PAROL PARTITION.

On an issue whether plaintiff's father, since deceased, was the legitimate heir of E. and the brother of defendant, evidence that there had been a parol partition of the land in controversy, which had previously belonged to E., between defendant and plaintiff's father in his lifetime was admissible, in a subsequent suit for partition, to show that defendant had recognized deceased as the legitimate heir of E.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 786-800, 803-808; Dec. Dig. § 222.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Pitt County; Allen, Judge.

Suit by Parmella Ewell against M. M. Ewell and others for partition. Verdict for plaintiff, and defendant M. M. Ewell appeals. Affirmed.

This is an action for partition. J. J. Ewell died seised of the tract of land in question, and plaintiff alleges that he and his brother, Walter Ewell, are his sons and consequently were tenants in common of the land as his sole heirs. Defendant denies this allegation and avers that Charles Ewell was not the legitimate child of J. J. Ewell, although the two, Walter and Charles, were of the same mother, the wife of said Ewell. That J. J. Ewell and his wife had separated before Charles Ewell was begotten and continued to live apart until his birth, and, during the entire period of the separation, the wife lived in adultery with one Dr. Best, who is the father of Charles Ewell; he having taken the name of his mother. The following is the substance of the testimony: The defendant's testimony tended to show these facts: J. J. Ewell lived separate and apart from his wife; he spent his time in Martin county; his wife was unfaithful to him; she was intimate with other men and she had been heard to say that Charles Ewell was not the son of her husband; another man recognized Charles as his son, made presents to him, called him son, and Charles called the other man "daddy." The plaintiff's testimony tended to show these facts: J. J. Ewell did not live separate and apart from his wife; while it was true he spent much of his time in Martin county, he left his neighborhood in Pitt county because he was charged with committing some criminal offense for which he feared he might be arrested; he had opportunity of access to his wife; he spent some of his time in the neighborhood in which she lived; he had been seen at the house in which she lived about the time that Charles must have been begotten; he made shingles in a swamp within a mile of his wife; he sent to her provisions for her support; he employed a midwife for his wife when Charles was born and paid the fees. The plaintiff also introduced testimony tending to show that Charles was born about the time fixed in the family record, and defendant's testimony tended to show that he was born at a different time.

Upon the issue of paternity it appears, therefore, that there was conflicting evidence, and it was submitted to the jury to find the fact as to the legitimacy of Charles Ewell; the court instructing the jury that there is a presumption of legitimacy, Charles having been born during the marriage of the Ewells, and placing the burden upon the defendant to rebut it by showing impotency or nonaccess. The plaintiff Parmelia Ewell is the child of Charles Ewell, who is dead, and claims his interest from him as his heir. The defendant M. M. Ewell claims under Walter Ewell. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, and defendant M. M. Ewell appealed.

F. C. Harding and Harry Skinner, both of Greenville, for appellant. Jarvis & Wooten and F. G. James & Son, of Greenville, for appellee.

WALKER, J. [†] The case turns upon the legitimacy of Charles Ewell. According to the established rule, when a child is born in wedlock, it is presumed in law to be legitimate, and by the ancient common law this presumption could not be rebutted if the husband was capable of procreation and was within the four seas during the period of gestation, but this doctrine was exploded in the case of Pendrell v. Pendrell, 2 Str. 925, and gave way to the modern doctrine that the presumption may be rebutted by any competent and relevant evidence tending to satisfy the jury that sexual intercourse did not take place at any time when by the laws of nature the husband could have been the father of the child. Boykin v. Boykin, 70 N. C. 262, 16 Am. Rep. 776; State v. McDowell, 101 N. C. 734, 7 S. E. 785; 2 Greenleaf on Evidence, 180, 181; State v. Pettaway, 10 N. C. 623; Rhyne v. Hoffman, 59 N. C. 835; Woodward v. Blue, 107 N. C. 407, 12 S. E. 453, 10 L. R. A. 662, 22 Am. St. Rep. 897; State v. Liles, 134 N. C. 735, 47 S. E. 750; Banbury Peerage Case (H. of Lords) 1, Simm & Stuart, 153; 5 Cyc. 626. Our cases have stated the present rule in somewhat different language but they substantially agree as to its terms and scope, as will be seen from the following extracts:

"When a child is born in wedlock the law presumes it to be legitimate, and, unless born under such circumstances as to show that the husband could not have begotten it, this presumption is conclusive; but the presumption may be rebutted by the facts and circumstances which show that the husband could not have been the father, as that he was impotent or could not have had access." State v. McDowell, supra (opinion by Davis, J.).

In another case the court said: "The child was begotten while the parties were man and wife but was not born until six months after the husband had obtained a divorce a vinculo matrimonii on account of adultery. During the time, when the child was begotten, the husband and wife lived separately, but in the same neighborhood, near enough for the husband to visit her, and it is proved that occasionally he did go to the house where she was staying. There was then an opportunity for sexual intercourse between the parties, and from that the law presumes that, in fact, there was sexual intercourse between them. This plaintiff must therefore be taken to be legitimate, unless it be proven, by irresistible evidence, that the husband was impotent or did not have any sexual intercourse with his wife; but the former is not pretended, and the latter is a fact which neither the wife, nor the declarations of the wife, is admissible to prove. Rex v. Luffe, 8 East, 193. Here, independent of the declarations of the wife, which must be rejected as incompetent, there is no testimony sufficient to rebut the presumption of access. Such being the case, the proof that the plaintiff's mother lived in adultery with a man, who testified that he was the father of her children, makes no difference. As was said in the case of Morris v. Davies, 14 Eng. C. L. Rep. 275, 'it matters not that the general camp, pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,' because the law fixes the child to be the child of the husband." Rhyne v. Hoffman, supra (opinion by Battle, J.).

More recently this court said: "Formerly a child born of a married woman was conclusively presumed to be legitimate, but now legitimacy or illegitimacy is an issue of fact resting upon proof of the impotency or non-access of the husband. * * * This is true even when the child is begotten as well as born in wedlock. For a stronger reason this is true when, as in this case, the child was begotten four or five months before the marriage and the jury believed the evidence that the husband had no intercourse with the prosecutrix prior to the marriage." State v. Liles, supra (opinion by Clark, C. J.).

"The question of the legitimacy or illegitimacy of the child of a married woman is one of fact, resting on decided proof as to the nonaccess of the husband, and the facts must generally be left to the jury for determination." 2 Kent's Com. 210. See, also, Schouler, Dom. Rel. § 225; Hargrave v. Hargrave, 9 Beavan, 552.

[2] The rule as to the presumption of legitimacy in respect to a child born in lawful wedlock was strongly stated by the Supreme Court of the United States in two of the celebrated Gaines Cases in which the question was often considered and discussed. The court held that access between man and wife is always presumed until otherwise plainly proved, and nothing is allowed to impugn the legitimacy of a child short of proof by facts showing it to be impossible that the husband could have been its father. Gaines v. Hennen, 65 U. S. (24 How.) 553, 16 L. Ed. 770; Patterson v. Gaines, 47 U. S. (6 How.) 550, 12 L. Ed. 553. Those cases were described by Mr. Justice Wayne, in concluding the opinion in the last case of this long-protracted litigation, as the most remarkable in the records of the court. What is therein said, therefore, is entitled to great respect and should have great weight, and it does not materially differ from the rule as formerly settled by this court.

We conclude that the judge was right in leaving the matter to the jury, as an open question of fact, with a correct instruction as to the presumptions of the law and a proper caution as to how to deal with the evidence.

[3] There are two questions of evidence which require our notice. The plaintiff offered to introduce a copy of the entry in the family Bible of the Ewells showing the birth of Charles Ewell and its date. If age, time and place of birth and death, are not in themselves questions of pedigree or genealogy, they may be connected therewith in such way as to render declarations concerning them admissible. They may be material circumstances from which an inference may fairly be drawn as to a person's paternity, as, for example, whether A. is the son of B., and any one of them alone may have this force as proof. McKelvey on Evidence, p. 219. In such case declarations of deceased members of the family are competent to show the fact in issue. 1 Greenleaf on Evidence (16th Ed.) § 114b; McKelvey on Evidence, supra. The declarations may be oral or written, such as entries in the family Bible or other family register or record. Clements v. Hunt, 46 N. C. 400; 16 Cyc. p. 1234, and cases in notes 89 and 90; Lewis v. Marshall, 5 Pet. 470, 8 L. Ed. 195. "The date of a birth and death of an individual, being matter of pedigree, may be proved by hearsay evidence and general repute in his family, and an entry of a deceased parent, made in a Bible, is regarded as a declaration of the parent making the entry and therefore admissible. 1 Greenleaf on Ev. § 104; Phil. Ev. (Cow. & Hill's and Edw. notes) 249-252, and notes." Greenleaf v. D. & S. C. R. R. Co., 30 Iowa, 303. But entries in family Bibles or other family records are not the only source from which we may legally obtain this kind of proof. Hearsay, or, as it is generally termed, reputation, is admissible in all questions of pedigree. And the phrase "pedigree" embraces not only descent and relationship but also the facts of birth, marriage, and death and the times when these events happened. The entry of a deceased parent or other relative, made in a Bible, family missal, or any other book, or document, or paper, stating the fact and date of the birth, marriage, or death, of a child or relative, is regarded as the declaration of such parent or relative in a matter of pedigree. Correspondence of deceased members of the family, recitals in family deeds, descriptions in wills, and other solemn acts are original evidence where the oral declarations of the parties are admissible. Inscriptions on tombstones and other funeral monuments, engravings on rings, inscriptions on family portraits, charts of pedigree, and the like are also admissible, as original evidence of the same facts. 1 Greenleaf on Evidence (16th Ed.) § 114d; Kelley's Heirs v. McGuire, 15 Ark. at pages 604 and 605; Jones on Evidence (2d Ed.) § 316; Berkley Peerage Case, 4 Campbell, 401, 418; Jackson v. Cooley, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 128, 131.

The following cases sustain and illustrate the rule and the variety of forms which the proof may take: Eastman v. Martin, 19 N. H. 152; Collins v. Grantham, 12 Ind. 440; Whitcher v. McLaughlin, 115 Mass. 167; Inhabitants of North Brookfield v. Inhabitants of Warren, 16 Gray (Mass.) 171; S. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 53 Ga. 535; Jones v. Jones, 45 Md. 144; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 71 N. Y. 423; Wren v. Howland, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 87, 75 S. W. 894 (which is like our case in respect to the fact offered to be proven and the mode of proof).

[4] The original entry being competent, an authentic copy of it, when the original has been lost or destroyed, must also be. We presume that the judge found as a fact that the original was lost; the copy therefore was admissible as secondary evidence, for the general rule applies. 1 Greenleaf, Ev. (16th Ed.) § 563q; Whitcher v. McLaughlin, 115 Mass. 167. The entry must have been made by a deceased person or recognized by the family and the record brought from the proper custody. Jones on Ev. (2d Ed.) §§ 312, 315. These requirements seem to have been observed in this case. The testimony of Emily Ewell as to the manner in which Charles Ewell, her husband, made the copy, which was offered in evidence, from the family Bible is not very satisfactory. She does not say that the copy is a perfect or even a true one, but we cannot say there is not sufficient evidence to sustain the finding that the copy is a correct transcript of the original. The court gave the defendant another chance as to this matter by submitting it to the jury and instructing them that they must find that the paper contained a true copy of the entry before using it as evidence upon the question of the legitimacy of Charles Ewell. There can be no doubt of the relevancy of the evidence to prove this fact.

The copy, therefore, was properly admissible.

[5] The plaintiff also proposed to prove that there had been a parol partition of the land between the defendants M. M. Ewell and Charles Ewell for the purpose of showing that Charles Ewell had been recognized as the legitimate heir of J. J. Ewell, and we do not see why it was not competent for this purpose as an admission or recognition by defendant of this fact of conduct on his part from which the jury might infer the legitimacy at least in connection with the other facts and circumstances. Jones on Ev. (2d Ed.) § 815, p. 397. The plaintiff did not rely on the partition as valid and proof of her title to one-half of the land but solely for the purpose first stated. The evidence was properly admitted. We find no error in the case after careful examination.

No error.

WILLIAMS v. CHAS. F. DUNN & SONS CO.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 8, 1913.)

1. EXECUTION (§ 253*)—SALE—MOTIONS TO VACATE—NATURE.

A motion to set aside an execution sale is not a new proceeding, but a motion in the original cause, and the title of the original action should be retained instead of entitling it as though the moving party was plaintiff and the purchaser a defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 698, 717-721; Dec. Dig. § 253.*]

2. EXECUTION (§ 258*)—SALE—OPENING OR VACATING IRREGULARITIES.

A sale of real property under execution, without advertising it and serving a copy of the advertisement on the judgment debtor, as required by Revisal 1905, §§ 641, 642, does not render the sale void as against a stranger without notice of the irregularity, nor open to collateral attack, but the debtor may, on motion or by direct proceeding, have the sale vacated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 736-739, 789; Dec. Dig. § 258.*]

3. EXECUTION (§§ 219, 221*)—SALE—POWERS OF OFFICER MAKING SALE.

The sheriff in selling property under execution acts as the agent of both parties, charged with the duty on one hand of producing a satisfaction of the writ, and on the other, of causing no needless injury or sacrifice, and is therefore given a discretion with respect to the time and mode of sale.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 621, 626-628; Dec. Dig. §§ 219, 221.*]

4. EXECUTION (§ 251*)—SALE—OPENING OR VACATING IRREGULARITIES.

Where property is sold under execution en masse or in bulk, when it could reasonably be sold in parcels without prejudice to the parties, and there is any fraud or oppression or even unfairness whereby it is sold at a disadvantage to the debtor, the sale may be avoided by him in a direct proceeding.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 708-718; Dec. Dig. § 251.*]

5. EXECUTION (§ 249*)—SALE—OPENING OR VACATING IRREGULARITIES.

An assignee of a judgment deceived and misled the judgment debtor's attorney as to the real value of land levied on at a time when investigation by the attorney could not well be made before the sale, as a result whereof and of the failure to advertise the sale there was no competition at the sale, and he bought for $125 three separate lots, sold as a whole, worth nearly $1,000. The debtor tendered to the assignee the amount bid, which he had applied on the judgment, and another judgment against the debtor, which the assignee refused to accept. The assignee's attention had been called, prior to the sale, to irregularities in the execution, the levy, and the advertisement. Held, that the sale of the three lots en masse, with the attendant circumstances of fraud and irregularity, rendered the sale void, and it was properly set aside on motion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 697-702; Dec. Dig. § 249.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Lenoir County; Justice, Judge.

Action by Jesse E. Williams against J. W. Williams, in which the defendant moved to set aside a sale under execution to Chas. F. Dunn & Sons Co. From a judgment in favor of the moving party, the purchaser appeals. Affirmed.

This was a motion before the clerk, in the case of Williams v. Williams, to set aside a sale of land made under an execution. The motion was based upon affidavits filed, and the sale was set aside by him. Plaintiff appealed to the superior court, where the action was dismissed, this court reversing the decision. At the August term, 1912, of that court, the judgment of the clerk was affirmed, and an order of reference was made for an accounting between the parties. The report of the referee was confirmed at the June term, 1913, all of which will appear more fully hereafter.

The case was before us at Spring term, 1912, upon a question of jurisdiction, and is reported in 158 N. C. 399, 74 S. E. 99. We then reversed the judgment below dismissing the proceeding, and remanded it for further hearing. Jesse E. Williams filed a lengthy affidavit, upon which he based his motion in the cause to set aside the sale under the execution issued therein. The material allegations of this affidavit, which describes in detail the transaction from its inception to the time of the motion, was denied by defendant, but Judge Carter affirmed the judgment of the clerk of the superior court, before whom the motion to set aside the execution was originally made, and in that judgment, the clerk finds the facts to be as set forth in the affidavit of the plaintiff, John W. Williams, and those facts are substantially as follows: On February 10, 1909, Jesse E. Williams, one of the defendants, recovered a judgment against John Williams before a justice of the peace, which was docketed in the superior court of Lenoir county. On the 21st day of October, 1910, Jesse E. Williams transferred and assigned this judgment to Chas. F. Dunn, cashier of Chas. F. Dunn & Son Company. Chas. F. Dunn & Son Company is a banking concern and a partnership.

On the 8th day of February, 1911, the clerk of the superior court issued an execution on the judgment returnable to the March term of the superior court of Lenoir county, which convened on the 13th day of March; the return day of said execution being less than 40 days from the date of its issue. On the 14th day of March, the sheriff proceeded to sell the land upon which he had levied, and Chas. F. Dunn, representing himself as cashier of Dunn, Son & Company, purchased the property for the sum of $125. The property consisted of three separate lots, each of which, with its improvements, was worth more than $800 each. The sheriff sold all three of the lots together. Prior to the sale, the plaintiff, through his attorneys, protested against the sale, same being made upon the ground that the execution was irregular, and upon the further ground that the sale thereunder was irregular. The plaintiff at the time had sufficient personal property out of which the execution could have been satisfied. The plaintiff was a resident of Philadelphia and was not present at the sale, and the defendant, taking advantage of his absence, represented to the plaintiff's attorney, who was unfamiliar with the property or its value, and just before the sale, that it was not worth more than $150. Chas. F. Dunn, acting for defendants as their duly authorized agent, made his statement to the attorney of plaintiff for the purpose of misleading him, and with the intent to prevent fair competition at the sale under the execution, so that the property could be bought by him at an undervalue, "or at a figure greatly less than its value," he well knowing that the attorney was acting in ignorance of the real value of the property, and had not time for investigation, and this was done with the purpose of defrauding the debtor by preventing a fair sale of the property. The sale of the land was not advertised according to law. Jesse E. Williams and Chas. F. Dunn, as assignee of the Williams judgment, had agreed that no execution should issue on the judgment, and this agreement was a part of the consideration for the assignment by Jesse E. Williams to Chas. F. Dunn, who was in fact the assignee of the judgment in his individual capacity, and not as cashier of the alleged bank. Chas. F. Dunn, who was the only bidder, bought the property for the sum of $125. The purchase price was applied to the Williams judgment (and another judgment against the plaintiff, which had been assigned to Chas. F. Dunn) and the cost of the execution sale, and the balance was paid into court. There were no other bidders present at the sale except the defendant Dunn. Execution under which the sheriff attempted to sell was for the sum of $35.12, with interest from the 10th day of February, 1909, and $1.45 cost. The sheriff levied upon and sold all three of the lots at one time; they being worth about $1,000. On the 2d day of September, 1911, the plaintiff, after due notice, moved to set aside the sale upon the grounds set forth in the affidavit filed. Prior to the making of the motion, the plaintiff tendered to the defendant the amount bid at the sale and interest, which was more than sufficient to satisfy the judgment, with interest and costs, which had been assigned to the defendant. The clerk found the facts set forth in the affidavit of the plaintiff to be true, and adopted them as his findings and set aside the execution sale. The judgment of the clerk was affirmed by Judge Carter at the August term, 1912, and a reference ordered to take an account between the parties. The defendant Dunn was in possession of the property from the 15th day of April, 1911, to the 1st day of September, 1912. The rental value of the lots, as alleged by the plaintiff and admitted by the defendant, was $3 per week.

The referee, Mr. J. G. Dawson, after allowing the defendant the amount due under the two judgments of Jesse Williams against John W. Williams, and the other judgment against him, which had been assigned to the defendant Dunn, with interest and cost, the balance of the purchase money paid by him and the taxes, found that there was due to plaintiff from the defendant the sum of $121.03, with interest from the 21st day of September, 1912, and that the plaintiff was entitled to have all of said judgments canceled. The findings of the referee, both as to law and facts, were approved by Judge Justice at the June term, 1913, and final judgment entered, from which this appeal was taken by the defendant.

Chas. F. Dunn, of Kinston, in pro. per. Rouse & Land, of Kinston, for appellee Williams.

WALKER, J. [1] This is a motion to set aside an execution sale, and the title of the original action should have been retained, instead of making the motioner plaintiff and the purchaser at the sale a defendant. It is not a new proceeding, but a motion in the cause, as at first constituted, for the desired relief. The title on the docket here and below should be Williams v. Williams, motion by defendant, and not Williams v. Dunn. We hope that the clerks and attorneys will hereafter take notice of the procedure in such cases, and be governed accordingly, as a compliance with the rule will prevent uncertainty and confusion, which is sure to follow its disregard, and will conduce to order and regularity in judicial proceedings—something much to be desired. The mistake in this case at first produced some little perplexity, which could easily have been avoided by proper attention to orderly arrangement. We believe, though, that we have, at last, succeeded in extracting from the record and stating correctly the relations of the parties and the facts of the case, and have thus removed its seeming complication and difficulty, and simplified the questions involved.

The defendant in the judgment and execution, John W. Williams, alleges that the sale by the sheriff is voidable by him because there was no legal advertisement or notice of the sale; that the execution was issued within 40 days of the court to which it was returnable (Revisal, § 624); that the land, consisting of three lots, was sold en masse, and not in separate parcels; and that Chas. F. Dunn, the real plaintiff, as assignee of the original plaintiff, did by fraudulent representations and conduct obtain the land, as purchaser, at an undervalued price he paid being grossly inadequate.

[2] The law requires a sheriff to advertise a sale under execution, and to serve a copy of the advertisement upon the defendant 10 days before the sale. Revisal, §§ 641, 642. A failure to comply with this provision of the statute, which is directory will not render the sale void as against a stranger without notice of the irregularity, nor can it be assailed collaterally, but in such a case the defendant may, on motion, or by direct proceeding, have the sale vacated.

In Burton v. Spiers and Clark, 92 N. C. 503, Justice Ashe said for the court: "It is well settled as a general rule that a purchaser at execution sale is not bound to look further than to see that he is an officer who sells, and that he is empowered to do so by an execution issued from a court of competent jurisdiction, and he is not affected by any irregularities in the conduct of the sheriff. Mordecai v. Speight, 14 N. C. 428 [24 Am. Dec. 266]; McEntire v. Durham, 29 N. C. 151 [45 Am. Dec. 512]. It follows from this that a purchaser may get a good title at a sheriff's sale when there has been no advertisement of the sale, but this is subject to qualifications. As where the purchaser is a stranger, he will get a good title, notwithstanding any irregularities there may have been in the management of the sheriff. Oxley v. Mizle, 7 N. C. 250. But when the purchaser is the plaintiff in the execution, or his attorney, or any other person affected with notice of the irregularities, the sale may be set aside at the instance of the defendant in the execution by a direct proceeding. If not so corrected, they cannot be made available by a collateral attack on the purchaser's title. Hence an execution sale cannot be collaterally avoided, because real estate was sold without first levying upon personalty, nor because of irregularities or deficiencies in the advertisements, nor for defects in the levy. Herman on Executions, § 39; Oxley v. Mizle, supra; and it was held by Chief Justice Ruffin in the case of Harry v. Graham, 18 N. C. 76 [27 Am. Dec. 226], 'that an allegation of fraud against a purchaser at execution sale will not be heard from a stranger to the execution.'" Dula v. Seagle, 98 N. C. 458, 4 S. E.

549; Sanders v. Harp, 118 N. C. 275, 24 S. E. 8.

In the Dula Case, Chief Justice Smith said: "The sheriff acts under the law that prescribes his duties, with a proper responsibility to those affected by what he does. If he sells under execution, without advertising, as required by law, and the purchaser has no notice of this dereliction of duty, he acquires title; but it would be otherwise if the sale was at a time or place not warranted by law, because the purchaser is charged with knowledge of this legal requirement, and does not buy in good faith. State v. Rives, 27 N. C. 297; Mayers v. Carter, 87 N. C. 146." Our case is a good illustration of the justness of the rule. For some reason, and none other than the omission to duly advertise the sale can be fairly assigned, there were no bidders present, and there was consequently no competition. In this way the purchaser bid in the land at about one-eighth of its real value, and land worth $800 to $1,000 was sold to pay a debt of less than $45. "This is calculated to cause surprise and to make one exclaim: 'Why, he got it for nothing! There must have been some fraud or connivance about it.'" Worthy v. Caddell, 76 N. C. 82. Such an apparently unfair sale should not be permitted to stand unless the strict right of the purchaser, under the law requires us to sustain it, and this we do not think is the case. Apart from the irregularities in respect to the execution and sale, of which the purchaser, who had by assignment from Jesse E. Williams become the real plaintiff, had notice, it appears by the finding of the clerk that the sheriff sold three distinct lots en masse, when if sold separately, any one of them would have brought a price far more than sufficient to pay the total of debt, interest, and costs, and five times as much as required for that purpose if the lot thus sold had brought anything like its market value. The counsel of John W. Williams, the debtor, contends that the fact of selling the three lots as one entire parcel is of itself sufficient to vitiate the sale, and there is strong authority to be found in the decisions of other jurisdictions to sustain this position. Rorer on Judicial Sales, § 730, and cases cited; Tiernan v. Wilson, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 415. But our decisions have not, up to this time, gone quite so far, as we will presently see. It is generally agreed that it is the duty of the officer to sell in the exercise of a fair discretion, and to the best advantage, so as to make the debt and costs to be levied by the execution without unnecessary sacrifice of the debtor's property.

"The proposition is not to be disputed," said Chancellor Kent in Tiernan v. Wilson, supra, "that a sheriff ought not to sell, at one time, more of the defendant's property than a sound judgment would dictate to be sufficient to satisfy the demand" of the writ,

"provided the part selected can be conveniently and reasonably detached from the residue of the property, and sold separately. The justice of this rule is self-evident. As long ago as the case of Wordye v. Bailly (Noy. 59) Gawdy, J., said, and the rest of the court agreed with him, that if the sheriff, upon a fi. fa. for 40 shillings, takes five oxen, each of the value of five pounds, and sells them all, the defendant may have an action of trespass against him. In addition to what has been repeatedly said in our own courts ([Hewson v. Deygert], 8 Johns. [N. Y.] 333; [Jackson v. Newton], 18 Johns. [N. Y.] 362; [Woods v. Monell], 1 Johns. Ch. [N. Y.] 502), I would refer to the case of Executors of Stead v. Course, 4 Cranch, 403 [2 L. Ed. 660], in which the Supreme Court of the United States held that if the collector sell a whole tract of land, when a small parcel of it would be sufficient, for taxes, he exceeds his authority, and a plea by the purchaser to a bill to set aside the sale was not to be sustained. It was the case of a sale in Georgia, under a law directing the collector to sell only so much land as was necessary to pay the taxes in arrear. The rule must be the same, without any positive law for the purpose. It rests on principles of obvious policy and universal justice." The learned Chancellor again says: "Any 10 acres, taken from any corner of either of these lots, would probably have raised the amount of the execution. The very circumstance of advertising and selling the whole supposed interest of the plaintiff, in both lots together, and for so small a demand, was calculated to excite distrust as to the title, and to destroy the value of the sale. It was a perversion of the spirit and policy of the power with which the sheriff was intrusted. It is difficult to define precisely the extent of property that a sheriff may sell together, in mass. There must be a sound discretion exercised by the officer, and each case will furnish a rule applicable to it, under all its circumstances. It is sufficient to say that here is a case in which the abuse of discretion is too flagrant to be endured, and that the law will adjudge such a sale, in such a case, fraudulent. No person can hesitate for a moment to say that the sheriff ought not to have sold more than the interest of the plaintiff in one lot, at one time, and in one parcel; and I believe every one will be ready to conclude that the sale of one lot would have raised the $10, with equal facility as the sale together of both lots. * * * I shall, accordingly, set aside the sale as fraudulent and void in law." We have referred to this case at some length, as its facts so clearly resemble those to be found in this record, and yet our case more strongly appeals to the conscience of the court for equitable relief to the debtor, who has so greatly suffered by the manner in which this sale was conducted at the instance of the plaintiff, who was the purchaser. The difference between the cases which makes in favor of this debtor is that here there were three separate and distinct tracts, each having its own valuable improvements, while in the Tiernan Case the tract was an entire one, and the court held that a reasonably sufficient portion should have been cut off and sold, if the land was susceptible of such a division and the whole was not required to satisfy the writ. See, also, Kinney v. Knoebel, 51 Ill. 112, 121; Berry v. Griffith, 2 Har. & G. 337, 18 Am. Dec. 309; Hewson v. Deygert, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 333; Winters v. Burford, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 328; Kiser v. Buddick, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 382, 383; McLean Bank v. Flagg, 31 Ill. 290, 83 Am. Dec. 224; Phelps v. Conover, 25 Ill. 309; Freeman on Executions (3d Ed.) § 296, and especially 296.

[3] Perhaps by no means can we procure a more correct and just view of the duties of the sheriff or other officer in the proceedings which he is authorized to take, after levying upon property, for the purpose of producing a satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand, than by conceding that such officer is the agent of both parties, and as such is charged with duties which are not wholly compatible, and which must nevertheless be reconciled. It is true that the officer owes to the plaintiff the duty of making the money at or before the return day of the writ, and may be considered as the agent of the plaintiff, charged with the duty of producing a satisfaction of the writ. On the other hand, he is equally the agent of the defendant, charged with the duty of so disposing of his property that the writ against him shall be satisfied with no needless injury or sacrifice. Hence, as the duty of selling the property is modified by the duty of not needlessly sacrificing it, the officer has a discretion with respect to the time and mode of sale. A reasonable discretion, however, is allowed to be exercised in order that the object of the writ may be accomplished, not frustrated, and that the property of the debtor be not causelessly sacrificed. There is no iron rule in regard to this matter, but it may be said that the officer should exercise a sound discretion, honestly and impartially, as between the parties, remembering that he is the sworn minister of the law, and not the servant or emissary of either, commissioned to advance, in a covetous manner, the interests of his employer. As is the duty of the just and impartial judge, he should hold the scales evenly balanced. Judge Freeman, speaking to this very question, said: "Where several distinct parcels of real estate, or several articles of personal property, are to be sold, what is called a 'lumping sale' can rarely be justified. Such a sale, when objected to in due time, will not be upheld, unless special circumstances can be shown from which it must be inferred that such sale was either necessary or advantageous. It is sometimes said that such a sale will not be vacated until it is shown to have injured some one. The command of the law that distinct parcels of land shall be offered for sale separately is founded on the assumption that, by so offering them, the best price will probably be secured and the sale not result in the taking from the defendant of any more property than is necessary to satisfy the writ." Freeman on Executions, § 296, p. 1703. Some of the courts have expressed themselves strongly in emphatic condemnation with regard to sales in mass of property divided into separate parts or lots, going to the length of saying that "sales in a lump of real estate held in parcels, are not to be countenanced or tolerated." Rorer, Jud. Sales (2d Ed.) § 730, and the numerous cases in note 6. But we have not referred to the authorities above for the purpose of approving all that is therein said, as this court has formulated a rule of its own upon the subject, which we will follow in this case, as it fully sustains the judgment below, and it is not necessary that we should go beyond it, as the facts are now presented to us.

In Wilson v. Twitty, 10 N. C. 44, 14 Am. Dec. 569, Judge Hall opens his opinion by saying: "It is much to be regretted that a more particular rule of conduct has not, by the law, been prescribed to sheriffs, in sales of landed property under execution." He then states that, while he believes it is not usual to sell separate parcels at once and as a whole, it is not forbidden in express terms, and then adds: "But it is surely the sheriff's duty to sell in the way that will likely be most beneficial for both parties. I mean in the way that will produce the most money." He then strongly intimates that circumstances of fraud or oppression prejudicial to the debtor should avoid the sale, each case to be judged by its own facts. At the same term, it was held in Thompson v. Hodges, 10 N. C. 51, that "a sale by a sheriff, en masse, of tracts of land adjoining each other, will be supported." But in both of these cases the jury had found, under the evidence and charge of the court below (Nash, J., presiding in one and Norwood, J., in the other), that there was no element of fraud or oppression. In the Wilson Case Judge Nash had charged the jury that the duty of the sheriff was to levy on the entire tract and to sell the parcels separately, but he directed them to find whether the debtor had authorized the sale as made by the officer, and had furnished a description of the land to him. In the Thompson Case Judge Norwood charged the jury "that a sheriff is bound to use such means in the sale of property, under execution, as any ordinary and prudent man would do in the sale of his own property, in order to make it bring the best possible price." The verdict of the jury was for the lessor of the plaintiff, and the court discharged the rule for a new trial. Both cases were affirmed in this court. So the exact duty of the sheriff was not defined by this court in them, nor consequently was it decided what effect failure to perform it would have upon the validity of the sale.

In Jones v. Lewis, 80 N. C. 70, 47 Am. Dec. 338, which soon followed the other two cases and cited them, it appeared that executions issued, and were, by the sheriff, levied on the undivided interests of John C. and Atlas Jones in the premises, which consisted of several tracts. The land was sold by the officer, and at the sale each tract was set up separately, and the interest of the defendant in it sold at one bid. Jesse Person was the purchaser, and to him the sheriff executed the deed. The sale was attacked collaterally in an action of ejectment. No fraud or other equitable element was shown, if it could have availed anything in such an action, where there was no direct attack. Judge Nash said for the court: "The second objection is that the interests of John C. and Atlas Jones in the land were sold at one bid, instead of being sold separately. There is no allegation of fraud in the transaction, nor is there any complaint on the part of the owners of the land that their interests have been injured by the mode pursued. We admit that it is unusual; but we do not see that it is therefore contrary to law. The law points out no specific mode in which a sheriff shall conduct the sale, but he is bound, by general principles, to sell the property levied on in such way as will probably raise the most money. The office of sheriff is a highly responsible one, and much discretion must, in many cases, be allowed him. In this case, John C. and Atlas Jones were owners of two undivided fifths of the land sold; it might have been beneficial to them to have their respective interests sold by the same bid; the land thereby might have produced more. But this was a question of fact, which, if pertinent to the case, ought to have been submitted to the jury, and we cannot say, as a matter of law, that the sale for that case is absolutely void."

That case was followed by Huggins v. Ketchum, 20 N. C. 550, in which Judge Daniel thus refers to the method of sale by the sheriff: "If the lands embraced in that description comprehended more tracts or parcels of land than one, a sale en masse by the sheriff will still be supported, because it is warranted by his execution, and no fraud is shown either in the sheriff or the purchaser. Wilson v. Twitty, 10 N. C. 44 [14 Am. Dec. 569]; Thompson v. Hodges, 10 N. C. 51." And he enlarged upon this view in the subsequent case of Davis v. Abbott, 25 N. C. 137, as follows: "Under the execution, issued to satisfy the first judgment mentioned in the case, the sheriff sold by the acre as much of the land that had been levied on as made the debt and costs. This mode of sale is not usual, we admit, but we cannot conceive that there is anything illegal in it, and in this case there is no pretense of fraud in the sheriff, or loss by the debtor. If chattels are levied on, the sheriff sells the same in parcels, so as to make the debt by as few of them as he can conveniently. If he can save to the defendant a part of his land levied on, and satisfy the execution out of the remainder, the defendant must generally be benefited by it. The sheriff is a high and responsible officer, and a reasonable discretion, exercised by him in making sales, either by exposing the whole tract or selling by the acre, we think is allowable; both the plaintiff and the defendant may, in many cases, be benefited by it."

The question arose in McCanless v. Flinchum, 98 N. C. 358, 4 S. E. 359, and Chief Justice Davis said: "The defendants say that the sale was made by the sheriff in bulk, and they insist that his deed to the plaintiff was void for that reason. It is undoubtedly the duty of the sheriff to sell in such way as to realize, so far as he may be able to do so, a fair price for the property sold under execution, and if he fails to do so, the sale is voidable, and, upon objection, may be set aside; but this is a question of fact which ought to be submitted to a jury. Jones v. Lewis, 30 N. C. 70 [47 Am. Dec. 338]." In McLeod v. Pearce, 9 N. C. 110, 11 Am. Dec. 742, the court held that chattels, consisting of various specific articles, taken in execution cannot be sold en masse; the sheriff should conform, as nearly as possible, to such rules as a prudent man would probably observe in selling his own property for the sake of procuring a fair price. Judge Henderson, in the course of the opinion, said: "The sale is void, on the ground that the whole of defendant's interest in the property held by his mother for life, was put up by the sheriff and sold at one time; and, even without pointing out what the property consisted of, such sale was unfair as tending to lessen the price, to give one bidder who might have a knowledge of the property an advantage over the rest, and to encourage speculation. The law which constitutes the sheriff the agent of the parties, without their consent, will see that he acts fairly; and it is upon this principle that it is necessary for the sheriff to seize the property and have it ready to deliver to the purchaser when from its nature it is capable of seizure. The court would not be understood to say, that where property consisted of a variety of small articles, each article should be sold separately, or to sell separately where it is usual for the owners to sell in the gross; for instance, hogs in parcels, a flock of geese, or sheep, or other things, where it is customary for the owners of them to sell in such manner. Nor would a sale be invalidated where there might be difference of opinion as to the common or proper mode; it must appear palpably wrong; no man would adventure here unless he had a knowledge which it was not to be supposed others possessed, or was a mere speculator."

In Bevan v. Byrd, 48 N. C. 397, it appeared that a quantity of unshucked corn belonging to the plaintiff had been levied upon by a constable, who was sued in case for selling en masse, and in the absence of the plaintiff, thereby causing the corn to be purchased at an undervalue, to the plaintiff's damage, and this court held that it was no violation of the officer's duty to divide the corn into small piles and sell it by the pile. Nash, C. J., saying: "When an officer levies an execution upon property, it is his duty so to conduct the sale as will be most beneficial to all parties. The law points out no particular mode in which an officer shall conduct his sales; but he is bound by general principles to sell the property in that way which will probably bring the most money. He is the agent of both parties, appointed by the law to conduct the sale, and must act in good faith to both, and both are interested that the articles shall bring the greatest amount of money; particularly is it important to the defendant. When various articles are levied upon, they cannot be sold en masse; the officer must conform as nearly as possible to such rules as a prudent man would pursue in selling his own property (citing Jones v. Lewis, supra, and McLeod v. Pearce, supra)." It was also held that whether the corn had been properly sold was a question of fact for the jury, to be decided by them under proper instructions from the court as to the law, the judge adding: "The practiced eye of the experienced farmer can pretty well inform him of the quantity of corn, both in the field and in the pile. * * * The purchaser's eye is his chapman."

We have reviewed a few of the cases somewhat at length, on account of the great importance of the question, and for the further reason that very little has been said about it by this court in recent years. It may serve to stimulate officers to a just performance of their important and delicate duty, and to advise them in some manner as to how it should be performed.

[4, 5] One clear result to be deduced from the foregoing authorities is that if property is sold en masse, or in bulk, when it could reasonably be sold in parcels, without prejudice to the parties—creditor or debtor—and there is any fraud or oppression, or even unfairness, whereby it is sold at a disadvantage to the debtor, the sale will be avoidable by him, in a direct proceeding to set it aside. The facts in this case are so plainly against the fairness of the purchaser's conduct, he being also the plaintiff in the writ, that as said by Justice Reade in a somewhat similar case (Andrews v. Pritchett, 72 N. C. 185), it requires no very nice application of them "to stamp this transaction with fraud."

Let us assemble a few of the most salient facts. The land brought a grossly inadequate price, which is a badge of fraud. Chas. F. Dunn knew the land, and took advantage of his superior knowledge to deceive and mislead the debtor's attorney as to its real value, and at a time when investigation by the latter could not well be made before the sale. This was fraudulent conduct, as it accomplished its purpose. Machine Co. v. Bullock, 161 N. C. 1, 78 S. E. 684. There was no competition at the sale, by reason of the purchaser's conduct and the failure to advertise the sale properly, and he, therefore, bought at his own price—$125 for land worth nearly, if not quite, $1,000, and, finally, the land was sold when there was personal property sufficient to pay the amount due and the costs. The debtor, after the sale, tendered to Dunn, not only the amount of the debt, interest, and costs, which was all the law required him to do, but the full amount bid by him for the land, and he refused to accept it. The land was sold, notwithstanding Dunn's attention had been called to the irregularities in his execution, the levy, and the advertisement. The land, consisting of three separate lots, was sold as a whole, when if any one of the lots had been sold, the proceeds would have been far more than sufficient to pay the debt and costs. This is not all, but it is surely enough for the purpose of deciding this case. These facts show palpably that the plaintiff in the execution was coveting the land, and not merely seeking, in a fair and legitimate way, the recovery of his debt. The process of the law should not be perverted to such an avaricious and fraudulent object. It will compel the debtor to pay, but will not tolerate unfairness and oppression.

The facts clearly bring this sale within the condemnation of the law, without deciding whether, under our decisions, a much weaker showing would be sufficient to avoid it. The sale en masse, with the attendant circumstances of fraud and irregularity, render the sale void as to the debtor. This affirms the judgment.

It is just to the sheriff to say that no wrong can fairly be imputed to him. It was all due to the fault of the purchaser, who, under cover and the supposed protection of the court's process and with special and peculiar knowledge of the facts, sought to use it for the evident purpose of deriving an unfair advantage, and thereby bought the property at a grossly inadequate price, to the great sacrifice and damage of his debtor. We have no idea that the sheriff was cognizant of any such inequitable conduct on the part of the purchaser; the debtor makes no charge against him of complicity, and we, therefore, fully acquit him of all blame. The acts of the creditor are alone sufficient to annul the sale.

No error.

RIGBY v. GAYMON.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Oct. 6, 1913.)

FRAUDS, STATUTE OF (§ 111*)—SUFFICIENCY OF WRITING—CHATTEL MORTGAGE.

Where a farmer gave a dealer a combined crop lien and chattel mortgage to secure future advances of supplies and money, and thereafter orally ordered from the dealer fertilizer of the value of more than $50, which he refused to accept when shipped to him, the lien and mortgage was not a sufficient writing to satisfy the requirement of the statute of frauds as to the sale of fertilizer, since it did not specify the kind, quantity, or price of the supplies to be furnished.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Frauds, Statute of, Cent. Dig. § 237; Dec. Dig. § 111.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Clarendon County; Ernest Gary, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by J. H. Rigby against David Gaymon. Judgment for the plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Reversed.

A. Levi and Charlton Du Rant, both of Manning, for appellant. Davis & Weinberg, of Manning, for respondent.

HYDRICK, J. This was an action of claim and delivery to recover the possession of certain chattels, which plaintiff claimed under a chattel mortgage given him by defendant on January 19, 1911. The contract under which plaintiff claimed the right to recover was a combined agricultural lien and chattel mortgage. It was under seal, and was duly executed by both parties. It recited that Gaymon desired Rigby to make advances during the year to enable him to make a crop; that such advances were to be made from time to time during the year, and the amount and kind thereof, whether in money or supplies, or both, were to be entirely at the option of Rigby; that they should not exceed $164.50; that the amount should become due on October 1, 1911; and that Gaymon should use them to make the crop. The instrument expressed that it was given "to secure the payment of all such sums of money" as Gaymon "may owe" Rigby "for advances made during the year under the terms set forth."

At the time the paper was executed Gaymon owed Rigby nothing. On the day that it was executed, and after it was executed, Gaymon told Rigby he wanted three tons of guano and eight sacks of soda, of the value of $149.50, and $15 worth of other supplies. Rigby put this down on his books; but the entry was not signed by Gaymon. About the 1st of March Rigby ordered the fertilizer shipped from Charleston to Silver, Gaymon's nearest station, in a car consigned to Rigby. For alleged reasons which need not be mentioned, Gaymon refused to accept or receive the fertilizer, or any part thereof, and never got any supplies from Rigby at all. Under the instructions of the court plaintiff had a verdict and judgment for the property.

The sole question presented by the appeal is whether plaintiff's account for the fertilizer was within the statute of frauds, which was set up as a defense. We think it was. Leaving out of consideration, for the moment, the written agreement, the contract for the sale of the fertilizer was clearly within the statute. The question for secondary consideration, then, is whether the written agreement was sufficient to take the sale out of the statute, for that is the only ground upon which it is contended that the sale is not within the statute. We do not see how the agreement can be allowed to have that effect, because the rule is well settled that a writing is not sufficient to take a sale out of the statute, unless it contains all the essential elements of the contract. Louisville Co. v. Lorick, 29 S. C. 533, 8 S. E. 3, 2 L. R. A. 212. Here the writing does not specify the kind, or quality, or quantity, or the price of the advances to be made. Therefore it was incumbent on plaintiff to prove each sale made to the defendant under the contract. If he had advanced supplies in items under $50 in value, he would have had to prove each item of the account according to the rules of evidence, just as if the written contract had not been made. So, when he undertook to prove the item in question, it was incumbent upon him to do so according to law and the rules of evidence; but he was met in the attempt by the statute, which says that as to this item the contract was not good, because no note or memorandum in writing of the bargain was made and signed by the party to be charged by the contract. Smith v. Evans, 36 S. C. 69, 15 S. E. 344.

Respondent relies upon certain remarks of the court in McNeill v. Conyers, 80 S. C. 571, 61 S. E. 1068, in which plaintiff was allowed to recover property sued for under a similar contract. In that case, however, the whole amount advanced was only $26.25, and there was no dispute as to the account, the items of which had been accepted and received by the defendant. Therefore the application of the statute of frauds was not an issue in that case.

Reversed.

GARY, C. J., and WATTS and FRASER, JJ., concur.

SILVERTHORNE v. BARNWELL LUMBER CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Oct. 16, 1913.)

1. CORPORATIONS (§ 284*)—PROPERTY—POSSESSION—MANAGEMENT.

Since in general a corporation is entitled to possession and management of its property and business, where plaintiff claimed to be entitled to the position of superintendent and general manager of defendant corporation, and that he had been unlawfully deprived of his position by the officers of the company, the burden was on him to show it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1195, 1196, 1198-1205, 1207-1235; Dec. Dig. § 284.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 456*)—INJUNCTION PENDING APPEAL—RIGHT TO ISSUE.

A justice of the Supreme Court has jurisdiction to grant an injunction to award appellant temporary relief pending appeal; but the power will not be exercised unless the appellant's right is beyond reasonable question.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2215; Dec. Dig. § 456.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 456*)—EFFECT OF APPEAL—TEMPORARY INJUNCTION PENDING APPEAL.

Comparative injury should be considered in determining an application to a single justice of the Supreme Court for a temporary injunction restraining a corporation from removing appellant from his office as general manager pending appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2215; Dec. Dig. § 456.*]

Action by Albert E. Silverthorne against the Barnwell Lumber Company and others. On motion before a judge of the Supreme Court for a temporary injunction pending appeal. Denied.

J. E. Davis and R. A. Ellis, both of Barnwell, and Hendersons, of Aiken, for appellant. J. O. Patterson, Jr., and John G. Hay, both of Barnwell, and W. A. Holman, of Charleston, for respondents.

FRASER, J. This is an action for injunction. Judge Bowman issued a rule to show cause why a temporary injunction should not issue, and made the rule returnable before Judge Gage. Judge Gage refused the injunction. Plaintiff appealed, and moved before me for a temporary injunction pending the appeal.

Plaintiff claims to be entitled to the position of superintendent and general manager of the defendant the Barnwell Lumber Company, respondent, and that he has been unlawfully deprived of his position by the officers of the company.

[1] As a general proposition, a person or corporation is entitled to the possession and management of its property and business, and, if the appellant is entitled to the possession and management, the burden is on him to show it.

[2] A justice of this court has the power to make the order of injunction; but it ought not to be exercised unless the right of the appellant is very clear and beyond reasonable question. I cannot say that the appellant's right is clear and beyond reasonable question. It is true the appellant appears to have an interest in certain stock of the company, but what that interest is does not appear; but, even if the appellant was the sole owner of the stock, this proceeding is not based upon his right as a stockholder, but upon his rights as an individual under the contracts set up in his complaint. The respondent denies the appellant's rights under these contracts. The questions of right under these contracts are not so clear as to warrant a single justice of this court in practically reversing the judgment of the circuit judge.

[3] Comparative injury should be considered in a case of this sort. If this court should hold that Judge Gage is in error, the appellant's individual loss may be comparatively small. If this court should hold that Judge Gage is not in error, then, under the great powers claimed by the appellant, the respondent's loss may be very great.

It is therefore ordered that the motion for temporary injunction be and the same is refused.

STRICKLAND v. STRICKLAND et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Oct. 6, 1912.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 425*)—NOTICE OF APPEAL—TIME FOR SERVICE.

Where a judgment was filed after adjournment for the term, and no notice thereof was given to the unsuccessful party, a notice of appeal served by his attorney 11 days after the filing of the judgment was in time under Code Civ. Proc. 1912, § 384, giving parties 10 days after the service upon them of notice of judgment entered in vacation in which to serve notice of intention to appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2155-2161; Dec. Dig. § 425.*]

2. PARTNERSHIP (§ 279*)—RETIREMENT OF PARTNER—ASSUMPTION OF OBLIGATIONS BY OTHER PARTNERS—EFFECT UPON CREDITORS—ACTION—VENUE.

Where a partnership composed of three individuals, which had contracted a debt, was dissolved prior to the institution of suit upon the debt, and it was agreed that two of the partners should assume the debts of the partnership, that agreement did not affect the rights of the creditor to hold the retiring partner; and therefore a justice in the county where the retiring partner resided had jurisdiction of an action against all three for the amount of the debt.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Partnership, Cent. Dig. §§ 636, 637; Dec. Dig. § 279.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Colleton County; R. W. Memminger, Judge.

Action by J. F. Strickland against W. W. Strickland and others, formerly copartners doing business as the Fairfax Furniture Company. Judgment for the defendants, and plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

Padgett, Lemacks & Moorser, of Walterboro, for appellant. J. M. Patterson, of Allendale, for respondents.

HYDRICK, J. [1, 2] The respondents moved to dismiss this appeal on the ground that the notice of appeal was not served within the time required by law. From the affidavits we gather these facts: The cause was heard in term time, but the court reserved its decision, and it was filed after the court had adjourned for the term, on July 12, 1912. On July 23, 1912, notice of appeal was served on respondents' attorney by J. Henry Johnson, Esq., who makes affidavit that he delivered to him and left with him a copy thereof. As the parties have 10 days after the service upon them of written notice of the filing of orders, decrees, or judgments granted or rendered at chambers or filed in vacation (see Code of Procedure 1912, § 384, and cases cited in the note, and O'Rourke v. Paint Co., 91 S. C. 403, 74 S. E. 930), and as no such notice had been given to appellant's attorneys at that time, the service of notice of intention to appeal on July 23d was in time, although it was more than 10 days from the filing of the judgment. This makes it unnecessary to pass upon the validity of the service made by the sheriff, upon which appellant also relies. The motion to dismiss the appeal is therefore refused. Plaintiff brought this action in the court of a magistrate for Colleton county against the defendants named in the caption, as partners doing business under the name of the Fairfax Furniture Company. At the time of the commencement of the action, the defendant W. W. Strickland was a resident of Colleton county. The other defendants resided in Barnwell county. In January, 1911, when the contract sued on was made, the defendants were all members of the firm. Thereafter, in August, 1911, and before the commencement of the action, the defendant Strickland sold his interest in the partnership to the other defendants, who assumed the debts of the concern. On the call of the case for trial in the magistrate's court, the Thomas defendants interposed an objection to the jurisdiction of the court, supported by an affidavit, on the ground that, at the time the action was commenced, both members of the firm were residents of Barnwell county. The magistrate overruled the objection, and allowed plaintiff to amend his summons and complaint by charging the defendants as "formerly partners," etc. The Thomas defendants then moved to strike the name of W. W. Strickland from the record as a party defendant, on the ground that he was not a member of the firm. That motion was refused. The plaintiff proved the facts above stated. The magistrates rendered judgment against the Thomas defendants only, holding that the testimony showed that, as between them and the defendant Strickland, they had assumed the debts of the firm. The Thomas defendants alone appealed.

The circuit court reversed the judgment on the ground that the magistrate in Colleton county had no jurisdiction of the defendants against whom the judgment was rendered, because they were residents of Barnwell county. The court held that, as there were several defendants, the magistrate would have had jurisdiction if one of the real defendants in interest had been a resident of Colleton county; but that, as the defendant Strickland was not a real party in interest, because the other defendants had assumed the firm debts, the court could not acquire jurisdiction of the others by making him a party defendant. In this the court erred. The assumption of the firm debts by the Thomases was an agreement only between them and the defendant W. W. Strickland. There was no testimony that the plaintiff was a party to it, or that he acquiesced in it. Therefore it could not have affected the liability of the defendant Strickland to the plaintiff. His liability to the plaintiff was fixed when the contract was made, and nothing which the members of the firm did among themselves after that time could have affected it without his consent. Therefore he was properly made a party defendant, and, as one of the proper parties defendant was a resident of Colleton county, the magistrate of that county had jurisdiction of all the defendants, under the authority of section 174 of the Code of Procedure of 1912, which provides that, if there is more than one defendant, the action may be tried in any county in which one or more of the defendants reside, at the time of the commencement thereof. In such cases, when the court has properly acquired jurisdiction of the parties, the rendition of a judgment in favor of the party whose residence in the county of trial gave the court jurisdiction of the other defendants could not have the effect of ousting the jurisdiction.

Reversed.

GARY, C. J., and WATTS and FRASER, JJ., concur.

WYNNE v. SEABOARD AIR LINE RY.
(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Oct. 6, 1913.)

1. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§ 126*)—WAGES—PAYMENT TO DISCHARGED EMPLOYE—STATUTES—VALIDITY.

Under Const. 1868, art. 12, § 1, and Const. 1895, art. 9, § 2, conferring on the Legislature the right to alter or repeal all charters of incorporation, and article 9, § 8, forbidding foreign corporations to construct, operate, or lease railroads within the state, Civ. Code 1912, § 3812, providing that, when a corporation shall discharge a laborer whose wages are paid monthly or weekly on a fixed day beyond the end of the month or week in which the labor is performed, the wages earned up to the time of discharge shall become immediately due and payable, and, if not paid within 24 hours after demand, the corporation shall be subject to penalty of $5 a day, was sustainable as an amendment of the corporate charter of defendant railroad company.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 325, 366-369; Dec. Dig. § 126.*]

2. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§§ 238, 275, 276*)—MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 69*)—PAYMENT OF WAGES—EMPLOYE—TIME—POLICE POWER—DUE PROCESS OF LAW—EQUAL PROTECTION OF LAWS—WRITTEN CONTRACT.

Civ. Code 1912, § 3812, was also sustainable as a proper exercise of police power, and was not therefore unconstitutional as depriving the corporations of their property without due process of law, or denying to them the equal protection of the laws and liberty of contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 688-690, 695, 706-708, 830, 835, 843-846; Dec. Dig. §§ 238, 275, 276;* Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 78-81; Dec. Dig. § 69.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 83*)—DISCHARGED EMPLOYE—WAGES—PAYMENT—TIME—STATUTES—CONSTRUCTION.

Civ. Code 1912, § 3812, requiring corporations to pay wages earned by discharged employes within 24 hours after demand on pain of a penalty, does not apply to a failure to pay because the demand is not a just debt, or when the discharged laborer after demanding payment prevents compliance by his own conduct, nor does it deny or preclude the right of the corporation to interpose any valid counterclaim or defense to the claim of such laborer, under coercion of the penalty so imposed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 78-81; Dec. Dig. § 83.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Richland County; T. S. Sease, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by A. W. Wynne against the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Lyles & Lyles, of Columbia, for appellant. Rembert & Monteith, of Columbia, for respondent.

HYDRICK, J. Plaintiff recovered judgment against defendant in the court of a magistrate for $1.93 wages due him by defendant at the time he was discharged from the service of defendant, and $95 the accumulated daily penalty of $5 per day for every day's delay in payment of his said wages, after demand therefor, as allowed by section 3812 of the Civil Code of 1912, which reads as follows: "When any corporation carrying on any business in this state in which laborers are employed, whose wages, under the business rule or custom of such corporation, are paid monthly or weekly on a fixed day beyond the end of the month or week in which the labor is performed, shall discharge any such laborer, the wages which have been earned by such discharged laborer shall become immediately due and payable. And if not so paid, then such laborer shall recover in addition thereto, a penalty of five dollars per day for every day after twenty-four hours until such wages are paid, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction, in the same action with the wages, or in a separate action: Provided, such demand has been made upon the paymaster or other paying officer." From the judgment of the circuit court, affirming the magistrate's judgment, the defendant appealed to this court, on the ground that the statute above quoted is unconstitutional and void, because it deprives defendant of its property without due process of law, and denies to it the equal protection of the laws and the liberty of contract.

These constitutional guarantees have been so frequently and so fully considered and discussed in this court and in the Supreme Court of the United States that we shall content ourselves in the present case with the citation of only a few of the cases upon the authority of which the validity of the statute must be affirmed.

[1] In the case of St. Louis, etc., Ry. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 402, 19 Sup. Ct. 419, 43 L. Ed. 746, the decision of the Supreme Court of the state of Arkansas, sustaining a similar statute against the same grounds of attack as here invoked, was affirmed. Except in unimportant details, that case cannot be distinguished from this. The Supreme Court of Arkansas rested its decision principally upon the ground that the statute as applied to corporations was a valid exercise of the right "to alter, revoke, or annul any charter of incorporation," which had been reserved by the state Constitution. The validity of section 3812, supra, may be affirmed upon the same ground, because both in the Constitution of 1868 (article 12, § 1) and in that of 1895 (article 9, § 2) the right to alter or repeal all charters of incorporation was expressly reserved, and by section 8 of article 9 foreign corporations are not allowed to build, operate, or lease any railroad in this state. So that defendant's charter must be subject to the power reserved to alter or repeal it.

[2] There can be no doubt that such legislation may also be sustained under the power of the state to legislate for the common good—commonly called the police power. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 31 Sup. Ct. 259, 55 L. Ed. 328; Johnson v. Spartan Mills, 68 S. C. 339, 47 S. E. 695, 1 Ann. Cas. 409.

We determine the validity of the statute as applied to the facts of the case presented by the record, which is that of a corporation having discharged one of its laborers to whom it was indebted in the sum of $1.93 for wages which he had earned, and having refused, after demand, to pay his wages, without any reason or excuse, except that which appears only in the argument of its counsel, to wit, that by custom or contract, express or implied, his wages were not due until defendant's next regular pay day. Therefore we are not concerned in this case with possible combinations of circumstances in which the statute might work inconvenience or even hardship.

[3] We say, however, that, giving the statute a reasonable construction, the intention is not to be gathered from it that the corporation employer shall be penalized for the failure to pay what is not a just debt nor for the failure to pay, when the discharged laborer, after demanding payment, prevents compliance with the demand by his own conduct, nor to deny or preclude the right of the corporation to interpose any valid counterclaim or defense to the claim of such laborer, under coercion of the penalty thereby imposed.

The purpose of the statute is to prevent the postponement, until the corporation's next regular pay day, of payment of the wages which a discharged laborer has earned at the time of his discharge, and which he would be entitled to sue for and collect immediately, but for the rule or custom of the corporation not to pay except on its regular pay days, and the express or implied agreement of the laborer to abide that rule or custom. The Legislature probably considered that the hardship which befalls the needy laborer by withholding for a week, or two weeks, or a month the wages which he has earned is far greater than the inconvenience to the corporation which is caused by requiring a reasonably prompt settlement with him, so that he can use the money which he has earned in an effort to get other employment, or to live upon until he can get other employment, and thereby possibly prevent him and his family from becoming a burden upon the state. Besides this, the statute tends to prevent dissatisfaction among laborers, and hence, also, tends to prevent agitation and strikes among them, which is a matter of grave public interest.

Affirmed.

GARY, C. J., and WATTS, and FRASER, JJ., concur.

STATE ex rel. BATES et al. v. PATTERSEN, County Sup'r, et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Oct. 13, 1913.)

1. INJUNCTION (§ 157*)—TEMPORARY INJUNCTION—ORDER—AMENDMENT.

A judge, after making an order for temporary injunction, may on motion amend it to require relators to give a bond.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. §§ 340, 342; Dec. Dig. § 157.*]

2. INJUNCTION (§ 148*)—TEMPORARY INJUNCTION—BOND.

A bond is required, under the statute, of relators to whom a temporary injunction is granted by a judge of the Supreme Court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. §§ 323-334; Dec. Dig. § 148.*]

On motion to amend order. Granted.

For former opinion, see 79 S. E. 309.

De Bruhl & McLaughlin, of Columbia, for petitioners. Melton & Belser, of Columbia, for respondents.

FRASER, J. [1,2] This is a motion to amend an order of temporary injunction issued by me in this case. The motion was made to require the relators to give bond. The motion was made on the morning of October 4th. At the hearing of the motion for injunction, my recollection is that nothing was said about the bond; and, inasmuch as the state was practically a party, it did not occur to me that a bond would be necessary. On the hearing on this motion, I declined to hear from Messrs. Melton & Belser and stated that, as then advised, a bond was necessary, but gave Messrs. DeBruhl & McLaughlin three or four days in which to furnish me with authorities to the contrary. It appears that later in the day of the 4th the notice of appeal and exceptions were served. The authorities furnished me have not convinced me that the relators are not required to give bond, and I am satisfied that, under the case of Lorick & Lowrance v. Motley, 69 S. C. 570, 48 S. E. 614, I have authority to amend the order heretofore made by me. It seems to me that a bond is required under the statute.

It is therefore ordered that the petitioners in this action do, within ten days from the date of this order, enter into the undertaking required by law, with sufficient surety to be approved by the clerk of this court, in the sum of $2,000 for the payment of such damages as the respondents may sustain, not exceeding said sum, by reason of the temporary injunction heretofore granted in this cause, should the court finally determine that the petitioners are not entitled to injunction.

WARDLAW v. FREDERICK. (No. 5,027.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PLEADING (§ 204*)—DEMURRER—PLEADING GOOD IN PART—ANSWER.

Where an answer is demurred to on the general ground that the allegations thereof are irrelevant and insufficient, and do not set up any matter of defense, and the demurrer fails specifically to point out in what particular they are irrelevant and insufficient, and it appears that some of the paragraphs demurred to do set up matters which are relevant and material, in testing the relevancy and sufficiency of matters of defense thus set up, the facts alleged in all the paragraphs will be considered together; and, if, in light of the allegations embraced in all the paragraphs, there is a sufficient defense, there would be no error in a judgment overruling the demurrer. Antognoli v. Miller, 116 Ga. 621, 42 S. E. 1006.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 486-490; Dec. Dig. § 204.*]

2. PLEADING (§ 208*)—DEMURRER—PLEADING GOOD IN PART—ANSWER.

Where a paragraph in an answer contains both relevant and irrelevant matter, it will be purged of the irrelevant matter on special demurrer pointing out such irrelevancy; but if the demurrer goes to the paragraph as a whole, without specifying the irrelevant matter, the demurrant cannot complain that the entire paragraph of the answer is not stricken. Southern Ry. Co. v. Phillips, 136 Ga. 282, 71 S. E. 414.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 518-519; Dec. Dig. § 208.*]

3. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS (§ 221*)—ALLOWANCE OF CLAIMS—DISPUTED CLAIMS—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.

It was erroneous to admit in evidence the deed from the defendant's testator to the plaintiff. The plaintiff offered evidence in support of her contention that at the date of the death of her brother, the testator, he was indebted to her in the amount sued for. The defendant pleaded that this indebtedness, if it ever existed, had been settled by a conveyance of real estate from the decedent to the plaintiff. The deed introduced in evidence recited that it was based upon a consideration of love and affection and $10. There was no evidence to authorize a finding that this deed was intended by the grantor and accepted by the grantee as a settlement and satisfaction of the debt for which the plaintiff sued. In the absence of some evidence of this character, the deed was wholly irrelevant to any issue on trial in the case. For the same reason, it was erroneous to admit the prior conveyances showing title in the decedent to the same property.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 901-903½, 1858, 1861-1863, 1865, 1866, 1871-1874, 1876; Dec. Dig. § 221.*]

4. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS (§ 221*)—ALLOWANCE OF CLAIMS—DISPUTED CLAIMS—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE.

It was erroneous to admit in evidence a written agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant in reference to certain other matters pending between them, in which it was recited that the plaintiff claimed an indebtedness of $1,750 without interest, and that nothing in the agreement was intended to prejudice this claim. The agreement was irrelevant to any issue on trial, and the mere recital therein that the plaintiff claimed an indebtedness of $1,750, "without interest," did not amount to an agreement not to demand interest, and did not operate as an estoppel upon the plaintiff to claim interest on the indebtedness.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 901-903½, 1858, 1861-1863, 1865, 1866, 1871-1874, 1876; Dec. Dig. § 221.*]

5. NEW TRIAL (§ 68*)—GROUNDS—VERDICT CONTRARY TO EVIDENCE.

Plaintiff having proved her case as laid, and there being no evidence whatever introduced by the defendant to sustain the defense relied upon, a verdict for the plaintiff was demanded, and the court erred in not setting aside the verdict for the defendant and granting a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 135-140; Dec. Dig. § 68.*]

Error from City Court of Columbus; G. U. Tigner, Judge.

Action by C. A. Wardlaw against N. C. Frederick, as executrix. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

Hatcher & Hatcher, of Columbus, for plaintiff in error. Henry R. Goetchius and Wm. De L. Worsley, both of Columbus, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment reversed.

JOHNSON v. STATE. (No. 4,981.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1918.)

*(Syllabus by the Court.)1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 67*)—SERVANT'S BREACH OF CONTRACT—ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE—BURDEN OF PROOF—PRESUMPTIVE EVIDENCE.

An intent to defraud, coexistent with the making of the contract, is an ever-essential element of the offense of cheating and swindling, as denounced in section 715 of the Penal Code of 1910. Under the provisions of section 716 of the Penal Code, failure to perform services contracted for and failure to return money advanced upon a contract of service, without good and sufficient cause, may afford presumptive evidence that the fraudulent intent existed at the time the contract was made, but either the performance of the services or the repayment of the advancement is a complete defense, and upon the trial of one charged with a violation of section 715, it is incumbent upon the prosecution to prove, not only that the services as contracted for were not performed, but also to establish the fact that the advances, with interest thereon, had not been repaid at or before the time fixed for the commencement of the service.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 75; Dec. Dig. § 67.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 67*)—CRIMINAL LAW (§ 308*)—CHEATING AND SWINDLING—BURDEN OF PROOF—PRESUMPTION OF INNOCENCE.

Where one is charged with cheating and swindling in violation of section 715 of the Penal Code of 1910 the burden of showing that the accused had no good cause or excuse for his failure to perform his contract, or to repay the advancement, is not upon the defendant as matter of defense, but the burden rests upon the prosecution in the establishment of an essential element of the state's case (to wit, the existence of fraudulent intent) to prove those facts which are by the statute declared to be necessary to raise the presumption of an intent to defraud, which is so essential an ingredient of the offense that a conviction cannot be supported where such an intent is not proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Proof that one accused of this offense failed to perform the services contracted for, or to repay the advances which supplied the consideration of the contract, would be rebutted by the general presumption of the defendant's innocence, because the existence of a fraudulent intent at the time the advances were made and the contract was entered into must be proved, and yet the question as to what was the real intention of the defendant at the time of making the contract, to say the least of it, would be an open one. Indeed, under the well-established rule that where an act is equally subject to two constructions, the one indicative of the guilt of the actor and the other consistent with his innocence, the latter must be adopted would prevail.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 75; Dec. Dig. § 67*; Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 731; Dec. Dig. § 308.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 67*)—BREACH OF CONTRACT—CHEATING AND SWINDLING—SUFFICIENCY OF PROOF.

In the present case it is uncontradicted that the failure of the accused to comply with his contract and to labor for the prosecutor was due to the fact that he was already under contract of service with another employer, and the testimony that the defendant immediately endeavored to get his employer to repay the money advanced by the prosecutor, and that payment was promised, but postponed by this employer, is undisputed. The state failed to show that the accused had no good cause or excuse for not repaying the advancement, and even if the testimony in behalf of the defendant upon this point should have been discredited by the lower court, the conviction of the defendant was not authorized. The fact that the defendant made an affidavit which was alleged was attached to the contract, to the effect that he was not under any other contract of service at the time of the advancement made for him by the prosecutor, might subject him to prosecution for false swearing, or to a prosecution for cheating and swindling by artful means and deceitful practices, under the provisions of section 719 of the Penal Code of 1910, but proof of making this affidavit, and in the absence of proof that the defendant had no reason for not performing his contract or repaying the money, is not a sufficient substitute for proof that the subsequent failure to perform the contract, or repay the advancement, was without the good cause required by law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 75; Dec. Dig. § 67.*]

*(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 448*)—EVIDENCE—OPINION.

In a prosecution for cheating and swindling in violation of Pen. Code 1910, § 715, a witness' testimony merely that defendant "took an affidavit" should have been excluded as opinionative, where he testified to no facts from which the court could determine who administered the oath, whether it was lawful, or whether defendant was conscious that the oath was being administered and was apprised of the contents of the affidavit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1035-1039, 1041-1043, 1045, 1048-1051; Dec. Dig. § 448.*]

Error from City Court of Dublin; Jas. B. Hicks, Judge.

Dave Johnson was convicted of cheating and swindling, and brings error. Reversed.

Burch & Burch and J. G. Howard, all of Dublin, for plaintiff in error. Geo. B. Davis, Sol., of Dublin, for the State.

RUSSELL, J. The defendant was convicted of a violation of section 715 of the Penal Code. His motion for a new trial was overruled. It appears from the record that he was in the employ of one Burch, as a cropper or farm laborer upon Burch's farm. He was indebted to a mercantile establishment in the city of Dublin, known as the "Four Seasons," of which a Mr. Arnau was manager. To secure the payment of this indebtedness he executed a mortgage on a certain cow and on his crop then growing. Upon his failure to pay this debt and the failure of the levying officer to find property upon which to levy, the defendant was arrested and placed in jail. At the jail he was visited by Mr. Carter, the prosecutor in the present case, and Mr. Carter's son, and after some conversation he was taken, at the instance of Mr. Arnau, to the office of the solicitor of the city court (who was also Mr. Carter's personal attorney). There the young Mr. Carter, as agent for his father, negotiated with the defendant and agreed to pay the defendant's indebtedness to the Four Seasons, upon the payment of which the defendant would be discharged from jail, and thereupon Mr. Davis, the attorney, prepared a contract by the terms of which the defendant agreed to work for six months for Mr. Carter, in consideration of the advance of $31. The record does not show whether the warrant sworn out upon the mortgage of the Four Seasons was dismissed or not, but the defendant was discharged from jail upon his promise to return in a day or two and enter upon his service of employment with Mr. Carter. Mr Davis testified: "This negro asked Mr. Carter to let him go down to Cadwell and get him some clothing, and said he would meet him back here Monday morning. I added an oath to the contract, where he swore he was not under contract with any one else." When the defendant reached Mr. Burch's, to get his clothes, according to the undisputed testimony of Mr. Burch, he told Mr. Burch that he owed Mr. Carter. Mr Burch testified: "I told him that I would pay it whenever he worked enough." The defendant had traded with Mr. Burch to make a crop, and the payment was made by Mr. Carter before the expiration of the defendant's contract with Mr. Burch. The state proved the contract substantially as set forth in the accusation, and that loss and damage had accrued to the prosecutor as alleged; that no service had been performed under the contract, nor had the money advanced been tendered to be repaid. There was no evidence whatever which tended to show why the defendant did not perform his contract other than offered by himself in the testimony of Mr. Burch, nor did the state establish that the failure of the accused to repay the advance was without cause. The evidence of Mr. Burch, to the effect that at the time Mr. Carter advanced the $31 the defendant was bound by a subsisting contract of employment to himself, was undisputed, as is the fact that as soon as the negro could get to Mr. Burch's after his release from jail, he endeavored to induce Mr. Burch to repay Mr. Carter the advancement made by the latter, and that his failure to comply with his contract was due to the fact that Mr. Burch would not consent for him to leave. Furthermore Mr. Burch had promised the defendant that he would repay the advancement when he made his crop.

[3, 4] The single question in the case is whether the proof of fraudulent intent upon the part of the defendant at the time that he procured the advance is sufficient to comply with the requirements of section 715 of the Penal Code, under which the defendant stood charged. It is not necessary to refer to those portions of the record in which the testimony is in conflict. We consider the judgment of the lower court as based upon the superior credibility of the testimony in behalf of the state, which he was authorized, in his discretion, to attribute to it. We disregard the contention of the plaintiff in error that the contract was induced by duress, and the further insistence that the payment to the Four Seasons was the act of Mr. Carter, and not the free and voluntary act of the defendant; in other words, that the advancement was suggested by the prosecutor instead of being solicited and requested by the accused. We consider the case upon the theory, very evidently adopted by the trial judge, that the defendant, being desirous of being released from jail, promised the would-be employer that if he would advance for him a certain sum of money, in which the prospective employer had no interest, he would perform certain definite services for him for a fixed and definite time, and that thereafter he failed to perform these services or to refund the money thus advanced. For reasons which will be hereafter stated, the fact that the defendant took an oath at the time of making the contract that he was not under contract with any one else is, in our opinion, insufficient of itself to evidence the existence of a fraudulent intent, as defined in section 715 of the Penal Code. But even if we are mistaken as to this, the testimony as to the affidavit should not have been considered by the trial court, because it was purely opinionative, and no sufficient facts were presented to the court upon which it could be adjudged that the defendant was actually sworn, or made a statement upon oath, conscious that he was bound by its obligations. To say that one "took an affidavit" assumes, without giving the court an opportunity of passing upon the question, that the alleged affiant was fully apprised of the contents of the purported affidavit, and that he consciously and voluntarily assumed the obligation of a lawful oath, administered by one lawfully authorized to administer oaths. The trial court did not have before him any information, so far as appears from the record, which would enable him to say who administered the oath, whether the oath was a lawful oath, or whether the affiant was conscious that an oath was being administered, or was apprised of the contents of the affidavit to which he was being sworn; so that, clearly, there is nothing more in the record upon the subject of the affidavit than the mere conclusion of the witness who testified upon that point. Especially is this true since Mr. Carter testified, upon cross-examination, as to the contract to which the oath was attached, that although he had searched for it, he would not swear that it was lost.

[1, 2] Omitting the consideration of the affidavit for the present, therefore, the question arises as to whether, in any case, as to one charged with a violation of the labor contract law of 1903 (now embodied in sections 715, 716 of the Penal Code), who has contracted to perform services in consideration of an advance, mere proof that such a one failed to comply with his contract, or to repay the money, is presumptive evidence of the co-existent fraudulent intent essential to authorize conviction in such a case, and at the same time preserve the act as a constitutional enactment and prevent it from being nothing more or less than imprisonment for debt.

Of course the labor-contract law of 1903, like all other criminal statutes, must be strictly construed. Hence it was held in Glenn v. State, 128 Ga. 587† (and this ruling has been uniformly followed since by the Supreme Court and by this court), that there must be a distinct and definite contract of service, and that the person contracting to perform this service refused, without good and sufficient cause, to carry out his contract by performing the service. In Patterson v. State, 1 Ga. App. 782, 58 S. E. 284, we held that "the paramount, controlling, ever-essential element of the offense, which must be proved to have been coexistent with the debt or contract, is the intent to defraud." All of the decisions of the Supreme Court bearing upon this question place the burden of proof, as to whether the defendant had good cause for failing or refusing to carry out his contract, upon the state; necessarily so because the statute itself declares that "satisfactory proof of the contract, the procuring thereon of money or other thing of value, failure to perform the services so contracted for, or failure to return the money so advanced, with interest thereon, at the time said labor was to be performed, without good and sufficient cause," etc., shall be deemed presumptive evidence of the fraudulent intent referred to in the preceding section. Where it appears that failure to perform the contract was the result of sufficient cause, an acquittal necessarily results; but this is not all; proof of absence of sufficient cause is essential to support a conviction, because without this proof the existence of the antecedent or coexistent intent to defraud is not established. The labor-contract act of 1903 can only be maintained as a constitutional enactment, and its provisions be enforced by giving to it such a construction as will prevent it from being, or even appearing to be, a criminal process to be used for the collection of debts.

From the testimony in the record it is plain that the state did not establish that this defendant had no good cause for failing to comply with his contract. According to the defendant's evidence, he could only comply with this contract by violating a pre-existing contract of the same nature. The state's testimony did not offer any reason why the defendant violated his contract. Upon the trial of one accused of a violation of section 715 of the Penal Code the state must show that the accused did not have any good reason for failing to comply with his contract, or for failing to repay the money. In other words, if it appears from the evidence that the accused had a good reason for not complying with his contract, or for failing to repay the money, he cannot be convicted.

Judgment reversed.

BLAKELY ARTESIAN ICE CO. v. CLARKE (No. 4,929.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. TROVER AND CONVERSION (§ 32*) — PETITION—SUFFICIENCY OF DESCRIPTION.

The following description of property in a petition in an action of trover was sufficiently definite: "All the iron machinery such as boilers, cans, piping, ammonia apparatus, etc., situated in the town of Blakely, along the line of the Central of Georgia right of way, and heretofore used by the defendant in the manufacture of ice, said machinery being the same machinery which was sold by the Huson Ice & Coal Company to the Union Point Ice Company, and described in a written retainer-title note for the sum of $900, dated July 27, 1910, and payable January 1, 1911, to the Huson Ice & Coal Company, and signed by the Union Point Ice Company, by its president, and recorded in the office of the superior court of Greene county, on August 5, 1910, in Book 8, page 447."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trover and Conversion, Cent. Dig. §§ 191-202; Dec. Dig. § 32.*]

2. CORPORATIONS (§ 432*) — CONTRACTS UNDER SEAL—AUTHORITY TO EXECUTE—PRESUMPTION.

An instrument executed in the name of a corporation by its president and under the seal of the corporation is presumed to have been executed by its authority, but this presumption is rebuttable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1717, 1718, 1724, 1726-1735, 1737, 1743, 1762; Dec. Dig. § 432.*]

3. ASSIGNMENTS (§ 76*) — NOTE RETAINING TITLE — TRANSFER BY INDORSEMENT — REPLEVIN.

A transfer in the following language on the back of a note, containing a reservation of title to property therein described, was adequate to pass title both to the note and to the property, and was sufficient to support an action of trover for the latter's recovery: "For value received, we hereby transfer and assign all the right, title, and interest we have in the within note, together with the security mentioned in said note, to C. A. Clarke. December 16, 1910. Huson Ice & Coal Company, by H. T. Huson, Secretary and Treasurer."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Assignments, Cent. Dig. § 143; Dec. Dig. § 76.*]

4. RECORDS (§ 10*) — DEFECTIVE REGISTRATION—EFFECT.

An instrument executed in behalf of a corporation and under the corporate seal, if capable of being admitted to record under the registry statutes, operates as notice to third persons of the presumptive power of the agent of the corporation to execute it, from the date of the filing of the paper for record, although it was so defectively recorded as to indicate that it was not an instrument under seal.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes
† 51 S. E. 605.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Records, Cent. Dig. §§ 8-12; Dec. Dig. § 10.*]

5. CORPORATIONS (§§ 399, 404*)—OFFICERS—POWERS.

The president of a corporation has no power, by reason of his office alone, to buy, sell, or contract for the corporation, nor to control its property, funds, or management. The evidence in the present case demanded a finding that the contract upon which the plaintiff relied was executed without the authority of the corporation whose name was signed thereto. Power conferred by the governing authorities of a corporation upon an agent, to renew a note payable to a named person, does not embrace the authority to convey property of the corporation as security for the payment of the note, unless it appears that in the original evidence of indebtedness the property had been conveyed as security.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1588, 1602-1610, 1628-1629, 1633-1639; Dec. Dig. §§ 399, 404.*]

6. CORPORATIONS (§ 432*)—AGENCY—ESTOPPEL—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

There was no evidence in the present case to authorize a finding that the corporation had held out as its agent the person who executed the contract, in such a way as to estop it or its privies from pleading the want of the agent's authority.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1717, 1718, 1724, 1726-1735, 1737, 1743, 1762; Dec. Dig. § 432.*]

7. DENIAL OF NEW TRIAL—ERROR.

The foregoing rulings deal with all of the material questions which will likely arise upon another trial. A new trial should have been granted because of erroneous instructions of the trial judge, and because the evidence demanded a finding that the instrument upon which the plaintiff relied in proof of his title was executed without any authority from the corporation in whose behalf it was made.

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

8. CORPORATIONS (§ 399*) — INFERENCE OF GENERAL AGENCY.

That the agent of a corporation was specially authorized in some instances to execute a mortgage and a security deed, and in others to borrow money from named persons on specified terms, did not authorize the inference that he had general authority to contract on behalf of the corporation to borrow money, or for any other purpose.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1588, 1602-1610; Dec. Dig. § 399.*]

Russell, J., dissenting.

Error from City Court of Blakely; R. H. Sheffield, Judge.

Action by C. A. Clarke against the Blakely Artesian Ice Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Glessner & Park, of Blakely, and Saml. H. Sibley, of Union Point, for plaintiff in error. Rambo & Wright, of Blakely, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. Clarke sued the Blakely Artesian Ice Company in trover, alleging that the defendant was in possession of certain machinery used in connection with an ice plant sold by the Huson Ice & Coal Company to the Union Point Ice Company to which the seller had reserved title, and that an obligation for a part of the purchase money, containing a reservation of title to the property sued for, had been duly transferred from the Huson Ice & Coal Company to the plaintiff. The property was described in the petition as being "all the iron machinery, such as boilers, cans, piping, ammonia apparatus, etc., situated in the town of Blakely, along the line of the Central of Georgia right of way, and heretofore used by the defendant in the manufacture of ice; said machinery being the same machinery which was sold by the Huson Ice & Coal Company to the Union Point Ice Company, and described in a written retainer-title note for the sum of $900, dated July 27, 1910, and payable January 1, 1911, to the Huson Ice & Coal Company, and signed by the Union Point Ice Company, by its president, and recorded in the office of the superior court of Greene county, on August 5, 1910, in Book 8, page 447." The petition was demurred to on the ground that the property sued for was not sufficiently described, and that no copy of the instrument upon which the plaintiff relied in support of his title was attached to his petition. By amendment the plaintiff attached a document, dated July 22, 1910, reciting a promise to pay the Huson Ice & Coal Company the sum of $900 principal, together with interest, and attorney's fees in case of collection by suit. The instrument further recited: "And to secure the payment of this note, I hereby mortgage and convey unto said payee, its successors and assigns, the following described property, to wit: For purchase money on all the iron ice machinery, as boiler, cases, piping, ammonia apparatus, in pay for plant at Union Point, Ga.; this note being given for purchase money of said machinery, and title to same to remain in payee until this note is paid in full." The instrument was signed as follows: "Witness my hand and seal the day and year above written. Union Point Ice Company (L. S.), by J. E. Carlton, President. In presence of L. D. Carlton, Notary." On the back of this document was the following transfer: "For value received, we hereby transfer and assign all the right, title, and interest we have in the within note, together with the security mentioned in said note, to C. A. Clarke. December 15, 1910. Huson Ice & Coal Company, by H. T. Huson, Secretary and Treasurer." To the petition as amended the defendant demurred on the following additional grounds: (1) No authority is alleged or shown in J. E. Carlton, president of the Union Point Ice Company, to execute the paper under which the plaintiff claims title; and (2) no authority appears in Huson, the secretary and treasurer, to convey the property in dispute to the plaintiff for the Huson Ice & Coal Company. The demurrers were overruled, and the defendant excepted pendente lite. The trial resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for the principal sum of $900, $184.50 interest, and $90 as attorney's fees. The attorney's fees being stricken, the verdict was left to stand with the principal and interest as stated. The defendant's motion for a new trial was overruled, and it excepted.

From the evidence it appears that the Huson Ice & Coal Company was formerly the owner of the property sued for, and that it opened negotiations with the Union Point Ice Company for the sale of the property, and the following terms of sale were agreed upon: $10,000, one half of which was paid in capital stock of the Union Point Ice Co., the other half to be paid either in cash or in notes given for stock in that company. According to the testimony in behalf of the plaintiff, $4,100 was paid in this way, leaving a balance of $900 still due. Huson, one of the witnesses for the plaintiff, testified, that the Huson Ice & Coal Company was given a note for $900, which he thought was for the balance of the purchase price due on the machinery; that this note was turned over to Carlton, the president of the Union Point Ice Company, and that the paper under which the plaintiff claimed title was given in renewal of this note. Clarke testified that he bought this renewal paper for value from Huson Ice & Coal Company, before maturity, without notice of any defense of the Union Point Ice Company. There was introduced in evidence an extract from the minutes of the board of directors of the Union Point Ice Company, of July 26, 1910, from which the following appears: "Mr. J. E. Carlton was authorized to renew a note for nine unsold shares in the plant to Huson Ice & Coal Company." These minutes do not appear ever to have been read and approved by the directors, but Huson testified that the directors, including Carlton, the president, were present and assented to the resolution. All the other directors testified that they knew nothing about such minutes; that no authority was given anybody to execute a paper to the Huson Ice & Coal Company, and that as a matter of fact the Union Point Ice Company was not indebted to the Huson Ice & Coal Company, in any sum. Carlton was president, and Huson vice president of the Union Point Ice Company. The document relied on as the basis of the plaintiff's claim of title was filed for record within 30 days after its execution, and when recorded the clerk omitted to record the words: "Witness my hand and seal the day and year above written;" so that, as it appeared upon the record, the paper was not a sealed instrument, though it was actually executed as such. Subsequently to the execution and recording of this paper, the Union Point Ice Company, executed a conveyance to a third person to secure an indebtedness. Under this conveyance the property was brought to sale and by an arrangement made between the Union Point Ice Company and W. A. Hall and others (who afterwards formed the Blakely Artesian Ice Company), the property was bought in by Hall and his associates. Hall testified that at the time of the purchase, he had actual knowledge of the existence of the paper under which Clarke claims title. Although at the time of this sale Clarke's paper was past due, he made no effort to enforce collection, but waited some time after the plant had been set up in Blakely and brought trover.

[1] 1. The description of the property sued for was sufficiently definite. Pepper v. James, 7 Ga. App. 518, 67 S. E. 218.

[2] 2. It was not essential that the petition should affirmatively set forth the authority of Carlton as president to execute the paper upon which the plaintiff relied. The paper was under seal. The corporation had authority to adopt any device it saw proper as a seal for the particular occasion. Being regularly executed under seal, the presumption was that the president had authority to execute the instrument, although this presumption was rebuttable. Nelson v. Spence, 129 Ga. 35 (6), 58 S. E. 697; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Rhodes, 4 Ga. App. 25 (5), 29, 60 S. E. 828; American Investment Co. v. Cable, 4 Ga. App. 106 (3, 4), 110, 60 S. E. 1037; Cannon v. Gorham, 186 Ga. 167 (3), 71 S. E. 142, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 39; 3 Cook, Corporations (6th Ed.) § 722.

[3] 3. The transfer on the back of the instrument to the plaintiff was adequate to transfer, not only the indebtedness, but also the title, and was sufficient to enable the plaintiff to maintain trover for the recovery of the property. Dawson v. English, 8 Ga. App. 585, 69 S. E. 1133; West Yellow Pine Co. v. Kendrick, 9 Ga. App. 350, 71 S. E. 504; Townsend v. Southern Product Co., 127 Ga. 342, 56 S. E. 436, 119 Am. St. Rep. 340. This transfer, together with the possession of the paper, was sufficient evidence of the plaintiff's title, and the petition was not demurrable on the ground that it did not appear therefrom that Huson had authority to transfer the paper in behalf of the corporation. See Sheffield v. Johnston County Savings Bank, 2 Ga. App. 221, 58 S. E. 386.

[4] 4. It is further suggested that, inasmuch as the instrument executed by Carlton was defectively recorded, its record could not operate as constructive notice to those under whom the defendant claims title, and who hold a conveyance junior in date to the paper under which the plaintiff claims title. This paper took effect as against third persons without notice from the time it was filed for record; and, to operate as notice, it was not essential that the clerk should have recorded it at all, nor does the fact that it was defectively recorded prevent it from being notice to third persons. Durrence v. Northern National Bank, 117 Ga. 385, 43 S. E. 726; Wadley Lumber Co. v. Lott, 130

Ga. 135, 141, 60 S. E. 886. This being so, the defendant cannot stand on the proposition that Hall and his associates were purchasers with notice from persons without notice.

[§] 5. While the paper transferred to Clarke bore on its face presumptive evidence of the authority of the corporation for its execution, this was a rebuttable presumption, and the defendant was not precluded from showing that the president of the corporation had no authority to execute the instrument in its behalf. "The mere fact that a deed had a corporate seal attached does not make it the act of the corporation, unless the seal was placed to it by some one authorized." 1 Clark & Marshall on Private Corporations, 510. The presumption of authority to execute an instrument, arising from the fact that the corporate seal was attached thereto, may be overthrown by proof that the seal was affixed without proper authority from the board of directors, or some other duly authorized corporate agent. 3 Cook on Corporations (6th Ed.) § 722. "The president of a corporation has not power, by reason of his office alone, to buy, sell, or contract for the corporation, nor to control its property, funds, or management. His duty is merely to preside at meetings of the board of directors, and to perform only such other duties as the by-laws or resolutions of the board of directors may expressly authorize." Id. § 716; Brown v. Bass, 132 Ga. 41, 43, 63 S. E. 788; Minn. Lumber Co. v. Hobbs & Livingston, 122 Ga. 20, 24, 49 S. E. 783; Ocala Southern R. Co. v. Morton, 13 Ga. App. —, 79 S. E. 480. It follows that the mere fact that one may be designated by the stockholders as the president of the corporation does not confer upon him either actual or presumptive authority to execute a contract in behalf of the corporation. His actual authority is only such as is conferred either by the by-laws adopted by the stockholders or by resolutions of the board of directors duly passed. The only authority conferred upon the president by the by-laws of the Union Point Ice Company to the president was to preside over the stockholders' and directors' meetings. The general manager was given the authority to manage the ice plant, and the secretary and treasurer was directed to sign all vouchers, agreements, and other important papers, and make purchases and sales for the corporation.

The minutes of the board of directors must therefore be looked to, to determine what actual authority Carlton had to execute the contract upon which the plaintiff relied. It is conceded that no such actual authority was conferred by the directors, unless it be embraced in the minutes of July 26th referred to in the statement of facts. Carlton himself, and all the directors, testified that he had no authority from the directors to execute the paper; and Huson, the chief witness for the plaintiff on this question, did not claim Carlton had any actual authority, unless it was conferred by the directors at the meeting above mentioned. The question of the president's authority to execute this paper must therefore depend upon the construction of this resolution of the board of directors. By it Carlton was "authorized to renew a note for nine unsold shares in the plant to Huson Coal & Ice Company." Nothing is said about the execution of any title to the property as security for the debt; nor does this resolution confer express authority upon Carlton to pledge any of the corporation's property as security for the payment of this debt. It is true he was authorized to renew a note. On its face he had authority to execute only an ordinary promise to pay without security; and if nothing more had appeared, it would be clear that no authority had been conferred upon the president to execute any paper in which the Huson Coal & Ice Company should have title to any of the corporation's property. If it had appeared that the note previously executed to the Huson Coal & Ice Company for $900 was one in which that company retained title to the property sold to the Union Point Ice Company, then it would be clear that the authority had been conferred upon Carlton to execute a new paper, in which title would be retained in the payee of the note. But nothing of this sort appeared from the evidence. All that appeared on this subject is from the following testimony of Huson: "I was at this meeting July 26th also September 19th. I was there when Mr. Cunningham made the motion to raise $3,500 and when the motion was made to pay me the $900. I remember the motion very clearly. Mr. Cunningham made a motion to authorize Mr. Carlton to borrow $3,500, and another to renew a note for $900 that I had. It was a note for $900 that the Union Point Ice Company gave Huson Ice & Coal Company, which I think I turned over to Mr. Carlton. I think it was given for the purchase of this machinery. I haven't got it now." To meet the apparent want of authority in Carlton as evidenced by the resolution of the board of directors, it was incumbent upon the defendant to show there had been an original note containing a retention of title, which Carlton was authorized to renew. All except Huson testified affirmatively that no such note was executed. And Huson testified merely that he had had a note for $900, but did not testify that this note contained a retention of title to the property in the payee. This being so, the evidence demanded a finding that Carlton had no actual authority to execute the paper upon which the plaintiff relied. When a corporation authorizes its president to borrow money, the president, when acting as agent of the corporation to carry out such authority, should be held strictly to its terms. Monroe v. Arnold, 108 Ga. 449 (4), 34 S. E. 176.

The defendant relies on the doctrine stated in 10 Cyc. 766, 1182, to the effect that "the power to borrow money carries with it, by necessary implication, the power to give the usual security for the loan." The author was, however, discussing the power of the corporation as contained in its charter, and simply stated the rule that, where a corporation has in its charter the power to borrow money, it has the incidental power, by necessary implication, to do any act necessary to enable it to borrow the money, such as give security therefor. The subject there under discussion was the ultra vires power of corporations, and not intra vires, as in this case, and is quite a different thing from mere authority conferred by the corporation on an agent to execute a note for the payment of an indebtedness of the corporation. The authority to pledge the property of the corporation as security for a note will not be implied from the mere authority to one of its officers to execute the note.

[6] 6. The defendant invokes the well-settled rule that, where a corporation holds out a person as its officer, it is bound by any act apparently within the scope of his authority, notwithstanding a limitation upon the power of the officer by a by-law or otherwise, not known to a party dealing with him as such. Johnson v. Waxelbaum Co., 1 Ga. App. 511, 58 S. E. 56. It relies also upon the well-settled rule that a person who has held out another as his agent, and thus induced third persons to deal with him as such, is estopped as to third persons from denying the agency. Fitzgerald Cotton Co. v. Farmers' Supply Co., 3 Ga. App. 212, 59 S. E. 713. We have already seen that the power to execute contracts is not within the apparent scope of the authority of the president of a corporation; nor is there anything in the evidence to authorize the application of the principle of estoppel by reason of the fact that the Union Point Ice Company held Carlton out as its general agent, having power to execute contracts in its behalf.

[8] It does appear, from extracts from the minutes of the directors at various times, that Carlton was authorized from time to time to borrow money. In some instances he was authorized specifically to execute a mortgage or a security deed, and in others the authority was conferred upon him simply to borrow money. But in every case the person from whom the loan was to be obtained was mentioned, and the terms of the loan were stated. The mere fact that a corporation may, on several occasions, have conferred specific authority upon an agent to execute a particular contract or make a particular loan upon stated terms does not authorize the inference that he had general authority to contract in behalf of the corporation, either for the purpose of borrowing money or for any other purpose, but, on the contrary, the inference of a lack of general authority would arise. The appointment by a corporation of a special agent for a special purpose, no matter how often made, does not authorize other persons to deal with him upon the theory that he is a general agent of the corporation, with power to contract in its behalf, or estop the corporation or its privies from challenging the power of the agent to execute a contract which the directors had given him no authority to make. There was no evidence authorizing a charge to the jury on the subject of estoppel by reason of the fact that the corporation had held out Carlton as its general agent having apparent authority to execute the contract, and the instructions of the trial judge upon this subject were erroneous.

[7] 7. The foregoing deals with the material questions which will likely arise upon another trial. Some of the instructions of the trial judge were not in accordance with the rulings here announced, and those requests to charge which set out principles of law in harmony with these rulings should have been given. The main ground, however, upon which the judgment of reversal is based is that there was no evidence to authorize the finding that Carlton had authority to bind the corporation by the conveyance of title upon which the plaintiff relied. We do not mean, of course, to hold that the plaintiff could not recover against the Union Point Ice Company, upon the note as an evidence of indebtedness. This question he must test in a different forum.

Judgment reversed.

RUSSELL, J., dissents.

HUMPHREY et al. v. JOHNSON et al.

JOHNSON et al. v. HUMPHREY.

(Nos. 4,734, 4,735.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§§ 141, 196*)—APPEAL—JURISDICTION—CERTIORARI.

An appeal to the superior court will not lie from a judgment of a justice's court establishing copies of lost office papers, notwithstanding the papers compose a part of a record in a suit involving a claim above $50; but certiorari is the remedy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 467-476, 762-767; Dec. Dig. §§ 141, 196.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

2. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 141*)—APPEAL—JURISDICTIONAL AMOUNT.

The question whether the amount is involved sufficient to give jurisdiction on appeal from a justice's judgment must be determined by the summons and the cause of action thereto attached.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 467-476; Dec. Dig. § 141.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; W. D. Ellis, Judge.

Motion before a justice of the peace by Charlie Johnson and others against E. J. Humphrey, administratrix, to establish copies of lost papers. Judgment for movant, and respondents appealed to the superior court, and, from a refusal of the superior court to dismiss the appeal, the movant by cross-bill of exceptions brings the question to the Court of Appeals. Judgment on cross-bill of exceptions reversed, and main bill dismissed.

Lavender R. Ray, of Atlanta, for plaintiff error. Simmons & Simmons and O. L. Pettigrew, all of Atlanta, for defendants in error.

HILL, C. J. A motion was made in writing by Charlie Johnson before A. A. Jones, a justice of the peace in and for the 722d district G. M., Fulton county, Ga., at the August term, 1911, of the justice's court, to establish alleged lost papers, to wit: A promissory note, payable to one W. A. Smith, for the principal sum of $100, with a credit of $55 thereon, signed by W. P. Humphrey; an original summons, and entry of service thereon, directed to E. J. Humphrey, as administratrix of the estate of W. P. Humphrey, deceased; affidavit in forma pauperis, filed on appeal by the defendant from the judgment of the justice of the peace; verdict of the jury on appeal, and judgment of the justice entered upon said verdict—which were claimed by the movant to be parts of the record in a prior case disposed of by a former justice in and for the same district in the year 1897. It was prayed that the copy judgment when established be amended nunc pro tunc, so that the judgment should be against E. J. Humphrey, as administratrix of the estate of W. P. Humphrey, and not against her individually. The right to file the motion to have the papers established was based by the movant upon the ground that they pertained to the muniments of title to a certain lot of land, which title he was defending in a suit in the superior court of Fulton county, filed by the heirs at law of the maker of the note. Copies of the movant's petition, attached to a summons of the justice of the peace, were served upon the administratrix of W. P. Humphrey, deceased, and the heirs at law of W. P. Humphrey, calling upon them to show cause why the prayers of the petitioner should not be granted and the papers established and the corrections nunc pro tunc made. The administratrix and the heirs at law responded to the rule and resisted the establishment of the papers upon the ground, among others, that there never were such original papers, and resisted the amendment nunc pro tunc upon the ground that, if there ever were such original papers, the proceedings were against the administratrix individually, as the docket of the justice of the peace showed, and not against her as administratrix of the estate of W. P. Humphrey, deceased. Upon the trial of the issue thus raised, the justice of the peace found for the movant, establishing the papers, and entered nunc pro tunc corrections on the judgment, making it a judgment against E. J. Humphrey as administratrix of the estate of W. P. Humphrey instead of against her individually. The respondents appealed to a jury in the superior court, and in that court the movant made a motion to dismiss the appeal upon the ground that the superior court was without jurisdiction on appeal but that certiorari was the proper method of bringing the proceeding before the superior court for review. The court overruled the motion to dismiss, and the movant excepted pendente lite and by cross-bill of exceptions brings the question to the Court of Appeals for adjudication. The decision that we have reached in the consideration of the question raised in the cross-bill of exceptions leaves nothing remaining to be considered by this court; hence the brief statement of the facts as set forth in the opinion is all that is necessary to an understanding of the case as decided by this court.

[1] The right of appeal in any case is founded upon express legislative enactment. 2 Cyc. 507; Hendrix v. Mason, 70 Ga. 523; Cunningham v. U. S. Loan Co., 109 Ga. 616, 619, 34 S. E. 1024; Fontano v. Moxley, 121 Ga. 46, 48, 48 S. E. 707; De Lamar v. Dollar, 128 Ga. 57, 66, 57 S. E. 85; Alabama Ry. Co. v. Ventress, 149 Ala. 658, 659, 42 South. 1017. The constitutional provision allowing an appeal to a jury in the superior court, under such regulations as should be prescribed by law, did not become operative until legislative action prescribing regulations. "The appellate jurisdiction of the superior court must be exercised, and can only be exercised, in such cases as are provided by law." De Lamar v. Dollar, supra. Hence, unless provision for appeal to a jury in the superior court is contained in the Code in the class of cases under consideration, no appeal can lie, but some other remedy must be invoked, to review the judgment of the lower court. True, the Constitution provides as to cases in justice's courts that "in all cases there may be an appeal to a jury in said court or an appeal to the superior court under such regulations as may be prescribed by law" (Civil Code, § 6524); yet, as we have seen in the Case of Hendrix v. Mason, supra, this provision of the Constitution is not self-executing, and, until these regulations are prescribed by the Legislature, no appeal will lie, and, of course, then will lie only when the regulating statute has been compiled with.

Section 4742 of the Civil Code provides that: "Where the sum claimed exceeds fifty dollars, the law of appeals from the justice court to the superior court shall be the same as contained in this Code." Section 4738 provides: "Either party being dissatisfied with the judgment of the justice of the peace or notary public, and upon all confessions of judgment, provided the amount claimed in said suit is over fifty dollars, may, as a matter of right, enter an appeal from said judgment, within four days (exclusive of Sundays) after the rendition of such judgment, under the same rules, regulations, restrictions, and liabilities as are provided on the subject of appeals." Section 4998 says: "In all civil cases tried and determined by a county judge, or a justice of the peace, or a notary public who is ex officio a justice of the peace, and on all confessions of judgments before either of said officers, where the sum or property claimed is more than fifty dollars, either party may, as a matter of right, enter an appeal to the superior court."

From a reading of the foregoing sections it will be seen that, to authorize an appeal from the judgment of a justice of the peace to the superior court, an essential requisite is that the sum or property claimed in the case shall be for an amount above $50. See, also, Toole v. Edmondson, 104 Ga. 776, 783, 31 S. E. 25, where Justice Cobb laid down rules regulating the right of appeal and certiorari.

[2] In a justice's court this question of the amount involved in a suit, and the nature and character of a suit, must be determined by the summons and the cause of action thereto attached. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Martin, 75 Ga. 570; Bell v. Davis, 93 Ga. 233, 18 S. E. 647, and cases cited. Hence, if no amount is claimed (as appears from the summons and the petition thereto attached in the present case), or, if claimed, is under $50, no appeal will lie to the superior court. The summons in the present case directs that the defendants "show cause, if any they have, why the prayers of the foregoing and attached petition should not be granted." The prayers of the petition (as set forth in the statement of facts in this opinion) are for the establishment of copies of certain named papers and for the amendment nunc pro tunc of one of them.

It is contended, however, that as the copy of the judgment which the petition seeks to establish shows that the judgment is for $45 principal, $0.36 interest, and $4.50 attorney's fees, aggregating $58.86, the present proceeding is a claim involving an amount above $50, and therefore an appeal to the superior court will lie. This was a proceeding under section 5312 of the Civil Code (Eagle Mfg. Co. v. Bradford, 57 Ga. 249; Bell v. Bowdoin, 109 Ga. 209, 34 S. E. 339), except that notice was given to the adverse parties to the suit pending in the superior court—a method of procedure approved by the Supreme Court in the case of Cleghorn v. Johnson, 69 Ga. 369, 372. See, also, Wimberly v.

Mansfield, 70 Ga. 783, 785, Cosnahan v. Rowland, 99 Ga. 285, 25 S. E. 647, Selph v. Selph, 136 Ga. 740, 72 S. E. 81, where the copies which the movants sought to establish were to be used in separate actions then pending. The purpose of this proceeding was to establish copies of office papers in a former suit (Civil Code, § 5313) to be used by the movant in a case pending in the superior court. Only in cases of this character, or where it is sought to establish the copies sought for the purpose of completing the records on file, will a court establish copies of papers belonging to a case which has been disposed of. If it were not for the pending suit filed in the superior court by the heirs at law of W. P. Humphrey against the movant, this proceeding to establish copies would not have been instituted. The mere fact that the face of the judgment, a copy of which it is sought to establish, sets forth items aggregating an amount above $50 does not alter the nature and character of the proceeding. These are allegations of description and not of jurisdiction. The several items appearing on the face of a judgment are marks of identity of the judgment, without which a description would be difficult and merely general, for aside from the amounts recovered in a judgment especially where the terms "defendant" and "plaintiff" are used, there remains no mark of identity differentiating it from other documents of like character; the formalities of judgments being common to all. The payment of $58.86 to the parties to whom the summons was directed would not answer the demand of the summons; nor would the payment of any other sum do so. The loss of the papers is the complaint, and the establishment of copies of the same, as prayed for in the petition and referred to in the summons, is the only remedy that will meet this demand. The proceeding being such as does not involve a claim for a sum or property above $50, an appeal to the superior court from the judgment of the justice of the peace is not allowable. Therefore the motion to dismiss the appeal should have been sustained. There is, however, provided in the Code a method of review in the superior court of judgments of justices of the peace and other inferior judicatories; and that is by certiorari. See sections 6514, 4748, 4849 (4), 5180.

Judgment on cross-bill of exceptions reversed; main bill dismissed.

C. L. HARDWICK & CO. v. CASH et al.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 26, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EXECUTION (§ 2*) — ASSIGNMENT BY SHERIFF—VALIDITY.

A sheriff, who has in his hands, for the purpose of making money thereon, an execution issued upon a judgment rendered by a court, has no authority, upon receiving the amount of the execution from a third person, to transfer the execution to him, so as to enable him to claim thereunder the proceeds of the sale of the property of the defendant in execution, made under the levy of an execution issued upon a prior judgment obtained against him. See Civ. Code 1910, § 5969.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. § 2; Dec. Dig. § 2.*]

2. EXECUTION (§ 2*)—ASSIGNMENT BY SHERIFF—VALIDITY.

Accordingly, where a sheriff had in his hands money arising from the sale of personal property sold by virtue of an attachment levied thereon, and a rule was brought against him by a third person, claiming the money as the transferee under an execution older than the attachment, and on the trial it appeared that the third person, claiming the money as transferee, paid to the sheriff the amount due on the prior execution, and had the sheriff transfer it to him, without the authority of the plaintiff in execution, or of any one authorized by such plaintiff, and the transfer was not ratified by the plaintiff in execution, this amounted to a settlement of the execution, and did not transfer it to the third person.

(a) Without express authority, a sheriff cannot transfer a fi. fa. in his hands for collection.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. § 2; Dec. Dig. § 2.*]

3. VERDICT AND DENIAL OF NEW TRIAL APPROVED.

The undisputed evidence in the case, and the application of the legal principles above announced, demanded a verdict in behalf of the plaintiffs in attachment, and the court erred in refusing a new trial.

4. MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

It is unnecessary to decide the other questions made in the motion for a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Whitfield County: A. W. Fite, Judge.

On a rule against the sheriff to distribute money arising from sale of personal property of Mrs. Mary Evans under an attachment in favor of C. L. Hardwick & Co., J. M. Cash claimed as transferee of an execution in favor of the William Barr Dry Goods Company against a portion of the money. Judgment for Cash, and Hardwick & Co. bring error. Reversed.

A rule was brought against the sheriff to distribute money in his hands arising from the sale of certain personal property of Mrs. Mary Evans under an attachment in favor of Hardwick & Co., J. M. Cash claiming to be the transferee of an execution in favor of William Barr Dry Goods Company against a portion of the money in the hands of the sheriff. Hardwick's attachment issued on June 9, 1908, and was levied on June 10, 1908. The judgment in favor of William Barr Dry Goods Company was obtained on November 21, 1907, and execution issued on December 2, 1907. There is no evidence in the record that the execution was ever entered upon the general execution docket, except the statement by the attorney for Hardwick that the docket showed it had been entered, but no date is given of this entry. The following receipts appeared upon the execution:

"$105.00. Received of J. H. Gilbert, sheriff, one hundred and five dollars, full balance, principal and interest, due on the within fi. fa., this Feb. 5, 1909. J. M. Rudolph, Plaintiff's Attorney."

"Georgia, Whitfield County. Received from J. M. Cash the sum of $153.31, being the remainder due and payment in full of all principal, interest, costs, inclusive of $35.00 paid to F. K. McCutchen for storage; and the within fi. fa. transferred to said J. M. Cash so far as the office of sheriff authorizes me to transfer same, together with all rights thereunder vested in the original plaintiffs, this being intended to operate as a full receipt in settlement of the within fi. fa. This February 2, 1909. J. H. Gilbert, Sheriff."

Cash claimed the fund in the hands of the sheriff by virtue of the above transfer to him. Upon the issue formed upon the rule the jury found in favor of Cash, transferee of the fi. fa. A motion for a new trial was made by Hardwick & Co., which being overruled they excepted.

F. K. McCutchen and Maddox, McCamy & Shumate, all of Dalton, for plaintiffs in error. J. M. Rudolph, of Dalton, for defendants in error.

HILL, J. Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

HALL et al. v. MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF CALHOUN.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 26, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§§ 271, 277*)—POWERS—WATERWORKS SYSTEM.

The provisions in the charter of the town of Calhoun (Acts 1895, p. 145), that the municipality shall have perpetual succession, shall have power and authority to make, ordain, and establish, from time to time, such by-laws, ordinances, resolutions, rules, and regulations as shall appear to them to be necessary and proper for good government, security, welfare, and interest of the said town of Calhoun and the inhabitants thereof, and for preserving the health, morals, peace, and good order of the same, not in conflict with the Constitution and laws of this state, and shall have power and authority in and by said corporate name to contract and to be contracted with, to sue and be sued, to plead and be impleaded in any of the courts of this state, to have and use a common seal, to hold all property real and personal, now belonging to said town, for the purpose and interest for which the same was granted or dedicated, to acquire by gift or purchase such real or personal property as may hereafter be deemed necessary and proper for corporate purposes, and to use, manage, improve, sell, convey, rent, or lease any or all of said property as may be deemed advisable for the corporate interest, were sufficient to authorize the municipality to establish and construct a system of waterworks. Mayor, etc., of Rome v. Cabot, 28 Ga. 50; Heilbron v. Mayor, etc., of Cuthbert, 96 Ga. 312, 23 S. E. 206.

(a) The municipality having charter power to establish and construct a system of waterworks, where necessary to go beyond the corporate limits to obtain its supply of water, it was not ultra vires of the corporation to enter into the contract mentioned in the statement of facts. Langley v. City Council of Augusta, 118 Ga. 590, 45 S. E. 486, 98 Am. St. Rep. 133. See, also, City of Quitman v. Jelks & McLeod, 139 Ga. 238, 77 S. E. 76.

(b) The ruling in Lloyd v. Columbus, 90 Ga. 20, 15 S. E. 818, which was criticised and doubted in Langley v. Augusta, supra, will not be extended.

(c) It follows that the contract between Hall and the municipality could not be canceled on the ground that it was ultra vires of the corporation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 726, 732; Dec. Dig. §§ 271, 277.*]

2. WATERS AND WATER COURSES (§ 190*)—MUNICIPAL WATER SUPPLY — CONTRACT — CONSIDERATION.

The contract was not subject to be canceled on the ground that it was void for the want of consideration. It recited a consideration. Nathans v. Arkwright, 66 Ga. 179; Martin v. White, 115 Ga. 806, 42 S. E. 279. And the grantor received water from the municipality, and the latter expended money in making water connections for the grantor in accordance with the terms of the contract. Atlanta & West Point Railroad Co. v. Camp, 130 Ga. 1, 60 S. E. 177, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 594, 124 Am. St. Rep. 151, 14 Ann. Cas. 439.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Waters and Water Courses, Cent. Dig. § 268; Dec. Dig. § 190.*]

3. WATERS AND WATER COURSES (§ 190*)—MUNICIPAL WATER SUPPLY — CONTRACT — REASONABLE USE OF WATER.

Properly construed, the municipality acquired by the contract the right to the reasonable use of the water, notwithstanding such use might operate to the detriment of the "fish pond."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Waters and Water Courses, Cent. Dig. § 268; Dec. Dig. § 190.*]

4. WATERS AND WATER COURSES (§ 190*)—MUNICIPAL WATER SUPPLY — CONTRACT — RIGHT TO PRIVATE USE—ASSIGNMENT.

The right of the grantor to use water supplied by the municipality free of charge by express terms of the contract was not assignable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Waters and Water Courses, Cent. Dig. § 268; Dec. Dig. § 190.*]

5. PRIOR DECISIONS—DISTINGUISHMENTS.

The case differs from that of Horkan v. City of Moultrie, 136 Ga. 561, 71 S. E. 785, where an effort was made to compel a city to furnish water "free of charge" for an indefinite time under an agreement by the municipal council for that purpose, though made for a consideration; and from Tarver v. Mayor, etc., of Dalton, 134 Ga. 462, 67 S. E. 929, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 183, 20 Ann. Cas. 281, where a contract by a municipal corporation not to collect taxes on certain property in excess of a specified amount was involved.

6. MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

There was no error in overruling the plaintiff's motion for new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Gordon County; A. W. Fite, Judge.

Action by G. A. Hall and others against the Mayor and Council of Calhoun. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiffs bring error. Affirmed.

H. L. Hall owned a spring near the town of Calhoun, Ga. The municipal authorities of Calhoun decided to establish a system of waterworks, to be supplied in part with water from the spring. The parties mentioned on June 13, 1898, entered into and signed a written contract under seal, witnessed as a deed, which, after making in substance the above recitals, set forth the following in effect: The municipality should pay for the plumbing necessary to convey the water from the main nearest Hall's residence into any room of his house or place on his lot designated by him, with the right to him at his own expense to make other connections, not exceeding four, for the purpose of furnishing water on his own premises: the town to allow him, without any right of alienation, to use the town water free of charge so long as the waterworks should be maintained and operated, and its water supply obtained from the spring. In consideration of such agreement by the town, and $10 in hand paid, the receipt of which was acknowledged, Hall conveyed to the town the right "to use water for the purpose of supplying the suction basin constructed, or to be constructed, on the "Pauper Farm" premises near thereto of the spring known as "Hall's Fish Pond Spring," located about one mile north or northeast of the courthouse in Calhoun, and other springs on his said premises near to and west of the aforesaid "Pond Spring," together with privileges and rights to drain, improve, and lay pipes to the same through his premises in such way as to safely, cheaply, conveniently, and advantageously use and convey water from said springs to said suction basin; provided, however, that this utilization or use of the water from the "Pond Spring" shall be done without impairments or damage other than by running pipe under or through said dam, if pond water be used, with valves to prevent flow, except when required for filling of the suction basin otherwise, and with the spring or springs on premises of Hall, from which it may be desirable to use water. The municipal authorities "are hereby authorized to make such improvements as they shall deem necessary or essential to the full, complete, thorough, and healthful use and enjoyment of water therefrom to and for the purpose of supplying the town of Calhoun and the inhabitants thereof with water, through the system of waterworks being established and constructed." After describing what the grantor undertook to convey, the contract proceeded thus: "To have and to hold the said rights and privileges and uses, etc., in and to the water, the spring, ways for the pipe drainage, and improvements thereof [unto] the said parties of the first part, their successors and assigns, to and for the uses and purposes aforesaid, and for the consideration aforesaid, without reservation by the said party of the second part, his heirs or assigns, of any rights by alienation, by adulteration, or any system of drainage, or in any other way, to prevent the full and free use and enjoyment of the water from the said springs, as herein described and contemplated, so long as said system of water-works is maintained. And said parties of the first part hereby promise and agree to perform, stand by, and abide the obligations herein imposed and assumed by them."

After the town had constructed its water-works, connected H. L. Hall's residence therewith, and furnished water to him under the contract for a number of years, he sold the land which embraced the spring and fish pond (which derived its supply of water from the spring) to G. A. Hall and J. A. Hall. Subsequently, in August, 1911, the purchasers instituted suit against the town to cancel the contract, and enjoin diversion of the spring water from the fish pond, to the detriment of the latter, and from using certain pipes which the town had laid through plaintiff's lands, and to compel the town to remove its property from the land. Plaintiffs, being dissatisfied with the result, made a motion for new trial, on the general grounds, and excepted to the judgment overruling the motion.

T. W. Skelley, of Calhoun, and Maddox, McCamy & Shumata, of Dalton, for plaintiffs in error. Neel & Neel, of Cartersville, J. G. B. Erwin, and O. N. Starr, both of Calhoun, for defendants in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

STARK v. CHAMBERS.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 26, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. WILLS (§ 689*)—TESTAMENTARY POWER—CREATION.

Earl Moats died in 1891, leaving a will. By item 1 he directed that all his just debts be paid, and by item 5 he appointed his wife executrix. The other provisions of the will were as follows: "Item 2. I give, bequeath, and devise to my wife, Vina Moats, all of my estate both real and personal, for her support and control during her lifetime. Item 3. After the death of my wife, Vina Moats, I want what property is left, real or personal, or both, divided or sold, and the money equally divided among my children after paying Abner Griffin, my stepson, one hundred dollars. Item 4. I direct and will that after my death that my said wife, Vina Moats, take charge of all the property mentioned in this my last will and testament, without any appraisement, and use it as she needs for her comfort and support." Held, that the will conferred upon the widow of the testator, during her life, power to convey in fee any part of the estate, where necessary for her support; and where, in order to obtain a support, she sold the land for its reasonable value, and executed to the purchaser a deed conveying the land in fee simple under such power, the purchaser was not subject to be evicted after her death by the testator's administrator de bonis non cum testamento annexo. The language, "for her support and control during her lifetime," as employed in item 2, and "what property is left, real or personal, or both," as employed in item 3, and "use it as she needs for her comfort and support," as employed in item 4, indicates the intent of the testator to confer an absolute power of sale, where necessary for her support, on the wife so long as she lived, and to exclude the children from any part of the property so sold, leaving that part of the testator's estate which might remain at the death of the widow to be divided among the children. Relatively to the power of sale, item 3 expressly put real and personal property on the same footing. The direction in item 4 that the widow should take all of the property "without any appraisement, and use it as she needs for her comfort and support," was not repugnant to the power of sale, where necessary for her support, and did not restrict it. Mayo v. Harrison, 124 Ga. 737, 68 S. E. 497; Nort v. Healey, 136 Ga. 287, 71 S. E. 471.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 1650, 1651; Dec. Dig. § 689.*]

2. WILLS (§ 689*)—CONSTRUCTION.

Where the widow of the testator sold a part of the land mentioned in the will, in order to obtain money necessary for her support, and made a conveyance thereof in fee simple, with warranty of title, and evidence was introduced tending to show that the price paid was its fair market value, and that the widow, owing to age and physical infirmity, was unable to support herself, and the sale was made to obtain money for her support, it was not error as against the plaintiff for the judge to charge, in effect, that if the jury believed from the evidence that on account of her condition in life, considering her age and other things appearing from the evidence, it was absolutely necessary to sell some of the property in order to obtain means of a livelihood, and that acting under authority of the will the widow made the deed for the purpose of procuring a livelihood, and received a reasonable and fair consideration for the property, it would be their duty to find for the defendant. Mayo v. Harrison, supra.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 1650, 1651; Dec. Dig. § 689.*]

3. VERDICT AND DENIAL OF NEW TRIAL SUSTAINED.

The evidence was sufficient to support the verdict, and there was no error in refusing a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Banks County; C. H. Brand, Judge.

Action by W. W. Stark, administrator, against J. R. Chambers. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

In an action of complaint for land by W. W. Stark, as administrator cum testamento annexo, against J. R. Chambers, who claimed under a deed from the widow of the testator, the main issue was whether the deed operated to convey to the defendant the absolute fee-simple estate, or merely an estate for the life of the widow. The suit was instituted shortly after the death of the widow. Her power to make the deed depended on the will of the testator, which was as set forth in the headnotes. In some particulars the evidence was conflicting, but there was sufficient to show the following: The testator was prosperous, and died owning a farm, on which he resided, equipped with live stock and farming implements, and owing only a few debts, which were paid during the year in which he died. There were several children, besides the widow, who for a time continued to live on the farm; but they were not of frugal habits, and the widow found it necessary to encroach upon the corpus of the estate. This continued, and in order to get money with which to pay off a judgment for "supplies and rations" furnished to the widow after the death of the testator, and to obtain money on which to live, the widow sold to the defendant at its reasonable value the part of the farm land in dispute. The land would have rented for enough to support the widow, but it was never rented. At the time of the sale the widow was old, nearly blind, and unable to support herself. On the trial the jury returned a verdict for the defendant.

The plaintiff moved for a new trial on the general grounds, and further complained of the following charge to the jury: "If you should believe from the evidence that on account of her condition in life at that time, and the surrounding circumstances, her age and other things, as appears from the facts and circumstances in the case, that it was absolutely necessary to sell some of this property in order to procure means of a livelihood, and that acting under the authority of that will, by virtue of the provisions of that will, she (Vina Moats) made this deed for that purpose, and received reasonable and fair consideration for her property (the deed referred to being the deed from Vina Moats to J. R. Chambers, in the evidence, to the land sued for), then it would be your duty to find in favor of Mr. Chambers." The criticism upon the charge was that it amounted to a holding that the widow was authorized to convey the fee, whereas the will gave her no more than a life estate, and did not authorize her to sell the fee, even if necessary to her support. The motion for new trial was overruled, and the plaintiff excepted.

H. H. Perry, of Gainesville, for plaintiff in error. J. J. Kimsey, of Cornelia, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

SPRATLING v. WESTBROOK.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 29, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CORPORATIONS (§ 265*)—ACTIONS AGAINST STOCKHOLDERS—JOINDER OF PARTIES DEFENDANT.

A trustee in bankruptcy of an insolvent corporation may, in one equitable action, recover from any number of the stockholders of the corporation their unpaid stock subscriptions.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1101-1125, 2275; Dec. Dig. § 265.*]

2. CORPORATIONS (§ 228*)—STOCKHOLDERS—LIABILITY FOR CORPORATE DEBTS—UNPAID SUBSCRIPTIONS—CONDITIONAL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The petition set forth a cause of action against the demurrant; and his special contract for stock subscription, as therein set forth, was not of such conditional character or on such special terms as would prevent a recovery thereon by the trustee in bankruptcy of the insolvent corporation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 874, 878; Dec. Dig. § 228.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; Geo. L. Bell, Judge.

Suit by J. F. Westbrook, trustee in bankruptcy, against F. J. Spratling and others. Judgment for the plaintiff, and defendant F. J. Spratling brings error. Affirmed.

Daley & Chambers, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Anderson, Felder, Rountree & Wilson, Brown & Randolph, and W. S. Dillon, all of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

FISH, O. J. Westbrook, as trustee in bankruptcy of the Consolidated Motor Car Company, an insolvent corporation, brought an equitable petition against Spratling and a number of others to recover the alleged unpaid stock subscriptions of the corporation. So much of the petition as is necessary for consideration in disposing of the questions made in the record is in substance as follows: Each of the defendants is indebted to the corporation for unpaid stock subscription in the amount charged against him. Such indebtedness of all the defendants, except Spratling and one other, is represented by ordinary promissory notes given to the corporation for the amount of stock subscribed; a copy of one of such notes being attached as an exhibit to the petition. Spratling subscribed for 50 shares of the stock, of the par value of $100 per share, none of which has been paid (his contract being as set forth in three exhibits, to which special attention will be directed in this opinion). Claims of creditors have been allowed and proved in the court of bankruptcy to an amount larger than the sum of all of the unpaid subscriptions due by the defendants; and credit was extended to the corporation by its creditors "on the faith of said subscriptions being valid and binding." There was a prayer for the appointment of an auditor to hear and determine the questions of law and fact pertaining to the controversy, and that a recovery be had against each of the defendants for the balance due on his subscription to stock, with interest thereon. Spratling demurred to the petition generally, and because his contract, as appeared from the petition and exhibits, was a conditional one, and he was not bound therein, as it did not appear that the corporation had performed its part of the contract. He further demurred specially on the grounds that there was a misjoinder of causes of action and of parties defendant. The demurrers were overruled, and he accepted.

[1] 1. We will first dispose of the special demurrer; that is, that there was a misjoinder of causes of action and of defendants. Civil Code, § 2251 declares: "In all suits against the members of a private association, joint-stock company, or the members of existing or dissolved corporations, to recover a debt due by the association, company, or corporation, of which they are or have been members, or for the appropriation of money or funds in their hands to the payment of such debt, the plaintiff or complainant in such suit may institute the same, and proceed to judgment therein against all or any one or more of the members of such association, company, or corporation, or any other person liable, and recover of the member or members sued the amount of unpaid stock in his hands, or other indebtedness of each member or members: Provided, that same does not exceed the amount of the plaintiff's debt against such association, company, or corporation; and if it exceed such debt, then so much only as will be sufficient to satisfy such debt." This section is in the same language as that of Code 1863, § 3279, which was a codification of the act of 1856 (Acts 1855-56, p. 220), and which was incorporated in all subsequent Codes. In Dalton & Morganton R. Co. v. McDaniel, 56 Ga. 191, the action was brought by McDaniel in behalf of himself and many others, who were duly made parties complainant, as creditors of the Dalton & Morganton Railroad Company, to compel Carter and a great many others, amounting to several hundred stockholders of the company, to pay in a sufficient amount of the stock subscribed for by them to satisfy certain judgments and debts which the company owed complainants. The bill was demurred to on the grounds, among others, that it was improperly brought against defendants jointly, and that it was multifarious. It was held that the demurrers were not meritorious, and in support of the ruling Code 1873, § 3367, was cited; the language of such section being the same as that of Code 1863, § 3279, and which is now embodied in Civil Code 1910, § 2251. There was also cited, among other cases, Hightower v. Thornton, 8 Ga. 486, 52 Am. Dec. 412, and Stinson v. Williams, 35 Ga. 171. The ruling made in Dalton, etc., R. Co. v. McDaniel, supra, has been recognized or followed in a number of subsequent decisions rendered by this court. See Brobston v. Downing, 95 Ga. 505, 22 S. E. 277; Boyd v. Robinson, 104 Ga. 793 (3), 794, 31 S. E. 29; Moore v. Ripley, 106 Ga. 556 (3), 557, 32 S. E. 647; Wilkinson v. Bertock, 111 Ga. 187 (2), 190, 36 S. E. 623; Harrell v. Blount, 112 Ga. 711 (4), 717, 33 S. E. 56; Morgan v. Giblan, 115 Ga. 145, 41 S. E. 495; Commercial Bank of Augusta v. Warthen, 119 Ga. 990 (2, 3), 993, 47 S. E. 536; Allen v. Grant, 122 Ga. 552, 50 S. E. 494. The action was properly brought by the trustee in bankruptcy. Morgan v. Giblan and Commercial Bank of Augusta v. Warthen, supra. It follows that the court did not err in overruling the special demurrers.

[2] 2. Nor do we think there was any merit in the demurrer that the petition set forth no cause of action, and that the contract of Spratling, as set forth in the exhibits, was a conditional one, and that there was no obligation on the part of Spratling to perform it, where it appeared that the corporation had not performed its obligation under such contract. The doctrine is well settled in this state that all the property and assets of an insolvent corporation constitutes a fund, first, for the payment of its debts, and then for equal distribution among its stockholders. Civil Code, § 2245, declares this to be true in the case of the dissolution of a corporation, and the cases cited in the first division of this opinion apply the same rule in reference to insolvent corporations. It is everywhere well recognized that unpaid subscriptions to the capital stock of a corporation constitute part of its assets. Capital stock is largely the basis of the credit of the corporation, and persons dealing with the corporation have the right to look to the authorized capital stock as a fund for the payment of their debts. 3 Clark & Marshall on Private Corporations, § 792. See Hightower v. Thornton, Stinson v. Williams, Dalton, etc., R. Co. v. McDaniel, and Allen v. Grant, supra. The petition alleged that Spratling had subscribed for 50 shares of the capital stock of the Consolidated Motor Car Company, of which the plaintiff was the trustee in bankruptcy, at the price of $100 per share; that he had paid no part of his subscription, and was indebted to such company in the sum of $5,000; and that it was necessary to collect the whole of this subscription in order to pay the outstanding debts of the corporation. This allegation, if it stood alone, would, of course, have set out a cause of action.

It is contended, however, that the contract of Spratling, as shown by the exhibits attached to the petition, was a conditional subscription, and that the corporation had never complied with the condition assumed by it in the contract, and therefore Spratling was not liable. The demurrer stated in general terms that the contract was a conditional one, and it does not appear from the demurrer, or from the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error, what the conditions were. From the exhibits attached to the petition it appears that the contract between the corporation and Spratling, entered into November 8, 1910, and to become effective January 1, 1911, was to the following effect: Spratling, "being elected president of and by" the corporation at a salary of $2,400 a year, $200 of which were to be paid monthly during the continuance of the contract, agreed to subscribe for 50 shares of the capital stock of the corporation, of the par value of $100, which shares were to be paid for as follows: A certificate for 25 shares of such stock was to be issued to Spratling, for which he was to give his note for $2,500, due six months after date. Upon the maturity of the note he was to pay $200, "same being part of the salary earned by him as president of said company, and also all dividends that may be earned by his said stock, and as much more as possible"; the corporation agreeing to renew the note, upon its maturity, for six months, "and to continue to make such renewals on the same terms every 6 months until said notes are fully paid up. The $2,500 remainder of said stock to be issued as per applications secured by party of the second part [Spratling] from other parties, for which, as secured, a note or notes are to be given by said second party, due in 12 months from date, and on which as same mature the notes of such applicant stockholders as are secured by said second party are to be applied as payments as same are paid, until said amount is fully paid up." It was further agreed that the contract might be terminated by either party to it giving the other 30 days' notice, and by restoring the other party, "so far as the financial part of this contract is concerned, to the position that they were in prior to the making of the same." There also appeared as an exhibit a copy of a note of date November 9, 1910, given by Spratling to the corporation, for $2,500, due 14 months after date, with interest from date at 7 per cent. per annum.

A copy of the following agreement was also attached as an exhibit to the petition: "January 6, 1911.

"Consolidated Motor Car Co., Inc., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: Upon the statement made me by Mr. Frank M. Myers, Jr., your vice president and general manager, who went thoroughly into the present financial conditions of your company, I agreed with him you could not now afford to pay me the $200 per month beginning January 1st, as my contract with you called for. But, if agreeable to you, I am willing to accept the presidency of your company, giving you what time I can spare, at $100 per month, and with the assistance of Mr. W. T. Dregger agree to sell $2,500.00 worth of stock by July 1st, the sale of which stock to be credited on my note given you November 8th, last, as spoken of in our contract of that date. Each sale as made to be credited on said note until same is paid in full: Provided that you agree to carry out your contract with me made November 8th, last, as soon as you raise enough money from the sale of stock to carry sufficient stock of cars and accessories to carry on the business. It is to be further understood and agreed that the original contract made November 8, 1910, is only to be annulled as is provided herein, and that same is to be carried out as originally set forth, except in so far as it is herein modified. Yours very truly, F. J. Spratling.

"Accepted: Consolidated Motor Car Co., F. M. Myers, Jr., Vice Pres. & Gen. Mgr."

It does not appear that Spratling even gave his note for the $2,500, as the price of the 25 shares for which a certificate was to be issued to him, which note was to be payable 6 months after date, nor does it clearly appear for what he gave the note dated November 9, 1910, and due 14 months after date. Spratling's contract, as set forth in the exhibits, was one on special terms. The agreement of the corporation to elect Spratling as its president and to continue him as such until his payment of $200 at the end of each 6 months out of his salary should satisfy or extinguish the price—$2,500—for the 25 shares of stock, for which a certificate should be issued to him, and the peculiar arrangement as to the disposition of and as to the payment for the other 25 shares, for which no certificate was to be issued to him, and the further agreement that the whole contract might be terminated by either party to it giving 30 days' notice, constituted a special agreement for the sale of the 50 shares of stock to Spratling, upon special terms. Such an agreement was unfair to other subscribers and to the creditors of the corporation, who had a right to assume that Spratling was a bona fide subscriber, unconditionally and without special terms, for 50 shares of stock; and whatever right he may have had, in an action by the corporation against him for his subscription, to set up his special contract as a defense, he could not do this in the equitable action brought by the trustee in bankruptcy of the corporation against him for the benefit of its creditors. See Fouche v. Merchants' National Bank of Rome, 110 Ga. 827, 841, 36 S. E. 256, where the following cases are cited: Camden v. Stuart, 144 U. S. 104, 12 Sup. Ct. 585, 36 L. Ed. 863; Potts v. Wallace, 146 U. S. 689, 13 Sup. Ct. 196, 36 L. Ed. 1135; Richardson v. Green, 133 U. S. 30, 10 Sup. Ct. 280, 33 L. Ed. 516.

"In general, a subscription upon special terms is an absolute and unconditional subscription, which makes the subscriber a stockholder, and renders him liable as such, and for the amount of the subscription, as soon as it is accepted, but contains special terms or stipulations. Such a subscription is valid, provided the special terms or stipulations are not such as to constitute a fraud upon the other subscribers or stockholders, or upon the creditors of the corporation, and provided they are not beyond the powers conferred upon the corporation by its charter, nor contrary to law." 2 Clark & Marshall, Priv. Corp. § 465. In a subscription for stock on special terms, performance of the stipulations by the corporation is not a condition precedent to liability on the part of the subscriber, but is an independent or collateral agreement, for a breach of which the corporation will be liable in damages. Id. § 466. "An agreement by which a purchaser of stock may at his option, at the end of a certain time, return the stock and receive back the price, is in the nature of a conditional sale, with an option to the purchaser to rescind; and if the rights of creditors are not involved, it is valid." Id. § 467a. "A corporation has no authority to accept subscriptions upon special terms, where the terms are such as to constitute a [legal] fraud upon the other subscribers, or upon persons who may become creditors of the corporation in reliance upon a bona fide and regular subscription of the authorized capital stock. In such a case, however, the subscription is not void. [Such] stipulations are void, and the subscriber is liable on his subscription as if no such stipulations had been inserted. It has been held, therefore, in many cases, that any secret agreement between a subscriber for stock in a corporation and the corporation or its agents or promoters, by which he is allowed to subscribe upon different terms than other subscribers, since it is a fraud upon the latter, and any secret agreement by which he is to be released in whole or in part from liability on his subscription, since it is a fraud both upon the other subscribers and upon persons who afterwards become creditors of the corporation, is void, and the subscription may be enforced by the corporation, or by or for the benefit of creditors, as if no such agreement had been made." Id. § 467c.

The mere fact that no certificate was to be issued to Sprattling for 25 shares of the stock for which he subscribed did not prevent him from being a stockholder of the whole 50 shares, nor relieve him from liability as a stockholder. 2 Clark & Marshall on Private Corp. §§ 378, 462d; 1 Cook on Corp. § 192; 1 Thomp. Corp. § 508. It follows from what has been said, that the judgment of the trial court in overruling the demurrers to the petition must be affirmed.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

STRICKLAND et al. v. LOWRY NAT. BANK.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 2, 1918.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 141*)—NEW NOTE — COLLATERAL.

An owner of land sold it partly for cash and partly for credit, giving to the purchasers a bond for title and taking negotiable notes for the unpaid portion of the purchase money. The vendor for value indorsed one of these notes to a bank, and others to another person, and also executed a conveyance to each indorsee for an undivided interest in the property, in the ratio which the part of the debt transferred to such indorsee bore to the whole. Payments were made on the note indorsed to the bank. About three years after the maturity of the note, the bank took from the makers a new note, due five months after its date, for the balance claimed to be due on the original note, but bearing interest at an increased rate. It recited that it was given for value received, and that the makers "have pledged to the said bank, as collateral security," the original note and "security for the same." Held, that the second note was not a mere agreement collateral to the original note, extending the time for payment and increasing the rate of interest to be borne by it, but by its terms was a new note for the amount remaining due on the first note, bearing interest at the fixed rate, and the first note was to be held as collateral security for the second.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 338, 339, 350-354; Dec. Dig. § 141.*]

2. PLEADING (§ 214*)—DEMURRER—EFFECT AS ADMISSION.

While a demurrer admits facts well pleaded in the petition, where it was alleged by the plaintiff that the second note was collateral to the first, but the copies of the notes attached as exhibits showed on their face that this was not correct, but that the parties agreed that the first note should be held as collateral to the second, on demurrer the contract will be construed in accordance with its terms so appearing, and not in accordance with the interpretation alleged by the pleader.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 525-534; Dec. Dig. § 214.*]

3. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 141*) — RIGHTS OF HOLDER—NEW NOTE—TERMS OF PRIOR NOTE.

Under the facts stated in the first headnote, the bank could not, after the maturity of the second note, bring suit against the makers upon the first note, and, at the same time, supplement its terms by applying to it the increased rate of interest specified in the second note.

(a) It was accordingly error to overrule the demurrer in so far as it set up that the suit upon the first note could not be supplemented by importing into it the increased rate of interest agreed to be paid in the second note.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 338, 339, 350-354; Dec. Dig. § 141.*]

4. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 471*) — PETITION — CONSTRUCTION—NOTICE OF INTENT.

An allegation that the plaintiff had caused to be served upon the defendants a written notice of its intention "to bring this suit to this term of this court and to claim attorney's fees in accordance with the terms of said original note," together with a prayer for the recovery of such attorney's fees, was sufficient to show that the notice (based on section 4252 of the Civil Code of 1910) was a notice of intention to sue on the original note and seek to recover attorney's fees according to its terms, and not to recover such fees under the second note.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 1467-1470; Dec. Dig. § 471.*]

5. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 208*)—MORTGAGES (§§ 412, 427*)—FORECLOSURE — VENDOR'S LIEN—TRANSFEREE.

Section 6037 of the Civil Code of 1910, which provides for the filing of a quitclaim deed and the sale of property under a judgment for purchase money, does not authorize a vendor of land who has taken several notes for the unpaid purchase money thereof to transfer them to different persons and to convey to each of them an undivided interest in the property in proportion to the part of the unpaid purchase money so transferred to him, and thus empower such transferee to obtain judgment, file a deed, and sell such undivided interest in the manner pointed out by the statute (Civil Code 1910, § 6037), or to obtain a general judgment against the purchaser with a special lien upon the undivided interest in the land so conveyed.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

(a) Where land is sold, bond for title given, and notes taken for an unpaid part of the purchase money, the title in the hands of the vendor as a whole stands as a security for the unpaid indebtedness. If the vendor could separate the title into fractional undivided interests and convey them to various transferees of different purchase-money notes, some of which might be paid in whole or in part, while others might remain entirely unpaid, and the transferees could proceed separately to sell the undivided interests conveyed to them as security for the notes transferred to them, danger would arise that the property would not bring its full value if sold piecemeal; and the purchaser would not be subjected to a single sale, which might more than pay the entire balance due, but would be forced to submit to a number of separate and distinct sales of undivided interests.

(b) This danger is well illustrated by the facts of the present case; the property being mill property, and including land, a water power, a mill building, and machinery.

(c) If the transferees of the notes agreed to such conveyances of undivided interests to them respectively, they might not be in a position to complain thereof. But if they did not so agree, and if a conveyance of an undivided interest could be made by the vendor to one creditor, which would authorize him to sell such interest separately, it might affect the security of the holders of other notes. So, also, unless the purchaser agreed to such separate conveyances, or estopped himself from complaining, he could do so.

(d) As a general rule, no decree of foreclosure of a common-law mortgage (where the title was conveyed as security) could be made, unless all the parties entitled to the mortgage money were before the court. In this state there can be but one foreclosure of a mortgage. Whether, under some circumstances, as between the original parties, or as between transferees of purchase-money notes, where the title has been retained by the vendor as security, there may be a right to obtain equitable relief, is not now in question. On this subject, see 27 Cyc. 1504; Civil Code 1910, §§ 3285, 3317; Brown v. Farmer, 94 Ga. 178, 21 S. E. 292; Berrie v. Smith, 97 Ga. 782, 25 S. E. 757; Willingham v. Huguenin, 129 Ga. 835, 840, 60 S. E. 186.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. § 424; Dec. Dig. § 208; **Mortgages*, Cent. Dig. §§ 1185, 1186, 1269, 1272-1287; Dec. Dig. §§ 412, 427.*]

6. DIRECTED VERDICT—ERROR.

It follows, from what is said in the preceding headnotes, that it was error to direct a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the balance of the principal due on the original purchase-money note held by the plaintiff, with interest at the increased rate specified in the second note, and 10 per cent. attorney's fees on the amount of such principal and increased interest, and with a special lien on a seven-tenths undivided interest in the land (that being the undivided interest conveyed by the vendor to the bank when such vendor indorsed one of the purchase-money notes to it).

7. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1078*)—ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR—ABANDONMENT.

The assignments of error which complained of the striking of an amendment to the answer of the defendants, and of certain statements of the trial judge in connection therewith, were not argued in the brief of counsel for plaintiffs in error, and are treated as abandoned. What is held above substantially disposes of the case in so far as the assignments of error were urged.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4256-4261; Dec. Dig. § 1078.*]

Error from Superior Court, Bartow County; A. W. Fite, Judge.

Action by the Lowry National Bank against Albert Strickland and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants bring error. Reversed.

Finley & Hensen, of Cartersville, J. P. Brooke, of Alpharetta, and Geo. F. Gober, of Atlanta, for plaintiffs in error. J. T. Norris, of Cartersville, and J. H. Porter, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

PER CURIAM. Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur, except HILL, J., disqualified.

SETZE v. FIRST NAT. BANK OF PENSACOLA, FLA.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 26, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MORTGAGES (§ 235*)—TRANSFER—INDORSEMENT ON NOTE—FORECLOSURE.

A mortgage was executed conveying certain realty to secure a promissory note, which was payable to S. or order. S. indorsed the note in blank and delivered it to the plaintiff for value. The plaintiff, as holder and transferee of the mortgage note, sought to foreclose it by an equitable petition, and also to obtain a general judgment. A demurrer to the petition was filed upon the ground that it did not appear that the legal title to this mortgage had ever been transferred in writing to the plaintiff by name. Held, that the indorsement by the payee of his name on the back of the mortgage note, for value, conveyed such note, together with the mortgage lien, to such holder thereof, and the transferee can foreclose the same in its own name.

(a) In such a case it is not necessary that the name of the transferee shall be set out in writing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 620, 621; Dec. Dig. § 235.*]

2. MORTGAGES (§ 183*)—FORECLOSURE—ESTOPPEL.

For the reasons set out in the second division of the opinion, the court erred in not sustaining the special demurrer to the petition.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 442-445, 447, 448; Dec. Dig. § 183.*]

3. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 471*)—PETITION—NOTICE.

Where a petition alleges that 10 days' notice of intention to bring suit on a promissory note to a stated term of court, and to enforce the payment of attorney's fees stipulated in the note, has been given the defendant, it is unnecessary to attach to the petition a copy of the notice thus alleged to have been given.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 1467-1470; Dec. Dig. § 471.*]

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes.

Error from Superior Court, Cobb County; N. A. Morris, Judge.

Action by the First National Bank of Pensacola, Fla., against Eliza P. Setze. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed in part, and reversed and remanded in part.

The First National Bank of Pensacola, Fla., brought suit against Eliza P. Setze, alleging that on the 28th day of August, 1908, Mrs. Setze executed a certain mortgage note to C. R. Setze for the sum of $2,500, which was due on the 28th day of August, 1911, together with interest and attorney's fees, etc., and to secure the payment of the note Mrs. Setze conveyed to the payee and his assigns certain described real estate; that on the 6th day of June, 1911, C. R. Setze "transferred and assigned said mortgage note to petitioner for value, as will more fully appear by reference to said copy hereto attached"; and that Mrs. Setze was indebted to the plaintiff in the amount of the note, and refused to pay it. By reference to the attached copy it appears that the name of "C. R. Setze" was merely indorsed on the mortgage note, and no formal transfer or assignment was made. The note contains the recital: "This is a second mortgage on said property, the first being given to the Society of the African Mission of Baltimore City, for $2,200, maturing October 16, 1908, and extended for five years from date of maturity." Notice of intention to bring suit and collect attorney's fees was alleged to have been given to the defendant. The prayer was that the mortgage be declared a lien upon the land for the principal, interest, and attorney's fees; that the mortgage be foreclosed, and the equity of redemption therein be forever barred; that the land be sold to pay the debt sued for, after paying the debt, if any, due the Society of the African Mission of Baltimore City; and that the plaintiff have a general judgment for the principal, interest, and attorney's fees. By amendment the plaintiff alleged that there was no such corporation as the Society of the African Mission of Baltimore City, as set out in defendant's answer; that the defendant had no transactions with that society; that the defendant never gave to the society any mortgage on the property held by the plaintiff as security for the note sued on in this case; and that the same is fictitious and puts a cloud on the title and the mortgage held by the plaintiff, and should be removed in order that the plaintiff may have and maintain its equitable rights. Plaintiff prayed that the alleged cloud be removed, and that it have a lien set up and established in favor of the note and obligation of the defendant here sued on.

The defendant filed a demurrer, in which she urged: (a) That the petition sets forth no ground for equitable relief, and shows that there is an adequate remedy at law.

(b) That the petition is insufficient as to parties plaintiff, in that it does not appear that the legal interest to the mortgage sought to be foreclosed has ever been transferred in writing to the plaintiff, but that the legal right of action thereon remains in the mortgagee, C. R. Setze. (c) That there are no sufficient parties defendant, it appearing from the petition that the Society of the African Mission of Baltimore City has a first mortgage on the property, and it is necessary, in order to protect the interests of the society by paying off the debt as prayed for, that the society should be made a party to the cause. (d) Defendant demurs specially, because no copy of the alleged notice of intention to claim attorney's fees is attached to the petition. The court overruled the demurrer, and the defendant excepted.

Candler, Thomson & Hirsch, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. John Awtry and W. R. Power, both of Marietta, and Geo. F. Gober, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

HILL, J. (after stating the facts as above).

[1] 1. The mortgage note sued on in this case was payable to C. R. Setze, or order. It was therefore negotiable. The petition alleges that it was transferred and assigned to the plaintiff, which brought suit against the maker to enforce it. There is no formal transfer or assignment of the note and mortgage in writing, and the question is whether the simple indorsement of the name of the payee in the note on the back thereof operates to transfer, not only the note, but the lien created by the mortgage, to the plaintiff, who claims to be the holder for value, and sues as such. A promissory note is negotiable by indorsement of the payee or holder. Civil Code, § 4273. Civil Code, § 4276, declares: "The transfer of notes secured by a mortgage or otherwise conveys to the transferee the benefit of the security." See, to the same effect, Roberts v. Mansfield, 32 Ga. 228; Murray v. Jones, 50 Ga. 109; Berrie v. Smith, 97 Ga. 784, 785, 25 S. E. 757. Civil Code, § 3345, is as follows: "All transfers and assignments of rent notes, mortgage notes, and other such evidences of indebtedness, secured either by contract lien or out of which a lien springs by operation of law, shall be sufficiently technical and valid where such transfer or assignment plainly seeks to pass the title to any of such papers in writing from one person to another." The act of 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 90), embodied in Civil Code, §§ 3345-3347, was remedial in its nature, and, as expressed in the caption, was "to provide for the more full and complete transfer and assignment of rent notes, mortgage notes, * * * so that upon a simple transfer for value of such rent note, mortgage note, and other such evidences of indebtedness, the lien connected therewith is carried and follows as a necessary incident of such transfer so as to allow such transferee or assignee of the same, without more to foreclose and enforce the same in his own name." The purpose of this act was, therefore, not to lessen the power of assignment, but to broaden it, so as to do away with, as much as possible, the formality of transfers of lien notes. Prior to the act of 1899, promissory notes payable to order were negotiable merely by the indorsement of the payee. The transfer of notes secured by a mortgage or otherwise carried with it the benefit of the lien of the mortgage. The expressed purpose of the act of 1899 was to provide for the more full and complete transfer of notes secured by liens, so that upon a simple transfer of such notes the lien connected therewith is carried, and the transferee can foreclose in his own name. Therefore, in this case, the note and mortgage to secure it being embodied in a single instrument, and the indorsement and delivery thereof being sufficient to transfer the title to the note payable to order, it was a sufficient "simple transfer" of the entire paper to carry title thereto to the person to whom it was delivered so indorsed.

But it is argued that mortgage notes cannot be transferred by simple indorsement, inasmuch as the act of 1899 (Civil Code, § 3345) provides that the transfer of mortgage notes shall be "in writing from one person to another." It is insisted that the language of the act of 1899 does not come under the law merchant, where a simple indorsement is sufficient to convey the title and transfer the note to any one who might legally hold it; but that, in order to carry the lien of the mortgage with the note, there must be a written assignment in which the name of the assignee is set forth. At common law the title to a mortgage did not pass by a simple indorsement in blank. The act of 1899 is a remedial statute, designed to do away with the formal and technical rule as to assignments and transfers of liens, so that the law merchant will apply as well to notes carrying liens as to those which do not. Even a casual reading of the caption of the act of 1899 will show that such was the evident purpose of the legislature. And in the body of the act the matter relating to the transfer of liens provides that the effect of such transfer or assignment of such notes will be to completely and fully carry such lien "as a necessary incident thereof." And section 3. of the act provides that upon the "simple transfer" of any mortgage note, etc., the transferee can foreclose in his own name. The whole act breathes with the spirit of simplifying the method of transferring liens which attach to certain notes, including mortgage notes. The act of 1899 did not repeal section 4276 of the Civil Code, quoted supra, but was intended to simplify the manner of transferring notes secured by liens, etc. The act of 1899 should be construed in connection with section so construed, we think the simple ment of the name of the payee in note payable to order, on the balance gives the holder for value the right to close the mortgage in his own name. What has been said, we think the law is set forth a cause of action, so that the plaintiff in the court below could proceed in his own name to foreclose the mortgage. The ruling of the general demurrer was overruled in Barnes v. Fleetwood, 5 Ga. App. 11, 60.

[2] 2. One of the prayers of the petition is that the "mortgage may be declared void upon said land for the principal sum of $2,200, interest and attorney's fees, as hereinafter set out, and costs, and that said land be foreclosed and the equity of redemption therein forever barred, and that said land be sold to pay this debt, after paying the costs, if any, due the Society of the African Mission of Baltimore City." The petition originally brought alleged that the defendant, the African Mission of Baltimore City, had a first mortgage on the property described in the petition for $2,200, which was made on October 16, 1908, and was extended for ten years from the date of maturity. The petition to the petition it was alleged that there is no such corporation as the Society of the African Mission of Baltimore City, and that out in defendant's answer, and that the defendant had no transactions with the plaintiff. We think the special demurrer to the petition should be sustained, and to that extent the judgment of the court below is reversed. That the petition referred to in this case is the opinion should have been stricken out. The necessity is shown in the petition for a decree as prayed for. A general demurrer is prayed against the defendant, and the solvency of the defendant is not alleged. The Society of the African Mission of Baltimore City, whose first mortgage would be void by such a decree, is not a party to the petition. The plaintiff does by amendment allege that there is no such corporation, and that the defendant had no transaction with the plaintiff. But the plaintiff will not deny the validity of the first mortgage when the note under which it sued expressly states that it is a second mortgage on the property, the first being given by the "Society of the African Mission of Baltimore City." Jenkins v. Southern Ry. Co., 85, 84 S. E. 355; Long v. Bullard, 85, 84 S. E. 355 (3). No reason is shown why the plaintiff above named had not a valid first mortgage lien on the property described in the petition, as declared in the note. I do not think that the portion of the petition under review alleges any facts which would take the case out of the usual procedure for a foreclosure is sought on proper grounds. The first and second liens thereon.

we think the court should have sustained demurrer to this extent.

The note on which suit was brought a provision for the payment of 10 attorney's fees on principal and in case of collection by suit or through key. The petition alleged that no intention to bring suit and collect attorneys had been given to the defendant, stating the term of court to which it should be brought 10 days prior to the proof. A special demurrer was filed, around that a copy of the notice have been attached to the petition. unnecessary. The suit was not on the notice, but on the note. The requires notice in order to make this of the note enforceable. It was to allege the giving of such notice; allegations of the petition were sufficient it was not necessary to attach the notice which had been given. plaintiff in error has secured a modification of the judgment of the court, she is entitled to the costs of the case to the Supreme Court. Judgment affirmed in part and reversed in the Justices concur.

COLEMAN v. MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF GAINESVILLE

Court of Georgia. Sept. 29, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

QUARRY CLAUDIUM FREIGHT.

Originally construed, this was an action of "quarry claudium freight," for damages resulting from blasting in the defendant's quarry, causing stones to fall on adjacent lands of the plaintiff, injuring his buildings and other property, and by dumping dirt and other material into a branch, which separated the plaintiff's other land, causing it to lower down to change its course as though plaintiff's land, and also to fill plaintiff's mill pond with debris, and not for arising from any negligence in the quarry in which the work was done.

DEED — CONVEYANCE — DAMAGES.

A quarry was located on a designated land. Defendant held under a deed from plaintiff. After reciting the consideration, purported to convey "all the rock and sub surface and subsurface, located on" the land. It also contained the recital of the first part further grants, and conveys to party of the second part, successors and assigns, the right and power to use said land in any way whatever may be necessary or expedient to quarry, mine, and remove all of said stone and material, and provided no convict camp or tenant shall be placed on said ten acres of land." The grant and covenant above quoted authorized blasting, and the mere fact that stones fell upon plaintiff's adjacent land and his property would not render defendant liable in trespass for the injury. See Ames v. Ames, 13 Mo. App. 676; Arthur v. Ames, 157 N. C. 398, 73 S. E. 206; Scott v. Md. 431.

This case differs from Moross & Co. v.

Burke, 99 Ga. 110, 24 S. E. 969, and Central Iron & Coal Co. v. Vanderheuk, 147 Ala. 546, 41 South. 145, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 570, 119 Am. St. Rep. 102, 11 Ann. Cas. 346, where the plaintiff had not consented to the blasting.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adjoining Landowners, Cent. Dig. §§ 60-68; Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

3. INSTRUCTIONS—DENIAL OF NEW TRIAL.

Considered in the light of the entire charge, and the issues as made in the pleadings and evidence, the excerpts from the charge complained of in the motion afford no cause for the grant of a new trial.

4. DENIAL OF MISTRIAL APPROVED.

Under the circumstances of the case, there was no error in refusing to declare a mistrial.

5. VERDICT AND DENIAL OF NEW TRIAL APPROVED.

The verdict is supported by the evidence, and the discretion of the trial judge in refusing a new trial will not be disturbed.

Error from Superior Court, Hall County; J. B. Jones, Judge.

Action by John W. Spencer against the Mayor and Council of Gainesville. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

B. P. Gaillard, Jr., and J. G. Collins, both of Gainesville, for plaintiff in error. Wm. M. Johnson, of Gainesville, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

COLEMAN et al. v. GEORGE, Judge.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 27, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 130*)—CHANGE OF VENUE—PETITION—CONSTRUCTION.

The court did not err in this case in construing the petition for a change of venue to be based solely on the ground that an impartial jury could not be obtained in the county in which the crime is alleged to have been committed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 247, 248; Dec. Dig. § 130.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1023*) — APPEAL — CHANGE OF VENUE—BILL OF EXCEPTIONS.

The court correctly held that the provision in the act approved August 21, 1911 (Acts 1911, p. 74), relating to a change of venue in criminal cases, providing for a direct bill of exceptions, which should "operate as a supersedeas in the trial of said case," is not applicable in case of the denial of a petition for a change of venue, where the same is based solely upon the ground that an impartial jury cannot be obtained in the county where the crime is alleged to have been committed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2583-2598; Dec. Dig. § 1023.*]

Application for mandamus by W. A. Coleman and others against W. F. George, judge. Mandamus denied.

Jno. R. Cooper, of Macon, D. B. Nicholson, of Rochelle, and Haygood & Cutts, of Fitzgerald, for petitioners. J. B. Wall, of Fitzgerald, J. W. Dennard, of Cordele, and Hal Lawson, of Abbeville, for defendant.

BECK, J. The following petition was presented to the judge of the superior court of Wilcox county:

"The petition of W. A. Coleman, Jim Coleman, and W. H. Stephens, citizens of the county of Wilcox and state of Georgia, and who are now detained in the common jail of Wilcox county, Georgia, respectfully shows to this honorable court:

"1. That they have been indicted in the superior court of Wilcox county for murder, in that they did on the 6th day of April, 1913, kill Leon Melvin.

"2. Your petitioners respectfully show that when they were arrested and put in jail in Abbeville, said county of Wilcox, it was necessary, in order to secure the safety of the said W. A. Coleman from the mob, to carry him to the common jail of Ben Hill county, Fitzgerald, Georgia, where he remained for some time. Afterwards he was removed back to the jail of Wilcox county, and remained there a short while, and the mob stormed the jail, and tried to get him out of jail and lynch him. The mob cut the telephone wire, and the said mob was only prevented from getting Coleman by the wife of the jailer, who got the keys and kept them under her apron.

"3. After this storming of the jail by the mob, W. A. Coleman was carried by the sheriff of Wilcox county to the common jail of Dooly county, Vienna, Georgia, for safe-keeping, and there he remained for some time, a month or so, and was only carried back to Abbeville jail a few weeks ago.

"4. Your petitioners further allege that since their incarceration they have heard of numerous threats against their lives, and that while W. A. Coleman was incarcerated in prison his hands were run off his farm, and some of them beaten and warned that if they did not leave the farm they would be dealt with by violence, and that it was necessary for him to employ more men to take their places and run his farm this year. Your petitioners aver that, on account of the great feeling and prejudice against him in said county, it was very hard for him to get his land cultivated this year, and that great damage has been done to him on account of the prejudice existing in the county where the homicide occurred.

"5. Your petitioners show that on account of the excitement and common feeling that existed after the homicide, which was calculated to poison the minds of the jurors, and further that a large portion of the jurors of said county have formed and expressed an opinion in regard to their guilt, either from having heard some part of the evidence at the coroner's trial, or from having heard statements of others and from certain evil-disposed persons, relatives and friends of the deceased, who circulated rumors exceedingly damaging to them and prejudicial to a correct termination of the issues involved in the case, that the public mind has been so poisoned and prejudiced by exaggerated rumors in the newspapers of the state that the defendants do not believe that they can get a fair trial by an impartial jury in Wilcox county, Georgia, the sort of trial that they are entitled to under the Constitution and laws of the United States.

"Wherefore they respectfully ask this honorable court to change the venue in said case, and that they be ordered tried upon said bill of indictment in some other county in the circuit and in the state of Georgia other than the county of Wilcox."

After hearing the evidence and argument of counsel upon this petition, the judge overruled it. Thereupon the petitioners presented their bill of exceptions to the judge for his signature, seeking to bring the ruling directly to this court for review. The judge refused to certify the bill of exceptions, and held that the petition was based upon the law in regard to the change of venue in criminal cases as it stood before the passage of the act approved August 21, 1911 (Acts 1911, p. 74), relating to a change of venue in criminal cases. Prior to that act the law provided for a change of venue only in cases where an impartial jury could not be obtained in the county where the crime was committed. The judge below in this case held, further, that the act of 1911 provided an additional ground for a change of venue in criminal cases, and that, when the additional ground provided in that act is embraced in the motion, a movant has the right to a direct bill of exceptions in case the judge should refuse to grant the motion, but that, where the motion is based solely upon the ground that an impartial jury cannot be obtained, a denial of the motion is a proper matter for exceptions pendente lite, and not for a direct bill of exceptions.

[1] We are of the opinion that the judge below properly construed the petition, in holding that it was based solely upon the ground that an impartial jury could not be obtained in the county where the crime was alleged to have been committed. While the petition does allege certain attempted acts of mob violence in the past against one of these petitioners for a change of venue, there is no allegation that at present there is an existing danger of a lynching of this party against whom the attempts were made, or against either of the other petitioners, nor that there have been so recently threats of violence or attempts to lynch either W. A. Coleman, one of the petitioners against whom the former attempts were made, or against either of the other petitioners, as to show that there is a probability of danger of lynching or other mob violence at the present time, or that there was at the time of filing and hearing the motion a present existing danger or probability of such violence. But the petition distinctly alleges that on account of the excitement and feeling that existed "after the homicide, which was calculated to poison the mind of jurors," and from the fact that a large part of the jurors of the county had formed and expressed an opinion in regard to the guilt of the petitioners, and for other reasons set forth in the petition, the defendants "do not believe that they can get a fair trial by an impartial jury in Wilcox county" (the county in which the crime is alleged to have been committed).

[2] The petition, properly construed, rests the case for a change of venue upon the law granting such a change where an impartial jury could not be obtained. That being true, the court did not err in holding that the denial of the motion was a proper matter of exceptions pendente lite, and not of a direct bill of exceptions to this court. The act of 1911 does not change the law relating to a change of venue in criminal cases, as it existed prior to that act and as it is declared in section 964 of the Penal Code. This section is amended, not by changing the provisions as they stood at the time of the amending act, but by adding another ground upon which a change of venue might be had; and the addition made it lawful for the judge of the superior court to change the venue "on his own motion, with or without petition, whenever, in his judgment, the accused party will be lynched, or there is danger of violence being attempted to be committed on said accused, if carried back, or allowed to remain, in the county where the crime is alleged to have been committed. And if a motion by petition shall be made by the accused for a change of venue, said judge shall hear the same at chambers, with or without the presence of the accused, at such time and place in the state as he may direct. And if the evidence submitted shall reasonably show that there is probability or danger of lynching, or other violence, then it shall be mandatory on said judge to change the venue to such county in the state, as in his judgment, will avoid such lynching. The petitioner shall have the right to except to the ruling of the court at such interlocutory hearing, and the bill of exceptions when signed shall operate as a supersedeas in the trial of said case, until passed on by the Supreme Court." The provision in this amendment, declaring that "the petitioner shall have the right to except to the ruling of the court at such interlocutory hearing, and the bill of exceptions when signed shall operate as a supersedeas in the trial of said case, until passed on by the Supreme Court," is applicable, in our opinion, only where a motion is made based upon the existence of danger or probability of a lynching or other mob violence. While the provision for a direct bill of exceptions to the ruling of the court at an interlocutory hearing is by the amendment placed in the same section of the Code with the law as it stood prior to the passage of the amending act, we do not think that it should be made applicable to the law providing for a change of venue on the ground that an impartial jury could not be obtained; but it should only be applied in cases of motions based upon the ground for a change of venue added by the amendment.

We are induced to adopt this construction as the correct one from a consideration of the context, and of the reason for the amendment which must have existed in the minds of the Legislature when it enacted the amendment. The law giving the right to a change of venue on the ground that an impartial jury could not be obtained in the county where the crime was committed stood for many years as it is in the present Penal Code, and no right to a direct bill of exceptions to a judgment of a court refusing to make a change of venue upon motion existed. A refusal to grant the motion under the law was treated as rulings upon other incidental or preliminary issues and matters in the trial of criminal cases, such as motions for continuance, pleas in abatement, demurrers, etc. The accused, in cases of adverse rulings, could not as a matter of right, in such matters, have a direct bill of exceptions to this court which would operate as a supersedeas and prevent further proceedings in the cause until the question made in such bill of exceptions was disposed of here. And the mere fact that the Legislature has seen fit to create an additional statutory ground for a change of venue, and give in connection therewith a right to a direct bill of exceptions which should operate as a supersedeas in the trial of a case, and that the statute creating the additional ground has been placed in the same section of the Penal Code with the former legislative declaration upon that subject, does not justify a construction making the provisions in regard to procedure applicable to the provisions which existed formerly, unless the context or the reasons for making the additional ground for a change of venue require it.

As we have said, and as will be seen upon reading the amendatory act, the context does not show that the provision for a direct bill of exceptions in the amendatory act is applicable to the law as it existed prior to the amendment. Nor are there any valid grounds for holding that there was a legislative intent that the provisions now under consideration should be made applicable to the law as it stood prior to the amendment. While there were strong and obvious reasons for making such a provision applicable in cases where there was a motion for a change of venue on the ground that there was a probability or danger of lynching or other violence committed on the accused, errors in rulings upon such preliminary questions or matters as continuances, demurrers, pleas in abatement, etc., could be corrected after trial as well as before trial. Of course, if there was error in ruling upon preliminary matters, requiring the grant of a new trial in this court, the cost of another trial would be incurred because of such ruling. But we are not prepared to hold that the cost of an additional trial is an evil equal to or greater than that of the delay in the trial of criminal cases, where one who is accused of a crime is permitted to suspend the proceedings in the cause by suing out, to adverse rulings upon preliminary questions, a direct bill of exceptions to this court, which should operate as a supersedeas until the same was considered here, and the questions raised in it adjudicated on review. And without some plain expression of legislative intent to give to the defendant in a criminal case the right, in a matter of procedure, to test the correctness of adverse rulings of the trial court by a direct bill of exceptions, thereby bringing about delay in the trial of the case, this court should not confer the right by construction. The language of the amending act which we have now under consideration requires that, where there is a probability or danger of lynching or other violence, "it shall be mandatory on said judge to change the venue to such county in the state as in his judgment will avoid such lynching." This provision, that a change of venue under the circumstances last recited is mandatory, making it the imperative duty of the trial court to grant a change of venue when those circumstances are shown to exist, clearly has no application to a petition for a change of venue on the ground that an impartial jury cannot be obtained. It makes prominent in the act the legislative command that there must be a change of venue where there is danger or probability of lynching. It lays emphasis upon the necessity for a change of venue to prevent mob violence; and in immediate connection with this expression giving emphasis to that legislative command is the provision for a direct bill of exceptions to an adverse ruling of the court, which exceptions shall operate as a supersedeas in the trial of the case.

The obvious reason for giving additional rights in the matter of procedure where a petition was based upon the ground of danger of lynching were no doubt present in the legislative mind in enacting the statute of 1911; and that was that an error in passing upon a petition based upon this ground had to be corrected before trial, or it could not be corrected. If a court should erroneously deny a motion based upon the ground that there was a probability of a lynching, and that probability should eventuate in certainty, no reviewing court could then correct the error. There were no such considerations as these to move the legislative body to grant the right of a direct bill of exceptions, and a suspension of further proceedings in the case, where the motion was based upon the ground contained in the law prior to the act of 1911; and we do not find in the act itself, in the context of the provision that we have immediately under consideration, anything to indicate a legislative intent to change the procedure in any case, except where a motion is made in view of an existing danger of lynching.

Mandamus denied. All the Justices concur.

WRIGHT et al. v. HILL et al.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. Aug. 12, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. WILLS (§ 614*)—CONSTRUCTION.

By the sixth item of his will a testator provided as follows: "All of the other real property I own or may own at my death, exclusive of what has been devised in the foregoing items, I give and devise share and share alike to my seven children [naming them], for the term of their natural lives respectively [respectively?], with remainder in fee to their surviving lawful issue if any; and if any one shall die without issue, his or her share shall be distributed share and share alike amongst the lawful issue of the others surviving, for and during their natural life." The eighth item was as follows: "I desire and request of my executors and executrix named in the first item of this will to keep all the property mentioned in item 6th undivided until the youngest one of the issue of my sons and daughters mentioned in said item 6 shall become of age." After the testator's death one of the sons died, leaving children surviving him. Some of them are of age. They filed an equitable petition for the purpose of having their shares of the property devised in the sixth item of the will delivered to them. Held, that the sixth item of the will created a life estate in each of the children of the testator respectively, with a contingent remainder over as to such share to the children of each child, and with an executory devise in case any child of the testator should die without issue.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 1393-1416; Dec. Dig. § 614.*]

2. WILLS (§ 634*)—PARTITION (§ 14*)—RIGHT—CONSTRUCTION OF WILL.

Where a son of the testator survived him and died, leaving the present plaintiffs as his lawful children, they took vested indefeasible interests in one-seventh of such property. As to such shares there was no active intervening trust; and those of the plaintiffs who were of full age and sui juris were entitled to have the executors assent to the devise as to them and deliver to them their respective interests. (Atkinson, J., dissents from the latter part of this headnote.)

(a) The general rule that, in proceedings for partitioning property among tenants in common, ordinarily there should be a complete partitioning, is subject to some exceptions. It does not affect the right of the devisee, who is entitled to possession of property devised to him, to have his share delivered to him, al-may be other devisees who are not in possession at the same time.

—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. 88-1510; Dec. Dig. § 634; * Partition (§ 37; Dec. Dig. § 14.*]

UTITIES (§ 6*) — WILLS — CONSTRU-the ruling made in the preceding provisions of the will above quoted conflict with the rule against per-—For other cases, see Perpetuities, §§ 4-47, 49-53, 56; Dec. Dig. § 6.*]

ION (§§ 44, 46, 55, 64*) — PREMATURE ACTION — PETITION — DEMURRER — PAR-the plaintiffs who are of age and sui action is not premature. (Atkinson, a.)

allegation that the plaintiffs are tenants in common with the executors and entitled on that basis was demurrable; but require the dismissal of the entire allegations as to the hostile attitude of the executors and of the inability of the court to ascertain what constituted the residue by the sixth item of the will to withstand the demurrer.

the allegations of the petition, all interest should have been made part of the case.

te.—For other cases, see Partition, §§ 111-114, 148-159, 182, 186, 187; §§ 44, 46, 55, 64.*]

AND ERROR (§ 1178*) — DISPOSITION OF REAL

much as the court sustained the demurrer to all the grounds thereof and dismissed the petition thus erring as to the substantial merits of the petition, the judgment is reversed, and the case is reinstated; that the allegations of the sixth paragraph of the petition, touching the existence of a tenancy in common between the plaintiffs and the executors, be sustained; that the court give the necessary parties as herein indicated upon failure so to do, that the action be allowed for want of proper parties.

te.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Dec. Dig. §§ 4604-4620; Dec. Dig. § from Superior Court, Baldwin County, Ga., Park, Judge.

ple petition by M. H. Wright and others against Nora Hill and another, etc. for defendants, and plaintiffs for. Reversed, with direction.

Hill Wright and others filed their petition against Nora, Madison, and Stephen Hill, as executors of David B. Hill, in substance as follows: David B. Hill died testate and owing no debts January 27, 1901. After making other bequests he provided, in items 6 and 8 of his will as follows:

8th. All of the other real property which I may own at my death, exclusive of what has been devised in the foregoing items, I give and devise share and share alike to my seven children, viz.: Nora, Eula, Stephen, John, Madison, and Stephen, during the term of their natural lives respectively, with remainder in fee to their surviving lawful issue, if any, and if any one shall die without issue, his or her share shall be distributed share and share alike amongst the lawful issue of the others surviving, for and during their natural life."

"Item 8th. I desire and request of my executors and executrix named in the first item of this will to keep all the property mentioned in item 6th undivided until the youngest one of the issue of my sons and daughters mentioned in said item 6 shall become of age."

The plaintiffs are the surviving lawful issue of Anderson Hill, a son of the testator. Since the death of Anderson Hill April 19, 1907, none of his lawful issue have died. Plaintiffs refer to the real property devised in item 6 of the will as the residuum and claim that they as a unit became entitled, upon the death of their father, Anderson Hill, to a vested estate in fee simple in and to an undivided one-seventh interest therein. The executors of the estate bore to Anderson Hill during his lifetime a hostile attitude and have borne the same attitude since towards the plaintiffs, who have never been able to learn the exact extent of the residuum of the estate or their portion therein. They know, however, that it consists principally of farming land, and to the best of their information and belief it amounts to from 8,000 to 10,000 acres. The plaintiffs are tenants in common with the executors of the estate of David B. Hill in the land constituting the residuum of the estate; and the petition is brought to have the interest of the plaintiffs partitioned and set apart to them in severalty. The executors have never assented to the vesting of the devise contained in item 6 of the will or any part thereof and are still clothed with the legal title to the lands devised therein. Plaintiffs allege that item 8 of the will, in which the testator requests of his executors that they keep all of the property mentioned in item 6 undivided until the youngest one of the issue of his sons and daughters mentioned should become of age, is illegal, contrary to the law and public policy of this state, and void in that it attempts, after devising and creating an absolute estate in fee simple in the plaintiffs, to nullify and destroy such estate by depriving the devisees of the right to the use and enjoyment of it for a stated period and preventing them from aliening, partitioning, or otherwise disposing of it for said period. Item 8 being illegal and void, the plaintiffs have been entitled, since the death of their father, to have partitioned and set aside to them in severalty their interest in the residuum above referred to. Since the death of the testator, his executors have managed the estate upon the theory that item 8 of the will was legal and valid, and have been withholding from the devisees any possession or use of the residuum, and have excluded them from their right, title, and interest therein.

The plaintiffs' father, Anderson Hill, during his lifetime was not allowed the use and possession of his life estate in the residuum, except as a tenant or renter from the executors and upon the payment of an annual rental, and since his death none of the plaintiffs have been allowed the use or possession of any part of these lands except upon the same terms. Since the death of their father, some of the plaintiffs have been living on a portion of the land in question but have been required to pay an annual rental by the executors. Besides the rental exacted from the plaintiffs just referred to, the executors have collected from other tenants of these lands a rental equivalent to about $3,000 per annum. This sum has been applied chiefly to making permanent improvements on that part of the residuum on which the executors and their favorite brothers and sisters reside. After these expenditures, the balance remaining was divided among the devisees; each of the plaintiffs receiving a small sum of about $20. Of the residuum of the estate not more than 1,200 acres are in cultivation. Plaintiffs allege that their interest in the residuum is about 1,000 acres; that they have been forbidden and will be prevented, during the pendency of this suit, from using, possessing, or cultivating more than 100 acres, unless the court shall restrain the executors from interfering with the plaintiffs in the use and cultivation of a greater acreage in proportion to their interest. During the pendency of this suit, the executors continue to demand of the plaintiffs the usual annual rental for the use of about 100 acres; and, as this exaction is illegal, the executors should not be permitted, during the pendency of this suit, to demand of them more than a sufficient amount to pay the taxes on the land which they occupy and cultivate. The children surviving David B. Hill, the testator, were seven. Of this number one died eight days after her father; she not being married. Three others have never married. Two are married and have lawful issue. Another child, Anderson Hill, is the deceased father of the plaintiffs. The youngest of the lawful issue of Anderson Hill was born prior to the death of the testator. At the death of the testator there were surviving him, besides the plaintiffs in this case, four other grandchildren. At the date of filing this suit there are living six other grandchildren, born since the death of the testator. Two grandchildren born since the death of the testator are dead.

The prayers of the plaintiffs were as follows: That the executors be required to assent to the vesting in the plaintiffs of the devise contained in item 6 of the will of David B. Hill; that the court decree that item 8 of the will is illegal, contrary to public policy, and void, and that it constitutes no obstacle to the immediate delivery and conveyance to the plaintiffs in severalty of their respective interests in the residuum of the estate; that each of the plaintiffs be decreed to be entitled to an immediate and vested estate in fee simple in an equal undivided sixty-third interest in the residuum of the estate; that a decree be entered fixing the acreage and extent of the residuum and the number of acres to which each of the plaintiffs is entitled; that commissioners be appointed to survey the residuum set off by metes and bounds and describe the particular tracts which each of the plaintiffs shall receive, and, upon the confirming of the report of the commissioners, deeds be executed by them to each of the plaintiffs in accordance with the decree; that pending the suit the defendants be enjoined from any acts which may prevent or tend to prevent the plaintiffs from using, possessing, and cultivating an acreage not exceeding 1,000 acres of the lands comprised in the residuum; that pending the suit the executors be temporarily enjoined from demanding of the plaintiffs the payment of any sums as a rental or otherwise, except for their proportionate part of state and county taxes, to be estimated according to the acreage actually occupied by them during the pendency of this suit; for such other and further relief as they may be entitled; and for process.

The plaintiffs amended their petition as follows: David B. Hill, the testator, was a white man. He was never married to Elvira Hill, who was a woman of color, and neither Elvira Hill nor the children of Elvira and the testator, among whom was the father of the plaintiffs, are his heirs at law. The testator was one of a large family of children, most of whom grew up, married, and reared families. His heirs at law are his brothers and sisters and their descendants. The testator began living with Elvira Hill about the time of the Civil War and continued to live with her until his death; she surviving him about five years. He and Elvira lived continuously upon the lands constituting the residuum, known as the Hill place, which he cultivated and gradually enlarged from time to time. All his children were born, reared, and educated on the Hill place and were brought up by him to make their living by farming on this land. With one or two exceptions, all of the children and descendants of David B. Hill are now living on the Hill place and making their living by its cultivation. At the time of the death of the testator, the plaintiffs and their father, Anderson Hill, owned and had nothing except what was given to them by the will, nor at that time did any of the other children or descendants of the testator own much, if anything, except what was given to them by the will. Since the death of the testator, no land constituting a part of the residuum of the estate has been sold, incumbered, or otherwise disposed of, and the same remains as it was at the time of the death of the testator.

The defendants demurred to the petition. The court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the case, and the plaintiffs excepted.

Henry A. Alexander, of Atlanta, for plaintiffs in error. Johnson & Johnson, of Gray, and Allen & Pottle, of Milledgeville, for defendants in error.

LUMPKIN, J. (after stating the facts as above). This is a peculiar case and a peculiar will, as will appear from the statement of facts. An illustration may be given of the unusual character of other items besides those directly for consideration. Item 3 gave certain land to the three daughters "and to their heirs or lawful issue at their death respectively." It provided that, if a named one of the daughters should die, her share should vest in her sisters or their issue; but said nothing as to such a contingency in regard to the others. By the fourth item a brick store was devised to the testator's three daughters and their issue, with a provision that, if either of them should die without issue, her share should vest in the survivor or surviving issue. By the seventh item it was declared that, the testator desired that the brick store should remain undivided "until the last one of the devisees shall die, and then the said property to be divided share and share alike amongst the lawful issue of the survivors or amongst the lawful issues of the devisees mentioned in items 3 and 4, if any there be." This, however, is only mentioned to show some of the provisions of the will, and the continued use of the words "issues" and "lawful issues," and the want of clearness pervading the instrument.

[1] 1. The sixth item was as follows: "All of the other real property I own or may own at my death, exclusive of what has been devised in the foregoing items, I give and devise share and share alike to my seven children, viz.: Nora, Eula, Inez, Anderson, John, Madison, and Stephen Hill, for the term of their natural lives respectively [respectively?], with remainder in fee to their surviving lawful issue if any; and if any one shall die without issue, his or her share shall be distributed share and share alike amongst the lawful issue of the others surviving, for and during their natural life."

Under the statutory change, in this state, of the rule in Shelley's Case, this created a life estate in each of the children of the testator, with remainder over to the surviving legitimate children of such child, if any, and, if any one (that is, any child of the testator) should die without issue, then as provided. Civil Code of 1910, § 3860 (in the last line of which there is a printer's error, making confusion. See Civil Code of 1895, § 3084). The remainder was contingent. The words of survivorship could not be legitimately referred to the death of the testator. Four of his children were unmarried and had no "lawful issue" to survive him. He could hardly have intended to confine his bounty to the "lawful issue" of the other three children. If so, as he dealt with each child "respectfully" (evidently meaning respectively), although each one of the four who was unmarried when the will was executed might, after the death of the testator, marry and have "lawful issue," the latter would take nothing. Also the provision, in case of the death of any child without issue, that his or her share should be distributed among the lawful issue of the "other surviving" during their natural life shows that the words of survivorship referred to the death of the life tenants, respectively, and not to that of the testator. Considering the context, we think there is no doubt that a life estate was created for each child of the testator, with contingent remainder over to the lawful heirs (that is, children) of such child, and with further provision should there be none. This construction accords with the Civil Code 1910, § 3862.

For the present purpose it is immaterial to discuss the question whether the remainder did not vest at all until after the death of each life tenant, or whether upon the birth of a child to a life tenant the remainder as to that share vested in it, subject to open to let in after-born children and to divest in case of the death of a child before the death of a life tenant. Nor need we discuss the peculiar limitation over to other lawful issue "during their natural life," in case of the death of a life tenant without issue. One who desires to find the silken thread and follow it through the labyrinth of judicial decisions may obtain some aid in the notes to Robertson v. Guenther, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 887 et seq. (241 Ill. 511, 89 N. E. 689), and Smith v. Smith, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1045 et seq. (157 Ala. 79, 47 South. 220). See, especially, Van Tilburgh v. Hollinshead, 14 N. J. Eq. 32; Rountree v. Rountree, 26 S. C. 450, 2 S. E. 474.

The father of the present plaintiffs having died, leaving them as his lawful issue, as to the one-seventh of the estate, which was spoken of as his share (not as descriptive of an absolute estate in him, but of the amount of property or size of the share), the contingency as to them was at an end, and they were the absolute owners of it. This is all they claim in the present suit. No question is raised as to the life estate or the devises over upon the death of a child of the testator, leaving no issue. Accordingly we do not deal with them, but only with the vested interests of the plaintiffs in a seventh of the residuum.

[2] 2. The next question arises upon the eighth item, which is as follows: "I desire and request of my executors and executrix named in the first item of this will to keep all the property mentioned in item 6th undivided until the youngest one of the issue of my sons and daughters mentioned in said item 6 shall become of age." What does this mean, and what effect has it on the rights of the plaintiffs? As the sixth item created in each of the testator's children a life estate, with contingent remainder over to their surviving lawful issue, and the eighth item requested that the property be kept undivided until the youngest one of the issue of the sons and daughters should become of age, unless the testator used the words "youngest of the issue of my sons and daughters" in this item in a different sense from that in which the word "issue" was used in the sixth item, the result would be this: The testator created a life estate for each of his children, with contingent remainder over to their children, but provided that the executors should keep the estate undivided until the youngest of the contingent remaindermen should become of age. He made no express provision for paying the income to the life tenants or for allowing any use by or benefit to them. As in law possibility of issue is not declared to be at an end until death, and therefore the youngest issue of a child might be born at any time before the death of the last life tenant, or might then be in ventre sa mere, this provision would seem to create life estates, and then declared that no life tenant should have his share until after his death. In using the words "the youngest of the issue of my sons and daughters," the testator could hardly have meant the youngest child of a son or daughter living at the execution of the will or at the death of the testator. None of the three daughters were ever married or had children, and one of the sons was unmarried. The context shows that the issue mentioned in that clause referred to the same persons who were described by the word "issue" in creating the contingent remainders. As to the remaindermen, it sought to hold back a division of the estate until the youngest possible child should be born and become of age. In the meantime the contingent remaindermen would become vested remaindermen as to their shares, and in the usual order of nature some of them would probably grow old and die, without ever receiving their fee-simple vested interests. Even if the youngest of the issue of the testator's sons and daughters who was to become of age before division referred to the youngest which might be in life when the testator died, one grandchild was then less than 2 years old; and possession would be postponed, as to the plaintiffs, for some 13 years after their interest finally vested and years after most of them were of age.

Could the testator legally direct his executors to withhold the possession and enjoyment of the land, as provided in the eighth item? A testator may make such a provision that no estate vests except upon the happening of a certain event. If the contingency is a condition precedent to the vesting of the title or interest, such title or interest of course does not vest until the contingency happens, if the provision does not offend the rule against perpetuities or some other rule of law. But if a fee-simple estate in realty vests, can a testator baldly provide for withholding possession and use from the holder of the estate, unless by interposing a precedent use, or valid trust, or clearly providing for an intestacy as to rents or profits during an intervening time? Some of the text-writers and decisions have stated broadly that a testator may postpone the time for the payment of a legacy or the distribution of his estate. But an examination of the decisions will show that most of them, especially where realty was involved, were in cases where a valid trust or use was interposed. Typical cases of this kind are where a testator provides that his wife shall have the use of land as a home during her widowhood, or until the youngest child shall become of age, or, where the land is directed to be held in trust for the education and maintenance of children, till the youngest becomes of age, or worked in a certain manner by executors or by the wife and certain children for support for a certain time, and then divided as directed. Sheftall v. Roberts, 30 Ga. 453; Trammell v. Johnston, 54 Ga. 340; Vansant v. Bigham, 76 Ga. 759. These cases are cited as illustrative, not exhaustive of all possible instances. There are other cases which did not involve the power of a testator to direct his executors to postpone the division of his estate or withhold possession, without more; but in some of them the power appears to have been assumed to exist, and the only question raised was upon the construction of the will as to the intention of the testator. Freeman v. Flood, 16 Ga. 528. And some hold flatly that there may be a postponement of enjoyment by a devisee, without more. In the present discussion we omit any reference to charitable trusts, as no such trust is here involved.

Under the English statute of uses, a passive trust in land became executed at once, and the legal title vested in the beneficiary. Under this statute, prior to our first Code (taking effect January 1, 1863), trusts were declared to be executed although the beneficiaries were minors. Jordan v. Thornton, 7 Ga. 517 (a bequest of slaves in trust for a married woman for life, and after her death for her children; after the death of the life usee the trust for the children was held to be executed); Pope v. Tucker, 23 Ga. 484 (a gift by deed in trust for a minor, with limitation over if the minor should die before reaching the age of 21); Bowman v. Long, 28 Ga. 142 (a bequest in trust for a minor); Walker v. Watson, 32 Ga. 264 (conveyance of a slave for the use of a minor having a guardian, with limitation over in the event of the minor dying without child or children; the trust was held to be executed and the guardian entitled to possession); Milledge v. Bryan, 49 Ga. 397.

Our first Code contained the following sections, which have been retained in subsequent Codes: "Trusts are either executed or executory. In the former, everything has been done by the trustee required to secure the property, or to render certain the interest of the beneficiaries, and all that remains for him to do is to preserve the property and execute the beneficial purposes. In executory trusts, something remains to be done by the trustee, either to secure the property, to ascertain the objects of the trust, or to distribute according to a specified mode, or some other act, to do which requires him to retain the legal estate." "In an executed trust for the benefit of a person capable of taking and managing property in his own right, the legal title is merged immediately into the equitable interest, and the perfect title vests in the beneficiary according to the terms and limitations of the trust." Code of 1910, §§ 3736, 3737.

In Askew v. Patterson, 53 Ga. 209, the language of the Code was treated as so far making a difference that title might be held by a trustee for a minor and would not pass to him until he became of age.

In Knorr v. Raymond, 73 Ga. 749, the subject was discussed at some length, and this change was recognized. There a will made in 1859 was under consideration. It devised and bequeathed real and personal property to the husband of a granddaughter of the testator, in trust for her life, with direction to convey as she might in writing during her life or by will direct, and "in further trust, should she die intestate, to hold said property for the benefit of such persons as may, at the time of her said decease, come under the designation of her next of kin by the statute of distributions at that time in force in the state of Georgia." This was construed to mean her children, and it was held that, as each minor became of age, the legal title vested in him. On page 773 the judge delivering the opinion said: "The will of Mrs. Telfair expressly authorizes and charges Captain Wetter, as trustee, 'to hold for the benefit' of the next of kin. She does not direct when he shall cease to hold. He holds till some law of force comes in and puts an end to his holding. Upon majority of a beneficiary, the statute of uses, having kept quiet pending the minority made exceptional by the Code, comes to the front and sternly transmutes the trust estate, as to such beneficiary, into a legal remainder." This was in a case where there was an express testamentary trust.

In the case before us there was no devise to the executors as trustees. They were not trustees otherwise than as executors. It often happens that executors are clothed by the will with certain powers, and that the will confers upon them a legal title so far as necessary to execute the testator's wishes, where not in conflict with law, but not to render them trustees in any greater sense. De Vaughn v. McLeroy, 82 Ga. 687, 696, 10 S. E. 211. This will does not in terms create a trust for accumulation, but only a bald direction to withhold division and delivery of devises; and it is unnecessary to enter into a consideration of the law of England prior to the celebrated case of Thellusson v. Woodford, 4 Ves. 329 (and see note in Summer's Ed.), or the legislation which followed that decision. Among modern English authorities, see 2 Williams on Ex'rs (7th Am. Ed.; 9th Eng. Ed.) 710; Josselyn v. Josselyn, 9 Sim. 63; Saunders v. Vautier, 4 Beavan, 115; Rocke v. Rocke, 9 Beavan, 66; Re Young's Settlement, 18 Beavan, 199; In re Trusts of Will of John Colson, 1 Kay, 133; Goaling v. Gosling, 285; In re Jacob's Will, 19 Beavan, 402.

In Gray on Restraints on Alienation, the author discusses many cases and aptly expresses his conclusions in two paragraphs as follows: "The law has fixed the age of legal responsibility at 21; if that is too young, let it be changed; but the wisdom of allowing individuals to change it at their pleasure is not clear. And, if paternalism is to be introduced into our law, its introduction in this particular class of cases seems to be without the advantages that may exist elsewhere and to retain only its irritating and demoralizing features." Page 120. And again: "The true ground is that on which the whole law of property, legal and equitable, is based; that inalienable rights of property are opposed to the fundamental principles of the common law; that it is against public policy that a man 'should have an estate to live on but not an estate to pay his debts with' (Tillinghast v. Bradford, 5 R. I. 206, 212, § 179, ante) and should have the benefits of wealth without the responsibilities. The common law has recognized that certain classes of persons who may be kept in pupillage, viz., infants, lunatics, married women; but it has held that sane grown men must look out for themselves; that it is not the function of the law to join in the futile effort to save the foolish and the vicious from the consequences of their own vice and folly. It is wholesome doctrine, fit to produce a manly race, based on sound morality and wise philosophy." Page 242.

In considering the law of this state in connection with the decisions in other jurisdictions, legislation here or in such jurisdictions must not be overlooked. Among other changes which have been made by legislative acts in this state may be mentioned that the old devise for avoiding the effect of the statute of uses by limiting a trust upon a trust, and then declaring only the first trust to be executed, has been abolished. Civil Code 1910, § 3738. Married women now hold property in their own names and are no longer the subjects of trusts by reason of their coverture. Id. §§ 2993, 3007, 6456; Woodward v. Stubbs & Tison, 102 Ga. 187, 29 S. E. 119. Spendthrift trusts, as they are termed, were not built up by the courts. Gray v. Obear, 54 Ga. 231. They are allowed by statute, but only in certain defined cases. (There is no hint of any spendthrift trust here, and the provision contained in the eighth item of the will is inconsistent with such an idea.) Conditions repugnant to an estate granted are void. Section 3718. The rules of construction as to estates in realty and personalty are the same. Section 3556. An executor cannot, by capriciously withholding his consent, destroy a legacy. In equity the legatee may compel him to assent. Section 3896. From these instances a general tendency in this state, both in legislation and construction, in the direction of vesting estates both in interest and possession will appear, though the provision for a so-called spendthrift trust may be a backward step.

In Smith v. Dunwoody, 19 Ga. 237, a will created a trust for certain purposes. Some of these purposes would have required the estate to be kept together in perpetuity and were held illegal; others were legal. It was held that the whole did not fail but only the illegal part. Lumpkin, J., said (page 253 of 19 Ga.): "The only result is that the trust term will continue in the executors just so long as it may be necessary to accomplish the valid purposes of the will and not a moment longer." And again (page 257 of 19 Ga.): "It is a familiar principle that the trust term devised to executors cannot continue so as to retain the legal estate in them a moment longer than is necessary to enable them to perform the objects of the trust, so far as the same are valid and can be carried into effect, according to the rules of law."

In some jurisdictions it is held that a condition in a conveyance to several grantees against partition is valid on the ground that partition was not a common-law right but one arising by statute, and that it could be waived by accepting a deed containing such a provision. Hunt v. Wright, 47 N. H. 396, 93 Am. Dec. 451. On the other hand, where a testatrix gave to each of four children one fifth of her estate and to the children of her married daughter the other fifth, and provided that none of the real estate should be sold or divided until the testator's youngest child should be 21 years old, it was held that the provision against sale or division was void, and it was not necessary to wait to claim shares of the estate until the youngest should reach majority. Moore v. Schindehette, 102 Mich. 612, 61 N. W. 62. It may be that a distinction can be drawn between an agreement arising from accepting a deed containing such a provision and a devise of land in which it is sought in effect to create a passive trust in executors for beneficiaries of full age and with vested estates, and postpone possession, with no valid intervening estate, use, or trust. However that may be, and whether the authorities can be reconciled or not, under the laws of this state such a passive trust cannot be maintained for a person of full age and capable of taking and managing property in his own right, but as to him it becomes executed. The intention of a testator is to be given due weight; but it is not to be regarded as a fetish, superior to the law. Accordingly, under the allegations of the petition, each of the plaintiffs who is of age is entitled to have his or her share of the property devised in the sixth item of the will delivered to him or her, and each of the minor plaintiffs will be entitled to have his or her share delivered to him or her upon becoming of age. See Freeman v. Phillips, 113 Ga. 589, 33 S. E. 943; Crumpler v. Barfield & Wilson Co., 114 Ga. 570, 40 S. E. 808. In the opinion in the latter case, the following excerpt from Pritchard on Wills is quoted approvingly: "The power of alienation is necessarily incident to every estate in fee, and a condition in a devise of land in fee simple, altogether preventing alienation, is repugnant to the estate and void. No one can create what is in the intendment of the law an estate in fee simple and at the same time deprive the owner of those rights and privileges which the law annexes to it." Parks v. Wilkinson, 124 Ga. 14, 18, 67 S. E. 401, 137 Am. St. Rep. 209; Lewis v. Moore, 24 Ontario App. 393; Mims v. Machlin, 53 S. C. 6, 30 S. E. 585; Fowlkes v. Wagoner (Tenn. Ch. App.) 46 S. W. 586; Moore v. Schindehette, 102 Mich. 612, 61 N. W. 62, supra; Thompson v. Sanders, 118 Ga. 928, 45 S. E. 715.

One ground of the demurrer set up that there cannot be a partial partition. Strictly speaking, what certain of the plaintiffs are entitled to is to have their shares of property devised in the sixth item delivered to them. It is not an ordinary case of partition among cotenants. But even there, in some cases, one may have an allotment set apart to him and leave the remainder to be held in common. But, whether it be called partition or division, the right of the plaintiffs who are of age and sui juris and have vested indefeasible interests as to their shares in one-seventh of the estate cannot be defeated because there are others who are not in that condition as to their separate interests, in the absence of an intervening use, trust, or partial intestacy as to a term; nor does the possibility of some child of the testator dying without issue furnish ground for withholding the estate now vested.

[3] 3. It was contended that the eighth item of the will was violative of the rule against perpetuities and void in toto. We are not, however, prepared to so hold. That rule deals rather with the vesting of an estate than the postponement of possession, though it may sometimes have been applied to delaying possession. Prof. Gray, in discussing restraints or alienation by postponing possession of a person absolutely entitled to property, says: "If such a direction to pay or convey to a legatee at a period beyond the limit of the rule against perpetuities was, apart from the rule, valid, it would be bad as violating the rule, and the property could never be paid over or conveyed; but as it is invalid, apart from the rule, the objection of remoteness does not apply to it." Gray, Rule against Perpetuities, § 121. In this state effect is given to those limitations which are not too remote. Civil Code 1910, § 3678. As we have seen, there is no trust expressly for accumulation but only an expression of a desire or request to the executors to keep the property devised in the sixth item undivided until the time specified. It is therefore unnecessary to discuss the validity of trusts for accumulation for persons sui juris or the extent to which they may be carried.

[4] 4. As to the plaintiffs who are of age and sui juris, the action is not premature. It is not a joint suit in ejectment, and the rule that all must recover or none has no application. A partition so as to give all of the remaindermen, whether vested or contingent, allotments cannot now be had; nor can the plaintiffs who are minors now recover. But the plaintiffs who are of age and sui juris and have vested indefeasible estates are entitled, under the allegations of the petition, to their shares of the estate devised under item 6.

The allegation that the plaintiffs are tenants in common with the executors and entitled to partition on that basis should have been stricken; but it did not require the dismissal of the entire case. The allegations as to the hostile attitude of the executors and the inability of the plaintiffs to ascertain what constituted the residuum were sufficient to withstand the demurrer. There was no merit in the ground as to not specifying the interest of each legatee. Under the allegations, we think that all of the parties in interest should have been made parties to the case.

[5] 5. Inasmuch as the court sustained the demurrer on all of the grounds, we think he erred as to the real substance of the case; and we reverse the judgment and direct that the allegations as to the plaintiffs and the executors being tenants in common be stricken from the petition, and that the court allow a reasonable opportunity for the plaintiffs to make necessary parties, as herein indicated, before dismissing the action for want thereof.

Judgment reversed, with direction. All the Justices concur, except ATKINSON, J., dissenting.

HARDWICK v. CITY OF DALTON.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Sept. 29, 1911.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 544*)—STREET IMPROVEMENTS — ASSESSMENT — COLLECTION—AFFIDAVIT OF ILLEGALITY.

Where an affidavit of illegality is filed, by an owner of property abutting on a street, to an execution issued by the city council of Dalton according to statute for the grading, paving, and improvement of certain streets within that city, which by necessary implication admits that some amount is due on the execution, which is not paid to the levying officer as required by the act of 1911 (Acts 1911, p. 1097 et seq.), such affidavit is subject to general demurrer.

(a) An affidavit of illegality, which alleges that "the amount of the execution is excessive," admits by necessary implication that some amount not excessive, included therein, is due.

(b) In such a case, before an affidavit of illegality will be received, the amount admitted to be due must be paid to the levying officer.

(c) An allegation in an affidavit of illegality that there has been "included" in the amount for which the execution has issued certain sums alleged to be illegal necessarily implies that some amount included which is not illegal is due; and accordingly such affidavit will not be received until the amount admitted to be due is paid.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1256-1264; Dec. Dig. § 544.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

2. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 544*)—STREET IMPROVEMENTS—NECESSITY.

An affidavit of illegality in a proceeding to collect a street improvement assessment, alleging that plaintiff's property had been already provided with proper curbing and that no assessment could therefore be levied against him for recurbng the street, was unavailable, since the necessity of an improvement is within the discretion of the municipal authorities, and the exercise thereof will not be disturbed, unless abused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1256-1264; Dec. Dig. § 544.*]

Error from Superior Court, Whitfield County; A. W. Fite, Judge.

Action by the City of Dalton against F. T. Hardwick. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

F. K. McCutchen, C. D. McCutchen, Julian McCamy, and Sam. P. Maddox, all of Dalton, for plaintiff in error. W. C. Martin, M. C. Tarver, and W. E. Mann, all of Dalton, for defendant in error.

HILL, J. The act of the Legislature of 1910 (Acts 1910, p. 576 et seq.) authorized the city of Dalton to have certain of its streets graded, paved, and otherwise improved, and to assess one-third of the cost of such improvements against each owner of abutting property. The act also provided how the cost of such improvements could be enforced by execution. By an act of the Legislature approved July 19, 1911 (Acts 1911, p. 1097 et seq.), the right to file an affidavit of illegality to such executions issued under the act of 1910 was provided for. During the latter part of the year 1910, and the early part of the year 1911, certain streets of the city of Dalton were improved in pursuance of the act of 1910; and assessment rolls were made up by the city council, apportioning the cost of the street work between the property owners. The plaintiff in error, F. T. Hardwick, declined to pay his assessment, and execution was issued against him in conformity to the act of 1910, and was levied by the city marshal on certain lots of land located on one of the streets improved. To this levy the plaintiff filed an affidavit of illegality of the execution. General and special demurrers to the affidavit were filed by the city. The court below sustained the demurrer, and dismissed the affidavit, and the plaintiff excepted.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

There are numerous grounds of the demurrer, but we shall consider only the general ground, which we think was sufficient to authorize the court below to sustain it and dismiss the affidavit of illegality. The execution on its face shows that the amount of the plaintiff's assessment for grading, paving, constructing, and otherwise improving Crawford street, on which plaintiff had abutting property, was $731.04. As to this assessment for the Crawford street improvement there are no allegations in the affidavit of illegality which would invalidate the assessment or the execution. It is alleged in the affidavit that "no proper assessment of the costs of improving Hamilton street (on which plaintiff also has property) has been made by the city council of Dalton," etc., but no such allegation is made with reference to Crawford street. There is a general allegation that the execution is proceeding illegally because "said assessment includes the cost of curbing in front of petitioner's property, when the same was already provided with the same or similar curbing for which a charge is now made." This allegation is broad enough to include "the cost of curbing" Crawford street, but it does not include paving, constructing, and otherwise improving Crawford street, and therefore the necessary implication is that some amount is due for the work done on Crawford street other than curbing. This being true, the requirement prescribed by the act of 1911 would apply. That act provides: "Should any owners of abutting property or public service corporation desire to contest the amount of their assessment or the legality of any proceeding growing out of or connected with the paving, grading, constructing, or otherwise improving of said streets, or any portion thereof, they may do so by filing with the levying officer an affidavit of illegality and stating therein the cause of such illegality, and the amount admitted to be due, which amount so admitted to be due shall be paid to the levying officer before the affidavit shall be received; and the affidavit shall be returned to the superior court of Whitfield county, there to be tried and the issue determined as in cases of illegality," etc. No amount was paid, or tendered, by the plaintiff in this case as being due.

[2] It is alleged in the affidavit of illegality that the plaintiff's property was already provided with proper curbing, and hence an assessment could not be levied against him for the purpose of recurring the streets on which his property was located. This contention is without merit. In the case of Bacon v. Mayor, etc., of Savannah, 105 Ga. 62, 31 S. E. 127, it was held: "Questions touching the necessity for improvements placed upon a street, and the nature and terms of the contract entered into by the city with contractors who undertake the work, are in the sound discretion of the municipal authorities, and their action will not be controlled by the courts, unless such discretion is manifestly abused." And to the same effect see Regenstein v. Atlanta, 98 Ga. 167, 25 S. E. 428; Burckhardt v. Atlanta, 108 Ga. 302, 30 S. E. 32. There is no allegation in the affidavit of illegality in the present case that the discretion of the mayor and council of the city of Dalton was abused in ordering the improvements made on the streets in question, or in making the assessment against the defendant therefor.

[1] The last ground of the affidavit alleges that "the amount of the execution is excessive." We think the necessary implication from this language is that some amount is due. It is true that in the conclusion of the affidavit it is alleged that "because of the facts herein set out deponent insists that he owes the city nothing." But it will be seen from "the facts" set out in the affidavit of illegality that the only reference to Crawford street is as to the recurring, which does not include the other improvements made on that street. It necessarily follows that something must be due for those improvements, the amount of which not having been paid as required by the act of 1911, or tendered, the illegality is subject to the general demurrer filed against it. The court did not err in sustaining the general demurrer, and, regardless of the grounds of special demurrer, the dismissal of the case was proper.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices con-CUR.

WALLACE v. CITY OF ATLANTA.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 2, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 269*)—POWERS—REPAVING SIDEWALKS.

The city of Atlanta issued against Wallace an execution for the cost of repaving a sidewalk upon which abutted property owned by him. This execution was levied upon his property, and he filed an affidavit of illegality, which, upon the trial, was dismissed on demurrer. Held, the mayor and general council of the city of Atlanta, have, under its charter, power and authority to order such pavements or sidewalks laid as they deem proper (Code of Atlanta 1910, § 340, p. 359); and the power to pave includes the power to repave when the sidewalk becomes so much worn or defective as to be no longer useful.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 718-724, 733; Dec. Dig. § 269.*]

2. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 292*)—REPAVING SIDEWALKS—PETITION.

The provision in section 346, par. 8, of the Code of the City of Atlanta, touching a petition in writing by the owners of at least one-half of the real estate abutting on the street, providing that such petition shall have the approval of the chief of construction, has no reference, and is not a prerequisite, to the exercise of the power to order a repavement of the sidewalk. See act approved September 3, 1881 (Acts 1880-81, p. 359), being an act to amend the charter of the city of Atlanta.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 768-772; Dec. Dig. § 292.*]

3. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 294*)—REPAVING SIDEWALKS—PUBLICATION OF NOTICE.

Nor do the provisions for the publication of notice, in section 347 of the Code of the City of Atlanta of 1910, having reference to action taken or proposed to be taken by the city authorities in regard to the repavement of the sidewalk; but these are applicable to cases in which it is necessary that the owners of at least one-half the real estate abutting on the street to be paved file a petition.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 776-783, 791; Dec. Dig. § 294.*]

4. EXECUTION (§ 167*)—AFFIDAVIT OF ILLGALITY—SUFFICIENCY.

The remaining ground of the affidavit of illegality, in which the affiant seeks to show that the action of the city council in ordering the laying of the pavement for which the assessment was made was arbitrary and fraudulent, is not sufficient for that purpose. The statement that "deponent alleges that he is advised and believes, and so charges the fact to be, that the recitals in said ordinance whereunder said assessment is made, to the effect that 'the paving originally laid is worn out to that extent that it is no longer useful as a good pavement,' are false and fraudulent, and were so known to be by the members of the general council introducing said ordinance, and that the mayor and other members of the general council were deceived and misled into adopting said ordinance by the aforesaid false and fraudulent representations of the members so introducing the same," does not amount to a sufficiently direct and affirmative allegation that the council itself took fraudulent action in the matter; and therefore this ground failed to raise an issue which the court was bound to submit to a jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 488, 489; Dec. Dig. § 167.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Chas. B. Wallace filed an affidavit of illegality to an execution issued by the City of Atlanta against his property for the cost of repaving a sidewalk. From a judgment dismissing the affidavit, he brings error. Affirmed.

J. D. Kilpatrick and Holbrook & Corbett, all of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. J. L. Mayson and W. D. Ellis, Jr., both of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

ATLANTA & C. RY. CO. v. CAROLINA PORTLAND CEMENT CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 2, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CORPORATIONS (§ 556*)—APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER—PERSONS ENTITLED TO APPLY.

Three general creditors, holding small claims against an electric interurban railway company, without lien upon the property, or interest therein, or claim thereto, have no right to have a receiver appointed, by alleging insolvency on the part of the company, and inability to complete the building of the road, and to carry out the enterprise for which it was organized. Dodge v. Pyrolusite Manganese Co., 69 Ga. 665; Scott v. Jones, 74 Ga. 762 (4); Guilmartin v. Middle Ga., etc., Ry. Co., 101 Ga. 585, 29 S. E. 189; McKenzie v. Thomas, 118 Ga. 728 (6), 736, 45 S. E. 610; Barnesville Mfg. Co. v. Schofield Co., 118 Ga. 684, 45 S. E. 455; Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Provident, etc., Ins. Co., 126 Ga. 50, 54 S. E. 929; Spence v. Solomons Co., 126 Ga. 81, 58 S. E. 463; Civ. Code 1910, § 5495.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 2219-2226; Dec. Dig. § 556.*]

2. PARTIES (§ 47*)—CORPORATIONS (§ 557*)—RECEIVERS—INTERVENTION—RIGHTS OF INTERVENERS.

Interveners take the case as they find it. Charleston, etc., Co. v. Pope, 122 Ga. 577, 50 S. E. 374; Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Knickerbocker Trust Co., 125 Ga. 463, 54 S. E. 138; McCaskill v. Bower, 126 Ga. 341, 343, 54 S. E. 942; Booth v. State, 131 Ga. 750 (4), 760, 63 S. E. 502. The filing of an intervention by two attorneys, who claimed that the defendant owed them attorney's fees, which were to be paid from the proceeds of the sale of bonds issued by the company, or from the proceeds of other property, or from other funds, not alleging that there were any such funds arising from the sale of bonds, or showing that they had any interest therein, did not save the petition of the original creditors from being demurrable, and was itself demurrable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Parties, Cent. Dig. § 74; Dec. Dig. § 47; Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 2227, 2228, 2230-2236; Dec. Dig. § 557.*]

3. CORPORATIONS (§ 557*)—RECEIVERS—APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT—FILING OF INTERVENTION—EFFECT.

Neither did the filing of an intervention by several individual bondholders, who showed no reason why they had a right to proceed otherwise than through the trustees, to whom mortgages were given to secure the payment of the bonds, suffice to save the original petition from demurrer; and such intervention was itself demurrable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 2227, 2228, 2230-2236; Dec. Dig. § 557.*]

4. CORPORATIONS (§ 557*)—APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER—DEMURRER—ANSWER.

The trustees of the bondholders were made parties defendant to the petition. They filed an answer, in which they stated that for want of information they were unable to admit or deny the substantial allegations made by the petition. They alleged, on information and belief, that an execution had been levied on the furniture and other property contained in the office of the company, and it had been closed; that suit had been brought against it by the holder of a note for $10,000; that in order to acquire a continuous right of way for its railway, in certain instances, condemnation proceedings had been taken and assessment of damages had been made, but that the amounts assessed had not been paid by the company, and title had not been acquired; and that taxes were due and had not been paid. They averred that their only interest was that the property and franchises of the company should be conserved for the benefit of the bondholders, whom they represented. They prayed that strict proof be made of all the allegations of the original petition and intervention, that the court make due investigation of the affirmative allegations made in its answer, and "if, in the judgment of the court it is necessary for the best interests of said bondholders that receiver be appointed," that the court so direct. The mortgage was not set out, nor were there any allegations appropriate to its foreclosure. Held, that the filing of this answer furnished no reason against the sustaining of the demurrer filed by the corporation to the original petition and the interventions.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 2227, 2228, 2230-2233; Dec. Dig. § 557.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Action by the Carolina Portland Cement Company and others against the Atlanta & Carolina Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Simmons & Simmons, of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Evins & Spence, Slaton & Phillips, E. V. Carter, and Robt. C. & Philip H. Alston, all of Atlanta, for defendants in error.

FISH, C. J. Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

LOUISVILLE & N. R. CO. v. HENDERSON et al.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 2, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

NEW TRIAL (§ 68*)—GROUNDS—VERDICT NOT SUPPORTED BY EVIDENCE.

The action was brought by two plaintiffs against a railroad company to recover damages for the burning, by the alleged negligence of the defendant, of certain property which it was claimed belonged jointly to the plaintiffs. The verdict for the plaintiffs, which was for the full amount sued for, was not authorized by the evidence, because joint ownership as to much of the property was not proved.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 135-140; Dec. Dig. § 68.*]

Error from Superior Court, Bartow County; A. W. Fite, Judge.

Suit by John Henderson and another against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

D. W. Blair, of Marietta, and Neel & Neel, of Cartersville, for plaintiff in error. Geo. H. Aubrey and Jno. T. Norris, both of Cartersville, for defendants in error.

FISH, C. J. John Henderson and Frank Henderson brought a joint action against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company to recover damages sustained by reason of the burning of a barn belonging to the plaintiffs, and certain live stock and other personalty also owned by them and in the barn at the time it was burned. The petition alleged that the burning of the barn and its contents was caused by the negligence of the defendant company and its agents, in and about the running of its locomotive, by negligently and carelessly throwing out sparks therefrom. The petition was specially demurred to on many grounds, all of which were sustained, except one, which was to the paragraph of the petition which merely sought to set forth a portion of the evidence upon which plaintiffs relied. There was a verdict for the plaintiffs. The defendant moved for a new trial, which was refused, and it excepted. The defendant also excepted to the overruling of the one ground of special demurrer to the petition. This exception is not of sufficient importance to require special notice. The motion for new trial contains many grounds; but, as we are of the opinion that the judgment must be reversed on the general grounds that the verdict was contrary to the evidence and without evidence to support it, we deem it unnecessary to pass on the other grounds of the motion.

As noted above, the petition alleged joint ownership of the barn in the plaintiffs. There was no evidence whatever to sustain this allegation. It is true that the plaintiffs put in evidence two deeds, one of which conveyed a described half acre of land to one of the plaintiffs. The other deed conveyed a described parcel of four acres of land to the other plaintiff. While it could be legitimately inferred from the evidence that these two parcels of land were in the vicinity of the barn which was burned, there was no evidence even tending to show that it was situate on land jointly owned by the plaintiffs, nor, indeed, that it was on land owned by either of them. The verdict was in a round sum, and there was considerable evidence as to the value of the barn. It is apparent that its valuation entered into the amount of damages allowed. Moreover, it appeared from the evidence that much of the personalty was the individual property of one of the plaintiffs, and the evidence as to whether the other plaintiff owned an interest in the other portions of the property burned was quite vague and unsatisfactory.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

There was no evidence authorizing recovery by the plaintiffs for the property burned, and this is the character of verdict rendered in their behalf. Therefore the verdict is authorized by the evidence, and all should have been granted. E. & Tennille R. Co. v. Holmes, 11 S. E. 658; East Tenn. Va. v. Herrman, 92 Ga. 384 (3), 385, 400; Comer v. Newman, 95 Ga. 434, 441. If the ruling made, it is not necessary to decide the other questions presented.

reversed. All the Justices con-

ECHOLS v. GREEN.

Court of Georgia. Oct. 4, 1913.)

Syllabus by the Court.)

Cloud on Title (§ 7*)—CLOUD ON TITLE—DEED.

A deed of equity will cause to be delivered a forged deed, which casts a cloud on the title of the true owner. Smith v. Ga. 10, 76 S. E. 362.

—For other cases, Quieting Title, § 14-33; Dec. Dig. § 7.*]

Husband and Wife (§ 185*)—TRANSACTIONS BETWEEN—EFFECT OF SEPARATION.

Provision of Civil Code 1910, § 3009, reads, "No contract of sale of a wife's separate estate with her husband or shall be valid, unless the same is allowed by the superior court of the wife's domicile," makes no exception, to sales by the wife of her separate estate to her husband while they are living in separation, as well as while they are married.

—For other cases, see Husband and Wife, § 720; Dec. Dig. § 185.*]

Husband and Wife (§§ 185, 201*)—TRANSACTIONS BETWEEN—BY SUPERIOR COURT—STARE DECISIVE OF COURT OF EQUITY—LACHES—DEED.

Under this law, a sale by a married woman and, without being allowed by the superior court of the county of her residence, is not only voidable, but void. Hood v. Ga. 310; Fulgham v. Pate, 77 Ga. 310; Philip v. Kear, 131 Ga. 688, 63 S. E. 248; Buchanan v. Ga. 392, 69 S. E. 543.

decisions have long stood, and a reversal thereof is denied.

The doctrine of the cases cited is that a wife, continuing in possession of the property, cannot be chargeable with laches in moving the deed, though as many as 10 years have elapsed since its execution by her. Warrus, supra.

of the character above mentioned being void, the wife will not be estopped, as against the husband, from setting up that it is void, on account of the circumstances that the deed, which conveys the property to her husband, reserving a life estate to herself, was executed while the husband and wife were living in a state of separation, and that she received a consideration.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Husband and Wife, Cent. Dig. §§ 720, 735; Dec. Dig. §§ 185, 201; * Courts, Cent. Dig. §§ 311, 312; Dec. Dig. § 89.*]

4. PLEADING (§ 64*)—MULTIFARIOUSNESS.

A petition in an action in a court of equity to cancel a deed as a cloud upon title, which alleges that the deed is void for separate reasons, namely: (a) That it is a forgery; and (b) that it represents a contract of sale by a wife of her separate estate to her husband without having been allowed by an order of the superior court—will not be dismissed on the ground of multifariousness because of the inconsistency in the grounds relied on for declaring the deed void. See Civil Code 1910, §§ 5514, 5521, 5489 (2); Nail v. Mobley, 9 Ga. 278; Armstrong v. Penn. 105 Ga. 229, 31 S. E. 158; Cutter v. Iowa Water Co. (C. C.) 96 Fed. 777.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 134-137; Dec. Dig. § 64.*]

5. EQUITY (§ 66*)—HUSBAND AND WIFE (§ 201*)—AVOIDANCE OF CONVEYANCE—MAXIMS—HE WHO SEEKS EQUITY MUST DO EQUITY.

He who would have equity must do equity, and give effect to all equitable rights of the other parties respecting the subject-matter of the suit. Civil Code 1910, § 4521; Bispham's Equity, § 43, p. 66. Accordingly, a petition to a court of equity to cancel a deed as a cloud upon the title of the grantor, on the basis that it was void as representing a sale by a wife of her separate estate to her husband for a valuable consideration, without an order of the superior court of her domicile, when there was no offer to return the consideration recited and acknowledged in the deed to have been received, is demurrable. Campbell v. Murray, 82 Ga. 86; Beach v. Lattner, 101 Ga. 357, 28 S. E. 110; Booth v. Atlanta Clearing House Ass'n, 132 Ga. 100, 63 S. E. 907. The ruling here made does not conflict with the decisions in the cases of Shuford v. Alexander, 74 Ga. 293, Gibbs v. Land, 136 Ga. 261, 71 S. E. 136, and Milner v. Vandivere, 86 Ga. 546, 12 S. E. 879, where the petitions were seeking a merely legal right and in no sense an equitable relief.

(a) The judge committed error in refusing to dismiss that part of the petition which was attacked by the ground of demurrer dealt with in this note.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Cent. Dig. §§ 188-190; Dec. Dig. § 66; * Husband and Wife, Cent. Dig. § 735; Dec. Dig. § 201.*]

6. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 882*)—REVIEW—INVITED ERROR.

The plaintiff's petition for cancellation of a deed was based on two grounds: First, that it was a forgery; and, second, that it was made by a wife (the plaintiff's ward) to her husband without an order of court. The defendant demurred to the petition, and in the preceding headnote it has been held that the last ground asserted as a basis for cancellation should have been stricken. The defendant also alleged that he had paid to his wife a consideration, including the surrender of certain claims against her predecessor in title, which had since become barred; and he prayed that he have a money judgment for the amount thereof against the wife, in the event that a cancellation should be obtained. Held, that the defendant having succeeded in striking from the plaintiff's petition that part of it which sought cancellation of the deed on the ground that she made it without an order of the court, leaving the petition solely upon the theory that the plaintiff made no deed to the husband, it furnishes no ground for reversal on behalf of the defendant that the court struck from his answer that part of it which sought to recover a judgment against the plaintiff in case there should be a decree of cancellation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3591-3610; Dec. Dig. § 882.*]

7. DEMURRER PROPERLY SUSTAINED.

Other grounds of demurrer, both to the petition and answer, were without merit.

Error from Superior Court, Oglethorpe County; D. W. Meadow, Judge.

Suit between J. W. Echols and J. Howell Green, as guardian. Judgment for the latter, and the former brings error. Reversed in part and affirmed in part.

Sibley & McWhorter, of Lexington, and Sam'l H. Sibley, of Union Point, for plaintiff in error. Green, Tilson & McKinney, of Atlanta, and Paul Brown, of Lexington, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. Judgment reversed in part, and affirmed in part. All the Justices concur.

HANCOCK v. ROGERS, Sheriff.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 4, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1001*)—SUSPENSION OF SENTENCE—POWER OF CITY COURT.

On February 22, 1913, in the city court of Pulaski county, Emory Hancock entered a plea of guilty to a charge of misdemeanor in an indictment against him for such offense, transferred by the superior court of that county to the city court. The judge of the city court thereupon passed the following order: "Sentence suspended and defendant allowed to go on his own recognizance, provided he move from Pulaski county." On May 27, 1913, Hancock was brought before the city court of Pulaski county upon the charge of gambling, and demanded an indictment by the grand jury, tendering bond for his appearance. While thus before that court the presiding judge sentenced him, on the plea of guilty entered on February 22d, to confinement in the state farm for 12 months. Hancock subsequently sued out a writ of habeas corpus, on the ground that he was illegally restrained of his liberty, because the sentence imposed on him by the city court judge was void, for the reason that the city court lost jurisdiction of the case upon the judge passing the order indefinitely postponing the imposition of the sentence, and because he was sentenced without being called upon in writing to show cause why the sentence should not be imposed. The judge of the superior court, who presided in the habeas corpus proceedings, on June 10, 1913, refused to discharge Hancock, and remanded him to the custody of the sheriff. Hancock excepted to the judgment. Held, that it has been held in a number of cases by this court that a judge of the superior court of this state has no authority to suspend the execution of a sentence imposed by him in a criminal case, except as incidental to a review of the judgment under which the sentence was imposed. Daniel v. Persons, 137 Ga. 826, 74 S. E. 260, and cases cited; Short v. Dowling, 138 Ga. 834, 76 S. E. 359.

(a) The same is true as to the judge of a city court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3922, 3923-3934; Dec. Dig. § 1001.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 982*)—IMPOSITION OF PUNISHMENT—POWER TO SUSPEND—CITY COURT.

A trial judge has no more authority to indefinitely suspend the imposition of the punishment prescribed by law upon one who has been found guilty of a crime, or has entered a plea of guilty, than to indefinitely suspend the execution of a sentence after its imposition. Neal v. State, 104 Ga. 509, 30 S. E. 858, 42 L. R. A. 180, 69 Am. St. Rep. 176.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3877-3879; Dec. Dig. § 982.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§§ 982, 989*)—SENTENCE—ERRONEOUS SUSPENSION—SUBSEQUENT IMPOSITION.

The city court judge was not without jurisdiction, by reason of the order suspending sentence, to subsequently impose the sentence; nor was it necessary that a rule nisi should have been issued, calling upon the defendant to show cause why the sentence should not have been imposed. See cases above cited; Fuller v. State, 100 Miss. 811, 57 South. 806, 89 L. R. A. (N. S.) 242, and cases there cited; Hoggett v. State, 101 Miss. 269, 57 South. 811; 12 Cyc. 772.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3877-3879, 3897; Dec. Dig. §§ 982, 989.*]

4. DENIAL OF WRIT APPROVED.

Accordingly the judgment rendered by the judge of the superior court on the habeas corpus proceedings is affirmed.

Error from Superior Court, Pulaski County; E. D. Graham, Judge.

Application for writ of habeas corpus by Emory Hancock against J. R. Rogers, Sheriff. From a judgment denying the application, Hancock brings error. Affirmed.

M. H. Boyer, of Hawkinsville, for plaintiff in error. Marion Turner and W. L. & Warren Grice, all of Hawkinsville, for defendant in error.

FISH, C. J. Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

LOUISVILLE & N. R. CO. v. KEMP.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 2, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. COMMERCE (§ 27*)—EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT—EMPLOYEES ENGAGED IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The uncontradicted evidence in the case shows that the plaintiff, at the time he received the injuries complained of, was engaged in interstate commerce; and the charge of the court to the jury upon this question was not error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Commerce, Cent. Dig. § 25; Dec. Dig. § 27.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§§ 285, 278*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—BURDEN OF PROOF—EVIDENCE.

There was no evidence in the case to support the allegations of the petition showing negligence upon the part of the defendant railroad company or its employes, and the verdict was unauthorized by the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 877-908, 954-958, 960-969, 971, 972, 977; Dec. Dig. §§ 285, 278.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 291*)—COMMERCE (§ 8*)—INSTRUCTIONS—FEDERAL ACT SUPERSEDING STATE STATUTE.

The court erred in giving in charge to the jury the provisions of the state statute raising a presumption against the railroad company upon proof of injuries by the running of its locomotives or cars.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 1133, 1134, 1136-1146; Dec. Dig. § 291.* Commerce, Cent. Dig. § 5; Dec. Dig. § 8.*]

Error from Superior Court, Gordon County; A. W. Fite, Judge.

Action by James Kemp against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

O. N. Starr, of Calhoun, Tye, Peeples & Jordan, of Atlanta, and D. W. Blair, of Marietta, for plaintiff in error. Geo. F. Gober, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. This was an action under federal Employers' Liability Act April 22, 1908, 35 Stat. 65, c. 149 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), to recover for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff through the negligence of the defendant and the employes of the plaintiff. It was alleged as follows: The defendant, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, a railroad corporation of the state of Tennessee, operates a line of railroad in Georgia, in Tennessee, and in other states. The plaintiff was in the employment of the defendant as a foreman of a section of its railroad, and had charge of a force of section hands and track hands employed by the defendant in and upon that section. His duty required him to inspect and maintain the track and roadway upon said section. On the 22d day of May, 1909, in pursuance of orders received, he started over the section to inspect the track and roadbed, and in carrying out said order he placed a hand car upon the track, and with said hands in his charge thereon proceeded along the track, preceded by a flagman whose duty it was to give warning to approaching trains of the proximity of the hand car and to warn the hand car occupants of approaching trains. When they had proceeded some distance along the track, a freight train, not on schedule time, and running at a high and dangerous rate of speed, approached the hand car, and, without slackening speed, continued to approach, endangering the lives of plaintiff and the hands with him, placing them in an emergency calling for prompt action. To prevent a collision the plaintiff and his hands removed the car from the track. It was heavy and unwieldy, and required the utmost effort and energy on the part of plaintiff and the hands to remove it. In removing the car the plaintiff strained and exerted himself, and was injured by the negligent handling of the car by the hands under him; they lifted the car too much on one side and pushed it too far towards the side on which plaintiff was, and caused it to turn over, thereby injuring him in a manner specifically described in the petition. Negligence was charged also in that the flagman who preceded the car did not warn the freight train of the proximity of the same, and did not give warning to those on the hand car, that the employes in charge of the freight train ran it at a dangerous rate of speed, to wit, 50 or 60 miles an hour, and that they were negligent in running by and passing the flagman, and in not stopping the train, seeing the proximity of the hand car. The freight train was engaged in interstate commerce, handling freight from points in various states to points in this and other states; and the track upon which plaintiff and the section hands were working was for the passage of interstate trains as well as for intrastate trains.

[1] 1. The evidence sustained the allegations of the petition to the effect that at the time the plaintiff received the injuries complained of he was, with a force of hands in his charge, in pursuance of an order received from the proper authorities of the road, going over the track, making an inspection of the entire roadway of his section, roadbed and waterways, that the freight train, in consequence of the alleged negligent running of which he was injured, was engaged in interstate commerce, and that the railway track over which the freight train was being operated was used in both interstate and intrastate commerce. Consequently, under the ruling in the case of Pedersen v. Delaware, etc., Railroad Co., 229 U. S. 146, 33 Sup. Ct. 648, 57 L. Ed. 1125, the plaintiff was engaged in interstate commerce at the time of receiving the alleged injuries of which he complained.

[2] 2. While, under the provisions of the employers' liability act referred to above, contributory negligence upon the part of an injured employe does not bar a recovery, before the injured employe can establish liability for injuries suffered by him while employed by the carrier it is necessary for him to show by his evidence that the injuries received resulted in whole or in part from the negligence of the defendant carrier, its agents or employes. And after a careful examination of the evidence in this case we are of the opinion that the evidence fails to show negligence chargeable to the defendant carrier or any of its employes or agents. The allegations of negligence are not supported by any evidence introduced on the trial. The plaintiff was the only witness who gave testimony as to the manner in which he was injured. His testimony shows that at the time of receiving the injury he was going over his section of the track upon a hand car, with a force of hands under him. There had been rain the night before, and he was making an inspection of the entire roadway of his section, the roadbed and waterways, for the purpose of making a report as to the condition of the track. He had proceeded about a mile and a half over the road, and on approaching a curve, and being about 150 yards from it, he sent forward a flagman, who, soon after reaching the curve, gave the plaintiff a signal to remove the hand car. There were four employes on the car besides the plaintiff, at the time the signal was received. No train was due under the schedule at that time. The plaintiff testified that the freight train which they met "was running fast, but that was nothing unusual. Freight trains over there have a fast schedule; the road is comparatively straight, and they run fast. I knew they run fast, and learned it the first day I was out on the road. I had been in charge of that section from the 23d of March until the 22d of May. There was nothing unusual for an extra train to be running over there; we expect them at any time; in fact we were on the lookout all the time for freight trains. Passenger trains had a regular schedule, and a lot of freight had a regular schedule; but a great deal of the freight handled on the line was by trains that were run extra, or had no schedule at all, so we had to be on the lookout for those trains all the time. I had to look out for them; they did not look out for me. In fact everything on the road had the right of way over my lever car; and it was having that in mind that caused me to send forward this flagman. I did not know what was around the curve. I did not know what minute one of these great big engines would hop around there, coming steaming around there. I sent the flagman because I knew the engineer wasn't on lookout for me; they don't look out for nothing, horses, men, or nothing; if a rail was out, they might look out for the track. In sending out a flag I was doing what the company required me to do—look out for trains and flag around all curves. As far as I know, Mr. Gravett [the flagman sent ahead] gave me a signal just as soon as he discovered a freight train was coming." The plaintiff further testified that when he received the signal to remove his car from the track, the car being loaded heavily, he jumped off to assist the men in removing the car; that when the gang was small he was expected to take hold and help the men; "it was part of my duty to do that." The bank was very steep, sleek and rough; and he slipped and fell, and the car came over on him, and he became unconscious, remembering nothing further. When he slipped and fell he was trying to get the car off—"easing down the bank with the car." The car went to the bottom of the ditch. The plaintiff did not remember how far that was from the track. The ditch was something like 3½ feet deep. The train was coming before they took the car off; he saw the smoke of it, could not tell at what rate of speed it was running, but it was running pretty fast.

In all of the plaintiff's testimony there is no evidence to show any negligence whatever upon the part of the employes who were operating the freight train, nor upon the part of the employes who were engaged with him in removing the hand car. There is no suggestion in the evidence that the freight train ran at a too high rate of speed, or that there was not time to remove the car safely from the track, or that any one of the section hands whom the plaintiff was assisting in the removal of the hand car from the track was negligent in any respect whatever. The injuries he received were the result of an accident, pure and simple, in no way brought about by negligence upon the part of others. And the defendant railroad company, as it appears from this evidence, being free from all negligence, was free from liability.

[3] 3. The plaintiff has based his right of action upon the provisions of the federal act referred to above; and the rights of the plaintiff and the liability of the defendant are to be determined by that act, and under the construction of its terms. So far as the subject-matter of this suit is concerned, the act of Congress supersedes the legislation of the state, which would have covered the subject in the absence of federal legislation; and, while the case was tried in the state court, it is to be tried under the provisions of the federal statute. That being true, apart from any consideration as to the correctness of the charge in itself, the court should not have charged the provisions of the state statute, which raises a presumption in certain cases against a railroad company upon proof of injury by the running of its locomotives or cars.

In view of the ruling which we have made in the second division of this opinion, reversing the judgment of the court below upon the ground that the verdict was without evidence to support it, thereby disposing of the case upon its merits, we do not think it necessary to discuss certain portions of the charge which the plaintiff in error contends in its motion for a new trial were erroneous.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

MOUGHON v. MASTERSON.

Court of Georgia. Oct. 14, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

DECEES (§ 427*)—FORECLOSURE—PETITION FOR EFFICIENCY AS AGAINST DEMURRER. A mortgage was given by a man upon certain land belonging to which had been set apart as a homestead by the Constitution of 1868. A foreclosure it was begun in 1876. The wife interposed pleas, setting up the homestead, and that the mortgage was not subject to it. This plea was dismissed. In 1900 the husband died, and in 1908 the wife died, thus leaving the homestead right. In 1910 a mortgagee filed a petition against the administrator of the husband, alleging that he had sold the land, and that the lien of the mortgage had been transferred to the mortgagee. The mortgagee died, leaving a son and only two heirs; that the plaintiff appointed administrator, and administrator; that the sister of the plaintiff, as the other heir, died intestate, leaving her husband as her sole heir, and he took possession of her estate without administration; that the plaintiff settled with him in full for his interest in the estate of the mortgagee, and took an assignment from him of all his interest in any claim or debt due the mortgagee's estate; and that the plaintiff was discharged as administrator. He alone had both the legal and equitable title to the mortgage, and prayed a decree settling the amount thereof against the administrator, and for relief. Held, that the petition was barred on the ground that it was not an administrator of the mortgagee, but that a personal representative of the mortgagee's estate was a party, or that the husband of the sister should have been joined as a party.

Mortgage was not merely upon the land, but upon the "estate," but on the land, and the mortgagee proceeded to foreclose it was barred.

—For other cases, see Mortgages, §§ 1269, 1272-1287; Dec. Dig. § 1272.

DECEES (§ 458*) — FORECLOSURE — CURE BY AMENDMENT.

Demurrers based on the ground that the mortgage or of the record in litigation was attached to the petition insufficiently met by amendment.

—For other cases, see Mortgages, §§ 1339-1342; Dec. Dig. § 458.*

AD (§ 115*)—MORTGAGE—ACTION FOR LOSS—LIMITATION.

The facts stated in the first headnote. The proceeding was not demurrable on the ground that it was barred by the statute of limitations.

—For other cases, see Homestead, §§ 183, 184, 186-190; Dec. Dig. § 183.

DECEES AND ADMINISTRATORS (§ 402*)—PROPERTY—PROCEEDS—RIGHT OF ACTION.

Such facts the plaintiff could prove that he was entitled to have the proceeds of the sale of the land out of the proceeds of the sale. He was not entitled to a judgment or decree in excess of such proceeds, and his claim would be subject to proper defenses.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. § 1808; Dec. Dig. § 402.*]

5. MORTGAGES (§ 417*)—FORECLOSURE—PARTIES.

The other grounds of the demurrer were without merit.

(a) Under the special facts of this case, as alleged by the plaintiff, he could proceed for the purpose of having the mortgage held by him satisfied from the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged land, which had been sold at administrator's sale by the administrator of the mortgage, and it was not necessary to have a second administration upon the estate of the mortgagee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 1227-1236; Dec. Dig. § 417.*]

Error from Superior Court, Jones County; Jas. B. Park, Judge.

Action by Wallace Masterson against L. J. Moughon, administrator. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Hardeman, Jones, Park & Johnston, of Macon, for plaintiff in error. Sam'l H. Sibley, of Union Point, and Johnson & Johnson, of Gray, for defendant in error.

LUMPKIN, J. [1] 1. The main facts are stated in the first headnote. Other facts will be stated as necessary. The mortgage given by William S. Moughon and Alice K. Moughon to Clement Masterson in 1875 was upon the land which had been set apart as a homestead, and not merely upon the "homestead estate." The proceeding to foreclose it was also against the land. The grounds of the demurrer in the present case based on the theory that the mortgage and the foreclosure proceeding were confined to something less than the land itself are without merit. The petition alleged that the mortgage was given to Clement Masterson; that he died, leaving a solvent estate and only two heirs, the present plaintiff and his sister; that the plaintiff was appointed administrator, and administered the estate; that his sister died intestate, leaving her husband as her sole heir at law, and the husband took possession of her estate without administration; that plaintiff settled with him in full as to the estate, and took an assignment from him of all interest he might have in any claim or debt due to the mortgagee's estate, including that now involved; and that the plaintiff was discharged as administrator. Under these allegations the petition was not demurrable on the ground that an administrator of the mortgagee was the proper party to bring the action, or that a personal representative of the plaintiff's sister was a necessary party, or that the husband of the sister as an individual should have been joined as a party plaintiff.

[2] 2. The special demurrers based on the ground that certain exhibits should have been attached were met by amendment.

See also same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[3] 3. In 1876 proceedings were begun to foreclose the mortgage on the land. Moughon and his wife filed pleas, setting up, among other things, that the mortgaged property had been set apart as a homestead before the mortgage was given. The plea of the wife expressly negated the fact that the mortgage was given for any of the objects for which the "homestead estate" could be incumbered. The presiding judge struck these pleas, and granted a rule absolute foreclosing the mortgage. Exception was taken, and the case was brought to this court. Here the judgment was reversed. Moughon v. Masterson, 59 Ga. 835. Bleckley, J., delivering the opinion, said that, assuming the plea of the wife to be true, the mortgage could not be enforced against the property, while the homestead right was in existence; that it might be that it could be so enforced after the homestead right had terminated, but that, if so, it was because the mortgage bound whatever was beyond the "homestead estate" proper. He then added: "Whether it does so or not need not now be decided. Granting that it does, the choice would lie between rendering a judgment of foreclosure now, with a stay of sale until the homestead right is extinct ([Colquitt v. Tarver] 45 Ga. 631), and postponing foreclosure, as well as sale, until after the happening of that contingency. At all events, if the matter of the wife's plea is supported by evidence at the trial, the mortgage cannot be foreclosed against the homestead estate, either now or hereafter. It was error to strike the plea." It will be seen that this decision intimates (what we now hold) that the proceeding was against the land itself in which the homestead had been granted, and that the effort to foreclose was against the property, including what is sometimes spoken of as a homestead estate or right therein, as well as the reversionary interest; these words being used for want of better descriptive terms, though not strictly accurate. The decision held that a plea which sought to prevent a foreclosure so as to interfere with the homestead right, or, as it was called, a foreclosure against the homestead estate, was good, and that a foreclosure could not take place so as to interfere with the homestead right or "estate." What, then, was to be the result of such a plea, if sustained? Judge Bleckley clearly indicated that it might be one of two things, either to allow a foreclosure, with a provision staying the sale until the homestead right should become extinct, or a postponement of the foreclosure, as well as the sale, until after the happening of that contingency. When the case was returned to the court below, the plaintiff acted upon this statement, and dismissed the proceedings, recognizing the existence of the homestead, and awaiting its termination before commencing the foreclosure.

It was contended by counsel for the plaintiff in error that the statement above mentioned was obiter dictum, and that the mortgagee was compelled to foreclose his mortgage at least within 20 years from the time when the debt became due, or that the foreclosure would be barred by the statute of limitations, and that this foreclosure must be had, although the homestead right still continued. In other words, the contention was that the mortgagee was compelled to proceed with the foreclosure pending the existence of the homestead, though he could not sell the property until after the termination thereof. Under the decision above cited we do not think that this result follows. A mortgage foreclosure is different from a judgment in an ordinary suit in this: In the latter the lien is created by the judgment; in the former it is created by the contract. Where suit is brought for a breach of contract or for a tort, and judgment is recovered, it creates a lien upon the leviable property of the defendant, and the execution requires the sum to be made of his real or personal estate. It can be prevented from becoming dormant by entries of nulla bona, and proper entries on the docket, and the levying officer may make such entry, notwithstanding the existence of property in which a homestead is taken, because it would not be subject to seizure and sale under the execution. But a judgment of foreclosure of a mortgage is quite different from an ordinary judgment. It is not a general judgment in personam, and binds only the mortgaged property. It is a judgment to enforce a specific lien, created by agreement of the parties. "It is not alone a judgment as to the amount due on the mortgage, but it is also a judgment that the property mortgaged shall be sold to pay the sum adjudged to be due. The statute authorizes, indeed requires, the judgment to go to that extent." Wallace v. Holly, 13 Ga. 389, 393 (58 Am. Dec. 518). Of what avail would it be to obtain such a judgment, directing the seizure and sale only of the mortgaged property, when the mandate could not be obeyed during the continuance of the homestead right? The plaintiff could not well have an entry of nulla bona made thereon, because the judgment itself is a command to seize and sell certain property. The mortgagee has as much lien on the property before foreclosure as he has afterward, and requiring the mortgagee to obtain a judgment directing a levy and sale of the specific property, which the law would not permit to be enforced pending the homestead, would seem, during that time, to be a legal demand for a brutum fulmen.

It must be borne in mind that this homestead was granted under the Constitution of 1868, and the mortgage was given upon the land in 1875. Accordingly its validity is to be tested by the provisions of that Constitution, and not by those of the Constitution of 1877. Huntress v. Anderson, 110 Ga. 427, 35 S. E. 671, 78 Am. St. Rep. 105; Waters v. Waters, 124 Ga. 349, 52 S. E. 425. Under the ruling in the case above cited in 59 Ga. we are satisfied that the mortgagee was not compelled to proceed with a foreclosure of the mortgage pending the existence of the homestead, on pain of having such foreclosure barred by the statute of limitations, if not commenced within 20 years from the date when the debt fell due. Suit on the note to obtain a judgment in personam may have been barred by the statute of limitations; but a foreclosure of the mortgage was not. It was alleged that the homestead terminated in 1908, and the present proceeding was commenced in 1910.

[4] 4. It was further alleged that Moughon, the owner of the land, died in 1900; that in 1909, after the termination of the homestead by the death of the wife, an administrator was appointed on his estate; and that the land had been sold at administrator's sale, and the lien of the mortgage was thus transferred to the proceeds. The plaintiff sought to have the mortgage paid from such proceeds. Under the allegations we see no legal objection to this. Civil Code 1910, § 4029; Newsome v. Carlton, 59 Ga. 516. Although the mortgage was not foreclosed, the mortgagee could by proper proceedings claim the fund arising from the sale of the property by the administrator. National Bank of Athens v. Exchange Bank of Athens, 110 Ga. 692, 86 S. E. 265. He could not obtain a general judgment de bonis decedentis; but he could claim that the fund arising from the property, or so much thereof as might be necessary, should be applied to the payment of the mortgage, subject, of course, to have legitimate defenses raised as to the legality and priority of the mortgage lien, or the amount due thereon.

[5] 5. It was contended that the title to personal property of a decedent vests in his administrator, and not in his heirs; that both of the heirs of Masterton could not have brought an action to foreclose the mortgage; and that the alleged assignment from the husband of the deceased heir to the plaintiff (the other heir) could not confer on the latter any power to bring such a suit. It is true that the title to personalty of an intestate vests in his administrator for the purposes of administration, and he is the proper person to bring a suit upon a chose in action which belonged to the decedent. In some states it has been held that, where there are no debts of the intestate and no administration, the heirs may bring suit upon such a chose in action, and it is held by a number of courts that this can be done at least in equity. In this state it has been held that, although there may be no debts and no administration, an heir at law of an intestate cannot maintain an action for the recovery of personalty which belonged to the decedent, and which during his lifetime was wrongfully converted by another to his own use. Smith v. Turner, 112 Ga. 533, 37 S. E.

705. In Juhan v. Juhan, 104 Ga. 253, 30 S. E. 779, there was an intimation that perhaps, if there were no debts against an estate, and no necessity appeared for an administration, and all the heirs were sui juris, they could, by agreement among themselves, take charge of the estate, and collect and distribute among themselves its assets. But the same justice who made that intimation wrote the opinion in Smith v. Turner, supra. See, also, Worthy v. Johnson, 8 Ga. 236, 52 Am. Dec. 399; Murphy v. Pound, 12 Ga. 278; Morgan v. Woods, 69 Ga. 599; Carr v. Berry, 116 Ga. 372, 42 S. E. 726; Allen v. Hurst, 120 Ga. 763, 765, 48 S. E. 841; Hill v. Maffett, 3 Ga. App. 89, 59 S. E. 325. An examination of those decisions will show that they are not unsupported by reason. If the heirs of a decedent should bring suit against one who was his debtor, alleging that there were no debts of the estate and no need for administration, the defendant would frequently have no means of knowing whether there were such debts or not, or by combating such allegations. If the heirs should recover against him, and subsequently it should appear that there were in fact creditors, and an administrator should be appointed and bring suit against the same defendant, the former judgment would be no protection to him so far as the rights of creditors were concerned, while a judgment for or against him in a suit by the legal representative of the estate would be conclusive upon heirs and creditors.

It has further been declared by this court that without some special reason a suit in equity cannot be maintained by a creditor, distributee, or legatee for the recovery of personal property of a decedent from a third person, and that the fact that the decedent had been dead for more than 15 years, and that there had been no administration upon his estate, did not furnish a sufficient ground for equitable interposition. Mason v. Atlanta Fire Co. No. 1, 70 Ga. 604, 48 Am. Rep. 585. On the other hand, there are cases in which it has been held that equity would be authorized to grant relief. Without undertaking to give an exhaustive statement of the special circumstances which will authorize such a proceeding, they may be illustrated by cases where there is on the part of the administrator collusion, insolvency, unwillingness to collect the assets, or other like peculiar circumstances. The title to real estate descends to the heirs, and their right to sue in regard to it stands upon a different basis, where there is no administration. It has also been held that, where a conveyance, which included both real estate and personalty, was procured by fraud from one who afterward died, and there was no administration and no need of any, the heirs might bring an equitable action to set it aside; proper indemnifying bond being required as to the personalty, if deemed necessary. Kent

v. Davis, 89 Ga. 151, 15 S. E. 457. In Eagan v. Conway, 115 Ga. 130, 41 S. E. 493, in a similar case, it was said that equity, having taken jurisdiction for the purpose of canceling the conveyance as to the realty, would retain it as to the entire controversy. Belt v. Lazenby, 126 Ga. 768 (5), 56 S. E. 81. In Drummond v. Hardaway, 21 Ga. 433, 27 Ga. 221, 73 Am. Dec. 730, it was broadly stated that the heirs were entitled to recover, there being no debts; but the facts show that fraud and collusion, in which the administrator took part, were alleged, and also that the administrator was beyond the jurisdiction of the court. On the facts there involved, it is reconcilable with other cases.

In the case before us it was alleged, in substance, that the plaintiff was appointed administrator of his father's estate, and fully administered it; that he and his sister were the sole heirs; that she died intestate, leaving no debts and no heir except her husband; that he took charge of her estate without administration (Code 1910, § 3930); that he settled with the plaintiff as to the estate of the plaintiff's intestate, and made an assignment to the plaintiff of all claims or debts due to the mortgagee's estate, including the mortgage, as a portion of plaintiff's share of the estate; and that the plaintiff was thereafter dismissed as administrator in 1894. If these allegations be true, in effect, the administrator fully administered the estate, and delivered to the present plaintiff this claim as a part of his interest in the estate, and the only other person who might have an interest therein relinquished it to him. The administrator did not assign the claim in writing, so as to convey a perfect legal title; but the plaintiff obtained a perfect equitable title. If a new administrator should be appointed under such circumstances, no doubt he could be compelled to complete the plaintiff's title by making a written assignment. We do not think it is necessary to have an administrator appointed in such a case merely in order to make a written assignment or to bring suit for the use of the plaintiff. The facts alleged present such a peculiar case as authorizes the plaintiff to assert his equitable rights in a proper proceeding, and in the present action he alleges that he has both a legal and an equitable title, and prays that it be enforced, and that he be paid from the fund arising from a sale of the land, and for general relief.

There is no allegation as to how much the land brought at the sale by the administrator of the mortgagor; but no point was raised on this by the demurrer.

6. The other grounds of the demurrer are not such as to require a reversal. There was no error in overruling the demurrer.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

STEVENS et al. v. STEADMAN et al.
(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 4, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

DEATH (§ 47*)—ACTION FOR—PETITION—SUFFICIENCY—CONCLUSION.

The court erred in refusing to sustain a general demurrer to the petition in this case, which was an action brought by a widow against the defendants to recover damages for the tortious homicide of her husband, it being alleged that the defendants, in pursuance of a conspiracy to bring about the death of the plaintiff's husband, had written a letter calling upon the decedent to resign his official position in a corporation of which he was vice president, and advising him not to inquire into the reasons for the demand; that, owing to the nervous condition of the decedent and his impaired mental and physical condition, this letter, which was delivered to and read by him, had the effect of causing him to take a portion of some narcotic or drug which caused his death, and that the defendants intended and knew that the letter should produce this effect and bring about the death of the decedent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Death, Cent. Dig. § 61; Dec. Dig. § 47.*]

Error from Superior Court, Madison County; D. W. Meadow, Judge.

Action by Mattie Steadman and others against O. A. Stevens and others. Judgment for plaintiffs and defendants bring error. Reversed.

Mrs. Mattie Steadman, for herself and in behalf of her three minor children, brought an action against O. A. Stevens and nine other defendants, for the alleged wrongful homicide of G. M. Steadman. So much of the petition as needs now to be considered was to the following effect: G. M. Steadman, hereinafter referred to as the decedent, was the husband of Mrs. Mattie Steadman, and the father of the three minor children. He and the defendants were stockholders of the Tiller-Glenn Company, a domestic corporation doing an extensive and lucrative business. He was vice president and assistant general manager of the corporation, and owned 10 shares of its capital stock, which, by reason of his efficient management of the affairs of the corporation, had about doubled in value since he became a stockholder. He "was naturally of a very nervous, excitable temperament." About two years prior to the time hereinafter referred to, "he had an attack of fever, which left his kidneys affected, and causing him thereafter to suffer more or less with dyspepsia, and occasional attacks of neuralgia, which tended at times to augment his said nervous disposition, and rendered him more easily influenced and depressed by unjust criticism, or other improper action or conduct of others towards him"; and "each and all of these facts were well known to said defendants." O. A. Stevens, one of the defendants, was book-keeper for the corporation, and had held on for many years. He was re-od or marriage to all of the other

 He "had a grudge against"
 nt, and, "for the purpose of hu-[him] and driving him out of said nd that he, O. A. Stevens, could rid of [decendent] and get him out , and dispose of him finally, and the defendants] might thereafter stock of [decendent] at a greatly ue after [decendent] was dead and posed of, as it was intended he thereby, conceived the idea of unjust, unfounded, and mysterious gainst [decendent], well knowing ous and probably fatal result that ould have on and to [decendent], is very nervous temperament and alth." And the other defendants well knowing the said facts, conconfederated with the said O. A.
 bring about said end. With this y, and well knowing the disastrous results that would be caused there-[decendent] on account of his nervous nt and state of health, which was a to them, the said O. A. Stevens defendants conspiring and confedch him prepared and had served [t] a paper which contained vague ous and unfounded charges, and that if he did not turn over his president without question, and position in said company, and connection therewith immediately, e worse for himself and his fam-at they would at once have him from said company and driven usiness, and thus publicly humilirtify him, said paper being signed d all of the defendants, and also ed a clause containing an oath to hat they would not mention their any except the members of said oath clause being likewise signed all of the defendants."

If the paper was attached to the meet a special demurrer, and was
 "To G. M. Steadman, Carlton, the undersigned members of the Tiller-Glenn Co., respectfully ask sign your position immediately upon of this notice. Unless same e will at once discontinue your y longer. We would ask that you into the details for reasons:
 use it will be best for you and
 ; second, because it will be best n; third, because we know you to force your service on us when want it, and are not satisfied with t have it. You will be at liberty to your stock in said firm or core to sell, as you desire. We are et our friendship and sociality re-fore. We do not propose to mention our reason for this to any one except the signed members of this notice which appears below, unless we are forced to in order to protect our business; this we make oath to below. This is only a business matter with us, and have caused us considerable trouble for several months. We will all sell out before we will accept your service any longer. If you will buy all of us, then we will get out. You will exercise good judgment to resign at once, deliver your keys to the president without any questions whatever. We sincerely wish for you all the good luck that a young man might have, and that your relations towards us and ours towards you may be pleasant. We request the secretary and treasurer to keep copy of this notice and to enter same into the minute book of said firm. Witness our hands and seals this 7th day of September, 1911." Signed by the defendants. "Now come the above-signed members of the firm of Tiller-Glenn Co., who on oath say that they will not mention their reasons to any one except the members of said firm, unless the said G. M. Steadman begin saying some unpleasant things about said firm, trying to damage said firm in any way." Signed, sworn to, and subscribed by the defendants.

The paper was delivered to the decendent by one of the stockholders on Saturday night, September 8, 1911, after he had left the store and the business for the week had been closed. Decendent, as the defendants knew, had a number of business engagements with the customers of the corporation on the following Monday. "The time, place, and manner of thus imposing on [him] these unjust and mysterious charges and threats, and which it was stated would not be explained or discussed with him, and which he was not to attempt to discuss with them, or any of them, or to investigate under said mysterious and dire threats, was further calculated, as was well known to defendants and intended by them, to throw [decendent] into a high state of nervous excitement, to unbalance him, and to cause his reason to become dethroned, and in such unbalanced and uncontrolled condition to take his own life in order to be rid of the nameless horrors by which they had surrounded him, and from which, it would seem to him in his said unbalanced condition, which was produced by their illegal and criminal conduct, there was no other escape from." He had ever been an upright and honest official of the corporation, and had faithfully discharged his duties as such.
 and defendants had no just cause of complaint against him; and the first intimation he had that defendants had anything against him or any desire or intent to injure him was the delivery to him of the paper containing the unfounded and mysterious threats and charges against him. He "was greatly mortiffied, and rendered very nervous and excited," by reading the paper, and "begged and implored the deliverer of said paper to inform him what the said defendants had against him, and with what did they seek to charge him, and why did they threaten publicly to disclose him, as aforesaid, and without any just cause whatever." The bearer of the paper declined to give him any information on the subject, by reason of his promise to the other defendants not to do so. The natural result of said conduct on the part of the defendants, "and as was known and contemplated by the defendants that it would be, owing to his nervous temperament and state of health [decendent] was rendered very nervous and excited, could not sleep, and could not eat, and was in a state of great despondency and despair all day Sunday, owing to said mysterious charges and direful threats." Late Sunday afternoon he found another of the defendants, and endeavored to ascertain from him the same information he had sought from the other defendant, but with like failure to do so. He was thus rendered more nervous and excited and became very despondent. The making of such mysterious charges and threats against him and the refusal of the defendants to inform him of their nature, so that he could explain and refute them, and "owing to his nervous temperament and condition of health, which was well known to him, caused him to become unbalanced, and his reason to be dethroned, and while in such condition to take a large amount of morphine or other narcotic, hoping thereby, in his unbalanced and unreasoning condition, to escape from the horrors of said nameless charges and threats and the public disgrace threatened by them. From which said large dose of narcotic he died on the following Monday morning, his death being due and chargeable to the illegal and criminal conduct of the said defendants, as aforesaid, and the natural and almost inevitable result of the illegal and criminal conduct of said conspirators, and in their contemplation in signing and sending said paper, and in making said charges and threats to him." The plaintiff "charges that the said conduct of said O. A. Stevens and the other defendants who conspired with him, as hereinbefore stated, was a criminal conspiracy, resulting in the death of her husband, as was in contemplation of and intended by the said O. A. Stevens with the other defendants conspired and confederated, as hereinbefore stated, and that each and all of them are liable to her therefore." The defendants demurred to the petition, on the grounds, that it set forth no cause of action, in that the injury complained of was not actionable, that the damages claimed were too remote to be recoverable, and that the charges made were not the proximate cause of the injury complained of. The demurrer was overruled, and the defendants excepted.

Worley & Nall, of Elberton, Paul Brown, of Lexington, J. F. L. Bond, of Danielsville, and Jno. J. & Roy M. Strickland, of Athens, for plaintiffs in error. Jno. E. Gordon and B. T. Moseley, both of Danielsville, and E. K. Lumpkin, Jr., and E. K. Lumpkin, both of Athens, for defendants in error.

BECK, J. (after stating the facts as above). Evidently, from the allegations in the petition in this case, the plaintiff seeks to show a cause of action arising out of the tortious homicide of her husband. We do not think that, when all the allegations are considered, it is made to appear that the defendants committed any tortious act which has any causal relation to the death of the plaintiff's husband. However odious such a conspiracy as that charged upon the part of the defendants may have been, and however reprehensible their conduct, the resulting product of the alleged conspiracy was not a crime under the Code of Georgia. It was a letter which subsequently went into the hands of the plaintiff's husband, and after the reception of it he took an overdose of some narcotic or drug, from the effects of which death ensued. But we do not think that it can be charged, so as to withstand a general demurrer, that the letter which was written to and received by the decedent was the cause of the unfortunate man's act in taking the drug. We say that such a fact cannot be so charged as to withstand a general demurrer. Of course, such a charge can be put into words, and the words can be made a part of the petition, and they may be so formulated as to make a clear, distinct statement alleged to be a fact; the idea at the time of stating it, in the mind of the pleader, may be called a fact, and may be so stated that it could be said of it that it was well pleaded, and therefore that the rule that all facts well pleaded should be taken as true should be applied. But it is not unusual that, when some statement which is insisted upon as a statement of fact is contrary to natural law and universal experience, it is held to be demurrable. For instance, in the case of Southern Railway Co. v. Covenia, 100 Ga. 46, 29 S. E. 219, 40 L. R. A. 253, 62 Am. St. Rep. 312, where it was alleged that a child one year eight months and ten days old was capable of rendering services to its parent of the value of $2 per month, it was held as a matter of law that a child of the tender years alleged was without earning capacity. And so in this case, when it is charged that the letter alleged to have been written by the defendants would, when read by the decedent, naturally result in a certain state of mind upon the part of the decedent, and that this "was known" by the defendants, we are prepared to hold that this was not such a statement of fact as will withstand a demurrer. What is termed fact is, after all, in such cases merely a conclusion of the pleader, though it is set forth as fact and put in the place of a fact among other facts joined together in laying the foundation of the plaintiff's case. While the state of mind produced in the decedent, and as a result of which it is charged that he took the fatal potion, may be to some extent traceable to the reading of the letter, it cannot be said to be the legal and natural result of the act of the defendants. It must be borne in mind that there was nothing said in the letter which could bring the writers of it within the category of those who advise or counsel one to commit a specific act or to take a certain line of conduct looking to the termination of the life of the one counseled, as in those decisions dealing with cases of persons advising, aiding, or abetting another to commit suicide, and holding that the one so advising or abetting may be convicted of murder, whether he be absent or present at the time of the suicide. The writers of the letter now under consideration, which it is charged had such direful consequences, did not advise or counsel the plaintiff's husband to take a drug or narcotic nor did they advise or counsel him to commit suicide. If they had advised him to commit suicide, and he had then taken the drug with suicidal intent, the case of the defendants might have fallen within the class of cases above referred to.

But the plaintiff in this case, in the absence of any word or statement in the letter showing the intent of the writers thereof, charged that they did it with the intent to produce a certain mental effect, and that they knew what effect it would have. It is true that juries are called upon frequently to say what intention existed in the minds of a person in performing certain acts, but that is where the person whose intention was sought had performed some act the natural result of which could be foreseen. Whoever uses a gun and shoots another, inflicting a wound from which death results, is presumed to have intended the death of the one who is shot. But in such a case there is a natural causal connection between the shooting and the death, and the one who does the act is presumed to have intended the natural consequences thereof. But we do not think it can be said that any one could know that the effect of a letter containing a request for the person to whom it was addressed to resign from a certain position, and advising him to make no inquiry as to the reasons for the demand, would be to cause him to adopt any particular line of conduct, whether the person receiving the letter was sane or insane. If the defendants in this case were guilty of the tortious homicide of the decedent, they were guilty of murder, because the homicide was committed with the circumstances all indicating malice aforethought. But does any one believe for an instant that the defendants should be held to be guilty of murder under the statutes of Georgia, under the facts alleged in this petition, as in the case of one who aids and abets and counsels a suicide, where suicide upon the part of the one advised and counseled follows? Suppose that a grand jury should return an indictment charging A. with the offense of murder, for that A. being the son of B. who was a wealthy man, did, for the purpose of causing his father's death, knowing that the latter was of a nervous and excitable temperament, and that he loved his son even in excess of the usual measure of paternal affection, and that it would break his heart should the son commit any act that was dishonorable or which exposed the son to public hatred or contempt, had written a letter to his father threatening at once to begin a career of notorious shamelessness, and, knowing that this letter would cause such a shock to the father as to result in his immediate death, had caused it to be delivered into the hands of his father, with intent that it should cause the father's death, and that the father upon reading it had immediately died of a broken heart, and that all this was done with malice aforethought, contrary to the laws, etc. Would this court hold for an instant, in case the judge of the trial court should overrule a demurrer to such an indictment, that the judgment should be permitted to stand, for that all facts well pleaded are admitted, and that the facts here pleaded show a wrongful and malicious homicide? We think that this question answers itself, and answers it in the negative, and that the supposed case, legally viewed, is a close parallel to the case under consideration. I do not think that it could be successfully charged, so as to uphold an indictment, that A. illegally and wrongfully pursued a course of conduct which was calculated to break the heart of B.; that the breaking of the heart of B. was the known and natural consequence of A.'s conduct; that B.'s heart did break as the result of A.'s conduct; that B. then and there died; and that A. had pursued that course of conduct with malice aforethought, intending to break B.'s heart; and that he was guilty of murder. Mere positiveness of the terms alleging the psychological results which we have set forth above would not prevent the court from holding, upon demurrer, that the results charged could not have been the known and natural results of the acts charged against the accused, although it might be different if it were charged that A. had advised B. to kill himself by shooting himself with a pistol or by taking poison. For there the accused would have been counseling and advising the commission of a physical act which it might be said would naturally and probably have tended to produce certain results. We are of the opinion that, in the present state of our knowledge concerning the laws governing the operation of the mind, it cannot be asserted that any particular state of mind would naturally result on the part of a person who received a communication from another person, or that the communication would have the effect of causing the person receiving it to perform any certain physical act, in the absence of suggestion, advice, or counsel that he should do that particular act.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur, except LUMPKIN, J., disqualified.

FISH, C. J., and HILL, J., concur in the judgment.

CRAVEN v. MARTIN.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 2, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

JUDGMENT (§ 853*)—DORMANCY—ENTRY OF EXECUTION—SUFFICIENCY.

Upon a judgment rendered on the 12th day of May, 1902, an execution was duly issued on the 28th day of September, 1907. On the back of the fi. fa., after stating the case, there is an itemized statement of the principal, interest, and costs due upon the execution, as well as an entry as follows: "Superior Court, Habersham County, Georgia. Entered on the general execution docket, page 164, this 28 day of September, 1907. J. A. Erwin, Clerk." Following this is an entry of a levy of the execution upon certain described real estate, dated January 4, 1909, and signed by the sheriff; and on the execution docket of the superior court of the same county are entries showing the names of parties, the amounts due on the fi. fa., and under the head, "Date Issued and to Whom Delivered," is the date September 28, 1907. Nothing further appears showing the date of entry of the fi. fa. upon the execution docket. Held, that the entry set forth above is not, under the ruling in the case of Oliver v. James, 131 Ga. 182, 62 S. E. 73, a sufficient compliance with the provisions of sections 4355 and 4357 of the Civil Code of 1910 to prevent the dormancy of the execution after the expiration of the period of seven years from the date of the rendition of the judgment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 1565-1570; Dec. Dig. § 853.*]

Error from Superior Court, Habersham County; J. B. Jones, Judge.

Action between W. J. Craven and W. B. Martin. From the granting of a new trial, Craven brings error. Affirmed.

McMillan & Erwin, of Clarkesville, for plaintiff in error. J. C. Edwards, of Clarkesville, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. In view of the elaborate discussion of the question here involved which is to be found in the cases of Hollis v. Lamb, 114 Ga. 740, 40 S. E. 751, and Oliver v. James, 131 Ga. 182, 62 S. E. 73, no further discussion is necessary here. It is proper, however, to call attention to the fact that this case falls within that class of cases where the entry on the execution and on the execution docket was relied on, instead of "bona fide attempts to enforce the same against the defendant within the stated period," to prevent dormancy of the fi. fa.

Had it appeared from the record, by evidence duly submitted on the trial of the case, that there had been, within the statutory period, bona fide attempts to enforce the fi. fa. against the property of the defendant, then a different question would have been made. It is true that there is on the fi. fa. itself an entry of a levy and of written notice given to the defendant of the levy. But this, after all, is a mere entry; and such entries, without some further showing as to the actual seizure of the property, or of a bona fide public effort on the part of the plaintiff in fi. fa. to enforce his execution in the courts at such times and periods that seven years will not elapse between such attempts, or between such attempts and a proper entry, will not suffice to keep the execution alive. There is nothing in the record to show, beyond the entry itself, that the notice was given to the defendant, or that a claim was filed by the defendant within seven years. The claim filed in this case was not in the record as originally transmitted to this court from the superior court; but under the authority given in Civil Code, § 6149 (4), this court directed the clerk of the superior court of Habersham county to certify and transmit the claim filed in the case, and in compliance with the order the claim was duly certified and transmitted. Upon examination of the same it appears that the claim was not filed until December, 1910. Consequently there is no sufficient evidence of any bona fide attempt to enforce the judgment against the defendant within the statutory period, and the court did not err in holding that the fi. fa. was dormant. And, so holding, a new trial was properly granted.

Judgment affirmed. All the Justices concur.

LUMPKIN, J. (concurring specially). The decision in Oliver v. James, 131 Ga. 182, 62 S. E. 73, was rendered by the entire bench, and is binding as to the exact points there determined. I am not, however, prepared to abandon what was said in the dissenting opinion in Columbus Fertilizer Co. v. Hanks, 119 Ga. 955, 47 S. E. 222, cited in Rountree v. Jones, 124 Ga. 393, 52 S. E. 324.

COFFEY v. COBB.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 2, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. TRIAL (§ 252*)—INSTRUCTIONS—CONFORMITY TO EVIDENCE.

The plaintiff rested her prayer for a decree of specific performance upon the contentions that there had been a parol gift of the land, possession under the gift, and substantial improvements made by her, and that there was an agreement which amounted to a contract of sale and purchase, and that she had entered into possession under this contract and made valuable improvements. There was no evidence to support the theory that there was a parol gift of the land, possession taken, and substantial improvements made in pursuance thereof, and the court in the charge to the jury should have distinctly confined them, in determining whether or not the plaintiff was entitled to a decree of specific performance, to the allegations of a contract of sale and purchase, and to the evidence upon that issue.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 505, 596-612; Dec. Dig. § 252.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 843*) — REVIEW — MATTERS CONSIDERED.

The court's statement of the contentions of the parties was not entirely accurate; but it is not decided whether this inaccuracy will be sufficient ground for a new trial, as the judgment refusing a new trial is reversed upon another point.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3331-3341; Dec. Dig. § 843.*]

3. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE (§ 121*) — CERTAINTY OF PAROL CONTRACT—EVIDENCE.

To entitle the plaintiff to a decree for specific performance of a parol contract for the sale of land, the contract must first be established to a reasonable certainty, and the consideration claimed to have been paid or rendered therefor must be clearly and satisfactorily proved to have been paid or rendered in performance of that contract. Or, if the plaintiff seeking the decree relies upon possession with valuable improvements, it must be established, by evidence of the character just described, to have been made with reference to the contract. In the present case the evidence fails to show that the payments alleged to have been made were actually made with reference to the contract, and fails also to show the making of valuable improvements with reference to the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Cent. Dig. §§ 387-395; Dec. Dig. § 121.*]

Error from Superior Court, Murray County; A. W. Fite, Judge.

Action by Mrs. R. N. Cobb against W. R. Coffey. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

R. N. Steed, of Spring Place, Maddox, McCamy & Shumate, of Dalton, for plaintiff in error. C. N. King, of Spring Place, and W. E. Mann and W. C. Martin, both of Dalton, for defendant in error.

BECK, J. The plaintiff brought her petition for a decree of specific performance, making in substance the following allegations: The defendant, who is the father of petitioner, decided about four years prior to the bringing of this suit to make a division of his lands in Murray county among his six children, and executed deeds to two of them for parts of the land, and turned over the remainder, consisting of 172 acres, to petitioner and her other three brothers, without executing deeds, and without specifying as to the interest of each; but he did point out to each of the four where he thought their respective interests would be. In 1910 he went over said land with the four children, and laid off the interest of each, making lines and setting up stakes showing how each interest was bounded, allotting 43 acres to each. Relying in good faith upon the gift to her by her father, she went into possession of the land, built a dwelling house thereon, and made valuable improvements, and is still in possession of the land. She further alleged that in the fall of 1910 "the said father pointed out said interest of each of said children in said land, and then agreed with the children that each should pay to the said father during his lifetime the sum of $50 per year; he valuing the interest of each child at the sum of $625. Petitioner claims that by reason of said gift, and her entering into possession of the land in good faith, and making valuable improvements thereon, she is entitled to have a deed to the 43 acres set apart to her, charging that her father, the defendant, is now undertaking to repudiate the gift and agreement. The defendant denied the making of the parol contract as alleged, and denied that the plaintiff had made any such valuable improvements, or had made payments for the land under any contract which would entitle her to the decree sought. On the trial the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff. The defendant made a motion for a new trial, which was overruled.

[1] 1. While the plaintiff, in more than one place in her petition, refers to the agreement as to the land involved in this controversy as a gift, other allegations show that the agreement really was a contract of purchase and sale. The allegations are extremely vague and indefinite, and, while there are, in the first part of the petition, allegations that the father made a gift to the plaintiff of the land which the petitioner seeks to compel him to convey, these allegations relate to an agreement, or, rather, to statements made by the father before there was any division of the land or attempt to definitely fix the boundaries of the land which was the subject of the agreement. The allegation that "some four years ago plaintiff's father decided to make a division of his lands in Murray county among his children" fixes the time in the year 1907, and in view of such an entire lack of definiteness as to the property which it is alleged the father intended to give to his children, without more, there could, of course, be no decree for specific performance. But in the fall of 1910, as it appears from paragraph 6 of the petition, "the said father pointed out said interest of each of said children in said land, and then agreed with the children that each should pay [him] during his lifetime the sum of $50 per year for the land." And in the evidence the plaintiff testifies, relatively to this last agreement, that she was to pay the $50 a year during the lifetime of the father, and the further sum of $125 if he should demand it. It also appears from her testimony that during the years while she, with her husband, was occupying the land before the marking of it out and fixing the exact boundaries she paid the usual rent of one-third and one-fourth of the crops. This evidence, considered in connection with the allegation which we have quoted from paragraph 6, shows that the agreement as to the land constituted a contract for the sale and purchase of the land for a valuable consideration, and the theory which the plaintiff first presents in her petition (that there had been a parol gift to her by her father, and that she was entitled to specific performance of the gratuitous promise, on the ground that she had entered into possession under the promise, and made valuable improvements upon the land) is completely eliminated. It may be that the court adopted this view of the case in the instructions to the jury; but the charge was inaccurate in presenting this view to them, for, in that portion of the charge complained of in the fifth ground of the motion for a new trial, the judge instructed the jury as follows: "I charge you this: If the contentions of the plaintiff are correct, she is entitled to recover; otherwise she would not be entitled to recover. In other words, if the contentions of defendant are correct, the plaintiff cannot recover; but in this connection I charge you that, if you find that there was such a contract as she contends, and she entered upon the land under the contract, then she would be entitled to recover, whether she made any substantial improvements on the land or not. In other words, if she purchased in the way which she contends, and entered upon the land as her own, and cultivated and lived upon it as her property, it would not be necessary, for her to recover, that she should have put any substantial improvements upon the property; but it would be so if it was a gift pure and simple. As I have said, it partakes of the nature of a gift, if as plaintiff contends; but, if the allegations of the plaintiff are true, it is a contract of purchase and not a gift." The language employed in the opening sentence of this excerpt from the charge, that, "if the contentions of the plaintiff are correct, she is entitled to recover," was necessarily confusing, because the court did not attempt to distinguish those contentions in the pleadings which were supported by the evidence from those which were not. As we have shown above, one of the contentions was that there was a parol gift by the father, and, while the court afterwards instructed the jury that, "if the allegations of the plaintiff are true, it is a contract of purchase and not a gift," he had also instructed them that "the contentions of the parties are as set out in the pleadings, the declaration, and answer. * * * You will have them out with you, and can read them and refer to them for that purpose." The court should, in order to prevent confusion in the minds of the jury, have distinctly informed them that the contention of the plaintiff to the effect that the father had made a parol gift of the land to her should not be considered by them, as it was unsupported by evidence in the case, and should have limited, by proper instructions, the right of the plaintiff to a recovery to those allegations showing a contract of sale and purchase.

[2] 2. In stating the contentions of the plaintiff to the jury the court instructed them as follows: "The plaintiff contends that she is one of six children, and that her father became desirous of dividing his property, his real estate, among his children, and that a contract was entered into between her and the balance of them and their father, with reference to the estate, by which it was agreed that four of them should take certain portions of the estate pointed out at the time (some four or five years ago), and pay a rental or an amount of $50 a year during the lifetime of this defendant and wife, and pay $125 additional if it should be demanded or become necessary on account of the needs of the parents, and that at the time she entered on the portion of the land pointed out to her, and built a house and some outbuildings, and took possession of the portion of land indicated which would go to her and her brother living with her; but that the same was not divided at that time, but later on in 1910 there was a division made. She contends that at the time that the contract was first made she entered into possession of the property, and exercised control over it, and used it as her own, and claimed it as her property, and still claims it under the contract." This was not an accurate statement of the contentions of the plaintiff as shown by the evidence, nor as stated in the petition. There was no contention in the petition that at a time "some four or five years ago" a contract was entered into between her and the balance of the children and their father, with reference to the estate, by which it was agreed that four of them should take certain portions of the estate pointed out at that time, and pay a rental or an amount of $50 a year during the lifetime of the defendant and his wife, and pay $125 additional if it should be demanded. The contract, according to the contentions of the plaintiff, to pay $50 a year during the lifetime of the defendant was not made until the year 1910. When the plaintiff first went into possession of the land, three or four years before 1910, according to the allegations of the petition, she went in "relying upon the gift to her of said land by her father," and it was not until the fall of the year 1910 that the father "pointed out the interest of each of the children, and agreed with the children that each was to pay the father during his lifetime the sum of $50 per year." Up to the year 1911, according to the plaintiff's own testimony, she paid "rent every year, * * * one-third and a fourth, and the year 1911 I tendered $50 to Father, and [he] refused to accept it, and said for me to pay the same rent I had been paying, one-third and one-fourth." One of the effects of this erroneous statement of the contentions of the plaintiff by the court was to create confusion in the minds of the jury as to the time when the contract in reference to the land, which we have held to be a contract of sale and purchase, and not a parol gift of the land, was actually made. We have thought it proper to call attention to this inaccuracy in the statement of the contentions of the plaintiff, without deciding whether it would be sufficient ground for a new trial or not, as the judgment refusing a new trial is to be reversed upon another point.

[3] 3. But apart from the inaccuracies in the charge which we have pointed out a new trial is demanded in this case, on the ground that there is not sufficient evidence to support the verdict. This case was tried in 1912, and the witnesses for the plaintiff do not testify as to the year in which the plaintiff and her husband moved upon the land in controversy; but they refer to the time at which they claimed to have gone into possession as "some five or six years ago." This would fix the year in which the plaintiff went upon the land in 1906 or 1907, and for convenience of reference we shall refer to the entry into possession of the land as in 1907. As we have held above, the theory of the plaintiff, that at the time of her going into possession of certain land pointed out to her by her father in 1907 this possession was taken under such an agreement as would make a parol gift of the land, is untenable in view of the evidence, no certain boundaries or any particular lot of land having been fixed, and, moreover, the plaintiff shows by her own evidence that up to the year 1910 she was a mere tenant, paying rent. And we now consider whether or not in the year 1910 such an agreement with reference to the sale and purchase of the land was made by the plaintiff and her father as would give her a right to a decree of specific performance on the ground that an enforceable parol contract for the sale of the land was made and entered into. Section 4634 of the Civil Code provides: "The specific performance of a parol contract as to land will be decreed, if the defendant admits the contract, or if it be so far executed by the party seeking relief, and at the instance or by the inducements of the other party, that if the contract be abandoned he cannot be restored to his former position. Full payment alone, accepted by the vendor, or partial payment accompanied with possession, or possession alone with valuable improvements, if clearly proved in each case to be done with reference to the parol contract, will be sufficient part performance to justify a decree." Under the terms of the contract made in 1910, according to the evidence of the plaintiff, she was to have the land upon the payment of $50 a year during the lifetime of her father, and the payment of the sum of $125 in case he demanded payment of the same. Viewing the evidence in the light of the last sentence of the code section we have quoted, the plaintiff submitted testimony to show that she was in possession of land which had belonged to her father, and which she claimed he had agreed to let her have on the terms last stated; there is no such clear and satisfactory evidence of anything done with reference to the parol contract as to show sufficient part performance to justify the decree sought. The plaintiff herself testified: "This is the fifth year that I have lived on the place. I have paid rent every year. I paid my contract $50. I paid rent until 1911; up to 1911 I paid one-third and a fourth, and the year 1911 I tendered $50 to Father, and [he] refused to accept it, and said for me to pay the same rent I had been paying, one-third and one-fourth. Last year he never did demand third and fourth until late in the fall after the crops were gathered. I had tendered him my $50 as I had contracted to do before he levied on my crop. * * * Father told me that day [about November, 1910] they had run the line, and told me it was mine, and I could pay him $50 a year; he valued my part at $625. I was not to pay the $125 unless he come to want, and said that he wanted it, and the $125 was to be accounted for in the final wind-up after he was dead; that was to be accounted for in settling around with each other after he was dead." The husband of the plaintiff testified, in part: "I paid $50, 8 per cent. on $625; he said that $125 was to be accounted for some time on a general settlement. I suppose if he ever demanded the $125 he would get it, and if he never did on a general wind-up it would show which one got the $625 worth. Mr. Coffey said that he didn't know he would ever want the $125; but if he did we would pay that much. He said that he would have to be in want more than he had ever been if he ever needed it; if he ever needed it, if he ever did want it, we were to pay it. He said that all that he wanted was $50 a year, and he said, 'That will be plenty to keep me and my wife up.' * * * I never did agree to pay the $125; if my wife agreed to pay it it is all right. I don't say that she agreed to pay it; he talked with her a heap of times." We do not think that this clearly proves a part payment of the purchase money with reference to the parol contract. The wife and the husband each speak of having paid $50. This must have referred to the same $50. The husband's testimony does not show at what time he made the payment, nor does it clearly show that it was done in part performance of the contract for the sale of the land, because he says he never did agree to pay the $125 which the vendor was to have in case he demanded it, and in case he did not demand it it was to be paid after his death. The wife, in speaking of the payment of $50, makes the statement which we have set out above, and it is clear from that statement, considered in connection with all the other testimony, that she merely made a tender of $50, which the father refused to accept, claiming the rent which had previously been paid him. It follows that, if the father had ever entered into a parol contract for a conveyance of the land, it never became binding upon him because of any payment received by him with reference to that contract. Certainly it cannot be said that it is clearly proved that there was any payment made in pursuance of the terms of the alleged contract made with the father. It seems inferable to us from the whole evidence that the father rejected the tender. Certainly, considering it in the most favorable light for the plaintiff, it leaves it exceedingly doubtful as to whether there was any proof of part compliance with the contract by the making of a payment.

If the plaintiff relies upon possession given under a parol contract and valuable improvements made upon the premises, then there is a clear lack of testimony to support that theory. The evidence of the plaintiff and of all of her witnesses shows that the improvements which were made upon the land to which she claims a right to have a conveyance, and which were not made subsequently to the commencement of this suit, were made before the alleged contract of 1910, and while the plaintiff and her husband were on the land as tenants, paying as rent a third and a fourth of the crops. No improvements at all were shown to have been made upon the land with reference to the contract of sale prior to the bringing of this suit. Having failed to clearly prove the making of payments with reference to the parol contract, and having failed to show improvements made after possession given under the contract, as required by the statute, the plaintiff's case fails for want of proof. Shropshire v. Brown, 45 Ga. 175.

Except as indicated in the first two divisions of this opinion, there were no material errors in the charge of the court.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur.

BANKS v. BRADWELL.

(Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 2, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 576*)—TESTIMONY AT FORMER TRIAL—COMPETENCY—CONVERSATION WITH DECEASED PERSON.

Where the plaintiff is incompetent to testify as to conversations with a person since deceased, under whom the defendant claims, and another person is introduced who gives testimony as to such conversations, and subsequently the plaintiff dies, leaving this witness as heir at law, who thus becomes interested in the result of the suit, and later the witness also dies, on a subsequent trial (a new trial having been granted, and the case proceeding in the name of the administrator of the plaintiff) the evidence given by the witness at the former trial is admissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2401-2405; Dec. Dig. § 576.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 271*)—SELF-SERVING DECLARATIONS.

It was erroneous to exclude certain evidence referred to in the second division of the opinion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1068-1079, 1081-1104; Dec. Dig. § 271.*]

3. TRIAL (§ 259*)—INSTRUCTIONS—DUTY TO REQUEST.

In the absence of an appropriate written request, there was no error in omitting to charge relatively to certain admissions relied upon by the plaintiff to establish a resulting trust.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 648-650; Dec. Dig. § 259.*]

4. TRUSTS (§ 72*)—IMPLIED WHEN.

Where a trust would be implied from payment of the purchase price of land with money furnished by another person, a trust will be implied if, after receiving the money to buy the land, the recipient uses the money for other purposes, and, substituting his own money for that furnished to him, pays for the land, intending to make the payment for the other person.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Cent. Dig. §§ 102, 103; Dec. Dig. § 72.*]

5. EVIDENCE (§§ 236, 256*)—ADMISSIONS—PRELIMINARY EVIDENCE—BURDEN OF PROOF.

The request to charge, set out in the fifth division of the opinion, perhaps intimated an opinion; but it embodied a correct principle of law applicable to the case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 876-882, 1003, 1005; Dec. Dig. §§ 236, 256.*]

6. SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The verdict was not demanded by the evidence. On another trial the defendant will have an opportunity of offering the alleged newly discovered evidence.

Beck, J., dissenting.

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; J. T. Pendleton, Judge.

Action by J. D. Bradwell, administrator, against M. A. Banks. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

This case has been before the Supreme Court on two occasions. Killian v. Banks, 108 Ga. 245, 29 S. E. 971; Id., 111 Ga. 850, 36 S. E. 635. Banks instituted proceedings to dispossess Killian of certain land, and Killian filed a suit to enjoin those proceedings, to cancel certain deeds under which plaintiff claimed, and to have title decreed to be in defendant. On the first occasion the Supreme Court decided that there was no abuse of discretion upon the part of the trial judge in refusing the injunction, and also that the judge properly rejected an affidavit of the plaintiff in the injunction suit on the ground that she was incompetent to testify; in the course of the opinion it was said that under the allegations in the petition the defendant was not an innocent purchaser, and, if plaintiff "can, by allunde evidence, establish her claim to the satisfaction of the jury, she will be entitled to recover the whole property." On the second occasion, the plaintiff having recovered, this court refused to interfere with the exercise of the judge's discretion in the first grant of a new trial. Subsequently the plaintiff died, and the case was prosecuted by the administrator on her estate. A second verdict was rendered against the defendant, who made a motion for a new trial on the general grounds, and upon several special grounds which included exceptions to rulings on the admissibility of evidence, to the charge of the court, and to a refusal to charge on written request. The judge overruled the motion, and the movant excepted. The other material facts appear in the opinion.

C. W. Smith, M. A. Hale, and R. B. Blackburn, all of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Rosser & Brandon, L. Z. Rosser, Jr., and Stiles Hopkins, all of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. [1] The defendant was the widow of James Banks. She claimed a half interest in the land under a deed executed by James Banks to herself, and the other half interest by inheritance from James Banks, who died after the execution of the deed. The plaintiff was a sister of James Banks, and claimed by virtue of an alleged resulting trust; it being contended that she supplied the consideration to buy the land, and requested James Banks to buy it for her, and that he made the purchase, but took the deed in his own name. James Banks died before the suit was instituted. The plaintiff, being incompetent to testify as to conversations with the deceased James Banks, produced two other witnesses, one a niece, and the other a nephew, to testify as to conversations with James Banks before his decease, wherein he was said to have made statements which, in effect, tended to support the plaintiff's theory of a resulting trust. Subsequently to the trial at which such testimony was given, the plaintiff died, leaving among her heirs at law the two witnesses who had delivered testimony as above indicated, who, by virtue of being heirs of the plaintiffs, became interested in the recovery. Before another trial, however, both of these witnesses died. After their death, an administrator having been appointed to prosecute the case, another trial proceeded, which resulted in the verdict which formed the basis of the motion for new trial, upon the overruling of which the present bill of exceptions was sued out. On the last trial the evidence delivered on the former trial by the two witnesses just mentioned was admitted over the objection that, if such witnesses were in life, they would be heirs at law of the plaintiff, now deceased, represented by the administrator, and would be incompetent to testify as to conversations with the plaintiff's deceased husband, and, being dead, their evidence taken at the former trial was incompetent. There is no merit in this ground of the motion. Under the Civil Code, § 5773, the testimony of a witness since deceased, given under oath on a former trial upon substantially the same issue and between the same parties, may be proved by any one who heard it, and who professes to remember the substance of the entire testimony as to the particular matter about which he testified. Under this rule the evidence was admissible. It was not thereafter rendered inadmissible under other rules as to the competency of witnesses to testify, as set forth in the Civil Code, §§ 5858 (pars. 1, 4), 5867. In paragraph 1 under section 5858 it is declared: "Where any suit is instituted or defended by a person insane at time of trial, or by an indorsee, assignee, transferee, or by the personal representative of a deceased person, the opposite party shall not be admitted to testify in his own favor against the insane or deceased person, as to transactions or communications with such insane or deceased person," etc. In paragraph 4 under section 5858 it is declared: "Where a person not a party, but a person interested in the result of the suit, is offered as a witness, he shall not be competent to testify, if as a party to the cause he would for any cause be incompetent." These rules are directed against temptation of a witness to perjure himself, and were not intended to affect testimony which might have been delivered on some former trial when the witness was not incompetent, and which would be admissible under other provisions of law. After stating in section 5858 that no person offered as a witness shall be excluded by reason of incapacity for crime or interest, or from being a party, from giving evidence, etc., and that every person shall be competent and compellable to give evidence on behalf of either or any of the parties to the suit, except in certain instances as set forth in six separate subparagraphs, including 1 and 4 already quoted, it is declared in section 5859: "There shall be no other exceptions allowed under the foregoing paragraphs." None of the paragraphs purport to render inadmissible testimony of a witness since deceased, which was delivered on the former trial.

[2] 2. The deed which James Banks took in his own name to the land in dispute was executed in 1870, and recorded in 1872. The deed from James Banks to his wife (the defendant), conveying an undivided half interest in the property, was executed in 1871. In 1869 James Banks erected six houses on the property, and died in 1868 while residing in one of the houses. Before the houses were constructed Mrs. Killian resided in a small house on the same lot, and continued to reside there until institution of suit, several years after the death of James Banks. On the trial the defendant offered in evidence certain joint promissory notes, executed by herself and James Banks in 1889, payable to a third person, and certain mortgages on the land in dispute to secure the same, which notes and mortgages had been paid off and canceled. In connection with such evidence, the defendant offered to testify that the houses were constructed on the property by James Banks, that the notes and mortgages were given for building the houses, that a large portion of the debt was paid by the defendant after the death of James Banks, and that defendant expended specified sums in building and repairing fences and the like, while the plaintiff was living on the property. The notes and mortgages were rejected, and the defendant was not permitted to testify as just indicated. Error was assigned upon this ruling. James Banks and his wife were residing on the land at the time the notes and mortgages purported to have been signed, and remained in possession until the death of James Banks. After that event Mrs. Banks continued to reside on the land until the suit was instituted. During the entire period Mrs. Killian also resided on the land, but in a separate house, and was cognizant of the improvements placed thereon by James Banks. The plaintiff's case depended upon the establishment of a resulting trust. It was the theory of the plaintiff that the possession of Banks during his lifetime, and that of his wife afterwards, were subordinate to the title of the plaintiff, by reason of the fact that the land had been purchased by James Banks for Mrs. Killian, and paid for with her money under circumstances which raised an implied trust, and that during his lifetime he regarded his possession as that of Mrs. Killian, and after his death Mrs. Banks continued possession merely as his representative. The evidence relied on to establish the resulting trust consisted almost entirely of parol admissions and declarations upon the part of James Banks, to the effect that he bought the land for Mrs. Killian, and paid for it with her money, and that he intended to make a deed to her. Under these circumstances, evidence that, after having conveyed a half interest in the land to his wife, he, with her, executed notes for a large amount, secured by mortgages on the property, and thereby procured money, and with it made valuable improvements on the property, would tend to explain the character of their possession, and to that extent rebut the theory of the plaintiff's case. Such evidence would be in the nature of declarations favorable to themselves; but declarations of that character are admissible for the purpose of explaining possession. Hansell v. Bryan, 19 Ga. 167, cited and applied in Drawdy v. Hesters, 130 Ga. 161, 60 S. E. 451, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 190. See, also, Smith v. Haire, 58 Ga. 449.

[3] 3. Complaint is also made on the ground that the judge did not caution the jury and charge them fully relative to certain admissions by James Banks, proof of which was relied upon by plaintiff to establish a resulting trust. There was no request for instruction upon this subject, and under the circumstances the omission to charge was not erroneous. Hawkins v. Kermode, 85 Ga. 116, 123, 11 S. E. 560.

[4] 4. It was alleged that the plaintiff, through her agent James Banks, sold a lot on Davis street, and out of the proceeds bought the land in dispute, hereinafter referred to as the Bellwood property, to which it was intended that title should be taken in the name of the plaintiff; but without her knowledge or consent it was taken in the name of James Banks. Both transactions involved the extension of credit, and considerable time intervened in each instance before the deeds were executed. The Davis street lot was never conveyed to the plaintiff, though she paid for it, and resided on it, but was conveyed by the person from whom she bought directly to the person to whom she sold; James Banks representing plaintiff in both transactions, and collecting the money for which the property was sold. There was evidence of declarations and admissions by James Banks tending to establish these allegations. There was also evidence to the effect that, when James Banks bought the land in dispute, he paid a part of the price, and gave his notes for a series of deferred payments, which he met as he drew his monthly wages. The witness who testified to this effect also testified that the lot purchased cost less than the price obtained for the lot sold, and that James Banks stated that he used "the balance of the money," and that he bought the land in dispute for plaintiff "with her money." The judge was requested to charge: "If you believe from the evidence that James Banks in his lifetime contracted in his own name for the purchase of the property referred to in the petition as the Bellwood property, and now being sought to be secured by the plaintiff, and at the date of the purchase paid a small cash payment and delivered to the seller, Seage, his promissory notes for the deferred payments, and, after paying the notes so executed by himself, took a deed to himself from Seage, then and in that event no trust could be claimed to exist in so far as this transaction is concerned, and the plaintiff could not recover, and this would be true, nevertheless you believe from the evidence that he, Banks, did hold the property alleged to have been purchased from Hayden in trust in Mrs. Killian, and the alleged admissions made by Banks in reference to how he held the property purchased by him from Seage would not be considered by you. In other words, I charge you that, if you believe from the evidence that Banks purchased the property from Seage in his own right, and at the time of such purchase none of the money of Mrs. Killian entered into the purchase price of the property sought to be recovered from this defendant, then I charge you that any admissions made by Banks that he held the property so purchased for his sister, Mrs. Killian, would not be binding either upon Banks or any one claiming under him, and it will be your duty to find for the defendant." It was alleged in the motion for new trial that this request should have been given, because it was a statement of the law directly applicable and pertinent to the issues involved.

The charge was not given as requested; but the judge instructed the jury as follows: "If one person holds the title to property, and another person has paid the purchase money, and has therefore a beneficial interest in the property, the law implies a trust, and the person who holds the legal title holds it as trustee for the beneficiary. If you find in this case that James Banks, acting as the agent for Mrs. Killian, bought the Bellwood property, and paid for it with Mrs. Killian's money, and took the title to himself, the plaintiff in this case would have the right to recover. If you find that James Banks did not represent Mrs. Killian, or did not buy the Bellwood property with Mrs. Killian's money, but bought it with his own money, and paid for it with his own money, and took the deed to himself, the plaintiff in this case cannot recover. It is not necessary, gentlemen, that the identical money, the identical bills, or the identical coin which James Banks may have received as the money of Mrs. Killian should have been used in payment for this property; but, it must have been Mrs. Killian's money. To illustrate: Banks received $600, or other sum, for Mrs. Killian as her money, to be used in the purchase of the Bellwood property, and, to further illustrate, he put it in the banks where he had other money, and drew a check upon the general amount, and that check was paid, that would be paying with Mrs. Killian's money; so, if he had the money, and kept it or mixed it with his own money, and he paid for the Bellwood property with money that was partly his and partly Mrs. Killian's by reason of it having been mixed, why that would be paying with Mrs. Killian's money. Now these are merely intended as illustrations, and not to tell you anything that there is in the evidence in this case with reference to these facts, but simply to illustrate. I have stated to you that it must be the money of Mrs. Killian that paid for this property; that is subject to this qualification: If the money of Banks was substituted for the money of Mrs. Killian, that is to say, if Banks received money that belonged to Mrs. Killian, for the purpose of paying for the Bellwood property, but he did not use that money in paying for the Bellwood property, but kept it or used it for other purposes, for his own purposes, and thus intending to substitute his own money for the payment of the Bellwood property, intending thereby to carry out the instructions which he had received from Mrs. Killian, and he substituted his money for the money of Mrs. Killian in paying for the property which it purchased, then the plaintiff would have the right to recover in this case. But if he had no such purpose, if he received the money of Mrs. Killian, and did not use it to pay for this property, but used it or kept it for other purposes, and paid for this property with his own money, intending to take the title to himself, his own purchase, then the plaintiff in this case could not recover, although you may believe that he had the money to pay for it, and ought to have paid for it with that money; but if he did not, and did not intend to substitute his money to make the purchase for her account, then she could not recover in this case."

It thus appears that in substance the court instructed the jury as requested, except that he informed them that it was not essential to the creation of a trust that Banks, in purchasing the property in dispute, must have used the particular money received by him for plaintiff; but, having received money for plaintiff for the purpose of buying the property, it would suffice if he devoted that money to some other use, and substituted therefor his own money, intending at the time of making the substitution to employ it for the benefit of the plaintiff in making the purchase for her. There was also an exception to the latter part of the charge as given, which is quoted above, on the grounds: (a) That there was no evidence to support it; (b) that, even if Banks received the money of the plaintiff to invest in the property, but used it otherwise, and paid for the property in dispute out of his own money, no trust could be implied, but the misuse of the money would be a matter of indebtedness between the plaintiff and Banks; and (c) that no trust could be implied unless the money of plaintiff was actually invested in the property. Construing together the request and the charge as given and the criticism upon each ruling of the court, when boiled down to the last analysis, the point for decision is whether there would be a resulting trust if Banks in making the purchase did not use the identical money which he received for plaintiff to be invested in the property. The judge in effect told the jury that it was not essential to the existence of the trust that the identical money received by James Banks for the plaintiff in the sale of the Davis street lot should have been paid for the Bellwood property, but that it would suffice if, having received money of the plaintiff and used it himself, he substituted his own money therefor, intending it for the plaintiff, and paid it for the Bellwood property on account of a purchase which he had made for her. Substituting money under these circumstances would amount to repayment by him of money which he had used, and the purchase of property with it for her would be a purchase for the plaintiff with her own money, though not the identical money which in the first instance he had received for her. After such purchase, nothing further appearing, James Banks, taking title in his own name, could not in equity and good conscience hold it against plaintiff, and a trust would be implied. Civil Code, §§ 3739, 3780. See, also, Wolfe v. Citizens' Bank (Tenn. Ch.) 42 S. W. 39; Rarick v. Vandevier, 11 Colo. App. 116, 52 Pac. 743. There was evidence to authorize the charge which was given. There was no error in refusing to charge as requested, nor any error in the charge of which the defendant can complain.

[5] 5. The judge refused a written request to charge the following: "The plaintiff claims, among other things, that James Banks, the husband of the defendant in this case, after purchasing the property in dispute from Seage, and while in possession of the same, admitted that this property was the right and property of his sister, Mrs. Killian, and that he, Banks, had paid for it with the money of Mrs. Killian. Now, if you believe from the evidence that these admissions are true, and were made at the time at which the said Banks was the owner of the property, then I charge you that such admissions would be binding upon Banks or any one holding under him; but if, on the other hand, you believe from the evidence that Banks in his lifetime disposed of any part of the property in dispute, and that the title to the property or any part of the same had passed out of Banks prior to the time at which he is claimed to have made such admissions, then and in that event the admissions would not be binding, and would not affect the interest in the property that had passed out of Banks prior to the time at which such admissions are said to have been made, and I charge you that, if you find from the evidence that James Banks at any time disposed of the property or any part of it by gift or otherwise, then the burden would be on the plaintiff to establish that the admissions relied upon, if any, were made by Banks before the title to the property had passed out of him." While this request is perhaps subject to criticism, in that the use of the words "owner," and "disposed of part of the property," and "title to the property passed out of him," might tend to intimate that as a matter of fact Banks at one time held the title to the property in his own right, the principle of law contained in the request was pertinent to the facts of the case, and on another trial should be given in charge; care being taken to couch it in such language as will eliminate any possible expression of opinion by the court as to the ownership of the property. Howard v. Snelling, 32 Ga. 195-203; Shields v. Blanchard, 74 Ga. 805; Marion v. Hoyt, 72 Ga. 117; 16 Cyc. 992; 5 Michie's Dig. Ga. R. 320, 834.

[6] 6. The ruling announced in the sixth headnote does not require elaboration.

Judgment reversed. All the Justices concur, except BECK, J., dissenting, and LUMPKIN, J., disqualified.

FISH, O. J., and EVANS, P. J. (specially concurring). We concur in the judgment and also in the opinion except so much as relates to the ruling upon the competency of the evidence of witnesses delivered at a former trial, but who died since that trial; it appearing that, if the witnesses had been living, they would have been disqualified from testifying against the estate of a deceased person on the ground of interest.

BECK, J. (dissenting). I do not think that the exceptions to the rulings made pending the trial nor those complaining of the charge to the jury show any material error.

FORD et al. v. BLACKSHEAR MFG. CO. (Supreme Court of Georgia. Oct. 4, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 973*)—REFUSAL TO DIRECT VERDICT.

While a trial judge may, within the restrictions prescribed by Civ. Code 1910, § 5331, direct a verdict, this court will in no case reverse a judgment refusing to do so.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3846; Dec. Dig. § 973.*]

2. NEW TRIAL (§ 124*) — MOTION — SUFFICIENCY.

A ground of a motion for a new trial, complaining of the admission in evidence, overstated objections of the movants, of certain documents, which are neither set out literally or in substance in the motion nor attached thereto as exhibits properly identified, but are merely referred to in the motion in general terms as being "fully set out in the brief of evidence accompanying this motion," presents no question for adjudication.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 250-253; Dec. Dig. § 124.*]

3. HUSBAND AND WIFE (§ 129*)—EQUITABLE TITLE IN WIFE—CREDITORS OF HUSBAND—ESTOPPEL.

If a wife, having an equitable title to land to which a deed is taken in the name of her husband, permits him to hold the property and use it in his business and commercial transactions for the purpose of obtaining credit, and a third person, without notice of the equity, extends credit to the husband on the faith that the land is his, the wife, after the creditor has reduced his debt to judgment, will be estopped from asserting title to the land as against the lien of the judgment, although before rendition of the judgment the husband, in recognition of the equity, may have conveyed the land to her.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Husband and Wife, Cent. Dig. §§ 283, 468-470; Dec. Dig. § 128.*]

4. BANKRUPTCY (§§ 421, 426*)—APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1178*)—DISPOSITION OF CASE—DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY—EFFECT.

Where a creditor who holds a promissory note for the purchase price of goods reduces it to judgment, after a subsequent discharge of the debtor in bankruptcy the creditor cannot enforce an execution based on such judgment against property of the debtor acquired after such discharge.

(a) Whether or not such a creditor might have a right to enforce, by appropriate proceedings, a liability for obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations, such is not the nature of the present case. It is an effort to enforce the liability based on contract.

(b) Under one phase of the evidence, the charge was erroneous in that it excluded from consideration the principle above announced.

(c) The error does not affect the whole case; and, in reversing the judgment, direction is given in regard to restricting the issues on another trial.

(d) The evidence authorized the verdict in so far as it found certain portions of the property subject to the plaintiff's fi. fa.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bankruptcy, Cent. Dig. §§ 772-774, 776, 777, 779-781, 783-807; Dec. Dig. §§ 421, 426.* Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4604-4620; Dec. Dig. § 1178.*]

Error from Superior Court, Tift County; W. E. Thomas, Judge.

Claim case by J. H. Ford and others against the Blackshear Manufacturing Company. Judgment for defendant, and claimants bring error. Reversed, with directions.

On July 4, 1906, the Blackshear Manufacturing Company obtained several personal judgments against J. H. Ford. During the same month separate executions based on the several judgments were issued. On November 19, 1906, J. H. Ford, on his voluntary petition, was adjudicated a bankrupt, and on the 15th day of June, 1909, he obtained in the court of bankruptcy a judgment discharging him from all debts and claims provable under the bankruptcy act against his estate, which existed at the time he was adjudicated a bankrupt. On July 29, 1910, the executions above mentioned were levied on a tract of land comprising a farm, and also on several separate lots in the town of Ty Ty, Ga. Thereafter further proceedings under the executions were arrested by interposition of a claim by J. H. Ford in his own right and as agent for five other persons designated by name and declared to be sui juris. The claim affidavit specified that J. H. Ford claimed one undivided sixth interest acquired after his discharge in bankruptcy, and that the other claimants were owners of the remaining five-sixths interest. On the trial of the claim case a verdict was returned finding all of the town lots subject, and one undivided sixth interest in the farm subject, and the five-sixths interests in the farm not subject. Claimants made a motion for a new trial, and excepted to the judgment denying the motion. The other material facts appear in the opinion.

J. J. Forehand & Son and J. B. Williamson, all of Sylvester, for plaintiffs in error. C. W. Fulwood, of Tifton, and Wilson, Bennett & Lambdin, of Waycross, for defendant in error.

ATKINSON, J. [1] 1. One ground of the motion for a new trial complains that the court refused, on motion, to direct a verdict in favor of the claimants. While a trial judge may, within the restrictions prescribed by Civil Code, § 5331, direct a verdict, this court will in no case reverse a judgment refusing to do so. Green v. Scurry, 134 Ga. 482, 68 S. E. 77.

[2] 2. Complaint was made, in another ground, of a ruling of the judge admitting in evidence, over appropriate objection, a designated "commercial report" of the "financial condition of J. H. Ford, the defendant in fi. fa." It was alleged that the report was fully set out in the brief of evidence; but neither in form nor in substance was the document set out in the ground of the motion for new trial, by exhibit or otherwise. Under these circumstances, this ground of the motion was incomplete within itself, and insufficient to present any question for decision. Roberts v. Devane, 129 Ga. 604, 59 S. E. 289.

[3] 3. J. H. Ford was the defendant in fi. fa.; but no question was raised as to his right to interpose a claim, or as to the remedy in any respect. For title the claimants relied in part on a deed executed by J. H. Ford to Mrs. S. D. Ford, his wife. This was attacked by the plaintiff as fraudulent on the ground that it was a mere conveyance, without consideration, to defeat creditors. To meet this attack the claimants introduced evidence tending to show that the property was purchased with money of the wife, that legal title was taken in the name of the husband by mistake, and that before the plaintiff's judgment was obtained the husband had executed a deed to the wife in recognition of her equitable title. In reply the plaintiff introduced further evidence, and contended that if the money of the wife paid for the land, she permitted her husband to hold the legal title thereto and use it in his business and commercial transactions for the purpose of obtaining credit, that the plaintiff, without notice of any equity of the wife, and on the faith that the property belonged to the husband, extended credit to the latter, thereby creating the debt on which the judgment was based, and that under such circumstances the title of the wife could not be asserted against plaintiff's judgment. Concerning these contentions the judge delivered a concrete charge, instructing the jury.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes 79 S.E.—37 in effect, that if they should find that the deed was based on a valuable consideration and not made by the husband to defeat his creditors, or, if he had such intention, the intent was not disclosed to the wife, the verdict should be for the claimant, unless they should further find that, although the wife was the owner of the land, she nevertheless permitted the husband to hold the same in his own name as a basis for credit in the conduct of his business and commercial transactions, and the plaintiff, without notice that she was the owner, extended the husband credit on the faith that his apparent ownership was real, in which latter event the property should be held subject. The claimants excepted to the charge on account of the qualification contained in the last part, urging as ground for exception that, as under the undisputed evidence the husband had executed the deed to the wife before the plaintiff obtained judgment, and assuming the deed to have been executed in good faith, and upon a valuable consideration, as hypothesized by the judge in his charge, the wife thereby acquired legal title, which would prevail in the contest with the judgment creditor.

There was no exception on the ground that the charge was otherwise contrary to the evidence. Under this criticism of the charge, the question is not one of mere comparison of equities between the judgment creditor and the person holding the equitable title. Some of the cases in this state on that subject are: Reed v. Holbrook, 123 Ga. 781, 51 S. E. 720; Roberts v. Devane, 129 Ga. 604 (5), 605, 50 S. E. 289; Kennedy v. Lee, 72 Ga. 39; Gorman v. Wood, 68 Ga. 524; Zimmer v. Dansby, 56 Ga. 79; Dill v. Hamilton, 118 Ga. 209, 44 S. E. 989. But the competition is between a judgment creditor and one claiming legal title to the property, the latter holding under a deed executed by the defendant before judgment was rendered against him, the deed having been executed in recognition of a pre-existing equitable title in the grantee, arising from the fact that the money of the latter paid for the land, while the legal title was taken in the name of the grantor. Cases in which the competition was of this character are: Hunt v. Doyal, 128 Ga. 416, 57 S. E. 489; Beil v. Stewart, 98 Ga. 669, 27 S. E. 153; Dodd v. Bond, 88 Ga. 355, 14 S. E. 581. Under the principle of the cases last cited, the property would not be subject to the judgment if there were nothing more than the extension of credit by the creditor on the faith that the property, which was apparently that of the debtor, really belonged to the wife. But if, among other things, it further appeared, in addition to the extension of credit under the circumstances enumerated, that the conduct of the person holding the equity tended to induce third persons erroneously to believe that the property was in fact the property of the husband, as it appeared to be, and the creditor, upon the faith of the property being that of the husband, and without notice of the outstanding secret equity, extended credit to the husband, and thereby suffered loss, the holder of the title would be estopped from asserting it against the judgment obtained by the creditor. This is the doctrine of the Civil Code, § 4419, and is recognized in the cases last above cited. See, also, 5 Bigelow on Estoppel (6th Ed.) 624. The portion of the charge excepted to did no more than apply the doctrine of equitable estoppel. In substance, it merely informed the jury that a wife could not place her property in the name of her husband to be used by him for the purpose of obtaining credit in his business or commercial transactions, and after he had induced a third person, without notice of her equity, to make advancements to him on the faith that the property was his own, then take back the property from the husband, leaving the debt unsatisfied. As the estoppel is based on the acts and conduct of the wife in aiding her husband to procure credit, it would be operative against the legal as well as the equitable estate. The question as to whether in fact the property was bought with the money of the wife and the title taken in the name of the husband, or whether it was the property of husband and was conveyed to the wife for the purpose of delaying or defrauding creditors, was also involved in the case, and was submitted to the jury by the judge in his charge, and no exception was taken.

[4] 4. The court further instructed the jury: "If you should believe from the evidence that the defendant, J. H. Ford, now one of the claimants, represented the property as belonging to him, and that upon the faith of his apparent ownership the plaintiff in fi. fa. extended credit to him, but that his deceased wife's money paid for the property, and that it therefore belonged to her, and that under the circumstances in the case the deceased wife would not be estopped from setting up her title to the property, but that defendant represented said property as belonging to him as a basis of credit from the plaintiff aforesaid, it would then be your duty, should you so believe, to find the interest of the claimant J. H. Ford subject, although the interest of the other claimants would not be subject." The plaintiff obtained several judgments against J. H. Ford, in suits upon promissory notes given to cover the purchase price of certain fertilizers, which had been sold to him by plaintiff on open account. Before judgment the defendant held title to the land in dispute, and made conveyance under circumstances discussed in the third division of this opinion. More than four months after judgment the defendant was adjudicated a bankrupt and discharged in bankruptcy. The plaintiff's judgments were duly scheduled in the petition in bankruptcy. Subsequently to the adjudication in bankruptcy the defendant's wife, to whom he had conveyed the property before that adjudication, died, leaving J. H. Ford as one among her six heirs at law. It was by virtue of being such heir at law that J. H. Ford claimed one undivided sixth interest in the property in dispute, and upon such basis he insisted that it was acquired after the discharge in bankruptcy, and was never affected by plaintiff's judgments. The evidence did not demand a verdict against the contention that it was after-acquired property; and the plaintiff contended that, conceding it to be such, it was subject to the lien of the judgments, because the debt on which the judgments were based was a liability for obtaining property under false pretenses and false representations, and therefore was included in exception 2, or exception 4, of paragraph 17 (a) of the bankruptcy act of 1898 (Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, 30 Stat. 550 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3428]), as amended by the act of 1903 (Act Feb. 5, 1903, c. 487, § 5, 32 Stat. 798 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1911, p. 1496]). The charge quoted above seems to have adopted the view of the plaintiff on this subject, and to have affected the verdict, which was in favor of the remaining heirs at law of Mrs. Ford, relatively to the farm tract, but found J. H. Ford's interest subject. The town lots stood on a different footing, as there was no evidence to show an implied trust in Mrs. Ford relatively to them; it only being contended by claimants, according to the testimony of J. H. Ford, that she loaned him the money with which to pay for them, and that he bought the property and took the deeds in his own name. The entire interest in the town lots was found subject. Error was assigned upon the charge above quoted, upon the ground that it excluded from consideration claimants' contention that the sixth interest claimed by J. H. Ford was after-acquired property and unaffected by the plaintiff's judgments as above stated. Error was also assigned upon a refusal of a request to charge, embodying the same question. They need not be treated separately.

The plaintiff's debt was provable in bankruptcy under section 63 (a) of the bankruptcy act of 1898 (30 Stat. 562, 1 Fed. Stat. Ann. Supp. 1912, p. 753), and dischargeable under section 17 (a) of that act as amended by the act of 1903 (32 Stat. 798, 1 Fed. Stat. Ann. Supp. 1912, p. 753; Tindle v. Birkett, 205 U. S. 188, 27 Sup. Ct. 493, 51 L. Ed. 762, and citations), unless it fell within one of the exceptions therein set forth. It was contended by counsel for the plaintiff that it fell within exception 4 or exception 2. The debt had no reference to fraud, etc., while Ford was "acting as an officer or in any fiduciary capacity," and could not be included in exception 4. Tatum v. Leigh, 136 Ga. 791 (6), 792, 72 S. E. 236, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 216. Did it fall within exception 2 of section 17 (a) of the act as amended? Before amendment that provision of the act excepted provable debts, except judgments in actions for fraud or obtaining property by false representations or false pretenses. This contemplated judgments based on no less than actual fraud. Moody v. Muscogee Mfg. Co., 134 Ga. 721 (4), 733, 68 S. E. 604, 20 Ann. Cas. 301; Forsyth v. Vehmeyer, 177 U. S. 177, 20 Sup. Ct. 623, 44 L. Ed. 723. In the latter case it was held: "A representation as to a fact, made knowingly, falsely, and fraudulently, for the purpose of obtaining money from another, and by means of which such money is obtained, creates a debt by means of a fraud involving moral turpitude and intentional wrong, and such debt is not discharged by a discharge in bankruptcy." The case before the court was a suit upon a judgment. The state court had ruled that the action was for the tort; and in rendering the decision the Supreme Court declared: "Where the state court has decided that the action was for fraud and deceit, and has held that in order to have maintained such action the fraud must have been proved as laid in the declaration, it must be assumed that the verdict and judgment in that action were obtained only upon proof and a finding by the jury of the fact of the fraud." In Tindle v. Birkett, supra, it was held: "Where a claim is founded upon an open account or upon a contract, express or implied, and can be proved under section 63 (a) of the bankruptcy act, if the claimant chooses to waive the tort and take his place with the other creditors, the claim is one provable under the act and barred by the discharge." Since the amendment of 1903 it has been held that: "Proof of a claim in bankruptcy as one upon contract, and participation in the distribution arising from a composition with creditors, is not a bar to an action for deceit in obtaining on credit, by false reports to a commercial agency, the goods, the price of which formed the basis of such claims." Friend v. Talcott, 228 U. S. 27, 33 Sup. Ct. 505, 57 L. Ed. 718. These cases, and many others which might be cited, in determining whether a debt falls within the exceptions enumerated in section 17 (a) generally consider whether the action was for the tort or on the contract. On general principles, where transactions partake of the nature both of tort and of contract, the party injured may waive the tort and sue on the contract. In Tindle v. Birkett, supra, where the injured person sued on the contract rather than on the tort, it was held that the judgment rendered in such case was not for the fraud, and did not fall within one of the exceptions. The amendment of 1903 was in the interest of creditors; it displaced the words, "judgments in actions for fraud or," and substituted the words, "liabilities for." The exception before amendment discharged the bankrupt from all his provable debts except such as "are judgments in actions for fraud or obtaining property by false representations, or for willful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another." After amendment it discharged the bankrupt from all provable debts except such as "are liabilities for obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations, or for willful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another, or for alimony due or to become due, or for maintenance or support of wife or child, or for seduction of an unmarried female, or for criminal conversation." Under the amendment, in order to bring existing debts within the exception which would prevent it from being discharged, it was no longer necessary that it should be a judgment for fraud, but it would fall within the exception if it were a liability for obtaining property under false pretenses and false representations, which in law would amount to actual fraud. The plaintiff's judgment is founded on contract. Where, instead of enforcing the liability based on fraud, the creditor still insists on enforcing a judgment on the contract as to after-acquired property, the debtor's discharge in bankruptcy is effective. The judge committed error in his charge above set forth, in that it excluded from the consideration of the jury that part of the claimant's case referred to in his assignment of error, and also in failing to give appropriate instructions on the subject. The error, however, could not affect the verdict relatively to the town lots; and, in reversing the judgment, direction is given that upon another trial the issues be restricted to the farm property. The evidence authorized the verdict relatively to the other property in dispute.

Judgment reversed, with direction. All the Justices concur.

TEDDER v. STATE. (No. 5,080.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

REVIEW ON APPEAL.

The court committed no error of law, and the evidence authorized the conviction of the accused.

Russell, J., dissenting.

Error from Superior Court, Bibb County; H. A. Mathews, Judge.

Frances Tedder was convicted of crime, and brings error. Affirmed.

John R. Cooper, of Macon, for plaintiff in error. John P. Ross, Sol. Gen., of Macon, for the State.

RUSSELL, J. The court is unanimous in the opinion that there is no merit in the special grounds of error, nor any in the exceptions to the charge of the court. A majority of the court are of the opinion that the evidence authorized the conviction of the accused. In my opinion, the evidence is not sufficient to point conclusively to the accused as the thief or as a participant in the theft from the prosecutor.

Judgment affirmed.

RUSSELL, J., dissents.

MYRICK v. STATE. (No. 5,074.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1159*)—APPEAL—VERDICT—EVIDENCE.

There was sufficient evidence to authorize the verdict, and this court has no power to direct a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3074-3083; Dec. Dig. § 1159.*]

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1059*)—APPEAL—EXCEPTIONS—SUFFICIENCY.

A general exception, that an act of the General Assembly "is illegal and void and contains subject-matter not expressed in the caption of said act," is too indefinite to raise a question for decision.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2671; Dec. Dig. § 1059.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1179*)—APPEAL—DISCRETIONARY RULINGS—SENTENCE.

This court has no authority to control the discretion of a judge of the superior court in reference to setting aside on certiorari a sentence within statutory limits imposed by a city court in a criminal case. A complaint that a sentence within legal limits is tyrannical and oppressive is one that can only be addressed to the court that tried the case or to the superior court which reviews the trial on certiorari.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 3001; Dec. Dig. § 1179.*]

Error from Superior Court, Bryan County; W. W. Sheppard, Judge.

J. T. Myrick was convicted in a city court of carrying a pistol without a license, and from the superior court's approval of the sentence on certiorari brings error. Affirmed.

J. H. Smith, of Eden, for plaintiff in error. N. J. Norman, Sol. Gen., of Savannah, for the State.

POTTLE, J. [1-3] It appears from the record and the brief that the plaintiff in error was a white man with a wife and children. He became involved in a difficulty with one of his cousins and drew a pistol on him. The cousin did not institute the prosecution, but was compelled to testify. The accused was convicted of carrying a pistol without a license, but was recommended to clemency by the jury. In spite of this recommendation and the eloquent plea of his counsel, which appears in the record, the court imposed an unconditional sentence of two months in the chain gang. The judge of the superior court approved the sentence on certiorari. It is perhaps true that the sentence was unduly severe, but the judgment imposed was not erroneous, and the authority of this court is limited to the correction of errors of law. There was evidence which authorized a conviction, and no error of law was committed. Judgment affirmed.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

BEDDINGFIELD v. STATE. (No. 5,057.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. ASSAULT AND BATTERY (§ 91*)—SHOOTING—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE—NO ERROR.

No error of law was committed, and the evidence authorized the verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Assault and Battery, Cent. Dig. § 186; Dec. Dig. § 91.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1172*)—APPEAL—HARMLESS ERROR—FAILURE TO INSTRUCT.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, failure to instruct that accused was not guilty of such offense unless actuated by malice and intent to kill, if error, was harmless where he was convicted only of shooting at another.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 8128, 3154-3157, 3159-3163, 3168; Dec. Dig. § 1172.*]

3. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1208*)—APPEAL—DISCRETION—PUNISHMENT.

The trial court's exercise of discretion in fixing the quantum of punishment to be imposed within the statutory limits cannot be disturbed by the reviewing court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3281-3287, 3289-3295; Dec. Dig. § 1208.*]

4. ASSAULT AND BATTERY (§ 63*)—SHOOTING—DEFENSE.

In a prosecution for shooting at another, it is no defense that accused did not know the identity of the person at whom he shot.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Assault and Battery, Cent. Dig. § 89; Dec. Dig. § 63.*]

Error from Superior Court, Bibb County; H. A. Mathews, Judge.

Mallary Beddingfield was convicted of shooting at another, and brings error. Affirmed.

W. D. McNeill and C. A. Glawson, both of Macon, for plaintiff in error. John P. Ross, Sol. Gen., of Macon, for the State.

POTTLE, J. The accused was indicted for the offense of assault with intent to murder and was convicted of shooting at another, with a recommendation to mercy. A sentence of one year in the penitentiary was imposed. His motion for a new trial was overruled, and he excepted.

[1, 2] Complaint is made in the motion that the court failed to charge that the accused would not be guilty of assault with intent to murder, unless he was actuated by malice and intended to kill the person shot. Since the accused was not convicted of assault with intent to murder, we need not examine the record to ascertain whether this assignment of error is well founded.

The only other special complaint in the motion for a new trial is that the court ignored the recommendation of the jury and imposed a sentence which was, in view of the evidence, too severe.

[3] It has been many times held both by the Supreme Court and this court that the quantum of punishment to be imposed within the statutory limits is a matter absolutely within the discretion of the trial judge, and that the reviewing court cannot interfere.

Counsel for the accused earnestly argued that the verdict is without evidence to support it. The person shot was the neighbor of the accused and on friendly terms with him. It is apparent, from the testimony, that when the pistol was fired the accused did not know that he was shooting at his neighbor. The theory of the defense was that, hearing a noise in the yard and supposing some one was attempting to steal ducks which belonged to him, the accused got his revolver, came out on the porch, which was 12 or 14 inches above the ground, saw his ducks running about in the yard some 15 or 20 feet away, and fired into the ground. The person shot was in his own lot adjoining that of the accused, had just driven his automobile to his garage, and was in about the center of his lot. There was a fence between the two lots and the moon was shining brightly, so that a person could be recognized at a distance of 100 yards away. The contention of the accused is that he did not shoot at any person, but that one of the bullets in some way was deflected so as to go through a crack in the fence and strike the person who was shot.

[4] It is true, as contended by his counsel, there is no positive evidence that the accused intentionally shot at the person who was struck by the bullet; but the circumstances were such as to authorize a finding by the jury that the accused did shoot at the person who was struck by the bullet, evidently supposing this person was attempting to steal his ducks. The occurrence was extremely unfortunate, and, as stated above, it is apparent that the accused did not intend to shoot his neighbor, but he had no right, under the law, to shoot at anybody simply because he thought an effort was being made to steal his ducks. Juries have a right to deduce reasonable conclusions from proved facts; and when it appeared that on a bright moonlight night a person was shot by the accused at a distance where he could have been easily seen, and from a position from which he could have been hit if shot at, the jury were authorized to reject the theory of accidental shooting set up by the defense, especially when this theory involved, as it did, the unreasonable conclusion that the bullet struck the ground and was then deflected through a crack in the fence. Based upon the presumption of law alone, which is a rule of evidence, that a man intends the natural consequences of his act, the jury had the right to conclude that the shooting was intentional. Hence it was entirely immaterial whether, at the time the shot was fired, the accused knew the identity of the person at whom he shot.

Judgment affirmed.

BROWN GUANO CO. v. COKER.
(No. 4,731.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EXECUTION (§ 177*)—ACTION ON FORTHCOMING BOND—DEFENSE.

Where an execution against two persons was levied on personal property in the possession of one of them, who thereupon filed an affidavit of illegality, and gave a forthcoming bond, it was a good defense to an action on the bond that the issue made by the affidavit of illegality was adjudicated in favor of the affiant, and that the property in question was the property of that defendant and not of the other defendant in the execution.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 381, 460-465; Dec. Dig. § 177.*]

2. EXECUTION (§ 222*)—SALE—ADVERTISEMENT.

The advertisement of sale of the property levied on was a substantial compliance with section 6062 of the Civil Code 1910, providing the manner in which sheriff's sales shall be advertised.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 629-633; Dec. Dig. § 222.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

3. EXECUTION (§ 177*)—ACTION ON FORTHCOMING BOND—BURDEN OF PROOF.

While, in an action on a forthcoming bond, the title to the property levied on under the execution is not involved, plaintiff has the burden of proving not only a breach of the bond, but that such breach has caused damage to him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Execution, Cent. Dig. §§ 381, 460-465; Dec. Dig. § 177.*]

Error from City Court of Dawson; M. C. Edwards, Judge.

Action by the Brown Guano Company, for use of A. J. Hill, against Mrs. F. C. Coker. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed.

The Brown Guano Company, for the use of A. J. Hill, foreclosed a crop mortgage against F. C. Coker and Mrs. F. C. Coker. Upon the levy of the fi. fa. the defendant Mrs. Coker filed an affidavit of illegality, and gave to the levying officer a forthcoming bond. Suit for a breach of the bond was brought against the principal and the surety. Mrs. Coker answered, denying liability, and by an amendment to her answer alleged that, when the fi. fa. was levied upon the property mentioned in the bond, she filed an affidavit of illegality, alleging that she did not owe the debt, and gave the bond sued on, and retained the property, and that the issue upon the affidavit of illegality was found in her favor, and a final judgment entered accordingly, that the property levied upon was her individual property, and F. C. Coker had no interest in it, and that, being a party to the execution, she could not file a statutory claim, and she prayed that her title to the property be adjudicated in this suit. A general demurrer to the amendment was overruled.

The plaintiff offered in evidence "the official newspaper file of Terrell county, containing the issues of the Dawson News" in which appeared the following advertisement once a week for four weeks preceding the day of sale named therein: "Sheriff's Sale. Georgia, Terrell County. Will be sold on the first Tuesday in June next, at public outcry, at the courthouse in said county, within the legal hours of sale, to the highest bidder for cash, the following described property: 800 bushels of corn, more or less, 500 pounds of fodder, more or less, 120 bushels of cotton seed, more or less, 5,000 pounds of hay, more or less, and 8 bushels of peas. Said property will be sold by sample and delivered where now located on the E. E. Moran estate in the fourth district of Terrell county, Georgia. Said property levied on as the property of F. C. Coker to satisfy a mortgage fi. fa. issued from the city court of Dawson, said county, in favor of the Brown Guano Company, for use of A. J. Hill. This April 7, 1912. M. G. Hill, Sheriff." This advertisement was objected to by the defendant on the ground that it was an "invalid and insufficient advertisement." The trial judge sustained the objection, and excluded the advertisement. The plaintiff proved the value of the property levied upon, that it was turned over by the levying officer to Mrs. Coker upon the giving of the forthcoming bond, and that the property was not produced on the sale day. No demand for the property was shown. At the conclusion of the evidence the court awarded a nonsuit. Error is assigned as to each of the rulings stated.

H. A. Wilkinson and M. J. Yeomans, both of Dawson, for plaintiff in error. J. G. Parks and W. H. Gurr, both of Dawson, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. (after stating the facts as above). [1, 3] 1. The trial judge did not err in overruling the demurrer to the amendment to the answer. While the general rule is that in suits on forthcoming bonds the title to the property levied upon is not involved, yet it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove not only a breach of the bond, but also that the breach has resulted in damage to him. "In order for a levying officer suing for the use of a plaintiff in fi. fa. on a forthcoming bond to recover, he must show both breach and damage." Breach of the bond is shown by proof that the property was not delivered at the time and place of sale.

Grace v. Finleyson, 10 Ga. App. 480, 73 S. E. 680. The defendant would have the right to show that the breach of the bond did not result in damage to the plaintiff, for the reason that the property levied upon, and for the forthcoming of which the bond was given, did not belong to the defendant in execution, but did belong to the principal obligor in the bond. In Williams v. Herrington, 12 Ga. App. 76, 76 S. E. 757, it was held, with reference to the foreclosure of the lien of a laborer on logs hauled by him for another, that, "where an execution issued upon such a lien foreclosure is levied upon lumber in the possession of a person other than the one for whom the logs were hauled, the giving by such a person of a forthcoming bond to produce the property at the time and place of sale does not estop him, when suit is brought upon the bond, from asserting that at the time the execution was issued and the levy was made he was the owner of the property levied upon." See, also, Lackey v. Mize, 75 Ga. 692, and Jones v. Spillers, 9 Ga. App. 473, 71 S. E. 777.

[2] 2. The advertisement of the sale of the property levied upon, which was excluded from evidence, was a substantial compliance with the Civil Code (1910), § 6062, which provides the manner in which the sheriff's advertisements shall be made. It does not appear from the record that any specific objection was made to the advertisement; the ground of objection stated is merely that it was "an invalid and insufficient advertisement." Counsel in the argument before us urged the objection that no defendant is named in the advertisement, whereas, the statute provides that the advertisement must make known the plaintiff and the defendant, and that it is further defective because it states that the property "will be sold by sample and delivered where now located on the E. E. Moran estate in the fourth district of Terrell county, Georgia." An inspection of the advertisement will show that the first objection certainly was not good, for it is distinctly stated in the advertisement that the property was levied on "as the property of F. C. Coker to satisfy a mortgage fi. fa. issued from the city court of Dawson, said county, in favor of the Brown Guano Company, for use of A. J. Hill." The only inference from this statement is that F. C. Coker was defendant in fi. fa. A sufficient description of the property and its location is given in the advertisement, and we do not know of any valid reason why the property could not have been sold by sample and subsequently delivered where located as described in the advertisement. Civil Code (1910) § 6060. We think, therefore, that the court erred in ruling out the advertisement. With this advertisement in evidence, and with the other evidence offered by the plaintiff, the questions of breach and damages should have been submitted to the jury for determination, and not decided by the court as a matter of law.

Judgment reversed.

HADDON v. STATE. (No. 5,081.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1092*)—APPEAL—BILL OF EXCEPTIONS—DISMISSAL.

The bill of exceptions in this case was certified by the judge on June 20, 1913, and was filed in the office of the clerk of the trial court on July 7, 1913. Not having been filed within 15 days from the time of the certificate of the judge, in compliance with the mandatory terms of the statute, the writ of error must be dismissed. Civil Code 1910, § 6167; Goodin v. Mills, 137 Ga. 282, 73 S. E. 399; Woods v. State, 11 Ga. App. 383, 75 S. E. 491, and citations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2803, 2829, 2834-2861, 2919; Dec. Dig. § 1092.*]

Error from Superior Court, Effingham County; W. W. Sheppard, Judge.

A. H. Haddon was convicted of crime, and brings error. Writ of error dismissed.

J. H. Smith, of Eden, for plaintiff in error. R. W. Sheppard, Sol., of Guyton, and N. J. Norman, Sol. Gen., of Savannah, for the State.

HILL, C. J. Writ of error dismissed.

JONES v. MAYOR, ETC., OF CARROLLTON. (No. 5,090.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 642*)—VIOLATION OF ORDINANCES—APPEAL—CREDIBILITY OF WITNESSES.

The reviewing court will not attempt to pass upon the credibility of witnesses in a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquors on hand.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1412-1415; Dec. Dig. § 642.*]

2. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 640*)—VIOLATION OF ORDINANCES—TRIAL—CREDIBILITY OF WITNESSES.

In a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquors for sale in violation of a municipal ordinance, the mayor is authorized to credit one witness, rather than any number of witnesses who may contradict his testimony, and notwithstanding any efforts to impeach him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 1410; Dec. Dig. § 640.*]

3. SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

There was evidence sufficient to authorize the conviction of the accused in the municipal court, and the judge of the superior court did not abuse his discretion in refusing to sanction the writ of certiorari.

Error from Superior Court, Carroll County; R. W. Freeman, Judge.

Geo. Jones was convicted of violating a municipal ordinance prohibiting the keeping of intoxicating liquors for sale, and from the refusal of the superior court to sanction a writ of certiorari brings error. Affirmed.

Boykin & Boykin, of Carrollton, for plaintiff in error. J. O. Newell, of Carrollton, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

ROCHELLE GIN & COTTON CO. v. FISHER. (No. 5,015.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

CUSTOMS AND USAGES (§ 15*)—EVIDENCE (§ 448*)—TRIAL (§ 256*)—WAREHOUSEMEN (§ 22*)—PAROL—DUTY TO REQUEST INSTRUCTIONS—CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT.

This case is controlled by the ruling of the Supreme Court in Hamilton v. Moore, 94 Ga. 707, 19 S. E. 993, and the trial judge did not err in refusing a new trial.

(a) The evidence was sufficient to prove the existence of a custom by virtue of which the defendant, as warehouseman, undertook to insure the cotton of its customers.

(b) The stipulation in the warehouse receipts delivered to the plaintiff by the defendant as warehouseman, that the cotton was "subject to the presentation of this receipt only, the paying of customary expenses and advances, acts of fire and Providence excepted," so far as the same related to "acts of fire and Providence," was subject to explanation, and was controlled by proof of a custom, universally recognized in the locality, and which consequently entered into the contract, by virtue of which the defendant undertook to insure all cotton deposited in its warehouse.

(c) In the absence of timely and appropriate requests, directing attention to those features of the case as to which more specific instructions were desired, the charge of the trial judge fairly presented the law applicable to the issues.

(d) The jury being authorized to find, from the evidence as to custom, that the defendant had agreed to insure the plaintiff's cotton stored in its warehouse, which was destroyed by fire, it was immaterial whether the defendant, in its settlement with the insurers of the cotton in its warehouse, acted in good faith and used good judgment in compromising any of the policies of insurance covering the cotton. The custom, if proved, became a part of the contract of bailment, and it thereby became the duty of the defendant, as warehouseman, to pay the plaintiff the value of his cotton in case the cotton should be destroyed by fire while in the defendant's warehouse, even if the defendant had not protected itself by taking out insurance.

(e) Proof of negligence on the part of the defendant was not essential to a recovery by the plaintiff, and it is entirely immaterial, under the contract as proved by the plaintiff, whether the defendant was negligent or not. In the case of Zorn v. Hannah, 106 Ga. 61-64, 31 S. E. 797, proof of negligence was necessary because the negligence of the defendants was alleged to be, and was, the essential basis of the plaintiff's right to recover. That was a case in which the plaintiff was seeking to recover for the failure of the defendant to deliver cotton which, when demanded, could not be found in their warehouse, and the burden was upon the defendants to present such a reason for the disappearance of the cotton as would excuse their failure to deliver. In the present case there is no question as to the destruction of the cotton, and the only issue is whether the defendant had contracted to insure the plaintiff against loss in the event his cotton was destroyed by fire.

(f) In the case of Atwater v. Hannah, 116 Ga. 745, 42 S. E. 1007, as in the case at bar, the action was to recover for the loss of cotton deposited with warehousemen which was destroyed by fire, but from the ruling of the Supreme Court upon that portion of the warehouse receipt which related to the insurance of the cotton, and in which the Supreme Court held that the "mere statement in a warehouse receipt that 'all cotton stored with us fully insured' will not alone constitute a contract * * * requiring the warehouseman to insure the cotton of his customer, and rendering him liable for the value of the same when destroyed by fire," it is plainly inferable that the general rule that receipts are subject to explanation by parol was borne in mind; and consequently it must be held in the present case that the statement in the receipts accepted by the plaintiff not only did not furnish conclusive evidence of a contract relieving the warehouseman from liability for loss by fire, but that this statement would be of no effect in the face of satisfactory proof of a custom to the contrary which had become a part of the contract. There was sufficient testimony to authorize the jury to find that the custom was universal in the locality.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Customs and Usages, Cent. Dig. §§ 30-33; Dec. Dig. § 15;* Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 2066-2082, 2084; Dec. Dig. § 448;* Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 628-641; Dec. Dig. § 256;* Warehousemen, Cent. Dig. § 17; Dec. Dig. § 22.*]

Error from City Court of Abbeville; D. B. Nicholson, Judge.

Action by A. K. Fisher against the Rochelle Gin & Cotton Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Max E. Land, of Cordele, for plaintiff in error. Hall & Dennard, of Cordele, and Hal Lawson, of Abbeville, for defendant in error.

RUSSELL, J. Judgment affirmed.

LEARY v. STATE. (No. 5,077.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. HOMICIDE (§ 89*)—ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO MURDER—WHAT CONSTITUTES.

The act of maliciously putting broken glass into food with intent that the food shall be eaten by another, and that he shall in this manner be killed, does not, without more, constitute the offense of assault with intent to murder, when he does not eat the food after the glass has been put into it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 115-118; Dec. Dig. § 89.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

2. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1023*)—APPEAL—FINAL JUDGMENT.

An order overruling a demurrer to an indictment is reviewable under Civ. Code 1910, §

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

6138, authorizing a bill of exceptions either to a final judgment or to a judgment which would have been final if rendered as claimed by the excepting party.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2583-2598; Dec. Dig. § 1023.*]

8. CRIMINAL LAW (§§ 1058, 1063*)—APPEAL—PRESENTATION BELOW.

To entitle accused to bring error from the overruling of a demurrer to the indictment, it is not essential that he move for a new trial or except to the final judgment of conviction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2669, 2673, 2676-2684; Dec. Dig. §§ 1058, 1063.*]

4. CRIMINAL LAW (§ 1058*)—APPEAL—PRESENTATION BELOW.

Where an exception is made to an interlocutory order which is neither final nor would have been final if it had been rendered as requested by accused, he must except to the final judgment of conviction before a reviewing court can pass upon the interlocutory ruling.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2669; Dec. Dig. § 1058.*]

Error from Superior Court, Lowndes County; W. E. Thomas, Judge.

Jule Leary was convicted of assault with intent to murder, and brings error. Reversed.

Geo. E. Simpson and Franklin & Langdale, all of Valdosta, for plaintiff in error. J. A. Wilkes, Sol. Gen., of Moultrie, for the State.

POTTLE, J. The plaintiff in error was arraigned under an indictment charging him with the offense of assault with intent to murder. Omitting the formal parts, the indictment charged that Jule Leary "unlawfully, feloniously, and with malice aforethought did put broken glass into the collar greens and corn bread of Lucius Zeigler, the said broken glass being a weapon likely to produce death, and the said broken glass being then and there deposited in said collar greens and corn bread with the intent then and there to cause the said Lucius Zeigler to eat the same, and the said acts in and upon the said Jule Leary did thereby make an assault with the intent the said Lucius Zeigler to kill and murder, and the said Jule Leary with said broken glass which he then and there deposited as aforesaid did unlawfully, feloniously, and with malice aforethought attempt to kill the said Lucius Zeigler, contrary to the laws of said state, the good order, peace, and dignity thereof." The accused demurred on the ground that the facts set forth in the indictment did not constitute the offense of assault with intent to murder, that the indictment failed to charge any overt act indicating that the accused procured and induced the prosecutor to swallow or otherwise use the broken glass, and because the indictment failed to charge how or in what manner said broken glass was deposited, or in what manner the same was placed before, or whether it was offerred or administered to the intended victim at all. The demurrer was overruled, and the accused was convicted. Within 20 days from the overruling of the demurrer he sued out a writ of error to the Court of Appeals, complaining of the judgment overruling the demurrer, but did not assign error upon any other judgment rendered in the case. In this court a motion was made by the solicitor general to dismiss the writ of error, upon the ground that the accused could not assign error upon the judgment overruling his demurrer without also excepting to the final judgment of conviction.

[2] 1. There is no merit in the motion to dismiss the writ of error. A bill of exceptions may be sued out to this court, complaining either of a final judgment or of one which would have been final if it had been rendered as claimed by the excepting party. Civil Code, § 6138. If the demurrer had been sustained, the indictment would have been quashed, and this would have been an end of the case.

[3] The fact that the accused was convicted and sentence imposed before he excepted to the judgment overruling the demurrer is immaterial. It was not necessary that he should file a motion for a new trial, or that he should except to the final judgment of conviction. Doubtless, if the demurrer was not well taken, the accused was properly convicted, and has no just cause of complaint. It would be useless to require him to file a motion for a new trial when no errors of law were committed during the progress of the trial, or to interpose a formal exception to the final judgment of conviction. It is settled by a number of decisions of the Supreme Court that this was not necessary. "A writ of error lies to a judgment overruling a demurrer to the whole bill, notwithstanding the complainants may have proceeded to a hearing and obtained a decree, and though the decree be not excepted to, nor any motion made for a new trial." Lowe v. Burke, 79 Ga. 164, 3 S. E. 449. See, also, Kitchens v. State, 80 Ga. 810, 7 S. E. 209; Central Railroad Co. v. Denson, 83 Ga. 266, 9 S. E. 788; City of Augusta v. Lombard, 86 Ga. 165, 12 S. E. 212; Turner v. Camp, 110 Ga. 631, 36 S. E. 76.

[4] Where an exception is made to an interlocutory ruling which is neither final nor would have been final if it had been rendered as claimed by the excepting party, it is necessary to except to the final judgment in the case before a reviewing court will acquire jurisdiction to pass upon the interlocutory ruling. Lyndon v. Georgia Railway & Electric Co., 129 Ga. 353, 58 S. E. 1047; Carpenter v. First Nat. Bank of Sandersville, 13 Ga. App. —, 79 S. E. 360, and cases cited. In these cases the question raised by the exception was not one which would have finally ended the case no matter which way decided.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

If the ruling made was a final termination of the case, or would have been so if rendered as claimed by the excepting party, then this court has jurisdiction to pass upon the exception of the ruling, although no other judgment is excepted to.

[1] 2. In Johnson v. State, 92 Ga. 36, 17 S. E. 974, the indictment charged the accused with having committed the offense of assault with intent to murder by putting arsenic and other poison into coffee, "and administering the said poisons" to the person named in the indictment. The proof showed that the person thus named drank of the coffee containing the poisons; it was held that the indictment sufficiently charged the offense of assault with intent to murder, and that under the evidence the accused was properly convicted. This decision was based upon the English case of Reg. v. Button, 8 C. & P. 660. In Peebles v. State, 101 Ga. 585, 28 S. E. 920, it was held: "The act of maliciously putting poison into a well with the intent that the water thereof shall be drunk by another, and that he shall in this manner be killed, does not, without more, constitute the offense of an assault with intent to murder, when the person whose death was intended never in fact drank of the water after the poison had been introduced into the same." The case of Johnson v. State, supra, however, was distinguished from the case then under consideration by reason of the fact that in the Johnson Case the intended victim actually drank of the coffee. In the opinion the court said: "We think the Johnson Case and the English case of Reg. v. Button, 8 C. & P. 660, cited in support of it, go to the full extent authorized in holding that an assault has been committed in cases of this character. The case in hand closely resembles one where a pitfall has been dug, or a spring gun set, or a gun loaded, with the felonious intent of depriving another of his life, but where the criminal intent did not proceed sufficiently far to bring the individual whose death was meditated into immediate and present danger." See, also, Groves v. State, 116 Ga. 516, 42 S. E. 755, 59 L. R. A. 598; Chelsey v. State, 121 Ga. 340, 49 S. E. 258. The indictment in the present case does not allege either that the intended victim partook of the food containing the bits of glass, or that the accused administered glass to the victim with the intent to kill him. The effect of the ruling in the Johnson Case, as explained and restricted by the decision in the Peebles Case, is that in cases of this character there can be no assault unless the poison is administered to the victim, and there can be no administration of it unless the victim partakes of the substance containing the poison. The present indictment charges merely that the accused put broken glass into the intended victim's food with intent that he should eat it, and did thereby make an assault with intent to kill. There is no averment that the broken glass was administered to the intended victim, or that he partook of any of the food in which the glass was contained. This being so, the indictment did not set forth the offense of assault with intent to murder, and the demurrer thereto should have been sustained.

Judgment reversed.

WATSON et al. v. AMERICAN NAT. BANK.
(No. 4,669.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 203*)—NOTICE—DISMISSAL.

Where the written notice of the sanction of a certiorari and of the time and place of hearing, which is required by the Civil Code 1910, § 5190, is not given at least ten days before the time fixed by law for the beginning of the term of the court to which the writ is returnable, the certiorari should be dismissed, unless it appears that the failure to have the prescribed notice given was due to providential cause.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 790, 791; Dec. Dig. § 203.*]

2. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 203*)—NOTICE—"THE SITTING OF THE COURT."

The phrase "the sitting of the court," as employed in the Code section to which reference is made in the preceding headnote, is not used to denote the time during a term of the court when the court may sit to hear the particular case in question, but refers alone to the day fixed by law when the court must begin to sit for the disposition of all cases legally cognizable at that term of the court, and is used as the equivalent of the expression "the first day of the term."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 790, 791; Dec. Dig. § 203.*]

Error from Superior Court, Bibb County;
H. A. Mathews, Judge.

Action in a justice court by the American National Bank against T. H. Watson and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and, from dismissal of certiorari in the Superior Court, defendants bring error. Affirmed.

Sidney W. Hatcher, of Macon, for plaintiffs in error.

RUSSELL, J. The American National Bank of Macon, Ga., obtained in a justice's court a judgment against the present plaintiff in error, who thereupon sued out a writ of certiorari to the superior court. Upon the call of the case the certiorari was dismissed by the judge of the superior court, upon the ground that no legal service of the notice of the sanction of the writ of certiorari required by law had been perfected upon the defendant in certiorari within the legal time limit. Upon the hearing of the motion it was agreed that the petition for certiorari was sanctioned.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes.

ed May 11, 1912, and that the writ of certiorari was returnable to the November term, 1912, of Bibb superior court, which convened on November 4, 1912, in accordance with the law regulating the terms of that court, and that the answer of the justice to the writ was duly filed. It was admitted that the notice of sanction of the writ and of the time and place of hearing was given on November 16, 1912. The judge of the superior court sustained the motion to dismiss the petition, and exception is taken to this judgment.

[1, 2] The question raised by the writ of error is whether the notice required by Civil Code, § 5190, may be given at any time ten days before the date when the certiorari is called for hearing, or whether the expression "at least ten days before the sitting of the court to which the same shall be returnable" requires that the notice shall be given ten days before the date fixed by law for the convening of the court at which the hearing upon the petition for certiorari may legally be had. We do not think there can be any doubt that the trial judge correctly held that the notice required by this section of the Code must be given at least ten days before the opening of the court to which the certiorari was returnable, and the Code section is mandatory in the provision that when this has not been done "the certiorari shall be dismissed."

Judgment affirmed.

BECK v. A. N. TUMLIN CO. (No. 4,934.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 155*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—FAILURE TO WARN.

"In an action by a servant against a master for alleged failure of duty on the part of the latter in not giving to the servant warning of a danger incident to his employment, it must appear that the master knew or ought to have known of the danger, and that the servant injured did not know and had not equal means with the master of knowing such fact, and by the exercise of ordinary care could not have known it. If the danger be obvious and as easily known to the servant as to the master, the latter will not be liable for failing to give warning of it." Hendrix v. Vale Royal Mfg. Co., 134 Ga. 712, 68 S. E. 483; Civil Code (1910) § 3181.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 310; Dec. Dig. § 155.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 265*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—BURDEN OF PROOF.

An adult servant of ordinary intelligence who has been at work on a machine a sufficient length of time to discover patent and manifest defects and dangers will be presumed to have knowledge of such defects or dangers. In other words, the duty is placed upon a servant charged with the operation of a machine to observe every visible and manifest defect in the machine which would render his work dangerous. If his opportunity to discover such defects is equal to that of the master, he cannot recover damages for personal injuries caused by his operation of the machine; and, in a suit by the servant to recover such damages, the burden is upon him to show that he did not have equal means with the master of discovering these defects and dangers, and by the exercise of ordinary care could not have known of them. Roland v. Tift, 131 Ga. 683, 63 S. E. 133, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 354; Crown Cotton Mills v. McNally, 123 Ga. 35, 51 S. E. 13; Vinson v. Willingham Cotton Mills, 2 Ga. App. 53, 58 S. E. 413; 1 Labatt, Master and Servant, § 394, and cases cited.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 877-908, 955; Dec. Dig. § 265.*]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 159*)—INJURY TO SERVANT—NEGLIGENCE OF FELLOW SERVANT.

Except in the case of railroad companies, a servant cannot recover against a master for personal injuries caused solely by the negligence of a fellow servant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 318-325; Dec. Dig. § 159.*]

4. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 235*)—INJURY TO EMPLOYE—NONSUIT.

The evidence in behalf of the plaintiff showing that his injuries were due either to the negligence of a fellow servant, or to visible and patent defects in the machine that he was operating, and that he had equal means with the master of knowing of such defects or dangers, the judgment awarding a nonsuit was not erroneous.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 710-722; Dec. Dig. § 235.*]

Russell, J., dissenting.

Error from City Court of Floyd County; J. H. Reece, Judge.

Action by Spencer Beck against the A. N. Tumlin Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Eubanks & Mebane, of Rome, for plaintiff in error. Maddox & Doyal, of Rome, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. This is a suit to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained by reason of the negligence of the plaintiff's employer. The substance of the petition, so far as material, is as follows: The plaintiff was employed by the defendant company in its cotton gin. His work consisted of attending to the lever of the press used in the baling and pressing of cotton. The press had a maximum capacity of 500 pounds. On the day of his injury the defendant put into the press a bale of cotton weighing 530 pounds. The plaintiff, in the discharge of his duty, took hold of the lever and unhooked it, where it was fastened near the bottom of the press by means of a link, but after he had unfastened it, and while he was holding it in his hand for the purpose of letting it assume a horizontal position, so that the pressure and tension thereon might be released and the hook be detached from the link and the bale be released from the press, the lever suddenly, instantly, and powerfully, and without any warning to him, jerked loose from his hand, flew upwards, and struck him on the chin, knocking him clear of the floor a distance of 16 feet, and inflicting upon him the injuries set forth in the petition. He alleges that the press was defective, in that it was two inches wider at the bottom than at the top, and that this caused the tension and strain to be greater on the lever; that the hooks on the end of the rod were defective, in that they were old and worn, having been used by the defendant for nine years without repairs; that the inside of the hooks had, instead of one plain curvical surface, a double curvical surface with two concave surfaces in the inner parts, and that near the middle of the hook there was a ridge or raised surface dividing the hook into two parts, and the link slipped over this raised place, thus making the tension and strain on the lever less and causing the lever to fly up and strike the plaintiff; that this defective condition was the cause of the lever being suddenly jerked from his hand; that if the hook had had only one plain surface, he would not have been injured in this manner. He alleges that he did not know of the defective condition of the hook; that this condition could be observed only by inspection and examination, and that it was no part of his duty to inspect and examine the machinery, but that this was the duty of the defendant, and that the defendant knew and by the exercise of ordinary care could have known of the defective condition; also that the defendant was negligent in not warning him of the danger. He alleges, also, that the defendant was guilty of negligence in putting into the press more than 500 pounds of cotton, in that it exceeded the capacity of the press, and caused the straining and tension on the hook, thus causing the link to jerk from the side of the hook and pull the lever from his hand. The plaintiff substantially proved these facts, and also proved that there had been no change in the press during the two years he had been running it, and which time it had been in his charge. He proved, also, that there was nothing to prevent him from seeing the alleged defects in the hooks, some of his witnesses testifying that he was necessarily compelled to handle each of these hooks every time he operated the press; that the inside of the hooks would fall directly under his eye every time he operated it. He testified that the tendency in every instance was for the lever to fly up just as it did when he was injured. As to this he said: "I guess the lever would fly up if you were not to hold it anyway. If you were just to turn the lever loose at first, before you loosened the door, it would fly up. Then the reason you put both hands on there when you loosen it is to prevent it from doing that very thing. Then if you have got your head over out in this way, and you fail to hold it, it is going to hit you under the chin. If there was a large enough bale of cotton to throw it up, it would hit a fellow. The tendency is, when you loosen that (the tendency of the lever is), to fly up. Of course, you want to loosen it to raise it up. The pressure of that bale of cotton tends in every case to make it fly up; if it was just to be turned loose, just get off out here and prize it off, of course the lever would fly up. The tendency is to go up. The reason I took hold of it with both hands was to keep it from flying up." A witness for the plaintiff testified that he had known the press ever since it was put in, that he had frequently seen it in operation, and that every time the link was loosened the lever came up with a jump. The plaintiff testified that the ginner put the cotton into the gin and into the press, and that no one else had anything to do with this part of the work except the ginner and himself. At the conclusion of the plaintiff's evidence a nonsuit was awarded; and he excepted.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

The foregoing statement is sufficient for an understanding of the rulings announced in the headnotes.

Judgment affirmed.

RUSSELL, J., dissenting.

JOHNSON v. HARRIS. (No. 4,933.)
(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

HABEAS CORPUS (§ 113*)—APPEAL—MOOT QUESTION.

A writ of habeas corpus was sued out to test the validity of a sentence imposed by a municipal court, requiring the prisoner to serve 30 days in the city chain gang. He began to serve the sentence on April 19th, the habeas corpus proceeding was heard on May 5th, and the prisoner remanded to the custody of the city marshal, to serve out his sentence. A writ of error was sued out to this court on May 10th, but it does not appear that any supersedeas of the judgment remanding the prisoner into the custody of the marshal was obtained. The case was called and argued in the Court of Appeals on June 9th. It must, therefore, be assumed that, when the case was reached in this court, the sentence had been satisfied. The questions raised for decision have become moot, and will not be decided.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Habeas Corpus, Cent. Dig. §§ 102-115; Dec. Dig. § 113.*]

Error from City Court of Floyd County; J. H. Reece, Judge.

Habeas corpus proceedings by Ella Johnson against C. I. Harris. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Henry Walker, of Rome, for plaintiff in error. Max Meyerhardt, of Rome, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. Judgment affirmed.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

CARSWELL v. STATE. (No. 5,068.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

*(Syllabus by the Court.)DRUNKARDS (§ 11*)—DRUNKENNESS—EVIDENCE.

The accused was convicted, under an accusation in the city court, of the offense of drunkenness on church grounds. The evidence shows that he had a bottle containing a small quantity of whisky, but there is no evidence whatever that he was in a condition of drunkenness while on the church grounds. His conviction was therefore unauthorized.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Drunkards, Cent. Dig. §§ 12-18; Dec. Dig. § 11.*]

Error from City Court of Dublin; Jas. B. Hicks, Judge.

Jim Carswell was convicted of drunkenness on church grounds, and brings error. Reversed.

Hal. B. Wimberly, of Dublin, for plaintiff in error. Geo. B. Davis, Sol., of Dublin, for the State.

HILL, C. J. Judgment reversed.

MOULTRIE COMPRESS CO. v. BYROM COTTON CO. (No. 4,802.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

*(Syllabus by the Court.)1. TRIAL (§ 256*)—INSTRUCTIONS—DUTY TO REQUEST.

The instructions of the court covered substantially the issues of the case as made by the pleading and evidence, and in the absence of any request for a more specific charge as to its contentions the defendant cannot be heard to complain that its contentions were not more specifically given. Smith v. Bibb Mfg. Co., 112 Ga. 680, 37 S. E. 861.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 628-641; Dec. Dig. § 256.*]

2. BAILMENT (§ 31*)—ACTION FOR LOSS—BURDEN OF PROOF.

In all cases of bailment, after proof of bailment and loss, the burden of proof is shifted to the bailee to show that he exercised ordinary diligence and care in taking care of the property of the bailor. In the present case the plaintiff proved the delivery of the property sued for to the defendant, the failure of the defendant to deliver the property on demand, and the value of the property. The prima facie case of liability thus shown was not successfully overcome by the defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bailment, Cent. Dig. §§ 124-131; Dec. Dig. § 31.*]

3. VERDICT SUSTAINED—NO ERROR.

The controlling questions in this case were issues of fact. The verdict for the plaintiff was fully supported by the evidence, and no error of law appears, either in the rulings on evidence or in the instructions given to the jury, and no reason appears why there should be a new trial.

Error from Superior Court, Colquitt County; W. E. Thomas, Judge.

Action by the Byrom Cotton Company against the Moultrie Compress Company.

Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Shipp & Kilne, of Moultrie, for plaintiff in error. Crum & Jones, of Cordele, and Edwin L. Bryan, of Moultrie, for defendant in error.

HILL, C. J. Judgment affirmed.

ADAIR v. SPELLMAN SEMINARY.

(No. 4,695.)

(Court of Appeals of Georgia. Oct. 21, 1913.)

*(Syllabus by the Court.)1. COURTS (§ 163*)—JURISDICTION—"CASES RESPECTING TITLE TO LAND."

Exclusive jurisdiction to try cases respecting title to land is by the Constitution of this state vested in the superior courts. Cases where the title is only incidentally involved, such as one for the recovery of damages for trespass to realty, possessory warrant, and forcible entry and detainer cases, and a summary proceeding to abate a nuisance in a public street or a private way, are not "cases respecting title to land" (Civ. Code 1910, § 6510), within the meaning of the Constitution. It would seem, however, that, where in a summary proceeding to abate a nuisance it appears from the pleadings that the only real and substantial issue involved is one respecting title to realty, a court other than the superior court should hesitate to entertain jurisdiction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. §§ 410-411, 443, 479, 1297; Dec. Dig. § 163.*]

2. EASEMENTS (§ 17*)—MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 663*)—STREETS—PURCHASE ACCORDING TO PLAT—ABANDONMENT.

Where streets and roads are marked on a plat of a tract of land, and lots are bought and sold with reference to the plat, not only those who buy lots abutting on a street or road laid out on the map, but all who buy with reference to the general plan or scheme disclosed by the plat, acquire a right of user in all of the roads and streets designated on the plat.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Cent. Dig. §§ 45-49; Dec. Dig. § 17.* Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1438-1440; Dec. Dig. § 663.*]

3. EASEMENTS (§ 61*)—NUISANCE (§ 18*)—OBSTRUCTION—ABATEMENT.

The stopping or impeding of a private way which has been opened and in use by those entitled to traverse it is a private nuisance, and may be abated by the summary proceeding provided for in section 5329 et seq. of the Civil Code 1910.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Cent. Dig. §§ 102, 130-144, 148; Dec. Dig. § 61.* Nuisance, Cent. Dig. §§ 49, 50; Dec. Dig. § 18.*]

4. EASEMENTS (§ 61*)—OBSTRUCTION—ABATEMENT.

The summary proceeding provided for by the Code is not available to remove an obstruction in an alleged private way, which exists only on a plat or map, and which has never been opened or used as a way.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Cent. Dig. §§ 102, 130-144, 148; Dec. Dig. § 61.*]

5. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 655*)—CONTROL OF STREETS—CONSTRUCTION OF CHARTER.

Power granted in the charter of a city "to open, lay out, to widen, straighten, or otherwise change streets, alleys, and squares in the city" is broad enough to authorize the changing of a street so as to straighten it and remove from it pronounced irregularities; the termini of the changed portion of the street remaining the same, the distance between them being shortened, and the changed street affording a more convenient way of travel to and from the same points reached by the old street. Coker v. Railway Co., 123 Ga. 483, 51 S. E. 481, distinguished.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Dec. Dig. § 655.*]

6. NUISANCE (§ 72*)—PUBLIC NUISANCE—ABATEMENT—PARTIES.

A private individual cannot complain of a public nuisance, unless he shows some special damage accruing to him in which the public does not participate.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Nuisance, Cent. Dig. §§ 164-169; Dec. Dig. § 72.*]

7. NO ERROR—JUDGMENT SUSTAINED.

The evidence authorized the judgment entered by the city recorder in behalf of the defendant, and there was no error in overruling the petition for certiorari.

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

8. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 697*)—OBSTRUCTION OF STREETS—ESTOPPEL.

A party suing as executor was not estopped to have obstructions upon certain streets removed by the fact that his testator had closed a part of a street not involved in the suit; the remedy, if any, of the persons injured by the closing of such street being to proceed against plaintiff to require him to open it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1502-1505; Dec. Dig. § 697.*]

Error from Superior Court, Fulton County; Geo. L. Bell, Judge.

Action by Forrest Adair, executor, against the Spellman Seminary. Judgment for defendant, and, from the overruling of a petition for certiorari, plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Rosser & Brandon and King & Spalding, all of Atlanta, for plaintiff in error. Hooper Alexander, of Atlanta, for defendant in error.

POTTLE, J. On July 23, 1901, Forrest Adair, as executor of the last will of George W. Adair, filed in the recorder's court of the city of Atlanta a petition against the Spellman Seminary, a corporation conducting an educational institution in said city, to abate certain alleged nuisances which the plaintiff averred the defendant had erected and maintained in certain streets over which the plaintiff had an easement. The petition avers that at the time of his death George W. Adair was the owner of two city lots, known as Nos. 10 and 11 according to a plat of what was formerly known as the James property, and consisting of about 50 acres of land, bounded on the north and east by Greens Ferry Avenue South, by Chapel street, and west by Chapel and Lee streets; that on this plat the tract of land was divided into 140 lots, including Nos. 10 and 11, which were owned by George W. Adair and are in the control of the executor; that upon this plat the streets bounding the land appeared the following streets north and south, to wit: Henry, Culver, Leonard, and Lizzie; and running west: Ella, Keith, Phelps, and Broomhead. It is alleged that each of these streets are public streets of Atlanta, and were such that they were laid out and during the time hereinafter mentioned. The plaintiff complains that the defendant has erected obstructions across Leonard, Reynolds, Keith, and Broomhead streets, so as to prevent free use and enjoyment of the same by the plaintiff and the public. The effect of the erection of this fence is to prevent the use of the streets of Leonard and Broomhead streets, the whole of Reynolds, Keith, and Broomhead streets within one inclosure, and to stop the use of all of said streets. It is further alleged that the defendant has erected obstructions upon the tract, which buildings over and into and across the streets above mentioned, so as to prevent the use of these streets by the plaintiff and the public. The plaintiff avers that he is entitled to use these streets as public streets of Atlanta, and that he has sustained injury not common to the public by the fact that all of the streets within the James tract were so enclosed to these streets; that George W. Adair bought lots Nos. 10 and 11, a part of this tract, with reference to the streets, which afforded more convenient access to and from these streets than the streets of the tract. The plaintiff avers that by the erection of these streets by the defendant, the streets of Nos. 10 and 11 have been depreciated. The defendant filed a special demurrer to the jurisdiction of the court, setting aside the streets which the plaintiff alleged to be obstructed by the defendant, and claiming that the streets of the city of Atlanta were open streets or ways; that the plaintiff's right, if he had any, is a mere easement in land, and that he sought to be raised by said proceedings involving title to land, being brought for the purpose of testing the question whether the defendant has such right in the land covered by the streets as to authorize it to close the streets. Such a proceeding is, under the laws and customs of the city of Atlanta, and laws, cognizant only in the court of Fulton county. Subject to the jurisdiction, the defendant demurred and answered. The demurrer was overruled and an order was passed, requiring the plaintiff to file a special plea would not be correct. The plea to the jurisdiction, but could file the same as a part of its defense. The defendant answered, and set up the following defenses. (1) That the alleged streets obstructed by it were never opened or traveled or used and accepted by the public as streets; (2) that neither the plaintiff nor his testator ever had acquired the right to use any of the alleged streets, except that the public had occasionally used a part of Leonard and Broomhead streets for a passageway through the defendant's property, and that in closing the Leonard-Broomhead way the defendant acted with the consent of the public and every person interested therein, and at the same time opened a better and shorter way through its property and around it from the same point on Ella street northward to Greens Ferry avenue; (3) that the entire tract occupied by the defendant has been for a number of years openly and notoriously in its possession, and held by it as one piece of property, with no streets through it except the Leonard-Broomhead way, which has been straightened as above mentioned; that more than a year before the filing of the petition the defendant entered upon an extensive scheme of building and improvement, and in pursuance thereof, and before any objection was made by the plaintiff, had laid out and expended on the buildings complained of in the plaintiff's petition more than $100,000, with no suggestion by the plaintiff of any rights claimed by him or his testator; that the defendant's expenditure for improvements on said land represents an outlay of more than $300,000, nearly all of which would be rendered useless for the purposes for which it was expended, if the prayers of the petition were granted, and that the circumstances under which the streets were closed and the improvements made are such as to estop the plaintiff from interfering at this time with the progress of the work; (4) that George W. Adair, owner of lots Nos. 10 and 11, without the consent of the defendant, closed up a part of Chapel street which was a part of the James plat, and his estate is now in possession of a part of the street so closed. The defendant avers that the closing up of this part of said street by George W. Adair is evidence of his assent to the abandonment of the street scheme as indicated by the plat, and operates to estop his executor from complaining of the obstruction of other streets by the defendant.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series.

The case came on to be heard before the recorder in 1901, and, after the evidence was introduced, he rendered a judgment in favor of the defendant, upon the ground that under the evidence no nuisance existed. The plaintiff sued out a writ of certiorari in the latter part of 1902. The case was continued from time to time in the superior court, and finally on January 1, 1913, a judgment was entered overruling the certiorari. The plaintiff excepted. The evidence before the recorder was voluminous and somewhat conflicting. From the evidence it appeared that about the year 1879 John H. James caused a plat to be made of the 50-acre tract described in the plaintiff's petition, divided it into 140 lots, and laid out as a part of the plat Lizzie, Ella, Leonard, Henry, Keith, Phelps, and Broomhead streets. The tract was bounded by Chapel and Lee streets and Greens Ferry avenue, all of which were original highways, were no part of the plat, and have not been obstructed in any way by the defendant. The property occupied by the defendant was acquired by it as an educational institution at different times, either from James or from various persons holding under him. The conveyances to the seminary covered a period beginning in 1883 and extending down to 1899. In each deed the property conveyed was described by lot numbers with reference to the James plat and the streets which had been laid out thereon. The evidence abundantly authorized, if it did not demand, a finding by the recorder that none of the streets laid out on the James plat, except Leonard and Broomhead, had ever been actually used as streets, and that certainly the dedication of them had never been accepted by the public. It seems from the evidence that what is referred to in the brief as the Leonard-Broomhead way, which consisted of Leonard street and part of Broomhead street, had been used for some years as a way from Ella street northward to Greens Ferry avenue. For the purposes of this case it may be considered that the evidence demanded a finding that this Leonard-Broomhead way was a public street. On June 15, 1900, the city council of Atlanta authorized the defendant to straighten Leonard street from Ella to Broomhead, and Broomhead from Leonard to Greens Ferry avenue by moving the street eastward 100 feet to the edge of the Spellman Seminary property, the new street to be the same width as the old street, and to be paved by the defendant with rock, sand, or chert. In pursuance of this permission the defendant made a change in the streets. Starting at the point on Chapel street where the old street touched it, and running northward into Greens Ferry avenue, thereby straightening the street, and affording easy and convenient access to Greens Ferry avenue along the new street. A part of the fence which the plaintiff complains was built across several of the streets had been erected prior to the purchase of the land by the defendant, and portions of the fence were built and repaired by the defendant after its purchase. George W. Adair died in 1899, and shortly thereafter the plaintiff qualified as the executor of his will. Some time in 1900 the attention of the plaintiff was called to the fact that the defendant was constructing buildings projecting into certain of the streets. He immediately complained to the defendant, and negotiations and conferences covering a period of several months were had. No adjustment having been reached, the present proceeding was instituted.

[1] 1. The exhaustive and able briefs prepared by counsel for both sides have greatly lessened the labor of this court in examining the record and the law touching the various questions which have been presented for our consideration. The recorder did not in terms adjudge that he was without jurisdiction, though his general judgment in favor of the defendant was based upon the issues raised by the petition and the defendant's pleadings. But in view of the fact that the special plea to the jurisdiction was filed, and a general judgment entered in favor of the defendant, if this judgment was right for any reason, it ought to stand. The question raised by the plea to the jurisdiction is an interesting one. Exclusive jurisdiction to try "cases respecting titles to land" is vested by the Constitution in the superior courts. Civil Code, § 8510. Many cases arise, however, where title is only incidentally involved, and jurisdiction may be entertained by other courts. For instance, an action for damages for trespass to realty may be brought in a city court, and frequently it becomes necessary, as an incident to the plaintiff's case to pass upon the question of title. And so in possessory warrant and forcible entry and detainer cases we say that the question of title is not involved; but it may, and frequently does, become necessary to pass upon the question of title as an incident to the issues involved. Both from the pleadings and the evidence in the present case it appears that the defendant is standing squarely upon its claim of title to the land covered by the streets upon which the alleged obstructions were erected. There is nothing in the evidence to impeach the bona fides of the defendant's claim of title. There could be no question that the obstructions were nuisances, and hence on this point there could be no issue, so that really the controlling question to be decided by the recorder was whether or not the defendant had valid title to the streets superior to the plaintiff's alleged right of user. This being so, were it not for certain decisions of the Supreme Court which apparently lay down a contrary rule, there would be much force in the argument in behalf of the defendant that the recorder was without jurisdiction to pass upon the issues raised by the pleadings in this case. A court ought to hesitate to adjudicate title to land upon summary proceedings such as are now involved. Wood, Nuisances (3d Ed.) § 843.

[2] 2. It is unquestionably true that, when George W. Adair purchased lots 10 and 11, he acquired an interest in the streets designated on the James plat. "It is not only those who buy land or lots abutting on a street or road laid out on a map or plat that have a right to insist upon the opening of the street or road; but, where streets and roads are marked on a plat, and lots are bought and sold with reference to the plat or map, all who buy with reference to the general plan or scheme disclosed by the plat or map acquire a right in all the public ways designated thereon, and may enforce the dedication. The plan or scheme indicated on the map or plat is regarded as a unity, and it is presumed, as it well may be, that the public ways add value to all the lots embraced in the general scheme or plan. Certainly, as every one knows, lots with convenient cross streets are of more value than those without, and it is fair to presume that the original owner would not have donated land for public ways unless it gave value to the lots. So, too, it is just to presume that the purchasers paid the added value, and the donor ought not, therefore, to be permitted to take it from them by revoking part of his dedication. "1 Elliott, Roads and Streets (3d Ed.) § 132; 9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law (2d Ed.) 57. The law as thus announced is in accordance with the decisions of our Supreme Court. Bayard v. Hargrove, 45 Ga. 343; Ford v. Harris, 95 Ga. 97, 22 S. E. 144. Where a street which has been used by the public has been abandoned, the fee in the soil reverts to the owners of the abutting lots. Bayard v. Hargrove, supra; Harrison v. Augusta Factory, 73 Ga. 447. If, therefore, the case is otherwise made out, the plaintiff has shown such a right to the use of the streets designated on the plat as to entitle him to maintain the proceeding.

[3] 3. The law now in the Code on the subject of abatement of nuisances was taken substantially from the act of 1833; the only material change in the law having been made by the act of 1892, which authorized the abatement of nuisances before a recorder in cities having a population exceeding 20,000. See Acts 1833, p. 143; Acts 1892, p. 64; W. & A. Railroad v. City of Atlanta, 113 Ga. 555, 38 S. E. 996, 54 L. R. A. 294; Peginis v. City of Atlanta, 132 Ga. 302, 63 S. E. 857, 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 716. The act of 1833 provides: "All nuisances not here mentioned, which tend to annoy the community, or injure the health of the citizens in general, or to corrupt the public morals, shall be indictable, and punishable by fine, or imprisonment in the common jail of the county, or both, at the discretion of the court. And any nuisance which tends to the immediate annoyance of the citizens in general, is manifestly injurious to the public health and safety, or tends greatly to corrupt the manners and morals of the people, may be abated and suppressed by the order of any two or more justices of the peace of the county, founded upon the opinion and verdict of twelve freeholders of the same county, who shall be summoned, sworn and empanelled for that purpose; which order shall be directed to, and executed by the sheriff of the county or his deputy." This act, with the amendment by the act of 1892, has been carried forward in the Code, and is now embraced in section

5329 et seq. of the Civil Code. It will be observed that the act undertakes to declare what nuisances may be summarily abated; they are such as tend to the immediate annoyance of the citizens in general, are manifestly injurious to the public health and safety, or tend greatly to corrupt the manners and morals of the people. From the plain language used, it would seem that the only nuisances which can be summarily abated under the statutes are public nuisances, that is to say, nuisances which affect the citizens in general, and not those which merely injure the property of one of the citizens without affecting the public in general. And this seems to have been the view which the Supreme Court took of the law in one of the earlier decisions. Vason v. South Carolina R. Co., 42 Ga. 631. In that case a proceeding was instituted to abate as a nuisance a railway which was operated on one of the public streets of Augusta. In discussing the question, Judge McCay refers to the distinction between a public and a private nuisance, and adds: "But our proceeding to abate is only another mode of doing what it was one of the principal objects of an indictment, at common law, to do, to wit, to abate the nuisance. It was a part of the judgment of the court on conviction of the offender, if the nuisance was continuous, to direct the sheriff to abate the nuisance. Wharton's Amer. Crim. Law, § 2369; 2 Ralls' Ab. 84, § 15; 2 Burns' Jus. 222; 1 Hawk's Bl. Cro. 365; Taggart v. Commonwealth, 9 Harris, 527. Indeed, there was no other way by which a public nuisance could be abated, by process of law. There was an old writ, called an assize of nuisance, by which a private nuisance against a freehold might be abated; but as to public nuisances an indictment was the only remedy, except by the act of a person taking the law in his own hands. 2 Bouv. Inst. 577, 579. Our statute defining an abatable nuisance defines an indictable nuisance, save that it adds 'immediate,' 'manifestly,' and 'greatly,' before the words 'annoyance,' 'public health,' and 'public morals,' and was evidently intended not to authorize the abatement of an act which was not indictable, but to authorize the abatement of indictable nuisances of peculiar virulence without waiting for an indictment. Sections 4023, 4478, Revised Code. It is a public proceeding in behalf of the public, and, according to section 2946 of the Code, it ought to be in the name of the state. It is true that sections 4023 and 4024 do not point out what particular form shall be used, nor would we insist that any particular form is necessary; but the whole scope and design of the law indicates that it is a proceeding in behalf of the public to cure a public wrong."

Most of the language thus used by Judge McCay was obiter, because the ruling made in the case was that the railroad, having been legally authorized to be constructed, could not be abated as a nuisance. However, in Ruff v. Phillips, 50 Ga. 180, it was decided that a private nuisance may be abated under the provisions of the act of 1833. The decision in this case was also delivered by Judge McCay, and the conclusion that a private nuisance could summarily be abated was based upon the language of sections 4027 of the Code of 1868 and 4098 of the Code of 1873, to the effect that "a public nuisance may be abated on the application of any citizen of the district, and a private nuisance on the application of the party injured." The law as thus stated appears in sections 4908 of the Code of 1882 and 4766 of the Code of 1895, and 5338 of the Code of 1910. In Salter v. Taylor, 55 Ga. 311, it was held that the stopping or impeding of a private way is a private nuisance, and may be abated by a summary proceeding before two justices of the peace and a jury under the Code. In Powell v. Foster, 59 Ga. 790, it was held that the Code furnished a summary remedy for the abatement of nuisances, public and private. See, also, Hart v. Taylor, 61 Ga. 156; Holmes v. Jones, 80 Ga. 659, 7 S. E. 168; Broomhead v. Grant, 83 Ga. 451, 10 S. E. 116; Savannah Ry. Co. v. Gill, 118 Ga. 737, 45 S. E. 623. In the case last cited it was held that, "while section 4760 in terms provides only for the abatement of a public nuisance in the manner therein specified, it has been several times held that a private nuisance may be abated under that section." It must therefore be accepted as the settled law of this state that a private nuisance may summarily be abated by the same procedure as that provided for the abatement of a public nuisance.

Counsel for the defendant in error insist that all of the decisions of the Supreme Court from Ruff v. Phillips, supra, to Broomhead v. Grant, supra, are upon their facts distinguishable from the present case, for the reason that in none of those cases was there any real contest over the title, that the party complaining of the nuisance was in the present enjoyment, possession, and control of the property, and the only question at issue was whether or not the thing complained of was in fact a nuisance and abatable as such. It is also pointed out that in Savannah Ry. Co. v. Gill, supra, the road obstructed was a public road, and no question as to the abatement of a private nuisance was involved. We are not at liberty to thus narrow the scope and effect of the decisions of the Supreme Court holding that an obstruction of a private way may be summarily abated by the remedy which the plaintiff invoked in the present case. There is, to our mind, much force in counsel's contention; but we are constrained by the above cited decisions of the Supreme Court to a contrary conclusion.

[4] 4. It does not follow, however, from what has been said that the plaintiff was entitled to an order of abatement. The evidence abundantly authorized a finding by the recorder that none of the streets, save Leonard and Broomhead, had ever been actually opened and used as streets. The mere platting of the streets upon paper did not amount to a dedication of the streets to the public use, and the dedication was not complete unless the public authorities received and adopted the streets. Parsons v. Atlanta University, 44 Ga. 529. In Bryans v. Almand, 87 Ga. 564, 13 S. E. 554, it was held: "While the municipal authorities of a city or town may, on complaint of a citizen, cause an obstruction to be removed from any public street in actual use by the public, yet where a street exists only in the plan of such city or town, and has not been actually opened, worked by the municipal authorities, and used by the public, but, on the contrary, has been in private occupation for 30 or 40 years, this mode of procedure is not available." This ruling was reaffirmed in Robins v. McGehee, 127 Ga. 431, 58 S. E. 461. In the opinion in that case it was said: "The present proceeding is not intended to settle the title as a primary issue; indeed, title is only incidentally involved, if at all. It is founded upon the hypothesis that a street has been laid out and opened, and has been obstructed. Any permanent structure in a street which materially interferes with travel therein is a nuisance per se. Mayor of Columbus v. Jaques, 30 Ga. 506; City Council of Augusta v. Reynolds, 122 Ga. 754 [50 S. E. 998, 69 L. R. A. 564, 106 Am. St. Rep. 147]. Under some circumstances even a private individual may abate a common nuisance which obstructs his individual right by removing it to enable him to enjoy that right. Brown v. Perkins, 12 Gray (Mass.) 89. The positive obstruction of a public street may be abated by indictment or by injunction. Elliott on Roads and Streets, §§ 662-664. The rationale of the principle that an obstruction in a street may be summarily abated is upon the theory that the obstruction of a public street is a nuisance. It is not until a street has been defined by survey and laid out and opened by work that it becomes a street. There must be a street to be obstructed before the structure alleged to be an obstruction amounts to a nuisance. This principle was recognized in Bryans v. Almand, 87 Ga. 564 [13 S. E. 554], where it was held that, 'while the municipal authorities of a city or town may, on complaint of a citizen, cause an obstruction to be removed from any public street in actual use by the public, yet, where a street exists only in the plan of such city or town, and has not been actually opened, worked by the municipal authorities, and used by the public, but, on the contrary, has been in private occupation for 30 or 40 years, this mode of procedure is not available.' The error into which the learned judge inadvertently fell was in confusing a proceeding to enjoin a summary abatement of an obstruction of a street with a contest between a sovereign political subdivision (municipal corporation) and an individual over the ownership of the land. In the former the issue is whether a street in the actual use of the public has been obstructed, while in the latter the issue is that of title. The cases are altogether dissimilar, and are controlled by rules of law entirely different." These two decisions seem to us to be decisive of the question of the plaintiff's right summarily to have removed the obstructions in any of the streets except Leonard and Broomhead. They are clearly distinguishable from the earlier decisions above cited, to the effect that the summary remedy provided by the Code may be employed to remove an obstruction from a private way. This is true where the way is actually in existence and being used for travel; but under the decisions in Bryans v. Almand and Robins v. McGehee, the rule is altogether different where the way is a mere paper street which has never been opened or used for travel, and which exists only on a plat or map of the property surveyed and subdivided into lots. In such a case the summary method of abatement is not available, but the injured party must resort to some other form of action to obtain redress.

[8] 5. As to the Leonard-Broomhead way the plaintiff insists that neither the consent by other property owners to the closing of it nor the permission granted by the city council of Atlanta conferred upon the defendant any right as against the plaintiff to change the street. Certainly it is true that, George W. Adair having at the time of the purchase of his lots obtained a vested right in the use of this street, the consent of other adjoining property owners for it to be closed cannot affect him. The charter of the city of Atlanta provided that: "The said mayor and general council shall have full power and authority to open, lay out, to widen, straighten, or otherwise change, streets, alleys, and squares in the said city of Atlanta." Acts 1874, p. 131, § 60. "This grant is comprehensive enough to embrace the alteration of a street in any respect, whether on, below, or above the surface of the earth." Trustees v. City of Atlanta, 93 Ga. 468, 474, 21 S. E. 74. The plaintiff contends that under the decision of the Supreme Court in Coker v. Atlanta & Knoxville Ry. Co., 123 Ga. 483, 51 S. E. 481, the city of Atlanta had no power to authorize the defendant to change Leonard street. In that case Coker filed a petition to enjoin the city and the railway company from closing a street known as Waverly place. The city proposed to abandon Waverly place as a street, and to convey land occupied by it to the railway company, and change the location of Waverly place so that it would occupy a strip of land belonging to the railway company of equal width and length lying some 26 feet south of the southern boundary of Waverly place where it connected with Central avenue, and some 30 feet south of the point where its southern boundary touched Washington street. In other words, the proposition was to move Waverly place bodily over 86 feet in a southerly direction, and deposit it upon the lands of the railway company over 26 feet distant from its extreme southern boundary. As stated in the opinion of the Supreme Court: "The journey involves 86 feet of travel, the street being 60 feet wide and every inch of it journeying southward; none of it is to remain at its present abode, but it is in its entirety to seek other quarters provided for it further down Washington street. The proposed 'change' in Waverly place is one of location or residence, and after it moves there will be nothing to identify it but its name, for the ordinance contemplates that all luggage, in the shape of sidewalks and other personal effects, shall be left behind." It was held that the city had no power under its charter to thus abandon Waverly place, and devote it to a purpose inconsistent with its use by the public. In Adair v. Atlanta, 124 Ga. 238, 52 S. E. 739, Coker's Case was discussed, and it was there said: "The case of Coker v. Railway Company, 123 Ga. 483, 51 S. E. 481, is not in any sense in conflict with what is here ruled. There it was proposed virtually to abandon a street, and close it for all time to the public. For a brief time a substitute was to be provided in the form of an improvised parallel street, which was to furnish an outlet for the travel which would have gone over the street which it was proposed to close; but the agreement between the city and the railroad company contemplated that eventually the new street should be given back to the railroad company, while no substitute was provided to take its place. It was held that the power to 'open, lay out, to widen, straighten, or otherwise change' streets contained in the city's charter did not comprehend the power to make the changes indicated. Here there is no question of abandoning a street or of changing its course. The public will have the same thoroughfare open to it that it has today. Its convenience will not be lessened nor the distance one will have to go between any two points increased in the slightest degree by the proposed improvement. The only difference will be that instead of going over a dirt surface it will pass over a metal viaduct."

In Patton v. City of Rome, 124 Ga. 525, 52 S. E. 742, it was held: "Under legislative authority granted to a municipality in its charter to 'open, lay out, to widen, straighten, or to otherwise change streets, alleys, and squares in said city,' the city may vacate and sell to an abutting landowner, a private individual, a strip or part of a street, which strip will be thereafter closed to the use of the public, where it appears that the selling and closing of the strip or tract will have the effect to straighten and make more uniform in width the street from which the tract is taken and sold, without having the effect to close or prevent the free use by the public of said street." This decision is direct authority for the proposition that the power granted to the city of Atlanta to "widen, straighten, or otherwise change streets" is broad enough to authorize it to change a street so as to make it more uniform in width and appearance, and to straighten it so it will be free from pronounced irregularity in shape. In Athens Terminal Co. v. Athens Foundry Works, 129 Ga. 393, 58 S. E. 891, it appeared that the power of the city of Athens over its streets was substantially the same as that conferred upon the city of Atlanta. There an injunction was sought to restrain the Athens Terminal Company from changing the course of Washington and Clayton streets in the city of Athens under permission so to do from the city. The court said that the plan of improvements as outlined in the ordinance of the city council of Athens did not contemplate the closing of either Clayton or Washington streets, but that the course of the streets should be deflected near their entrance into Foundry street. It was expressly held that the charter of the city was sufficiently comprehensive to authorize the deflection of a street near one of its termini. It appears from the evidence in the present case that under the permission granted by the city council the defendant straightened the Leonard-Broomhead way, and in so doing moved it eastward about 100 feet. The new street as thus changed touched Chapel street at the same point as the old street, and Ella street immediately north of Chapel was extended eastward so as to connect with the new street. The old street was irregularly shaped, and 999 feet long; the new street is comparatively straight, and is 829 feet long, and begins and ends at the same point that the old street did. The city of Atlanta had full power, we think, to authorize this change. The street was not abandoned entirely as was Waverly place referred to in the decision in Coker's Case supra. The termini of the street remained the same. It was merely changed and straightened, and under the evidence afforded more direct and convenient access to Greens Ferry avenue from Chapel and Ella streets than the old street did. This improvement comes well within the charter power of the city to straighten or otherwise change the streets of the city.

[§] 6. Even if this had been a proceeding brought in behalf of the public to require the old route traversed by the Leonard-Broomhead way to be opened, no case would have been made out for the plaintiff. Under the evidence the recorder was not obliged to find that any special damage flowed to the plaintiff from the change in Leonard street. In order for a private individual to complain of a public nuisance, he must show some special damage accruing to him in which the public does not participate. Civil Code, § 4455; Adair v. Atlanta, 124 Ga. 290, 52 S. E. 739; East Tenn. V. & Ga. Ry. Co. v. Boardman, 96 Ga. 358, 23 S. E. 403; Ison v. Manley, 76 Ga. 804. The new street which is paved and maintained as a convenient highway from Chapel to Greens Ferry avenue affords the plaintiff convenient access from his property along Ella and Chapel streets to Greens Ferry avenue. It is difficult to understand how any special damage could result to the plaintiff from this change in Leonard street; but, conceding that the evidence would have authorized the finding of special damage, certainly it did not demand it, and upon the case here we must take that view of the evidence which is most favorable to the party who prevailed in the court below.

[7, §] 7. We attach but little importance to the plea of estoppel set up by the defendant. Under the testimony for the plaintiff he was not estopped to proceed to abate some of the obstructions mentioned in his petition, nor would the mere fact that his testator had closed up a part of Chapel street afford any basis for the application of the doctrine of estoppel against his executor to have obstructions in other streets removed. The remedy of the persons injured by the closing of Chapel street, if they have any, would be to proceed against the plaintiff to require him to open it. Neither in law nor in morals do two wrongs make a right. Upon a careful consideration of the whole case, we are clearly of the opinion that the judgment of the recorder was right, and that the judge of the superior court properly overruled the certiorari.

Judgment affirmed.

BLAKE v. SMITH.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

TRIAL (§ 208*)—INSTRUCTIONS—DUTY TO GIVE.

Under Revisal 1905, § 535, providing that the trial judge shall state to the jury in a plain manner the evidence in the case, and explain the law arising thereon, in an action for the value of a hog, where much evidence was introduced as to ownership and value, and defendant relied on estoppel, it was error merely to instruct the jury to take the case and settle it as between man and man.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 477-479; Dec. Dig. § 208.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wake County; Carter, Judge.

Action between A. J. Blake and Thomas Smith. From a judgment for the latter, the former appeals. New trial.

B. C. Beckwith, of Raleigh, for appellee.

BROWN, J. This is a controversy over $14.88, the value of a hog. The plaintiff and defendant introduced much evidence tending to prove the ownership and value of the hog. Defendant seems to have relied upon an estoppel. The case on appeal states that: "His honor did not charge the jury. He simply said, 'Take the case, gentlemen, and settle it as between man and man.'" This constitutes one of the defendant's assignments of error. In this state the trial judge is required to charge the jury to the extent of stating in a plain and correct manner the evidence given in the case, and declare and explain the law arising thereon, except where the facts are few, and no principle of law is involved, and he is not requested to charge. Holly v. Holly, 94 N. C. 96; Revisal, § 535. The manner in which the judge is to state the law and evidence for the assistance of the jury must necessarily be left to a great extent to his sound discretion and good sense; but he must charge on the different aspects presented by the evidence, and give the law applicable thereto. State v. Rippey, 104 N. C. 756, 10 S. E. 259; Matthews Case, 78 N. C. 523.

For this error there must be a new trial.

MOORE v. CAROLINA POWER & LIGHT CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 661*)—USE AND REGULATION OF STREETS—POWER OF MUNICIPALITY.

Though the mile square upon which the city of Raleigh was originally located was purchased by the state, and lots within that district were sold with the reservation to the state of the title to the streets, the control of the city over such streets is the same as in other cities, except perhaps in exceptional cases.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1432, 1434-1436; Dec. Dig. § 661.*]

2. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 678*)—USE AND REGULATION OF STREETS—TREES BORDERING STREETS.

The city of Raleigh, for the purpose of its government and management, may in its discretion cut down and trim up trees bordering streets, in the district wherein title to the streets is in the state, and cannot be restrained, except in case of willfulness or oppression.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 1458; Dec. Dig. § 678.*]

3. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 663*)—USE AND REGULATION OF STREETS—RIGHTS OF ABUTTING OWNERS—TREES IN STREETS.

The owner of property abutting on a street in a city has an easement or property in the shade trees standing along the sidewalk in the street which the law will protect, subject to the right of the city government over the same.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1438-1440; Dec. Dig. § 663.*]

4. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§§ 680, 681*)—USE AND REGULATION OF STREETS—TREES BORDERING STREET.

A city cannot transfer its right of control over shade trees standing along the edge of its streets to an individual or quasi public corporation, such as an electric light company, which is authorized to use the streets.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1459-1466; Dec. Dig. §§ 680, 681.*]

5. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 69*)—TAKING PROPERTY—SHADE TREES IN STREETS—INTERFERENCE WITH SHADE TREES.

An electric light company authorized to place poles and wires along the streets of a city cannot invade the rights of a property owner as to the trees in the street in front of his property, without paying compensation therefor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 171-178; Dec. Dig. § 69.*]

6. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 663*)—USE AND REGULATION OF STREETS—RIGHTS OF ABUTTING OWNERS—TREES—PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

Where an electric light company authorized to place poles and wires along city streets invades the rights of an abutting owner in the trees on the street in front of his property, and there is wantonness, oppression, or bad motive, the abutting owner may be awarded punitive damages.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1438-1440; Dec. Dig. § 663.*]

7. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 663*)—USE AND REGULATION OF STREETS—RIGHT OF ABUTTING PROPERTY OWNERS—TREES—DAMAGES.

Where an abutting owner is damaged by an electric light company cutting off limbs of the trees standing in a city street in front of his property, he is entitled to damages for the deterioration, if any, in the value of his property, though the trimming was done in a skillful manner, as cutting the limbs in a negligent manner would simply have added to the damages.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1438-1440; Dec. Dig. § 663.*]

8. ACTION (§ 32*)—REMEDY OF OWNER—FORM OF ACTION.

Forms of action are no longer of supreme importance, and the objection that an ordinary action for damages for injury to shade trees in the street in front of plaintiff's property should not have been brought, an action for compensation for taking property by eminent domain should have been brought instead, is of no weight.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 257-261, 316; Dec. Dig. § 32.*]

Brown and Hoke, JJ., dissenting.

Appeal from Superior Court, Wake County; Carter, Judge.

Action by Van B. Moore against the Carolina Power & Light Company. From a judgment for the defendant, plaintiff appeals. Error.

Peele & Maynard, of Raleigh, for appellant. James H. Pou, of Wilson, for appellee.

CLARK, C. J. This is an action to recover damages to the value of plaintiff's lot in Raleigh, by cutting limbs from and disfiguring an ornamental shade tree, which stood on the sidewalk in front of plaintiff's residence. The defendant claimed that it had a right to cut the limbs out of the way of its wires because necessary for its purposes, without incurring any liability to the owner of the property abutting the sidewalk whereon the tree stood, and further that the fee simple of the streets, including the sidewalk, was in the state of North Carolina, and hence that the plaintiff had no property rights in the tree.

[1-4] It is historically true that the mile square upon which the city of Raleigh was originally located, and within which limits this tree stood, was purchased by the state and the city so far as it is within those limits was divided into lots and sold, reserving the title to the streets in the state. But so far as it affects this matter and all matters, except possibly in exceptional cases, the control of the municipality over its streets is the same in Raleigh as in all the other cities and towns in the state. The city for the purpose of its government and management can, in its discretion, cut down or trim up the trees bordering the streets, and cannot be restrained, unless in cases of willfulness or oppression. Jeffress v. Greenville, 154 N. C. 499, 70 S. E. 919; Rosenthal v. Goldsboro, 149 N. C. 128, 62 S. E. 905, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 809, 16 Ann. Cas. 639; Tate v. Greensboro, 114 N. C. 392, 19 S. E. 767, 24 L. R. A. 671. But subject to such right of the city government the abutting owner has an easement or property in the shade trees standing along the sidewalk which the law will protect. Brown v. Electric Co., 138 N. C. 533, 51 S. E. 62, 69 L. R. A. 631, 107 Am. St. Rep. 554. The city cannot transfer to any individual or to a quasi public corporation for its convenience and profit this superior right which it can exercise only for the public benefit.

[5] It is also true that the defendant company is empowered by its charter and by the permission of the city to place its poles and wires along the streets for the purpose of carrying the electric light. But it does not follow that therefore it can invade the property rights of the plaintiff in his shade tree without compensation, nor that the plaintiff would not be entitled to an injunction in case the cutting of the tree was about to be done unnecessarily or wantonly or oppressively. The defendant is a public service corporation, or as it is usually termed a quasi public corporation, and can take the property of the plaintiff but only upon compensation. This is true even if it had been necessary for the defendant to run its wires through the tree and to cut the limbs, for the defendant cannot invade the property rights of the plaintiff without compensation because convenient or necessary for its benefit to do so. As a matter of fact it could not be necessary, because the wires could have been strung above the top of the tree, or could have swerved either side, or could have been placed underground, as is required in many cities and even in North Carolina in progressive towns like Charlotte for instance, on some of its streets. The latter indeed must ultimately be required everywhere, for the present system of stringing the wires above ground is unsafe for the public, as we have an instance in Haynes v. Gas Co., 114 N. C. 203, 19 S. E. 344, 26 L. R. A. 810, 41 Am. St. Rep. 786, where a broken wire hanging down became charged by contact with a trolley wire, causing the death of a boy passing by. The overhead wires are very unsightly, are troublesome in cases of fires, and are subject to interruption by storms. They are allowed only as a matter of economy on the part of the light company, and not to entitle them to take the property of others as a matter of right.

[6] The plaintiff is entitled to compensation for the injury done him, and, if there was wantonness, or oppression, or other bad motive, punitive damages might be added. The subject has been so fully discussed and elucidated in Brown v. Electric Co., 138 N. C. 533, 51 S. E. 62, 69 L. R. A. 631, 107 Am. St. Rep. 554, that we need not do more than refer to the reasoning and the conclusions reached in that case.

[7] The plaintiff avers that a great inducement to him in buying the premises was the ornamentation of his grounds by this tree and others, and that he spent considerable money in improving and beautifying them. His honor erred in instructing the jury that the plaintiff was entitled to recover only if the cutting of the limbs had been done in a negligent or unskillful manner. That would add to the amount of the damages which he would be entitled to recover. But it is not the measure of his rights, for he is entitled to compensation for the deterioration, if any, in the value of his property, from the trimming or cutting of the tree, however skillfully done, just as he would have been if the tree had been cut down, however skillfully and carefully and even necessarily the tree had been felled. The plaintiff's property in the tree (subject to the superior right of the city to cut or remove it for public purposes) and his right to enhance the value of his lot by its improvement on which he had spent care and money entitle him to compensation for the loss which he may have sustained by the act which the defendant has done for its own convenience and advantage.

[8] It was suggested that the defendant might have obtained the right to trim the tree, or even to cut it down if necessary, under the right of eminent domain, and therefore that the plaintiff could recover damages only in the same method. But forms of action no longer are matters of supreme importance. If the defendant so desires, this may be styled an action to recover damages under the right of eminent domain. The plaintiff's property rights have been invaded by the defendant for its own benefit, and the plaintiff is entitled to recover compensation therefor, and is not restricted to such damages as may have been caused by the unskillfulness or negligence of the defendant.

Error.

BROWN and HOKE, JJ., dissent.

WOODLEY v. CAROLINA TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

1. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 28*) — DUTY TO FURNISH SERVICE.

Telegraph and telephone companies take and hold their charters subject to the obligation to render service at uniform and reasonable rates without discrimination, and they have no right to make or continue a contract which renders them unable to perform those duties.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 16, 17; Dec. Dig. § 28.*]

2. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 33*) — CONDUCT OF BUSINESS—RULES AND REGULATIONS.

Telegraph and telephone companies may make such just and reasonable rules and regulations as are required for the conduct of their business, including a rule requiring the payment of established rates monthly in advance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 21; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

3. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 33*) — PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION—GROUNDS.

Where a telephone company at first allowed its subscribers to pay at the end of the month, although the contract called for payment in advance, but found that their losses from such method were so great as to interfere with their business, and therefore notified the subscribers that they would be required thereafter to pay monthly in advance, to which rule all the subscribers but one acceded, a preliminary injunction should not be issued to restrain the severing of connections with the telephone company of that one subscriber, pending a final hearing on the merits, since that would amount to an unlawful discrimination in his favor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 21; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

4. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 38*) — CONTRACTS FOR SERVICE—MODIFICATION.

Where a telephone subscriber struck out from the form of contract the provision requiring payment in advance, such erasure left the matter undetermined and subject to future regulation by the company.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 21; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

5. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 33*) — CONTRACTS FOR SERVICE—ORAL AGREEMENT.

An oral agreement that a telephone subscriber should pay at the end of the month instead of in advance, which was indefinite as to time, would be determinable at the will of either party upon reasonable notice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 21; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

6. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 33*) — CONTRACTS FOR SERVICE—CONSTRUCTION.

Where a written contract for telephone service provided that it should continue for one year, and thereafter until terminated by the company at its option, the company could terminate an oral agreement supplementing the written subscription, and which permitted the subscriber to pay at the end of each month instead of in advance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 21; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

7. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 33*) — REGULATIONS — CONSTRUCTION OF ORDINANCE.

An ordinance, permitting a telephone company to require its subscribers to give a bond to secure the payment of the first year's rental, was manifestly intended to secure the cost of installing the service, and does not prevent the company from requiring its subscribers to pay their rentals monthly in advance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 21; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

8. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 33*) — CONTRACTS FOR SERVICE—WAIVER.

Where a telephone company temporarily permitted its subscribers to pay at the end of the month instead of in advance, as their contracts required, it did not thereby waive its right to require the payment in advance, since there was no consideration for the waiver and no element of estoppel.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 21; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

9. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 28*) — DUTIES TO FURNISH SERVICE—WAIVER OF RIGHTS.

A telephone company cannot, by waiver of the provisions of its contract, put itself in a position which will prevent a proper performance of its statutory duties, and the providing of service at reasonable rates without discrimination.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. §§ 16, 17; Dec. Dig. § 28.*]

10. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES (§ 33*) — CHARGES—TENDER.

Where a telephone subscriber made a tender for a few days' service in advance, while at the same time insisting that he had a right to pay at the end of the month, the tender was not sufficient to prevent the removal of the telephone by the company.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Telegraphs and Telephones, Cent. Dig. § 21; Dec. Dig. § 33.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Lenoir County; Allen, Judge.

Action by Chas. B. Woodley against the Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Company. From an order granting a preliminary injunction, the defendant appeals. Reversed.

The action was brought to recover damages of defendant for severing plaintiff's telephone connection in the city of Kinston, and to compel defendant to restore same. Defendant justified on the ground that plaintiff wrongfully refused to pay the rates monthly in advance, and plaintiff contended that the rates were only due at the end of each month, and that defendant had no lawful excuse for its conduct. The court, on the facts as presented being of opinion with the plaintiff, entered judgment restraining defendant till the hearing, and compelling it to restore connection pending the controversy. Defendant, having duly excepted, appealed.

Y. T. Ormond and T. C. Wooten, both of Kinston, and G. M. T. Fountain & Son, of Tarboro, for appellant. G. V. Cowper, of Kinston, for appellee.

HOKE, J. [1] Our decisions are to the effect that these public service corporations, including telegraph and telephone companies, take and hold their charters subject to the obligation of rendering services at uniform and reasonable rates, and without discrimination, and, further, that they have no right to make or continue in the performance of a contract "which renders them unable to perform the duties imposed upon them by their charter," and whether such contract is evidenced by municipal ordinance or by agreement between the parties. Telegraph v. Telephone Co., 159 N. C. 9, 74 S. E. 636; Horner v. Water Co., 153 N. C. 535, 69 S. E. 607, 138 Am. St. Rep. 681; Griffin v. Water Co., 122 N. C. 206, 30 S. E. 319, 41 L. R. A. 240.

[2] It is also recognized that those companies, subject to the provisions of their charter and the general law, may make such just and needful rules and regulations as are required for the proper performance of their statutory duties and in reasonable furtherance of the company's general business, and, in reference to companies of this character, that a rule requiring payment of established rates in advance for a limited period will be considered as reasonable and valid, and we are of opinion that in case of telephone companies the term of one month comes well within the principle. Washington v. Independent Tel. Co., 59 Wash. 156, 109 Pac. 366, 81 L. R. A. (N. S.) 329; 37 Cyc. p. 1619.

[3] In the present case, on a perusal of the facts in evidence, it appears that defendant company duly incorporated, desiring to install and operate a new and efficient telephone system for the city of Kinston, was granted the privilege by ordinance of the city, and had printed a form of contract for general use, requiring payment of monthly rates in advance; that for a year or more after commencing operations the company desiring to oblige its patrons as far as possible, did not insist on prepayment, collecting very generally at the end of each month, but having ascertained by trial that the loss in collections by this method was so great that the company would not be able to "properly maintain its system and give efficient and satisfactory service to its patrons, it was determined to enforce the feature of the contract requiring payment in advance," and that it was necessary to do this to properly perform its duties; that by the 1st of January, 1913, a large portion of the subscribers had acquiesced in the requirement, and by May of this year all of the 600 subscribers had done so but 11, and since that time all of these 11 except the plaintiff.

In reference to the various notices given plaintiff in this connection the affidavit of defendant's general manager made averment as follows: "That the said plaintiff was notified in January that, unless he complied with this rule of the company, his phone would be disconnected. That he was given said notice several times in the month of May, and on the 7th of May he was notified that if he had any special contract that did not require him to pay his rentals in advance, the company hereby cancels same, and unless he paid his rentals in advance by the 15th of June, service would be discontinued. That plaintiff was notified in January, 1913, that he must comply with the rules of the company to pay in advance. He stated to affiant that the company had no right to adopt the rule; he did not object to the same, however, but that it was a matter of finance with him, and that he hoped to be able to pay in advance soon. That thereafter every effort was made to induce said plaintiff to comply with said rule and regulation, and upon his persistent failure and refusal to do so his phone was disconnected, and service was discontinued on the 16th of June, 1913."

We find no substantial denial in the record of the facts relevant to this phase of the inquiry, and it will thus sufficiently appear that for defendant to defer to plaintiff's position in this matter would be an unlawful discrimination in plaintiff's favor on the part of the company, and in violation of its statutory duties as a public service corporation. Applying the legal principles, as heretofore stated, we are of opinion that, on the facts as they now appear of record, the defendant company was well within its rights when it severed plaintiff's connection for nonpayment of monthly dues.

[4-6] While this disposes of the present appeal it may be well to refer to some of the positions urged in support of plaintiff's claim. It is contended that he is entitled to present relief by reason of certain averments in his own affidavit to the effect that when the contract of subscription was presented to him for his signature of date October 18, 1910, stating the rates, "at $36 (dollars) per annum in equal payments of $3.00 each monthly in advance during the continuance of the contract," etc., plaintiff declined to sign same as written, and did not sign till he had erased the words "monthly in advance," and further that there was an oral agreement at this time that plaintiff was to pay at the end of each month. So far as the erasure is concerned, this would seem to leave the matter indeterminate, and subject to future regulation by the company (Horner v. Water Co., supra), and as to the alleged oral contract, even if the same were made and valid, it being indefinite as to time, would ordinarily be determinable at the will of either party, certainly on giving reasonable notice (Soloman v. Sewerage Co., 142 N. C. 439-445, 55 S. E. 300, 6 L. R. A. [N. S.] 391); and, if considered a part of the written subscription and controlled by its terms, this contains specific stipulation "that this contract shall continue for one year from 19th day of October, 1910, and thereafter until the expiration of thirty days after written notice shall be given by the subscriber of a desire to cancel this agreement, unless the same shall be terminated by the company as specified in the conditions aforesaid," and one of these conditions is, in part, as follows: "That for any reason which appears to the company sufficient, the company may at its option terminate the contract and remove the instrument." On the facts, therefore, there is nothing in the contract itself restraining the company from making the change and requiring payment on giving proper notice of the monthly rates in advance.

[7] Again it is insisted that this collection of rates in advance is prohibited by the municipal ordinance granting defendant the privilege of operating its system in the city of Kinston. Section 13 of the ordinance upon which plaintiff relies, after requiring of defendant service for all citizens of good standing who apply for it, concludes as follows: "That the said Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company may require such person or persons to keep, and pay the rental on such telephones for a period of twelve months and to guarantee the payment of said rental for said period, the said company having the right to require the said party to give bond in the sum of fifty ($50) dollars as an assurance of the faithful performance of the terms of said contract." This, to our mind, in no way interferes with the right claimed by defendant, but, as its terms clearly import, was only intended as a protection to the company against the initial expenses of installing the telephone at the beginning of the service.

[8] It is further argued that the company has waived the right in question by not having enforced it for a year or so after making the regulation, but such a position cannot at all be maintained. In order to a valid waiver, there must be an agreement founded on consideration, or there must be some element of estoppel. Neither is present here.

It was only a case of temporary acquiescence in a different method on the part of the company, and from a disposition to oblige its patrons, and there was nothing to prevent defendant from enforcing its regulation when it was ascertained by trial that the business could not be satisfactorily conducted in the other way.

[9] Apart from this, the doctrine of waiver is subject to the control of public policy, and a public service corporation no more by waiver than by contract is allowed to put itself in position which prevents the proper performance of its statutory duties, and affording its service at reasonable rates and without discrimination amongst its patrons. 29 A. & E. pp. 1097 and 1107.

[10] The suggestion of a tender by plaintiff for a few days' service and demand of reinstatement is without merit. The plaintiff was at the time insisting on its right to pay at the end of each month, and the tender was not in accord with a valid regulation of the company.

We are of opinion, that on the facts as they now appear, the plaintiff has shown no right to a preliminary injunction and the judgment of the lower court must be reversed.

Reversed.

BROWN, J., did not sit.

WILLIAMS v. SEABOARD AIR LINE RY.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 114*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—MASTER'S LIABILITY—SAFE PLACE TO WORK.

The fact that a railroad company in cutting bushes from its right of way left pointed stubs eight or ten inches high does not constitute a breach of its duty to provide a safe place for work, which renders it liable for injuries to a section hand who left the track at a place of his own selection to get a drink of water, and in going down the side of a fill tripped over a snag, and fell.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 179, 200; Dec. Dig. § 114.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wake County; Carter, Judge.

Action by N. G. Williams, Jr., against the Seaboard Air Line Railway. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

This is an action to recover damages for personal injury, alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the defendant.

The complaint alleges that the plaintiff was an employé of the defendant railway company in the capacity of sectionman or assistant section foreman; that on the 11th day of July, 1911, the section foreman ordered the plaintiff, together with three other employés of the company, to go over the section and tighten bolts; that the section foreman and the portion of the crew with him were engaged in the usual work on the section; that the section foreman advised the plaintiff that the water bucket would be kept with the foreman and his portion of the crew, and instructed the plaintiff and the others with him to get water at the nearest places as they proceeded along the line tightening bolts; that about 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon they had reached a fill some 12 or 15 feet in height; that prior to this time the company, through its employés, had permitted the sides of the fill to become dangerous by cutting bushes and small trees with a hook, leaving them sharp and pointed, sprouts growing out and weeds growing up on the sides of the fill, concealing the dangerous condition of the right of way; that the plaintiff, not knowing the dangerous condition of the right of way, started down the sides of the fill for water, stumbled on one of these hidden snags or stumps, and fell, and was injured.

The plaintiff testified as follows: "I am the plaintiff in this action. I live four miles west of Cary, N. C. On July 11, 1911, I was at work on the section for the Seaboard Air Line Railway between Cary and Apex. I went to work for the Seaboard about the 16th or 17th day of June of that year. I was assistant section foreman, and my wages were $1.25 per day. Mr. E. D. Medlin was section foreman. On the morning of the 11th of July the foreman ordered four of us to go along the section and tighten bolts. The three others and myself were J. A. Marcum, Hinton Hobby, and Charlie Singleton, and the section foreman and the other members of the crew remained behind at work on the right of way. The section foreman told us that he would keep the water bucket with him and those behind, and we should get water at the nearest places along the line. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon we were tightening bolts on a fill near the 11-mile post. The fill is 75 or 100 yards long. It was very hot, and we were thirsty. Arthur Marcum and I started to a well about 300 yards away to get water. We were not far from the middle of the fill. We started down the embankment, when my foot struck one of the snags, and in throwing my other foot ahead to try to catch I fell, rather sat, down on one of the snags. On the sides of the fill were many snags where the bushes had been cut off with a hook some time before, leaving the snags eight or ten inches or one foot high. These snags were very sharp. Sprouts had grown out from these stumps or snags, and weeds had grown up about three feet high and very thick, hiding the snags. I had never worked on the right of way, and did not know the snags were there. I have worked on the section on the Southern Railroad, and have observed other railroads, and never knew one in as bad condition as this with reference to the snags and bushes. I was rendered unconscious; stayed in Rex Hospital one month. I haven't been able to work regularly since. I am not well now. In April, 1912, I went to work for the Carolina Power & Light Company as conductor. I worked 12 hours a day. When I was working with the section force on the morning of this accident, whenever we felt like it we stopped and got water and came back; that was the order we had. Mr. Medlin wasn't with me at the time of the accident. Mr. Hobby was about two rails behind me. A rail is about 30 feet long. I think he was going after water, too. Mr. Marcum had gone down the fill, and was a little ways from me. I think he went under the fence. There was a barb-wire fence at the bottom of the fill. The fill is about 15 feet high, and extends something like 40 or 50 feet towards Apex. I guess we were nearer the end towards Apex than towards Cary. The accident happened on a bright sunny day about 2 o'clock. I could see the bushes, but couldn't see the ground where I was going. The fill is a gradual slope. The section force are supposed to go over this fill once a year and cut down the bushes for the purpose of keeping them from getting dry and burning property. The rule is that they cut the bushes once a year. I guess they do that so that the engines will not set them on fire. The stick was much larger than a pencil, and eight inches high. In cutting the bushes they used a blade something like a reaping hook. By going to the end of the fill you could get to Mr. Spence's well, where I was going, without having to pass through the bushes. Nobody pointed out the place where I should go. I could start for water from any point."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexer

At the conclusion of the evidence, his honor allowed the motion of the defendant for judgment of nonsuit, and the plaintiff accepted, and appealed.

J. C. Little, of Raleigh, for appellant. Murray Allen, of Raleigh, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). The rule that the employer must furnish the employé a reasonably safe place to work is fully recognized, and has been applied in numerous decisions of this court; but it is equally well settled that, before one can recover damages for personal injury on account of negligence, he must prove a breach of duty, causing him damage, and we find in the record no evidence of a breach of duty.

The plaintiff was injured several miles from a station, while going down a steep embankment, by falling on a small snag six or eight inches high, which had been left after the defendant cut down the bushes on the right of way to avoid danger from fire. We would not hold that leaving an obstruction of this character on an embankment in the country, not usually used by the employé of the defendant or other persons, would be evidence of negligence, and the liability of the defendant would not be increased by the fact that the snag on which the plaintiff was injured was the result of cutting bushes on the right of way to protect the roadbed and the property of adjoining landowners from fire. The plaintiff was not ordered to go down the embankment, and it appears from his evidence that he not only selected the place for going down, but that he could have avoided the bushes altogether by going to the end of the embankment, a distance of 75 yards.

There is no error.

Affirmed.

DR. SHOOP FAMILY MEDICINE CO. v. DAVENPORT.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 441*)—PAROL EVIDENCE—WRITTEN CONTRACT.

Where defendant purchased certain medicines under a written contract containing no provision for the return thereof and declaring that there was no other agreement written or oral than that stated in the writing, parol evidence that it was agreed between defendant and plaintiff's agent that the goods might be returned if unsatisfactory was inadmissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1719, 1723-1763, 1765-1845, 2030-2047; Dec. Dig. § 441.*]

2. SALES (§ 272*)—IMPLIED WARRANTY—MERCHANTABILITY.

A sale of goods by a manufacturer for resale imports an implied warranty that the goods are merchantable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. § 747; Dec. Dig. § 272.*]

3. SALES (§ 284*)—IMPLIED WARRANTY—MERCHANTABILITY—RETURN.

A buyer may return goods, if they are unsalable and worthless, for breach of an implied warranty of merchantable character.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 803-805; Dec. Dig. § 284.*]

4. SALES (§ 287*)—MERCHANTABILITY—IMPLIED WARRANTY—BREACH—ACTION FOR PRICE—RETENTION OF PART OF GOODS.

Where a seller accepted a return of a part of goods sold for alleged breach of warranty of merchantable character, it could not recover a balance of the contract price.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 811-816; Dec. Dig. § 287.*]

5. INTEREST (§ 50*)—COSTS (§ 42*)—SUSPENSION—CONTINUING TENDER.

A plea of tender was insufficient to stop interest and costs where the tender was not kept good and defendant did not produce the money and pay it into court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Interest, Cent. Dig. § 114; Dec. Dig. § 50.* Costs, Cent. Dig. §§ 137-164; Dec. Dig. § 42.*]

6. COSTS (§ 42*)—OFFER OF JUDGMENT—STATUTES—APPLICATION.

Revised 1905, § 860, providing that defendant may serve an offer in writing to allow judgment to be taken against him in a specified sum, with costs, and, if plaintiff does not accept the offer and does not obtain a more favorable judgment, he cannot recover costs, has no application to a tender of a specified sum by check, which tender was not kept good by continued readiness to pay and payment of the money into court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Costs, Cent. Dig. §§ 137-164; Dec. Dig. § 42.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Pitt County; Allen, Judge.

Action by the Dr. Shoop Family Medicine Company against J. R. Davenport. Judgment for plaintiff for less than the relief demanded, and it appeals. Modified.

This is an action to recover the price of certain medicines alleged to have been sold and delivered to the defendant. The indebtedness is denied by him. It appears that plaintiff sold and shipped the goods to defendant, who sold some of them to different customers, amounting to $8.45; and, finding that the medicines were worthless, he refunded the money to some of his customers who had bought from him and returned the rest of the medicines by freight to plaintiff, with a bill of lading for same and a check for the $8.45. Plaintiff returned the check but kept the goods and the bill of lading. There was evidence that the goods were worthless. Defendant offered to show that the agent, at the time of the sale, agreed that he could return the goods if they were not satisfactory, but this evidence was excluded by the court, as the contract was in writing, and it is stated therein that there is no other agreement, written or oral, than the one stated in the writing. Defendant tendered payment of the $8.45, which was refused upon the ground that the tender should have been of the whole amount which is justly due the plaintiff and claimed by him, but he did not allege or show continual readiness to pay or a payment into court. Judgment for $8.45 and costs in justice's court, where tender was first made and refused, and appeal by defendant.

Albion Dunn, of Greenville, for appellant. Harry Skinner, of Greenville, and Lewis G. Cooper, of Henderson, for appellees.

WALKER, J. [1] The court properly rejected the evidence as to the parol agreement of the plaintiff's agent. The contract could not be contradicted or varied in this way. Medicine Co. v. Mizell, 148 N. C. 384, 62 S. E. 511, and cases cited.

[2] But defendant relies upon the principle that, when the plaintiff sold the goods to him it impliedly represented that they were fit for the use for which they were intended, or that they were merchantable, and that this representation turned out to be untrue, for they were not only not merchantable but worthless, to the knowledge of the plaintiff. Mr. Benjamin states the rule on this subject in substance to be that in all sales by sample there is an implied warranty that the bulk shall be of equal quality to the sample. Where goods are sold without an opportunity for inspection, there is also an implied warranty that they shall be at least "merchantable," not that they are of the first quality, or even of the second, but that they are not so inferior as to be unsalable among dealers in the article. This is especially true where, as in this case, the vendor is the manufacturer of the articles sold. Benjamin on Sales, 683, 686, and cases cited in notes. "If a man sells an article, he thereby warrants that it is merchantable; that is, that it is fit for some purpose. If he sells it for a particular purpose, he thereby warrants it to be fit for that purpose." Jones v. Bright, 5 Bing. 544. The principle was clearly expressed by Lord Ellenborough in Gardiner v. Gray, 4 Campbell, 143, where he denied the application of the rule as to sales by sample: "I am of opinion, however, that under such circumstances the purchaser has a right to expect a salable article answering the description in the contract. Without any particular warranty, this is an implied term in every such contract. Where there is no opportunity to inspect the commodity, the maxim of caveat emptor does not apply. He cannot without a warranty insist that it shall be of any particular quality or fineness, but the intention of both parties must be taken to be that it shall be salable in the market under the denomination mentioned in the contract between them. The purchaser cannot be supposed to buy goods to lay them on a dunghill. The question then is whether the commodity purchased by the plaintiff be of such a quality as can be reasonably brought into the market to be sold as waste silk. The witnesses describe it as unfit for the purposes of waste silk and of such a quality that it cannot be sold under that denomination." See, also, McClung v. Kelley, 21 Iowa, 506; Gaylord Manufacturing Co. v. Allen, 53 N. Y. 518. The principle, as stated, has been recognized and the above authorities approved in Main v. Field, 144 N. C. 307, 56 S. E. 943, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 245, 119 Am. St. Rep. 956. See, also, Manufacturing Co. v. Davis, 147 N. C. 267, 61 S. E. 54, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 183; Rodgers v. Niles, 11 Ohio St. 48, 78 Am. Dec. 290; Fitch v. Archibald, 29 N. J. Law, 160; Murchie v. Cornell, 155 Mass. 60, 29 N. E. 207, 14 L. R. A. 492, 31 Am. St. Rep. 526; Tiffany on Sales, p. 260.

[3] Defendant, therefore, had the right to return the goods if they were unsalable and worthless.

[4] But it appears that the plaintiff received and kept that part of the goods reshipped to him by the defendant. There was ample evidence of this fact (35 Cyc. pp. 193 and 321) which the court fairly submitted to the jury, and they have found with the defendant. Surely it is not just that plaintiff should retain the goods and recover their value from the defendant. If he had refused to receive the goods or had returned them after discovering what they were, a different case might be presented, upon which, though, we express no opinion.

[6] We do not think there was a sufficient tender of the $8.45 to stop interest and costs. To have this effect, the tender must be kept good by being always ready to pay and by producing the money and paying it into court. Bissell v. Heyward, 96 U. S. 580, 24 L. Ed. 678. In a recent case Justice Allen, referring to this plea of tender and its sufficiency, says: "The plea of tender is defective in that, in addition to alleging that he tendered the amount due, the defendant fails to allege that he has at all times since the tender been ready, able, and willing to pay, and in failing to accompany the plea by payment of the money into court; and the evidence in support of the plea is equally defective." Lee v. Manley, 154 N. C. 247, 70 S. E. 386. And again, quoting with approval Dixon v. Clark, 57 E. C. L. 376: "The principle of the plea of tender, in our apprehension, is that the defendant has been always ready (toujours prêt) to perform entirely the contract on which the action is founded, and that he did perform it, as far as he was able, by tendering the requisite money; the plaintiff himself precluding a complete performance by refusing to receive it. And as, in ordinary cases, the debt is not discharged by such tender and refusal, the plea must not only go on to allege that the defendant is still ready (uncore prêt) but must be accompanied by a profert in curiam of the money tendered"—citing, also, Bank v. Davidson, 70 N. C. 122. In Soper v. Jones, 56 Md. 503, it was held that "a plea of tender, not accompanied by profert in curiam, is bad." The same was said in De Bruhl v. Hood, 156 N. C. 52, 72 S. E. 83. This plea of tender applies peculiarly to actions of debt and assumption; the present action being assignable to the latter class, if we were proceeding under the former system of pleading. The tender does not pay or satisfy the demand.

In this view it may be well to reproduce what this court said (by Rodman, J.) in Bank v. Davidson, 70 N. C. 118: "We have recently said in several cases that contracts such as that now before us have been always regarded by the Legislature and by this court as contracts to pay money and not as contracts to deliver specific articles (Wooten v. Sherrard, 68 N. C. 334), and that consequently the effect of a tender refused is not to discharge the debt but merely to stop the interest. That this is the law of contracts to pay money ordinarily is settled. It is so laid down in all the text-books and must follow from the rule that a plea of tender must aver that the defendant has always been ready and willing to pay and must be accompanied by a payment of the money into court for the use of the plaintiff. An omission to pay the money into court makes the plea a nullity, and plaintiff may sign judgment. Bray v. Booth, 1 Barnes, 131; Kether v. Shelton, 1 Stra. 638."

The rule is thus stated in 38 Cyc. 162, 169, 170: "Ordinarily a tender of money does not operate as a satisfaction of the debt and is no bar to an action thereon; the effect, when the tender is maintained, being to discharge the debtor from a liability for interest subsequent to the tender or damages that would accrue by reason of nonperformance and costs afterwards incurred. * * * If the debt or duty is discharged by a tender, or the tender is relied upon as a defense to a foreclosure of a lien or the enforcement of some collateral right, it is sufficient, without more, to plead the tender and refusal, and in pleading a tender of chattels it is not necessary to plead a continuing readiness to pay. But, where the debt or duty remains after a tender and refusal, it is not enough for the party who pleads a tender, in an action to recover the debt, or damages for a failure to perform the duty, to plead the tender and refusal alone, but he must plead that ever since the tender he has at all times been and still is ready to pay the money or perform the duty; and, where it is necessary to keep the tender good, the rule in equity in reference to pleading continued readiness to pay is no less strict than at law. Where the debt or duty is not discharged by a tender and refusal, or the tender is made the ground of the cause of action or defense, the tenderer must plead in addition to a continuing readiness a profert in curiam; that is, that the money has already been brought into court or is now brought into court ready to be paid."

In our case it was not averred, nor does it appear, that defendant was ready with the money at the time of the alleged tender or that he kept himself in readiness to pay or actually paid it into court. The mere offering of the check was not sufficient; nothing else appearing. Te. Poel v. Shutt, 57 Neb. 592, 78 N. W. 288; In Matter of Collyer, 124 App. Div. 16, 108 N. Y. Supp. 600; Poague v. Greenlee, 63 Va. (22 Grat.) 724; Larsen v. Breene, 12 Colo. 480, 21 Pac. 498; 38 Cyc. 146. It was said in Matter of Collyer, supra: "His right to money was not affected by the fact that this check was once tendered in open court with a consent to an adjournment until it should be honored and that he refused it. The check was not legal tender. It was but a direction to a bank to pay the payee; the money represented did not thereby become the property of the payee, nor was it put beyond the control of the maker of the check, nor did the check before presentation work an assignment of the moneys thereby ordered to be paid"—citing O'Connor v. Mechanic's Bank, 124 N. Y. 324, 26 N. E. 816. The bank on which the check was drawn was in a different state from that of the creditor's residence. The case of Smith v. B. & L. Asso., 119 N. C. 257, 26 S. E. 40, presents a different question and is not like this case in its facts. Nor is Parker v. Beasley, 116 N. C. 1, 21 S. E. 935, 33 L. R. A. 231, in which the question was whether the lien of a mortgage was released by a tender. There seems to be a distinction between a tender for a simple, unsecured debt and one made when the debt is secured by indorsement or a lien; it being declared by some courts, contrary to what was held in Parker v. Beasley, supra, that a proper tender discharged the lien. But that question is not now before us. Nor is the principle which is sometimes applied by courts of equity applicable to this case. In Bateman v. Hopkins, 157 N. C. 470, 73 S. E. 133, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 642 (where the facts were peculiar), will be found a discussion of the law in regard to this difference. We there said: In general the rules of equity concerning the necessity of an actual tender are not so stringent as those which prevail at law, as the decree can be so framed as to protect the parties, and more exact justice can be attained than under the technical rules of the law which are of greater universality. There may be cases, even at law, or rather governed by strict legal principles, where the tender need not be renewed or kept good, as, for illustration, in Bialock v. Clark, 133 N. C. 306, 45 S. E. 642, Id., 137 N. C. 140, 49 S. E. 88, Hughes v. Knott, 138 N. C. 105, 50 S. E. 586, 3 Ann. Cas. 903, it being useless to do so, but this rule depends for its application upon the exceptional facts of that class of cases, which may, though, embrace quite a variety of transactions.

[6] Revisal, § 860, does not apply, as there was no offer of judgment, which must be in writing and signed by the party making it. The other exceptions are untenable.

The judgment will be modified so as to conform with this opinion in respect to the insufficiency of the tender, and in other respects is affirmed. Costs divided here.

Modified.

W. J. DOWNING LUMBER CO. v. RILEY et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

LOGS AND LOGGING (§ 3*)—CONVEYANCE OF TIMBER RIGHTS—MERGER OF TITLE.

The owner of timber land, in 1899, conveyed to A. the timber thereon above 12 inches in diameter with 10 years' time in which to cut it. Thereafter the owner conveyed the land to D., who in 1905 conveyed all the timber thereon above 10 inches in diameter to the plaintiff, giving him 8 years in which to cut it. D. later conveyed the land to C., excepting from the conveyance the timber rights conveyed to plaintiff. A. conveyed its timber rights to the defendants, who subsequently acquired the title to the land from C. Held, that since the deed to the land under which defendants claimed excepted the timber rights conveyed to plaintiff, defendants' right to cut timber, acquired through A., did not merge with the title, and after the 10 years which defendant had in which to cut, the plaintiff remained the owner of the timber described in D.'s conveyance to it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Cent. Dig. §§ 6-12; Dec. Dig. § 3.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Onslow County; Justice, Judge.

Action by the W. J. Downing Lumber Company against John T. Riley and others, to settle title to timber. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Duffy & Koonce and Herbert McClammy, all of Jacksonville, for appellants. J. O. Carr, of Wilmington, and Frank Thompson, of Jacksonville, for appellee.

BROWN, J. The land originally belonged to one G. E. Simmons, who sold the timber thereon, down to 12 inches in diameter, to the Angola Lumber Company, by deed dated the 23d day of September, 1899, and gave the company 10 years within which to cut it. This timber was conveyed through mesne conveyances to defendants. The time for cutting it expired September 23, 1909. On December 11, 1899, Simmons conveyed the land upon which the timber grew to E. W. Dixon. On the 14th day of December, 1905, E. W. Dixon and wife conveyed all of the timber down to 10 inches in diameter, situated upon said land, to the plaintiff, and gave it eight years within which to cut. On March 22, 1907, Dixon conveyed said lands upon which the timber was then standing and uncut to Sanders & Costin, who conveyed to defendants on February 5, 1907. After describing the two tracts of land conveyed therein, the deed from Dixon to Costin contains this exception: "Provided that the timber on said lands is hereby excepted above ten inches at the base, also one acre excepted for burial purposes near the Mill Creek Crossing, where the graveyard is. The exemption of the timber mentioned in this deed is only for the time that the timbermen hold option for them to be good to the parties of the second part mentioned in the deed."

It is contended that when defendant acquired title to the land upon which the Angola timber grew (the time within which it must be cut not having then expired), there was a merger of the two interests. This would be generally true. Rountree v. Cohn Bock Co., 158 N. C. 153, 73 S. E. 796; Lumber Co. v. Brown, 160 N. C. 281, 75 S. E. 714. But the deed from Dixon to Sanders & Costin excepted the timber theretofore conveyed from its operation. Consequently there could be no merger, for the ownership of the timber and the land did not unite in one person. Dixon had thereby conveyed all the timber on same land down to 10 inches to plaintiffs. This, of course, was subject to the prior right of the Angola deed. This Angola timber was not cut when the 10 years expired, September 23, 1909. Inasmuch as by reason of the exception in the Costin deed, the defendant acquired no further title, or right to the Angola timber, than he already possessed, when the 10 years expired defendant's right to cut the timber expired with it. As plaintiffs' timber deed from Dixon conveys "all the pine, oak and poplar timber of and above the size of ten inches at the base when cut," and as the eight years' time limit in that deed did not expire until December 14, 1913, the plaintiffs became the owner of all of such timber growing on the land after September 23, 1909, and have the right to cut and remove the same up to December 14, 1913. If the defendants cut and removed any of such timber after September 23, 1909, they are liable to plaintiff for its value.

Affirmed.

BLACKSTAD MERCANTILE CO. v. PARKER & GLOVER.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

EVIDENCE (§ 431*)—PAROL EVIDENCE—NEGATING DELIVERY.

In an action upon a written contract for goods, oral evidence is admissible to prove that the contract was left with the salesman on condition that he should not send it in until he had further instructions from the buyer, since such evidence does not contradict the written agreement but shows that it was never delivered and therefore did not become effective.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1975-1980; Dec. Dig. § 431.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wake County; Carter, Judge.

Action by the Blackstad Mercantile Company against Parker & Glover. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Plaintiff declared on a written contract for purchase of a lot of cheap jewelry to the amount of $196; the order containing a stipulation as follows: "Date, July 14, 1911. Blackstad Mercantile Company, St. Louis, Mo.—Gentlemen: On your approval of the terms and conditions of the above order, please deliver to us, at your earliest convenience, f. o. b. factory or distributing point, the goods above listed on the above terms. We agree that no statement made by ourselves or the salesman will be a part of this agreement, unless written in the original order received and accepted by you. [Signed] J. B. Legters, Salesman. [Signed] Parker & Glover, Customer. Postoffice, Wendell, N. C."

Defendants denied liability, claiming that they had not made any such contract. On the issue thus raised, plaintiff presented the written order and proved it had shipped goods to defendants from St. Louis, Mo., July 18, 1911, as specified in contract, and on arrival at destination at Wendell, N. C., defendants declined to receive same and had never taken them from express and railroad offices.

The defendant Parker was allowed to testify, over plaintiff's objection, that the transaction had taken place with a salesman of plaintiff, and that, when the order was prepared, he handed it to the salesman with the express understanding and agreement that it was not to be sent in to plaintiffs until the defendants gave further order to that effect, and that the salesman, in violation of this understanding, sent the order off immediately; some of the goods coming by freight and some by express. As soon as defendant heard that goods were shipped, he notified plaintiffs that the order had been sent in contrary to the agreement and that the defendants had already written the salesman not to have the goods shipped, and further saying they were overstocked and could not handle them at that time. This letter was also in evidence.

The court, among other things, charged the jury, in effect, that, in order to constitute a contract, delivery was necessary, and if they found from the evidence that the paper writing as signed by defendants was left in possession of the salesman, with the understanding that he should hold the same until he heard further from the defendants and sent it to plaintiffs in violation of such agreement, there would have been no delivery and plaintiffs would not be entitled to recover. (2) That a production of the paper in evidence and proof of shipment of goods as therein directed, the burden was then on defendants to negative the fact of delivery, etc., etc. Verdict for defendants. Judgment, and plaintiffs excepted and appealed.

N. Y. Gulley & Son, of Wake Forest, for appellant. Peele & Maynard, of Raleigh, for appellee.

HOKE, J. The reception of the evidence of the defendant Parker and the charge of the court in reference thereto are in accord with several recent decisions of the court on the subject. Garrison v. Machine Co., 159 N. C. 285, 74 S. E. 821; Bowser & Co. v. Tarry, 156 N. C. 35, 72 S. E. 74; Pratt v. Chaffin, 136 N. C. 350, 48 S. E. 768. In Bowser's Case, supra, the court, after approving the general rule that oral evidence will not be received to contradict or vary a written contract, made statement of the present position as follows: "While this position is unquestioned, it is also fully understood that, although a written instrument purporting to be a definite contract has been signed and delivered, it may be shown by parol evidence that such delivery was on condition that the same was not to be operative as a contract until the happening of some contingent event, and this on the idea, not that a written contract could be contradicted or varied by parol, but that until the specified event occurred the instrument did not become a binding agreement between the parties. It never in fact became their contract. The principle has been applied with us in several well-considered decisions, as in Pratt v. Chaffin, 136 N. C. 350 [48 S. E. 768], Kelly v. Oliver, 113 N. C. 442 [18 S. E. 698], Pennington v. Alexander, 111 N. C. 427 [16 S. E. 406], and is now very generally recognized (Ware v. Allen, 128 U. S. 590 [9 Sup. Ct. 174, 32 L. Ed. 563]; Wilson v. Powers, 131 Mass. 539; Rym v. Cambili, 88 E. C. L. 370; Clark on Contracts, p. 391; Lawson on Contracts [Amer. Ed.] p. 818), and, except in deeds conveying real estate, obtains, though the instrument is under seal and delivery has been made to the other party (Blewitt v. Boorum, 142 N. Y. 357 [37 N. E. 119, 40 Am. St. Rep. 600])." The cases chiefly relied upon by plaintiff, to wit, Machine Co. v. McClamrock, 152 N. C. 405, 67 S. E. 991, and Medicine Co. v. Mizell, 148 N. C. 385, 62 S. E. 511, are not in conflict with this position. Both of these cases proceed upon the theory that there was an existent written contract between the parties, and the question was whether its terms could be contradicted or varied by parol.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes.

In the present case, as stated, the question was whether there was or ever had been any written contract between plaintiffs and defendants; and the issue having been determined against plaintiffs, under a correct charge, the judgment in defendants' favor must be affirmed.

No error.

DAMERON et al. v. ROWLAND LUMBER CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS (§ 45*)—PRECEDINGS—EVIDENCE—SUFFICIENCY.

In an action where it was sought to reform a timber deed on the ground of mistake, evidence held insufficient to show any mutual mistake, it appearing that the plaintiff read a part of the deed, and that it was prepared by his counsel.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Reformation of Instruments, Cent. Dig. §§ 157-193; Dec. Dig. § 45.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Sampson County; Justice, Judge.

Action by L. L. Dameron and another against the Rowland Lumber Company. From a judgment of nonsuit, plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

See, also, 77 S. E. 604.

This is an action to restrain the cutting of timber and to reform a deed and to recover damages. On June 23, 1892, the plaintiffs executed a deed, in consideration of $150, to H. L. Pope, trustee, conveying the timber in controversy, with the right to enter and cut and remove the same within 15 years, and the defendant is the owner, by purchase, of the property rights and easements in said deed.

On December 21, 1906, the plaintiffs executed a deed to the defendant, in consideration of $500, extending the time for cutting and removing the timber in the deed to Pope, trustee, three years. This extension deed was prepared by one of the attorneys for the plaintiffs, and it has the following recital: "Whereas, we, L. L. Dameron and wife, Sallie Dameron, have heretofore conveyed to Hugh L. Pope, trustee, certain timber trees and privileges on the lands hereinafter described, by deed recorded in Book 80, at page 447, of the register's office of Sampson county, which deed is about to expire limitation therein named; and whereas said trustee has conveyed said timber and easements to the Rowland Lumber Company, and said company is desirous of securing an extension of time within which to exercise the privileges and rights conveyed in said deed." The plaintiffs allege in their complaint that the execution of the deed to Pope, trustee, and of the extension deed was procured by fraud, or was the result of a mutual mistake, and that both covered more land and timber than was intended to be conveyed, but on the trial they stated in open court that they would go to the jury upon the question of mutual mistake in reference to the drawing of the extension deed referred to in the complaint, and that they would not insist that the defendant had actual notice of any fraud or mistake in connection with the original deed to H. L. Pope, trustee. The plaintiffs offered evidence tending to prove that the deed to Pope was not drawn according to the contract of sale, and that it included more land and timber than was intended to be conveyed, and one of the plaintiffs testified, among other things, as follows: "In October, 1906, I signed an option to the defendant for an extension of three years on the Pope deed, and I was paid $1 option money at that time; the agreed price for the extension being $500. This trade was closed by Mr. Turnbull; Joe Faison was out in his buggy. Mr. Turnbull at that time may have had the original deed made to Pope; I don't recollect. He came back on December 21, 1906, and took up the option, and I and my wife executed the extension deed. I think one of my attorneys wrote the extension deed. I reckon I read a little of the extension deed. He may have handed it to me to read. On his paying me the $500 that day I just simply extended the time for three years on the timber in the original deed. In February 1909 Joe Faison came and asked me to show him the timber I had sold. I went and showed him, and he blazed a line across my land, cutting off what I claimed to be about 75 acres. There was no chopped or blazed line prior to that time. The timber blazed is shown on the map. Faison blazed according to my directions. This was three years after the execution of the extension deed. Faison never had either the original or extension deed at the time blazes were made under my direction. My wife and I can both read and write. I did not mean to swear in my complaint that at the time of the execution of the extension deed that the boundary of the 75 acres was well defined, and that the trees along said line were blazed. There are about 90 acres of cleared land in my tract." At the conclusion of the evidence his honor entered judgment of nonsuit on motion of the defendant, and the plaintiff excepted and appealed.

H. A. Grady and Fowler & Crumpler, all of Clinton, for appellants. A. McL. Graham and Geo. E. Butler, both of Clinton, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). When this case was here on a former appeal (Dameron v. Lumber Co., 161 N. C. 498, 77 S. E. 694), the court ordered a new trial, and said: "As this case is to be tried again, we will repeat, what has been often decided, that a deed cannot be corrected or reformed because of the mistake of one of the parties to it, but only when the mistake is mutual, that is, the mistake of both parties, or else upon the mistake of one party brought about by the fraud of the other"—and on the new trial the plaintiffs abandoned all allegations of fraud, and relied solely on the allegation of mutual mistake in the execution of the extension deed. We find no evidence of a mistake on the part of the defendant, and it is doubtful if there is any evidence of mistake on the part of the plaintiffs justifying the intervention of a court of equity, as one of them, and the only one who was a witness, testified that he could read and write; that the deed was prepared by his attorney; that he read a part of it; and that "on his (defendant) paying me the $500 that day, I just simply extended the time for three years on the timber in the original deed."

We are therefore of opinion that his honor properly entered judgment of nonsuit, as there is no evidence of mutual mistake.

Affirmed.

PATE v. BLADES.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

1. FRAUD (§ 11*)—DECIT—FALSE ASSERTIONS AS TO VALUE.

While expressions of commendation or opinion or extravagant statements as to value or prospects, etc., though untrue, are not generally actionable, yet, when a party to a bargain knowingly makes false assertions as to the value of the property as an inducement to the trade, and these are accepted and reasonably relied on as such, they constitute an actionable wrong, justifying a recovery of pecuniary damages.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. §§ 12, 13; Dec. Dig. § 11.*]

2. FRAUD (§ 13*)—DECIT—STATEMENTS OF FACT.

One who intentionally asserts a fact to be true of his own knowledge, when he does not know whether it is true or false, is as culpable, in case another is thereby misled or injured, as one who makes an assertion which he knows to be untrue.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. §§ 8-5; Dec. Dig. § 13.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 927*)—NONSUIT—REVIEW.

On appeal from a judgment of nonsuit, the court must accept as true the facts which make for plaintiff's recovery, and construe them in the light most favorable to him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2912, 2917, 3748, 3758, 4024; Dec. Dig. § 927.*]

4. FRAUD (§ 58*)—SALE OF LAND—VALUE—FALSE REPRESENTATIONS—ACTION FOR DAMAGES.

While plaintiff, an enlisted soldier under 21 years of age, was at his post awaiting transportation to the Philippines, defendant approached him, desiring to purchase a tract of land which he owned and supposed to contain between 100 and 150 acres, and induced plaintiff to sell same to him for $1,000, representing that the land was of very little value, that such amount was a very favorable price, and that defendant knew the land thoroughly. Plaintiff, relying on such representations, made the conveyance in 1899. In 1905, after his return to the United States, defendant, ascertaining that plaintiff was under age when he executed the deed, requested a new one, and offered plaintiff $200 therefor. This plaintiff executed, being entirely ignorant of the quantity of land or its value. In 1911 for the first time he ascertained that the tract contained between 1,000 and 2,000 acres, "nearer two than one," and was worth from $11,000 to $12,000. Held that, since the original deceit was existent when both deeds were executed, and the procuring of the second was the natural result of the fraud inducing the first, the facts were sufficient to warrant a recovery for fraud.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. §§ 55-59; Dec. Dig. § 58.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Craven County; Allen, Judge.

Action by W. R. Pate against Chas. G. Blades to recover damages for fraud and deceit in the purchase of land. From a judgment of nonsuit, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

There was evidence on part of plaintiff tending to show that in April, 1899, plaintiff, then under 21, an enlisted soldier in United States Army, was at Ft. McHenry, Baltimore, Md., awaiting transportation to Philippine Islands; that he had been in the army since 1896. While at Ft. McHenry, plaintiff received from defendant, by mail from New Bern, N. C., a proposition for an option on a tract of land in Craven county, N. C., abutting on Slocumb creek and Neuse river, about 20 miles below New Bern, and which plaintiff supposed to be about 100 acres, some of the land, about 150 acres, having been previously sold; that soon after receipt of option defendant appeared at Ft. McHenry, and after much persuasion induced plaintiff to sell and convey to him the land in question for the sum of $1,000. The conversation and transaction by which the trade was brought about was given at great length in plaintiff's testimony, and containing, among other things, evidence to the effect that defendant estimated the tract at 100 to 150 acres, and represented that it was of very little value, that $1,000 was a very favorable price for it, and, in this connection, plaintiff further testified as follows: "At the time I sold the land in Baltimore I thought I owned about 100 acres. I did not know the value of the property at the time I executed the deed in Baltimore. I had not seen the land since I was a child. I did not know the extent of the property at the time I executed the quitclaim deed. I was relying upon Mr. Blades absolutely at the time I executed the deed in Baltimore. He said he had been over the land, and looked over it, and knew it thoroughly, and he would not take advantage of me, for I knew nothing about it, and he was offering me a very good price. I was 21 years old in September after executing the deed in April, 1899." Plaintiff's evidence further tended to show that after making this deed, in the line of duty, he went to the Philippine Islands, and after serving out his time in January, 1900, he returned to his home in Craven county, about nine or ten miles above New Bern, married in 1902, and has since resided in that same neighborhood; that in 1905 plaintiff, who was building a home, was at defendant's lumber plant in New Bern for the purpose of procuring lumber, and on one occasion defendant, having ascertained that plaintiff was under 21 when he executed the former deed, broached the subject and offered plaintiff $200 to execute an additional deed for the property, describing same as that piece of land lying on south side of Neuse river between Slocumb and Hancock creeks, adjoining lands of John Pittman, etc., etc., except the portion formerly sold, containing description further: "It is the purpose and intent of this party of the first part to convey hereby all the lands which he now owns in said county of Craven on the south side of Neuse river and between Slocumb and Hancock creeks," etc. Plaintiff testified further that his mother had died when he was an infant, and his father, having moved to Hancock creek, died in 1885, when plaintiff was about seven years of age, when plaintiff went to live with his uncle in the upper part of the county, and had lived there since except when in the army, as stated; that plaintiff was entirely ignorant of the quantity of the land or its value, or that the facts were otherwise than as represented by defendant, both when he made the first and second deeds, not having been on or about it since he was seven years of age, and having no occasion to look into it since; that some time in 1911, being down in that locality on other business, and having attention aroused by some very fine timber land he was passing through, he made inquiry, and ascertained it was a part of the land he had conveyed to defendant. Pursuing such inquiry, he ascertained further that the tract was a very valuable one, and contained from 1,000 to 2,000 acres, and he therefore entered present suit. There was further testimony to the effect that this tract conveyed was a good purchase at the price of $10,000, and that the timber on it could have been sold for $11,000 or $12,000 at the time of the first conveyance. There were phases of plaintiff's evidence tending to show that defendant did not have full personal acquaintance with the property, and that no actionable fraud was committed; but, as the cause was nonsuited, the testimony which makes in plaintiff's favor is more particularly referred to, that being the aspect in which the cause must now be considered. At the close of testimony, on motion, there was an order of nonsuit, and plaintiff, having duly excepted, appealed.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

W. D. McIver and R. A. Nunn, both of New Bern, for appellant. Gulon & Gulon, of New Bern, for appellee.

HOKE, J. (after stating the facts as above). It was formerly held in this state that an action to recover damages for fraud and deceit would not lie in the case of a sale and purchase of land, in reference to the quantity or correct placing of the property; the position being that the facts were very readily ascertainable, and that the purchaser should have informed himself on these matters by a survey. The principle on which these decisions were made to rest was disapproved in case of positive fraud on the part of the vendor or purchaser in Walsh v. Hall, 66 N. C. 233, and in the subsequent case of May v. Loomis, 140 N. C. 350, 52 S. E. 728, the decisions wherein the former doctrine was upheld, and, more directly relevant to the question, Credie v. Swindell, 63 N. C. 305, and Lytle v. Byrd, 48 N. C. 222, were expressly overruled; this case of May v. Loomis being to the effect, among other positions, that the action lies in proper instances both in sales of real and personal property. A succinct reference to this change in the attitude of the court on this subject, and some of the cases by which it was announced, appears in a still later case of Gray v. Jenkins, 151 N. C. 83, 65 S. E. 645, as follows: "Older cases have gone very far in upholding defenses resting upon this general principle, and, as pointed out in May v. Loomis, 140 N. C. 357, 52 S. E. 728, some of them have been since disapproved, and are no longer regarded as authoritative, and the more recent decisions on the facts presented here are to the effect that the mere signing or acceptance of a deed by one who can read or write shall not necessarily conclude as to its execution or its contents, when there is evidence tending to show positive fraud, and that the injured party was deceived and thrown off his guard by false statements designedly made at the time and reasonably relied upon by him. Some of these decisions, here and elsewhere, directly hold that false assurances and statements of the other party may of themselves be sufficient to carry the issue to the jury, when there has been nothing to arrest attention or arouse suspicion concerning them. Walsh v. Hall, 66 N. C. 233; Hill v. Brower, 76 N. C. 124; May v. Loomis, 140 N. C. 350 [52 S. E. 728]; Griffin v. Lumber Co., 140 N. C. 514 [53 S. E. 307, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 463]. In Griffin v. Lumber Co., 140 N. C., just cited, there is a very full and learned discussion by Associate Justice Connor of many of the questions embraced in the present inquiry.

[1, 2] Again, it has been held that, while "expressions of commendation or opinion or extravagant statements as to value or prospects or the like," not infrequently used by a party in the ordinary effort to puff up the value and quality of his wares in a trade, will not as a rule be considered as fraudulent in law (see the well-considered case of Cash Register Co. v. Townsend, 137 N. C. 652, 50 S. E. 306, 70 L. R. A. 349), yet, when a party to a bargain makes false assertions as to the value of the property, and the same are knowingly made as an inducement to the trade, and are accepted, reasonably relied upon as such, statements of this kind may constitute an actionable wrong, justifying recovery in case of pecuniary damage. And, in reference to the scienter, it has been held that, under some circumstances, "one who intentionally asserts a fact to be true of his own knowledge, when he does not know whether it is true or false, is as culpable, in case another is thereby misled or injured, as one who makes an assertion which he knows to be untrue." Modlin v. Railroad, 145 N. C. 218, 58 S. E. 1075. The doctrine sustained in the cases already cited, and referring more particularly to sales of real estate, has been approved and further applied to sales of personal property in several later decisions. Unitype Co. v. Ashcraft, 155 N. C. 63, 71 S. E. 61, and Sewing Machine Co. v. Bullock, 161 N. C. 1, 76 S. E. 634, and Machine Co. v. Feezer, 152 N. C. 516, 67 S. E. 1004, and a reference to these cases will no doubt be of aid to a proper consideration of the one now presented.

[3, 4] Applying the principles as stated, we are of opinion that, on the facts as they now appear of record, the judgment of nonsuit should be set aside, for, accepting the facts which make for plaintiff's recovery as true, and construing them in the light most favorable to him, this being the established rule, when a nonsuit has been ordered, it appears in evidence that plaintiff, under 21 years of age, in the city of Baltimore, where he was stationed as an enlisted soldier, awaiting transportation to the Philippine Islands, by the false statements and assertions of defendant as to value and quantity, has been induced to convey to the latter for $1,000 between 1,000 and 2,000 acres of land, "nearer two than one," situate in the county of Craven, and worth from $11,000 to $12,000; the plaintiff being entirely ignorant of the real facts, and relying on the statements of defendant to the effect that the price paid was a just equivalent, and "that defendant had been over the land, had looked over it, and knew it thoroughly."

It is urged for defendant that, even if this view should prevail as to the first deed, there are no sufficient facts impeaching the second, and nothing occurred at that time to prevent full investigation of the property; but this position may not be allowed as a necessary or legal conclusion from the testimony, for, if the plaintiff was induced to make the first deed by fraud and deceit of the defendant, and he then made a second deed, believing and having reason to believe the assurances made in reference to the first, and there was nothing occurring in connection with the execution of the second deed to arouse attention or provoke inquiry into the amount and value of the property, and plaintiff, under all the facts and attendant circumstances, acted as a man of reasonable business prudence in making the second deed without further investigation, in that event it may well be determined that the fraud and deceit existent when the first deed was obtained was effective in procuring the execution of the second, and the one was the natural result of the other.

On the evidence, as it now appears, the plaintiff is entitled to have the issues submitted to a jury, and it is so ordered.

Reversed.

HUNTER v. ATLANTIC COAST LINE RY. CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

1. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 194*)—WRIT OF RECORDARI.

Where a writ of recordari is desired to compel a justice of the peace to send up the record in a case where the defendant defaulted and lost the right of appeal, defendant has the burden of showing excusable neglect as well as a reasonably meritorious defense.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 774, 775; Dec. Dig. § 194.*]

2. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 209*)—RECORDARI—REMAND OF CAUSE—EFFECT.

When a case is not finally disposed of on appeal, but is remanded for further proceedings, trial amendments are discretionary with the trial court, consequently, where a judgment granting a writ of recordari to bring up a judgment of a justice, was reversed and remanded on appeal, the trial court might properly permit the filing of additional affidavits by the petitioner.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 818-823; Dec. Dig. § 209.*]

3. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE (§ 184*)—WRIT OF RECORDARI—EXCUSABLE NEGLIGENCE.

Where defendant defaulted in justice court, and lost its right of appeal, a showing that it engaged a law firm to represent it in the action, but that the partner who usually handled such business by reason of illness left the state without notifying his copartner of the pendency of such a suit, is not a showing of excusable neglect, for one member of a law firm is charged with knowledge of all the business of the firm, and so the failure of the member who was ill to attend to the case was no ground for the neglect of the one who was not shown to be incapacitated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 774, 775; Dec. Dig. § 194.*]

Allen, J., dissenting.

Appeal from Superior Court, Lenoir County; Carter, Judge.

Action by W. F. Hunter against the Atlantic Coast Line Railway Company and the Southern Railway Company. From a judgment granting a writ of recordari, plaintiff appeals. Reversed, and petition denied.

T. C. Wooten and Y. T. Ormond, both of Kinston, for appellant. Rouse & Land, of Kinston, for appellees.

BROWN, J. This cause was before us at former term, 161 N. C. 504, 77 S. E. 678, and the report of the case is referred to in connection with this opinion. On that appeal it was deemed unnecessary to pass on the question of excusable neglect, as we held that the affidavit of Rouse and the petition for recordari did not set out a meritorious defense to plaintiff's cause of action, and we set aside the order granting the writ.

[1, 2] The burden is on defendants to show both excusable neglect as well as a reasonably meritorious defense. The defendants renewed their motion for the writ, and his honor, Judge Allen, permitted them to file the affidavit of Land in addition to the former affidavit of Rouse for the purpose of showing a meritorious defense. This was excepted to by the plaintiff. We see no objection to this. It was a matter in the sound discretion of the court below. Where a case is not finally disposed of on appeal, amendments are discretionary with the court below, and the court may hear additional facts. Foy v. Haughton, 83 N. C. 470; McMillan v. Baker, 92 N. C. 110; Jones v. Swepson, 94 N. C. 700; Ashby v. Page, 108 N. C. 6, 13 S. E. 90; Beville v. Cox, 109 N. C. 285, 13 S. E. 800. His honor found the facts set out in the two affidavits to be true, and held that the facts made out a case of excusable neglect as well as a meritorious defense.

[3] All that is before the court as to the question of excusable neglect is contained in the affidavit of N. J. Rouse, and the excuse therein urged is the sickness of his partner, Land, who, in accordance with the custom and practice in the office of the firm, had charge of this case, and upon him was the duty of its preparation, etc., and who on account of sickness left Kinston without informing his associate of the pendency of the action. We do not think these facts make out a case of excusable neglect. In actual practice it may be otherwise; but in law each copartner is charged with knowledge of the business of the firm. When Land left the office of his firm on account of illness, it was his duty to give notice of the pendency of this action in the court of the justice of the peace to his copartner Rouse. No facts are given in the affidavits tending to show that he was mentally and physically incapacitated to mention the matter to his copartner. Independent of that his copartner is charged in law with knowledge of the firm's business. The same excuse was urged in White v. Rees, 150 N. C. 679, 64 S. E. 777, and held to be insufficient. In that case Justice Walker says: "The member of the law firm who had special charge of the case was too sick to attend, but no sufficient excuse is shown for the failure of the other two members of the firm to attend."

The petition for recordari is denied.

Reversed.

ALLEN, J., dissents; WALKER, J., concurs in result.

IN RE DUPREE'S WILL.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

1. WILLS (§ 261*)—PROOF—CAVEAT—LIMITATIONS.

While there is no statute of limitations directly affecting the right of parties, claiming under a will, to have the same proven, and in so far as it may affect their own interests, yet when a will has been regularly proven in common form, the right to caveat the same may be lost by lapse of time, especially when, after knowledge of the will and its probate, the adverse parties have acquiesced for such a length of time as would make it unreasonable and unjust to permit further question of its validity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 607; Dec. Dig. § 261.*]

2. WILLS (§ 261*)—CONTEST—RIGHT TO CAVEAT—LACHES.

Testator died in 1887, bequeathing the most of his property to his son, his minor married daughter receiving only a nominal legacy. In December the will was probated and recorded, and the son kept possession until 1889 or 1890, when he sold the land. The daughter, within a year after her father's death, submitted a written protest to the will to the clerk, but he declined to entertain the same for lack of a bond, and in 1893 an insufficient bond was offered, but refused, and no valid caveat was filed until March 6, 1911. The daughter, with her husband, continuously resided in the neighborhood, and had knowledge of the probate of the will, and that her brother was in possession and had conveyed the land. Held, that she was guilty of such laches as precluded a maintenance of the caveat, notwithstanding her coverture and the absence of her brother from the state after he sold the land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 607; Dec. Dig. § 261.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Pitt County; Allen, Judge.

Caveat against the will of John Dupree, deceased. From a judgment dismissing the caveat, the caveators appeal. Affirmed.

On the trial it was made to appear that Jno. Dupree died in 1887, having made a last will and testament, and leaving him surviving two children, Robert Dupree and Olivia, a daughter; that in the will the land and chief part of the personal property was devised and bequeathed to Robert, the son, the daughter receiving a nominal legacy of $5; that in December, 1887, said will, attested by three witnesses, was duly admitted to probate in common form and recorded; that Robert, as owner, went into possession of the land immediately on his father's death, and so remained till 1889 or 1890, when he sold and conveyed the same to Wiley Webb, who then went into possession and remained there until his death in 1908, and since that time his heirs have been in possession of the same; that on the 6th of March, 1911, caveat to said will was duly entered on behalf of the daughter, Olivia A. Williams, and her husband, J. A. Williams, and bond given, and the heirs at law of Wiley Webb duly cited to appear, etc.; that prior to her father's death, the daughter, Olivia, was married to J. W. Williams when she was under age, and she and her husband have continuously resided in the neighborhood from the time of their marriage to the present, and were duly cognizant of the fact that the will had been admitted to probate, and that Robert was in possession, claiming to own same as devisee; that within a year from the father's death for the daughter and her husband a written protest to the will or caveat was submitted to the clerk, who declined to entertain the same for lack of a bond, and later, in 1893, on an insufficient bond being offered, the clerk again declined to receive the paper as a caveat, or docket same, and no citation was ever issued for any of the parties interested, and the paper was kept on the clerk's desk as papers "not perfected nor ready to go on the docket," until they were destroyed by burning of the courthouse in 1910. There was further evidence that some time after selling the land to Webb the son Robert had gone to Florida and lived there since. There was testimony on the part of caveators tending to show that J. W. Dupree was not competent to make a will, and for the other parties that he was of sound and disposing mind and memory at the time. At the close of the testimony his honor, being of opinion that on the evidence and from perusal of the pleadings the right of caveators to proceed in the cause was barred by lapse of time, etc., which was fully and properly pleaded, entered judgment dismissing the proceedings, and the caveators excepted and appealed.

Harding & Pierce and Ha of Greenville, for appellants. Greenville, and Ailsbrook & boro, for appellees.

HOKE, J. (after stating the [1] There is no statute of this state directly affecting the claiming under a will to have been, and in so far as it may interests. Steadman v. Steadman, 346-349, 55 S. E. 784. Nor such statute relating to the prior to 1907, when the period was established from the time of citation to prove the will in common form." It has, however, been long that when a will has been recorded in common form, the right to cancel it by lapse of time, and after knowledge of such will the adverse parties have acquired a length of time as would make it inequitable and unjust to make further its validity. In re Will of Benjamin C. 254, 59 S. E. 687; Etheridge v. Etheridge, 48 N. C. 14; Gray v. Gray, 20 N. C. 47.

[2] In Beauchamp's Case, right may be forfeited, either by unreasonable delay." The principle at common law for the operation of the statute was not established with certainty, nor was it always uniform, but unless shortened by statute, the presumptions to 10 years, or 20 years, the period of 20 years is generally prevalent. Undoubtedly as to this jurisdiction (W. v. Brower, 114 N. C. 422, 144 N. C. 656-660, 57 S. E. 112; Headen v. Womack, 88 N. C. 18. Where the principle is a shorter time has been allowed here, as in Hamlin, Adm'r, 112 Mo. 300, 20 S. W. 647; Ruffin, Judge, in Headen's Case, presumption of payment arises under the act of 1826, that the intent of a claim may become operative, when the facts of the case lead to a conclusion of law from facts by the court, and not left to the jury." This being the case, we are of opinion that his honor made the proper ruling in dismissing the proceedings.

ings. From the facts admitted in the pleadings and evidence, it appears that this will, properly drawn and attested, was duly proven and recorded in Pitt county in 1887, and that the devisee occupied as owner under the will until 1889 or 1890, when he sold to Wiley Webb, and he and his heirs have since been in possession and control of the property as owners, the same being under a deed from the devisee; that during all of this time the inventors J. W. Williams and wife have resided within short distance of the property, were fully cognizant of the existence of the will and its terms, and of the possession of the property by the purchasers and the nature of their claims, and this delay and long acquiescence has been properly held to bar all right on their part to make further question of the validity of the will.

Our conclusion is not affected by the facts in reference to the attempted caveat in 1887, nor its renewal in 1893. This application was never entertained by the clerk for lack of a proper bond, which he had the right to require. Revisal, § 3136; Code 1883, § 2159. The cause was never docketed, nor was any notice, or citation even, ever issued. No caveat, therefore, has ever been made nor constituted till this of 1911, and if there had been, in the absence of notice issued in reasonable time, it should be held for a discontinuance by analogy to failure to issue an alias summons to term held at stated periods. Etheridge v. Woodley, 83 N. C. 12.

Nor should the marriage of the daughter under 21 and continuous coverture since, be allowed to prevent in this instance the effect of the presumption, for when applied in strictness as a common-law principle, neither the infancy nor marriage of the parties is allowed to interfere as a matter of positive right, but is only a relevant circumstance on the question whether the presumption shall prevail. Houck v. Adams, 98 N. C. 519, 4 S. E. 502. True this position was qualified to some extent in Summerlin v. Cowles, 101 N. C. 473, 7 S. E. 881, but this qualification only extended to cases where courts of equity adopted 10 years as a legal bar in analogy to the statutory period prevailing in action at law, and the court held that when so adopted as a statute limitation, the disabilities provided for in the statute should also be recognized. And the same answer may be made to the position that the devisee Robert Dupree left the state a year or two after the death of his father, and has since resided in Florida. This absence of a party and the effect claimed for it exists by reason of the statutory provision affecting the statute of limitations proper (Revisal, § 366), and is not necessarily controlling as to the common-law presumption. In such case this absence, as in the case of infancy and coverture, is only a relevant fact bearing on the question presented, and more especially is this true when the party remained in the state and in possession of the property for more than a year, and the cause is one where jurisdiction could be acquired by publication.

In the two North Carolina cases of Gray v. Maer, 20 N. C. 47, and Etheridge v. Corpnew, Executors, 48 N. C. 14, the application of the principle was denied, but in the first case the time was not over 10 years, and it appeared in explanation of the delay that the parties were "numerous and much dispersed, and several of them were infants and married women," and in the second the time was something over 10 years, and it was shown that the petitioners were numerous, and all the time had been under the disabilities of coverture, absence beyond seas, residence in another state, and lunacy, "and, further, that they had no notice of the death of the testator or of the will or its probate." In both of these decisions, however, the principle was recognized as existent here; and neither in any way conflicts with the disposition made of the present case, where, as noted, a will, properly witnessed and duly proved and recorded, has remained on the record unquestioned for more than 23 years, with full rights enjoyed under it by devisee and the person to whom he had conveyed it, and the adverse claimants during all this time have resided in the immediate neighborhood and were fully cognizant of all the facts concerning it.

In Cox v. Brower, supra, Burwell, judge, delivering the opinion, quotes from a Pennsylvania decision (Foulk v. Brown, 2 Watts, 216) as follows: "The rule of presumption, when traced to its foundation, is a rule of convenience and policy, the result of a necessary regard to the peace and security of society. No person ought to be permitted to lie by whilst transactions can be fairly investigated and justly determined until time has involved them in uncertainty and obscurity, and then ask for an inquiry. Justice cannot be satisfactorily done when parties and witnesses are dead, vouchers lost or thrown away, and a new generation has appeared on the stage of life, unacquainted with the affairs of a past age, and often regardless of them. Papers which our predecessors have carefully preserved are often thrown aside or scattered as useless by their successors. It has been truly said that if families were compelled to preserve them, they would accumulate to a burdensome extent. Hence statutes of limitation have been enacted in all civilized communities, and in cases not within them prescription or presumption is called in as an indispensable auxiliary to the administration of justice."

After giving the case our full consideration, we hold there was no error in dismissing proceedings, and the judgment of the court below is affirmed.

No error.

KNIGHT v. FOSTER.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. LANDLORD AND TENANT (§ 167*)—INJURIES TO THIRD PERSONS—LANDLORD'S LIABILITY.

A landlord is only liable to third persons for injuries caused by failure to repair the premises where he contracts to repair or knowingly rents the premises in a condition which is dangerous or amounts to a nuisance, or where he authorizes a wrongful act making the premises dangerous.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Landlord and Tenant, Cent. Dig. §§ 668-674, 676-679; Dec. Dig. § 167.*]

2. LANDLORD AND TENANT (§ 167*)—INJURIES TO THIRD PERSONS—LANDLORD'S LIABILITY.

A landlord who knowingly rented premises when the gate thereto swung outward so as to be dangerous to pedestrians was liable for personal injuries resulting from the condition of the gate seven years thereafter.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Landlord and Tenant, Cent. Dig. §§ 668-674, 676-679; Dec. Dig. § 167.*]

3. LANDLORD AND TENANT (§ 150*)—REPAIRS—WHAT CONSTITUTES—"REPAIR."

The changing of a gate which swung outward so as to make it swing inward would be a change in the condition of the premises, and not technically a "repair," so that the duty of making it was upon the landlord.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Landlord and Tenant, Cent. Dig. §§ 538, 544-548, 555, 556; Dec. Dig. § 150.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 7, pp. 6096-6102; vol. 8, pp. 7785.]

4. NUISANCE (§ 6*)—VIOLATION OF ORDINANCE.

A continued violation of a valid ordinance constitutes a nuisance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Nuisance, Cent. Dig. §§ 35-38; Dec. Dig. § 6.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, New Hanover County; Justice, Judge.

Action by Eugene S. Knight against Gertrude S. Foster. From a judgment of nonsuit, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

Ricaud & Jones, of Wilmington, for appellant. Kellum & Loughlin and John D. Bellamy & Son, all of Wilmington, for appellee.

CLARK, C. J. This is an action for damages sustained by coming in contact with a gate opening upon the sidewalk in front of certain premises in Wilmington owned by the defendant, which gate, the plaintiff alleges, had been left open and so long neglected, without any fastenings, that it had become permanently fixed in the sand on the sidewalk, and settled at the angle at which it stood August 29, 1911, when the plaintiff, rightfully using said sidewalk, in which the gate had become imbedded, and in ignorance of the danger, ran into said gate on a dark and rainy night, there being no light on the street, and sustained the injuries complained of. The defendant demurred to the evidence, upon the ground that the tenant and not the owner was liable, if any liability existed, and moved for nonsuit. Motion was allowed.

There was evidence that the monthly tenant, had rented the premises for seven years, and had repeated to the owner's agent of the condition of the premises, but that he promised him had not been made.

[1] 1 Jaggard, Torts, 223, to the effect that the law is: "Normally the owner or landlord is liable to third persons for injuries caused by failure to keep the premises in repair. This duty may, however, be extended to the tenant or owner (a) when he contracts to repair, (b) where he knowingly demises the premises in a ruinous condition or in a condition of nuisance, (c) where he authorizes a wrongful act." To same effect, 5 Corp. (5th Ed.) 3028 et seq.

There was evidence from the owner in this case that he contracted to repair, and had promised the tenant to repair the gate. There was also evidence that the owner knew of the condition of the premises, and that he had been in this condition for several months, and one of the witnesses testified that it had been in that condition for several years. We have found no case where a landlord has been held not liable for an injury resulting from the obstruction or a defect known to the landlord to exist at the time of the injury, and permitted by him to continue.

[2, 3] It was in evidence that there was an ordinance of the city (section 40 of the city charter of 1902, and which is still in force) that it shall be unlawful for any person to leave a gate so constructed as to swing out on the sidewalk of an alley of the city of Wilmington. This gate swung outward, and the condition when the premises were let to the present occupant several years ago, which was at a date subsequent to the enactment of the ordinance. The ordinance provided that any injury resulting therefrom should be upon the owner, under the same conditions as above quoted from Jaggard. The ordinance had been passed before the making of this lease, this was a condition of the lease, and hence the duty devolved upon the owner and not the tenant. In 1 Taylor, Landlord and Tenant, § 175, it is said: "Where injury is caused to a third person from the fault of the landlord in the construction of the premises, or in the ruinous condition at the time of the injury, or because they then contained a defect, even if this only becomes active by the tenant's ordinary use of the premises, the landlord is still liable, notwithstanding the fact that he is not the owner—citing authorities.

Besides, speaking only of the county of New Hanover the "ordinance of the city of Wilmington."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series.

as been in force for 13 years, and in the city of Wilmington cattle and stock have been forbidden to run at large for a longer period than that. The retention of a fence and gate was therefore entirely unnecessary as a matter of law, which is further demonstrated as a matter of fact, also, because this gate had been permanently left open for months and years. If notwithstanding the owner wished to keep up an unnecessary fence and gate, the liability for any injury resulting from its negligent condition is upon him and not upon the tenant who had no authority to remove them. He says he could have removed the fence and gate; but the owner's agent kept promising to fix them. There is evidence that in that quarter there are now useless gates are in a ruinous condition, sagging and hanging over the sidewalk. If this action shall call attention to this state of things and secure their removal, it may prevent similar injuries, and prove a public benefit.

Biggs v. Ferrell, 34 N. C. 1, relied on by defendant, merely holds that the owner of a ferry is not liable for damages caused by the mismanagement of the lessee in operation of the ferry, and is obviously not in point. While the authorities are not entirely in accord, the consensus seems to be that, where an obstruction or defect in the abutting property is created and continued by the tenant, without the knowledge or sanction of the landlord, during the term of tenancy, then the liability rests with the tenant; but, where dilapidated premises are leased in a ruinous condition, known to the landlord, and such condition causes the use of public highways and thoroughfares in populous cities to become unsafe and insecure, and the landlord knows of the conditions, and suffers them to continue, both the landlord and tenant are tort-feasors, and may be sued jointly or severally. Ahern v. Steele, 115 V. Y. 203, 22 N. E. 193, 5 L. R. A. 449, 12 Am. St. Rep. 778, is an instructive case, in which the authorities as to the liability of landlord and tenant to third parties are collected and differentiated. It is there held, Hitting Woods, Landlord and Tenant, 230: "If a nuisance existed upon the premises at the time of the demise, the landlord as well as the tenant is liable for the damages resulting therefrom." The ordinance prohibiting gates from swinging outward was held reasonable and within the domain of municipal regulations. Rosedale v. Hanner, 157 Ind. 390, 61 N. E. 792. Under Revisal, 3702, the violation of a city ordinance is a misdemeanor.

(4) A continual violation of a valid ordinance is a nuisance.

We need not consider the exceptions to evidence, because they may not arise upon another trial.

The judgment of nonsuit is reversed.

WALKER, J. (concurring). I concur in all that is decided by the opinion of the court. I do not assent to the proposition that the "no fence law" has any application to the case. It was intended to fence in cattle, it is true, and not to fence them out; but it still leaves it optional with the owner of land whether he will fence his premises for their protection or other purposes than barring out straying cattle, and does not increase his responsibility for doing so. There are other roving animals than cattle, and he has the right to keep them out, and to erect fences for privacy or for ornamentation as much so as he may plant trees for that purpose, or erect structures for his comfort and convenience.

BROWN, J., concurs in this opinion.

WITHERS v. BOARD OF COM'RS OF COLUMBUS COUNTY.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. MANDAMUS (§ 111*)—SUBJECTS OF RELIEF—MINISTERIAL ACTS.

Mandamus was a proper remedy to enforce an order of the judge of the superior court requiring a county to pay all expenses of a chemical analysis of the stomach of a person believed to have been murdered, since mandamus is the proper remedy against a public officer who refuses to discharge a specific duty required of him by law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mandamus, Cent. Dig. §§ 231, 232, 234; Dec. Dig. § 111.*]

2. COUNTIES (§ 139*)—COUNTY CHARGES—CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

Within Const. art. 7, § 7, providing that no county shall contract any debt, pledge its faith or loan its credit, nor shall any tax be levied or collected by its officers except for the necessary expenses thereof, unless by a vote of the voters therein, the expense of a chemical analysis of the stomach of a person believed to have been poisoned was a necessary expense, and hence the judge of the superior court had authority to order the county to pay such expense, especially in view of Revisal 1905, § 3152, providing that in all cases of homicide any officer prosecuting for the state may direct a post mortem examination, and that the physicians making such examination shall be paid a reasonable compensation, to be determined by the court, and, if not collected from the defendant, paid by the county.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. § 207; Dec. Dig. § 139.*]

3. COUNTIES (§ 132*)—COUNTY CHARGES—CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

Revisal 1905, § 3152, providing for post mortem examinations in homicide cases and for the payment of the expense thereof by the county, is a valid exercise of the police power of the state, since counties are but state agencies, and subject to legislative authority, which can direct them to do all such matters as it can empower them to do, and in the administration of a criminal law they are necessarily under legislative control.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. § 208; Dec. Dig. § 132.*]

4. COUNTIES (§ 139*)—COUNTY CHARGES—PROCEEDINGS TO DETERMINE.

Where in a homicide case the judge of the superior court made an order requiring the county to pay the expenses connected with a chemical analysis of the decedent's stomach, it was not necessary to the validity of such order that the Board of Commissioners of the county should be a party to the action, or that they should have notice before the order was made, such matters being left to the sound discretion of the trial judge, which will not be interfered with unless grossly abused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. §§ 203-207; Dec. Dig. § 139.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Columbus County; Ferguson, Judge.

Mandamus proceedings by W. A. Withers against the Board of Commissioners of Columbus County. From an order granting a peremptory writ, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

This is a proceeding in mandamus, brought by the plaintiff to compel the defendant to obey an order made at November term, 1911, of the superior court of Columbus county, directing the payment of $200 to the plaintiff. The cause was heard at April term, 1913, of the superior court of said county by his honor, Judge Ferguson, who adjudged "that the defendants be and are hereby required and commanded to issue warrants for the payment of the order made by his honor, Frank Carter, in this cause on the 2d day of December, 1912." The defendant excepted and appealed.

David J. Lewis and Homer L. Lyon, both of Whiteville, for appellants. Walter H. Powell, of Whiteville, for appellee.

BROWN, J. This proceeding is brought to enforce obedience to an order of Carter, judge, made in a criminal proceeding pending before him. As the facts are fully stated in the order, we set it out in full: "State of North Carolina, Columbus County. State v. Edgar Thompson. This cause coming on for hearing at the November term of the superior court of Columbus county, before his honor, Frank Carter, judge presiding, and it appearing to the court that a bench warrant was issued for the aforesaid Edgar Thompson upon the affidavit of one J. V. Fore, on the charge of murdering Mrs. Edgar Thompson, his wife, by means of poison, and it further appearing to the court that said warrant was duly served on the ——— day of November, 1911, and that after a hearing before his honor, Judge Carter, hold the courts of the Seventh judicial district, the said Edgar Thompson was placed in prison to await the report of the chemist, and the stomach of Mrs. Edgar Thompson, deceased, wife of Edgar Thompson aforesaid, having been duly packed and sealed and forwarded to said chemist for a thorough analysis, the court deeming such analysis proper and necessary in said cause; it also appearing to the court that the sentiment of the good citizens of Columbus county demanded that public justice be quickly and speedily administered in this cause; and it further appearing to the court that, after a full and complete analysis of said stomach by the chemist, Prof. W. A. Withers reported to the court that he found no traces of poisonous substance therein; and it further appearing that these facts were made known to the solicitor N. A. Sinclair, and that a nol. pros'd was taken in the above case; the examination of said stomach of Mrs. Edgar Thompson, deceased, having been ordered by his honor, Frank Carter, acting upon the advice of the solicitor N. A. Sinclair, and the above facts set forth: It is now ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the bill of $200 charges of the said Prof. W. A. Withers for making said analysis, together with all other necessary expenses in transporting to Raleigh said stomach and for procuring the evidence of the coroner's inquest and forwarding the same to said chemist, be paid by the county of Columbus, including bill of J. V. Fore, heretofore approved by the solicitor N. A. Sinclair. Frank Carter, Judge Presiding. This December 2, 1912."

It is contended on behalf of the defendants, the Board of Commissioners: (1) That the proceeding should be dismissed, as no such action can be maintained to enforce the order of Carter, judge; (2) that this not being a necessary expense, his honor had no legal authority to make said order; (3) that they had no notice of said order, no day in court, and therefore said order was not a legal judgment against the county.

[1] The proceeding by mandamus in this case to compel obedience to the order of Carter, judge, is proper, and the only effective remedy the law gives in case of this character. That mandamus is the proper remedy against a public officer who refuses to discharge a specific duty required of him by law has been too often decided to be now open to doubt. Railroad v. Jenkins, 68 N. C. 502; Russell v. Ayer, 120 N. C. 186, 27 S. E. 183, 37 L. R. A. 246; Bennett v. Commissioners, 125 N. C. 463, 34 S. E. 632.

[2] In their brief the learned counsel for the defendants say: "We take the position that the analysis of the stomach of a person who died under circumstances that might excite suspicion of foul play is not a necessary expense of the county, and the county would therefore be prohibited from contracting a debt for same under article 7, section 7, of the Constitution of North Carolina. If this position is correct, it certainly follows that a superior court judge would have no right to make an arbitrary order requiring the county commissioners to do an unlawful, or forbidden act, certainly when no notice was served on the commissioners, and they not made parties to the proceeding." The-section of the Constitution relied upon reads as follows: "No county, city, town or other municipal corporation shall contract any debt, pledge its faith, or loan its credit, nor shall any tax be levied or collected by any officers of the same except for the necessary expenses thereof, unless by a vote of the majority of the qualified voters therein." In Bear v. Commissioners, 124 N. C. 204, 32 S. E. 558, 70 Am. St. Rep. 586, construing this section, it is held that, to obtain a mandamus to pay a judgment against the county by levying a special tax, the plaintiff must show affirmatively that the consideration for the judgment was for a necessary county expense, or had been sanctioned by a vote of the people. The section of the Constitution indirectly, but explicitly, permits the exercise by municipal corporations of the power of making provision for necessary expenses free from the restraints in other cases. What are such necessary expenses has been the subject of many judicial decisions. Applying the principles laid down in all of them, we think his honor, Judge Carter, had authority to make the order and that it is a necessary expense of the county of Columbus.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[3] There is express legislative authority for the order. Section 3152 of Revisal reads as follows: "In all cases of homicide, any officer prosecuting for the state may, at any time, direct a post mortem examination of the deceased to be made by one or more physicians to be summoned for the purpose; and the physicians shall be paid a reasonable compensation for such examination, the amount to be determined by the court and taxed in the costs and if not collected out of the defendant the same shall be paid by the county." That the General Assembly in the exercise of the police power of the state is authorized to make such an enactment cannot be doubted. Counties are but state agencies, and subject to legislative authority, which can direct them to do as a duty all such matters as it can empower them to do. Under our system of state government, the counties, cities, and towns of the state are very important and essential factors in the administration of the criminal law, and the burden and expense of administering such laws are largely borne by them. In such matters they are necessarily under legislative control. Tate v. Commissioners, 122 N. C. 812, 30 S. E. 352; White v. Commissioners, 90 N. C. 437, 47 Am. Rep. 534; Jones v. Commissioners, 137 N. C. 579, 50 S. E. 291.

[4] It is further contended that the defendants were not parties to the action in which the order was made, had no day in court, and are consequently not bound by the order. This position cannot be maintained. The order was made in the administration of the criminal law by the proper officer of the state, and in pursuance of the statute. The Board of Commissioners are not parties to such a proceeding and ex necessitate rei cannot be. Nor are they entitled to any notice before such orders are made. In such cases the matter is left to the sound discretion of the trial judge; and, unless such discretion is grossly abused, this court will not interfere. The county must rely for the protection of its treasury upon the sound discretion and sense of duty of the judge of the superior court. They should and doubtless do personally examine into such matters with care, and see to it that improper and extravagant allowances are not made. The order in question was made by Judge Carter in a criminal proceeding, and in full accordance with the statute, and must be obeyed.

The order of Ferguson, Judge, granting a peremptory mandamus is affirmed.

LOCKLEAR v. PAUL et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. BOUNDARIES (§ 35*)—EVIDENCE—REPUTATION.

While evidence of both hearsay and common reputation is received in cases of disputed private boundary, the reputation must have its origin at a time comparatively remote and always ante litem motam, and must attach itself to some monument of boundary or natural object, or be fortified by evidence of occupation and acquiescence tending to give the land some definite location.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Boundaries, Cent. Dig. §§ 153-155, 157-159, 163, 165, 177-183; Dec. Dig. § 35.*]

2. EVIDENCE (§ 324*)—HEARSAY—REPUTATION—OWNERSHIP.

Where, in an action to recover for alleged wrongful cutting of timber, the chief issue was as to the title of the land where the cutting occurred, and in large measure depended on whether L. had occupied the tract claimed by him adversely and under known and visible lines and boundaries for a sufficient time to mature his title, evidence that the land in question was reputed in the neighborhood to belong to L. was hearsay and inadmissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1218-1229; Dec. Dig. § 324.*]

3. TRESPASS (§ 30*)—CUTTING TIMBER—PERSONS LIABLE—GRANTOR.

Where P. conveyed the timber on certain land in controversy, with rights of way, etc., required to remove the same, to a planing mill company, which deed contemplated and authorized the removal of the timber, if trespass was established against the planing mill company in removing the timber, P. was also liable therefor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trespass, Cent. Dig. § 69; Dec. Dig. § 30.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Robeson County; G. S. Ferguson, Judge.

Action by Katie Ann Locklear, as administratrix of John Locklear, deceased, against A. W. Savage, one Paul, and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Reversed.

The action was to recover damages for the wrongful cutting of timber on the part of defendants, and was made dependent, chiefly, on the issue as to title to the land where the cutting occurred. The cause was before the court at spring term, 1912, on appeal of plaintiffs from a judgment of nonsuit, and will be found reported in 159 N. C. 236, 74 S. E. 347. The judgment of nonsuit was reversed for reasons appearing in the opinion by Associate Justice Walker, and, this opinion having been certified down, the case was tried on the issues of title, trespass on part of defendants, statute of limitations, and damages. There was evidence on part of plaintiff tending to show title in John Locklear, plaintiff's intestate, by reason of adverse occupation and assertion of ownership and up to known and visible lines and boundaries covering locus in quo. Evidence contra on the part of defendants.

McLean, Varser & McLean, of Lumberton, for appellant Paul. McIntyre, Lawrence & Proctor, of Lumberton, for appellant Planing Mill. McNeill & McNeill and Britt & Britt, all of Lumberton, for appellee.

HOKE, J. (after stating the facts as above). On the trial of the issues the following evidence was admitted over objection by defendants to both questions and answers, and exceptions duly noted: "Yes, I know who was reputed to be the owner of the land between these lines I have described. Q. Whose was it? A. The country all around known who it was. Q. Whose land was it reputed to be? A. John Locklear's."

[1] It has been held in numerous cases with us that, under certain circumstances, evidence of general reputation is admissible on questions of private boundary. In one of the later decisions on the subject (Bland v. Beasley, 140 N. C. 630, 53 S. E. 444) the court said: "It is true that evidence of both hearsay and common reputation is received with us in cases of disputed private boundary; but this is an exception to the general rule, which requires that the rights of litigants must be determined on sworn testimony. Such testimony in England is not admitted in questions of private right, and the principle was only adopted here from necessity, and where, from lapse of time or changing conditions, it has become 'difficult, if not impossible,' that better evidence should be had." And in the same opinion, quoting with approval from some of the former decisions, it was said further: "This reputation, whether by parol or otherwise, should have its origin at a time comparatively remote and always ante litem motam. Second, it should attach itself to some monument of boundary or natural object, or be fortified by evidence of occupation and acquiescence tending to give the land some fixed and definite location."

[2] Assuming that the other conditions for the reception of such evidence have been met, it would doubtless be a correct application of the principle, on the question of identifying a tract of land, or of giving the same a general placing when it had been otherwise identified and sufficiently described, to hear evidence to the effect that a given tract of land was generally known or reputed to be "the old Locklear tract" or "the old Paul homestead" or the like; but the testimony received in this instance was not of that character. There was no question here of identity of tracts or the correct general location of the locus in quo. On the evidence the right of these parties was, in a large measure, made to depend on whether John Locklear had occupied the tract of land claimed by him adversely and under known and visible lines and boundaries for a sufficient length of time to mature his title, and, in our judgment, this evidence, in the form in which it was presented, was not relevant on the question of boundary, but was an opinion on the title, and had the effect of throwing into the jury box the force and effect of public opinion on that issue. Not coming, therefore, under this principle of evidence on boundary, which is an exception to the more general rule, it was incompetent as hearsay testimony, and was further objectionable as being an opinion bearing directly on the merits of the controversy as embraced in the entire issue. Deppe v. Railroad, 154 N. C. 523, 70 S. E. 622; Smith v. Smith, 117 N. C. 326, 23 S. E. 270; Lawson on Expert Opinion Evidence, p. 557.

We were referred by counsel to Toole v. Peterson, 81 N. C. 180, as being an authority against this position; but we do not so understand the decision. In that case, being an action to recover certain lots in the city of Wilmington, a grant to John Watson or Whatson, bearing date in 1735, was located and shown to include the town of Newton, which was the former name of Wilmington. In the course of the trial it became desirable to show the identity of the two towns, with the view of proving title to the lots out of the state, and proof was offered and rejected that for 60 or 70 years there was a general reputation that the city of Wilmington was situate within the bounds of the John Watson grant. On appeal, the evidence was held competent, and a new trial was granted. Here was a case of disputed identity, and the evidence was clearly relevant on the question of location, and was not, as in our case, an opinion on the title.

[3] The other and numerous questions presented on the appeal are not dealt with, as they are chiefly rulings of the court on questions of evidence, and may not arise on a further hearing of the case. It may be well, however, to refer to an exception that the defendant Sarah A. Paul is not responsible for the trespass complained of, inasmuch as she had made an outright conveyance of the timber to her codefendant, the Planing Mills, and this company alone had done the cutting. The deed conveyed the timber, with rights of way, etc., etc., required to remove the same. It clearly contemplated and authorized the acts complained of, and, if trespass is established against the company, the grantor in the deed is also responsible. Dreyer v. Ming, 23 Mo. 434.

For the error indicated, there must be a new trial of the cause, and it is so ordered. New trial.

PAGE v. SPRUNT et al

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 177*)—LIABILITY FOR INJURIES — NEGLIGENCE OF FELLOW SERVANT.

An employer is not liable for the injuries of an employé caused by the negligence of a fellow servant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 307, 352, 353; Dec. Dig. § 177.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, New Hanover County; Justice, Judge.

Action by Daniel Page against James Sprunt and others. From a judgment of nonsuit, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

This is an action to recover damages for personal injuries caused, as the plaintiff alleges, by the negligence of the defendant. At the conclusion of the evidence, judgment of nonsuit was entered upon motion of the defendant, and the plaintiff excepted and appealed.

Ricaud & Jones and E. K. Bryan, all of Wilmington, for appellant. J. O. Carr, of Wilmington, for appellees.

PER CURIAM. Upon an examination of the evidence, it is doubtful if there is any evidence of negligence; but, if there is, it is the negligence of a fellow servant, for which the defendant is not responsible.

The judgment of the court is affirmed.

STATE v. WATKINS.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 223*)—OFFENSES —INDICTMENTS—PROOF.

While an indictment for selling intoxicating liquors to persons to the grand jurors unknown is authorized, yet the state to procure a conviction must offer evidence tending to prove an actual sale to the unknown persons, and in the absence of such proof a conviction will not be supported.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 263-274; Dec. Dig. § 223.*]

2. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 236*)—PROSECUTIONS—EVIDENCE—SUFFICIENCY.

In a prosecution for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors evidence held insufficient to support a conviction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 300-322; Dec. Dig. § 236.*]

3. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§§ 182, 196*)—OFFENSES—STATUTES.

Laws 1913, c. 44, which created two new offenses with regard to intoxicating liquors, and also by section 5 changed rules of evidence, did not go into effect until April 1, 1913; consequently a conviction in February, 1913, cannot be supported thereby.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 141, 215; Dec. Dig. §§ 132, 196.*]

4. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 236*)—STATUTES —LOCAL LAWS.

Where a local law making the possession of more than one quart of whisky prima facie evidence that the possessor had it for the purpose of sale did not apply to the county in which accused was charged with the crime, the mere fact that a barrel of whisky was consigned to accused will not support a conviction for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 800-822; Dec. Dig. § 236.*]

Clark, C. J., dissenting.

Appeal from Superior Court, Columbus County; Ferguson, Judge.

Oscar Watkins was convicted of unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, and he appeals. Reversed and remanded.

Indictment for the sale of liquor to persons whose names are to the jurors unknown. At the conclusion of the evidence, the defendant requested the court to instruct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. Refused.

Schulken, Toon & Schulken, of Whiteville, for appellant. The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General, for the State.

BROWN, J. The following is all the evidence introduced on the trial of this case.

G. W. Rushing, witness for the state, testified as follows: "I saw one barrel in the railroad depot at Hallsboro, marked 'O. Watkins.' This barrel had whisky marked on it. The barrel looked like it would hold about 80 gallons. I do not know what was in the barrel."

H. O. Harvel, witness for the state, testified as follows: "I am agent for the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company at Hallsboro, N. C. On the 5th day of August, 1912, a barrel containing about 80 gallons, marked 'O. Watkins,' and also marked on the barrel 'Whisky,' was put off the train at Hallsboro, N. C. Some time after the arrival of this barrel, and while I was agent, some one came to the railroad office and receipted for this barrel. I do not know whether Oscar Watkins carried the barrel away or not. I do not know who got the barrel. I only know that some one receipted for it in the name of Oscar Watkins. I do not know where the defendant lives. I did not know Oscar Watkins at the time the barrel was receipted for."

C. L. Benton, witness for the state, testified as follows: "I saw a barrel of whisky, containing about 80 gallons, in the railroad warehouse at Chadbourn, N. C., marked 'O. Watkins.' When I saw the barrel of whisky in the warehouse it was in bad order and the whisky was leaking out. I saw some parties catching the whisky as it was leaking out of the barrel, drinking it, and others catching it in buckets and carrying it away. The defendant, Watkins, was not there when I saw it. I do not know what became of the barrel of whisky. Oscar Watkins lives at Pine Log, about five miles from Chadbourn and about eight miles from Hallsboro."

[1] It is to be observed that the defendant is indicted for selling whisky to some person to the jurors unknown. While this form of indictment is recognized, yet it is as much incumbent on the state to offer evidence tending to prove an actual sale to the unknown person as if his name had been inserted in the indictment. State v. Dowdy, 145 N. C. 432, 58 S. E. 1002; State v. Dunn, 158 N. C. 654, 74 S. E. 359; State v. McIntyre, 139 N. C. 599, 52 S. E. 63.

[2] There is no evidence that the defendant in this bill ever received the whisky, much less sold it. The evidence wholly fails to identify this Oscar Watkins with the person who received the whisky. The receipted book was not put in evidence, and there was no attempt to prove the defendant's handwriting, as well as no attempt to prove that he ever sold any of it.

[3] This case seems to have been tried as if the Act of 1913, c. 44, had been in effect. That act creates two new offenses in respect to intoxicating liquors as well as a new rule of evidence contained in section 5; but that act went into effect on April 1, 1913. This bill was returned in November, 1912, and the trial took place and judgment was pronounced in February, 1913. Therefore the act of 1913 can have no bearing upon this case and it must be determined under the law in force prior to that act.

[4] Nor does the act considered by us in State v. Barrett, 138 N. C. 630, 50 S. E. 506, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 626, apply. This statute declared that the possession of more than one quart of whisky should be prima facie evidence that the party in whose possession it was found had it for the purpose of sale.

The act applied only to Union county, and there was no such special act in force in Columbus county when this offense is alleged to have been committed. His honor erred in refusing the instruction.

New trial.

CLARK, C. J. (dissenting). There was ample evidence to go to the jury tending to show possession of the barrel of whisky by the defendant. The agent of the railroad testified that on August 5, 1912, a barrel of whisky containing about 30 gallons, marked "Whisky," and addressed to O. Watkins, was put off the train at Hallsboro; that soon after some one came to the railroad office, signed the receipt for this barrel, in the name of Oscar Watkins, and carried it off. Another witness testified that he saw a barrel of whisky containing about 30 gallons in the railroad warehouse at Chadbourn, N. C., marked "O. Watkins." It is also in evidence that the defendant, Oscar Watkins, lived about five miles from Chadbourn and about eight miles from Hallsboro. There is no evidence that any other Oscar Watkins lived in that section. Nor is there any evidence tending to show that the man who got the barrel of whisky at Hallsboro was not the consignee nor that his signature on the books of the company receipting for the same was a forgery. Unless such signature was a forgery, and unless the party who committed the forgery and received the whisky was guilty also of larceny, then there was evidence to go to the jury that the defendant was in possession of 30 gallons of whisky and possibly of 60 gallons, for there was one barrel consigned to him at Hallsboro and another at Chadbourn. This evidence was more than a scintilla.

There is no presumption of law that any one committed two felonies, larceny and forgery. The entry was made in due course of business. Receipting for the whisky on the railroad books in the name of Oscar Watkins and taking it away, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, was certainly sufficient to go to the jury on the question of possession. This was all the evidence that the state can reasonably be called on to trace the whisky to his possession. It was easy for the defendant to negative this fact if he did not receive the whisky, and he would have done so, if he could. There is no evidence to show that there was another O. Watkins in that section. The evidence was sufficient to satisfy the jury, and did satisfy them, that the defendant was the party who got the whisky. It was addressed to him and receipted for in his name.

His honor correctly charged the jury: "The possession of one barrel of whisky shipped to the defendant at one depot, if you find that it was shipped to him and receipted for by him, and the shipping of another barrel to him at another date, if you so find, are circumstances tending to show that the defendant sold whisky as charged; but that is for you to say." In State v. Barrett, 138 N. C. 630, 50 S. E. 506, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 626, which was an indictment under the Union county statute which made the possession of more than one quart of whisky prima facie evidence of an intent to sell, Walker, J., says in his concurring opinion that independent of the statute (the defendant having in possession two five-gallon kegs, a half-gallon jug, and one pint bottle) "having with him so large a quantity of liquor in packages of different size and covered over with a lap robe, was sufficient of itself to constitute prima facie evidence of the defendant's guilty possession. * * * The mere fact that reference was made to the statute did not prejudice the defendant, when his possession, under the circumstances clearly shown by the evidence and not disputed, was sufficient to carry the case to the jury."

In this case there was ample evidence to satisfy a jury that the defendant was in the possession of 30 gallons receipted for and carried away in his name, and, if the possession in the Barrett Case of 10% gallons was sufficient to carry the case to the jury, certainly there was more than sufficient in this case.

In State v. Barrett, Brown, J., in his dissenting opinion, says: "Irrespective of the provisions of the act, I am of opinion that there was sufficient testimony to be submitted to the jury that the defendant did have in his possession liquor with the intent to sell it." Under our decisions proof of possession supports the charge of selling as effectively as it does the charge of having possession with the intent to sell. State v. Dunn, 158 N. C. 654, 74 S. E. 359.

There was evidence to satisfy the jury that this defendant was receiving whisky in large quantities, a barrel at a time, and, in the absence of any evidence tending to show the character of the possession of so much whisky, the jury was warranted in finding, as they did, that the defendant was engaged in selling whisky to persons unknown, as charged in the bill of indictment. Hoke, J., State v. Dowdy, 145 N. C. 432, 58 S. E. 1002; State v. McIntyre, 139 N. C. 599, 52 S. E. 63. For what other purpose, if unexplained, did he have it?

The court carefully and correctly charged the jury that they "must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant sold liquor to persons unknown; that the possession of the whisky, if the jury should find that it was shipped to and receipted for by him, are circumstances tending to show that the defendant sold whisky, but that it was for the jury to say what was the weight to be given to those circumstances." The jury found the defendant guilty. There being no evidence that there was any other O. Watkins in that neighborhood, and not the slightest evidence tending to show that any one committed forgery or larceny to get possession of the whisky, nor that the railroad company would have delivered the barrel without the identification of the consignee, could the jury find otherwise than that the defendant obtained possession of the whisky? Under the authority of the concurring opinion of Walker, J., and the dissenting opinion of Brown, J., in State v. Barrett, supra, the possession of one barrel was the possession of three times as much as was necessary to constitute sufficient possession to submit the question of having the liquor to sell. If the defendant received both barrels, which he did not deny by any evidence, then the case was six times as strong against the defendant as in Barrett's Case.

The public policy of a state is declared by the Legislature, which is the lawmaking body. The policy of this state in regard to suppressing the traffic in intoxicating liquor was clearly declared by the Legislature of 1907 and ratified on a Referendum in 1908 by an overwhelming majority at the ballot box. The province of the courts is to construe the law in accordance with the intent with which it was enacted. Whenever the courts in this state have found a defect that would interfere with the enforcement of this law, the Legislature has promptly corrected it. And the public intent to do this has been declared in the most explicit way, in the "Search and Seizure" Law of 1913, c. 44, whose title is "To secure the enforcement of the laws against the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquor."

It is doubtful if a jury could be impaneled in this state who would not find upon this uncontradicted evidence that the defendant received this whisky and that the presumption which, under the opinions in State v. Barrett, above cited, was raised from the possession of this quantity of liquor, was not rebutted. Indeed, there was no evidence whatever tending to rebut either the possession of the whisky by the defendant or that he sold it. Certainly this "jury of the vicinage" had "no reasonable doubt," and the defendant sought to get the court to hold him not guilty as a matter of law and not of fact.

His honor did not charge, as he might have done, under the authority of the opinions in State v. Barrett, above cited, that the possession of so large a quantity of whisky raised a presumption that he had the whisky for sale, nor that the whisky being consigned to the name of the defendant and receipted for in his name raised a presumption that he received it. The court merely charged that the jury should consider these as evidence and, unless they were satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant sold whisky, to find him not guilty. The court might well have charged that the delivery of the barrel to the person who receipted for it in the name of the defendant and consignee raised a presumption that such consignee received the whisky (16 Cyc. 1072); but he did not do so and left the evidence on both points to the jury, not as presumptions, but merely as circumstances to be weighed by them.

FELLOWS et al. v. DURFEY et al.
(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

WILLS (§ 597*)—CONSTRUCTION—ESTATE DEVISED.

Testator by a holographic will devised to his wife all his estate, desiring her to own the same just as "I now hold and own or shall hold and own at the date of my death," her interest to be as absolute as testator's and not to be taken as a trust to be enforced by any other court than her own conscience, etc. The next paragraph enjoined on her to reserve to herself the homestead and sufficient means for the support of herself and family, and provided that if she should marry (which event did not occur) the property should be divided between her and his children according to the statute of distribution. The next paragraph appointed her sole executrix, and added the desire that testator's interest in a mercantile firm should remain unchanged unless a change was necessary. Held, that the will vested in the widow the fee in testator's property without trust or other limitation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 1319-1326; Dec. Dig. § 597.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wake County; Carter, Judge.

Action between E. H. Fellows and others and C. K. Durfey and others, to construe the will of Rufus S. Tucker, deceased. Judgment for the latter, and the former appeal. Reversed.

The will is as follows:

"Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 6, 1880.

"I, Rufus S. Tucker, merchant, residing in the city of Raleigh and state of North Carolina, do make and publish this as my last will and testament, at my own home and in my own handwriting.

"I give, devise, and bequeath to my dear wife, Florence Perkins Tucker, all my estate, real or personal, wherever located or however held, or all that I may acquire or hold at the time of my death, of whatever nature or description, then belonging to me. I desire that my wife shall take, hold, and own, just as now I hold and own or shall hold and own at the day of my death; I declare her interest in my estate, real and personal, shall be as absolute as my own, and not be considered or taken as a trust, technically so called, to be enforced by the judgment or decree of any court other than her own conscience, judgment, and affection shall prompt her to so regard it. In thus bestowing on my dear wife, Florence, all that I am worth, I wish my children to understand that in so doing I act upon the best convictions of my judgment and from knowledge of their mother's affection, love, and interest in the welfare, comfort, and happiness of each and all of our children, and in the belief that thereby I best protect and control them, and that she will from time to time, as her judgment, sense of justice, and duty shall in her own will direct, and as the necessities and wants of our children shall require, make to them such advancements, in cash or property, as she shall think best and proper.

"I enjoin it upon her at all times to reserve to herself, as the occupant of the homestead (which is her home) and the proper head of the family, sufficient means for the proper living of herself and family. That in making advancements to our children she shall charge such child with his or her advancement, if in property, at its market or cash value at the time of the advancement; and if any child shall be advanced by me during my life, such child or children shall be charged, of which I will file for my wife's instruction with this will a full statement, and for which such child or children must account in any division that may be made by my wife, or otherwise, of my property. She will understand that the proper nurture and education of her children is not to be regarded as advancements and have never been so regarded or charged by me.

"Should my wife marry again, then it is my will that my wife and children that select three disinterested friends, my brother William (if living) being one, who shall make an equal and just division of my property between her and all of our children, or their legal representatives, as if made under the statute of distributions in this state; and in the event of her death as my widow, she may direct by writing the selection of three intelligent and disinterested friends (my brother William being one, if living), who shall make such equal and just division of all my property or estate remaining in her hands, bringing into view and account all previous advancements.

"I constitute and appoint my wife, Florence, the executrix of my last will and testament, without security or bond, and desire that so long as she can have the aid and direction of my brother William's advice, that she will be directed by him in the care and management of the property and the investment of any funds not needed or required by her in the proper nurture and maintenance and education of her family. Most of my personal and real estate is now in the name of W. H. & R. S. Tucker, and my desire is that it should remain in the same name or firm, unless there should be found some good reason why it should be changed; in that event my wife can make the change.

"In testimony of all which I have hereunto placed my name and seal.

"Rufus S. Tucker. [Seal.]

"Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 6, 1880.

"Executed before C. McKimmon, W. T. McGee.

"Note.—Raleigh, N. C., February 9, 1894. I have decided to keep no record of advances made to my married children, as I have advanced to them as their necessities required. My wife knows about the amounts advanced.

"Rufus S. Tucker.

"No advances have been made to my unmarried children. R. S. T."

Rufus S. Tucker died August 4, 1894, seised of a large estate, real and personal, and his widow, Florence P. Tucker, who was named therein as devisee and executrix, qualified and entered into possession, claiming the property in fee under said will. She died December 11, 1909, leaving a will whereby she disposed of the property, which she had taken possession of under the terms of her husband's will, under the belief that she possessed the same in fee simple, and at the same time disposed, without distinguishing it, of her property which she had received from other sources. The court below being of opinion that the property devised to her under the will of her husband was not held by her in fee, but in trust, so adjudged, and the defendants appealed. This action was begun September 8, 1911. The parties, plaintiffs and defendants, other than C. K. Durfey, the surviving executor named in the will of Florence P. Tucker, are her five daughters and their living husbands and the children of a deceased son.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Tillett & Guthrie, of Charlotte, and Winston & Biggs, of Raleigh, for appellants. J. H. Pou, S. B. Shepherd, and W. H. Pace, all of Raleigh, for appellees.

CLARK, C. J. The decision of this case affects the present control and custody of a large amount of property, and to a lesser extent its ultimate destination; for the will of Mrs. Tucker substantially divides it equally among her children and the children of a deceased son, share and share alike, but, with the exception of a cash devise to each and some personal property, gives her children the annual interest only, and devises the principal of each share in trust to be divided among the grandchildren at the death of their mothers. The will of Florence P. Tucker is not presented for construction, but the fact that the bulk of the principal of the estate is thus tied up during the lifetime of her children, who are to receive merely the interest, is the ground of the action on the part of the plaintiffs, who contend that the property was not devised to her by her husband in fee, and that the estate should be divided at this time.

The elementary rule for the construction of wills is that every will shall be construed to effectuate the intent of the testator, and that this intention must be gathered from the terms of the will itself. The testator was a man of large estate and of high intelligence, a graduate of the State University, and, as the will itself states, it is written entirely in his own handwriting and is dated 14 years prior to his death.

The language of the will is explicit, and the testator's intention is very clearly expressed, in these words: "I give, devise, and bequeath to my dear wife, Florence Perkins Tucker, all of my estate, real or personal, wherever located or however held, or all that I may acquire or hold at the time of my death, of whatever nature or description, then belonging to me. I desire that my wife shall take, hold, and own, just as I now hold and own or shall hold and own at the date of my death. I declare her interest in my estate, real and personal, shall be as absolute as my own, and not be considered or taken as a trust, technically so called, to be enforced by the judgment or decree of any court other than her own conscience, judgment, and affection shall prompt her to so regard it." These words are so clear and peremptory that we cannot conceive that the testator meant other than to devise his entire property to his wife to "hold and own just as he held and owned or should hold and own it at the day of his death," and that "her interest in his estate, real and personal, should be as absolute as his own, and not to be considered or taken as a trust, technically so called, to be enforced by the judgment or decree of any court other than her own conscience, judgment, and affection should prompt her to so regard it." There is nothing that follows in this will which can shake or throw a doubt upon this so clear expression of the testator's intention, which was declared to be to vest the estate "as absolutely in his wife as the testator held it at his death," and by anticipation forbids any construction of the will which should hold its terms as giving her an interest as trustee and not absolutely.

The next paragraph in the will is an explanation to his children of the reason why he has thus devised the estate absolutely to his wife. He then enjoins upon her to reserve to herself the homestead and sufficient means for the proper support of herself and family. Counsel for the plaintiffs place emphasis upon the word "enjoin." But with the context it is merely the expression of solicitude, and a desire that his wife should not, out of affection for her children, strip herself of a sufficient support and maintenance.

The next paragraph of the will is advice to his wife as to the method of making advancements, which he naturally and evidently expected she would make to the children, and that the children shall be charged for such advancements at the market value at the time, and, further, he expresses the desire that the support and education of the children shall not be regarded as an advancement.

The next paragraph provides that in event his wife should marry (which event did not occur) the property should be divided between her and his children according to the statute of distribution, and by the method he suggested. In short, the testator gave his wife a fee in his estate, defeasible on the contingency of her marriage.

The next paragraph of his will appointed his wife sole executrix without security or bond, and expresses a desire that she will avail herself of the advice of his brother, William (who predeceased him), in the management of the property and the investment of surplus funds, adding a desire that his interest in the mercantile firm of which he and his brother were members should remain unchanged, unless his wife should find good reason for a change, which was left entirely to her judgment. This is the whole will.

The very able and learned counsel on both sides who argued this cause have cited us to a very large number of cases. But we do not think that they can add to the understanding of this will, which is the clear expression of his intentions as to the disposal of his property, by an educated, intelligent gentleman, who knew how to make himself understood in other matters, and whose words in this important matter admit of no doubt or ambiguity. Citations of the decisions of many courts as to other wills, whose language is more or less similar to that here used, cannot aid us, for in few of them, if any, has the intention to confer a fee been contested when so clearly expressed as in this case.

In Griffin v. Commander, 79 S. E. 499, at this term, the devise to the widow was of all the testator's estate, "with power to give and devise the same after her death to our beloved children and grandchildren, that inasmuch as they are and should be our lawful heirs and that they are equally our own and well beloved by each of us, as their joint parents, she has the same right of distribution of our estate as I have, knowing no partiality or discrimination in the same." We held that the widow held the property in fee, and that the rule applicable was clearly stated in Borden v. Downey, 35 N. J. Law, 77: "Where an estate for life is expressly given, and a power of disposition is annexed to it, in such case the fee does not pass under such devise, but the naked power to dispose of the fee. * * * It is otherwise in case there is a gift generally of the estate, with a power of disposition annexed. In this latter case the property itself is transferred."

In Jackson v. Robins, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 538, it is held to be settled law that, "where an estate is given to a person generally, or indefinitely, with a power of disposition, it carries a fee; and the only exception to the rule is where the testator gives to the first taker an estate for life only, by certain and express words, and annexes to it a power of disposal. In that particular and special case the devisees * * * will not take an estate in fee." This case was cited and approved in Bass v. Bass, 78 N. C. 374. To the same effect, Patrick v. Morehead, 85 N. C. 62, 39 Am. Rep. 684; McKrow v. Painter, 89 N. C. 437; Parks v. Robinson, 138 N. C. 269, 50 S. E. 649; and there are other cases in our court to the same effect.

Counsel for the plaintiffs rely upon two cases in our own courts: Young v. Young, 68 N. C. 309, which in no wise resembles this, for there the property was given to the testator's wife "to be managed by her (and that she may be able the better to control and manage our children) to be disposed of by her to them in that manner she may think best for their good and their own happiness." In that case there was simply a trust in the wife, and nothing more. The plaintiffs also rely upon Russ v. Jones, 72 N. C. 52. In that case the devise was to the wife, who was empowered "to give to my daughter E. * * * any of said property at any time, or from time to time, as said wife may think proper." The court held that this was a trust, and the wife had only a life estate, quoting as authority the above case of Young v. Young, which clearly does not sustain it. The case was evidently not well considered, and no reasoning is given and no authority cited other than Young v. Young, which, as we have said, is not in point. It is, however, not necessary to do more than to point out that the language there construed is no precedent for the construction of the language used in this case.

In Burnes v. Burnes, 70 O. C. A. 370, 137 Fed. 794, the court said: "The tendency of the modern decisions, both in England and in this country, is to restrict the practice which deduces a trust from the expression by a testator of a wish, desire, or recommendation regarding the disposition of property absolutely bequeathed (citing 2 Story, Eq. Ju. par. 1069; Lambe v. Eames, L. R. 10 Eq. Cas. 287; In re Hutchinson and Tenant, L. R. 8 Ch. Div. 540; Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. [2d Ed.] par. 1015; Foose v. Whitmore, 82 N. Y. 405, 406, 37 Am. Rep. 572)."

In Holt v. Holt, 114 N. C. 241, 18 S. E. 967, it is said: "In a disposition by will no words are necessary to enlarge an estate devised or bequeathed from one for life into one absolute or in fee. Indeed, it is generally necessary that restraining expressions should be used to confine the gift to the life of the legatee or devisee." Indeed the act of 1794, now Revisal 3138, requires that a devise shall be held to be in fee unless the contrary appears by "clear and express words or it shall be plainly intended." Jones v. Richmond, 161 N. C. 555, 77 S. E. 950.

Whatever may be said as to the consistency of testators who confer unrestricted power over property upon their grandchildren or more remote descendants, but who do not see fit to place the same power and confidence in their own children, who are restricted to the receipt of interest merely upon life estates (Hodges v. Lipscomb, 128 N. C. 57, 38 S. E. 281), testators as yet have such power, for the statute of wills which conferred the power to dispose of property by will (In re Garland's Will, 160 N. C. 555, 76 S. E. 486), has not been restricted beyond limiting the power to devise to a life or lives in being or 21 years thereafter, and by the recent restriction as to contingent remainders (whether created by will or deed), under Laws 1903, c. 99, now Revisal 1590 (Anderson v. Wilkins, 142 N. C. 159, 55 S. E. 272, 9 L. R. A. [N. S.] 1145). Besides, the will before us for consideration is not the will of Mrs. Tucker but that of Rufus S. Tucker, which contains no such limitations.

It would be the merest affectation of learning to quote the almost infinite number of cases in which language differing more or less from that used in this will has been construed by the courts in an effort to arrive at the testator's meaning, and to point out at great length wherein the words in each approximate or differ from the language used in the will before us.

Why darken counsel by multitude of words? The sole duty before us is to declare the meaning of the words of the testator in this case. To our apprehension, the testator gave his entire property, as absolutely to his wife as he held it himself, and without annexing any trust; and he said this clearly and intelligibly and without ambiguity. He made this devise defeasible in the event of his wife's remarriage, an event which did not occur. His will expresses solicitude that his wife should retain sufficient property for her own use, and he evidently expected that she would pass it on to her children. But he did not confer on her any power of appointment, because he had given her the property absolutely; and, if he had annexed the power of appointment, after the devise to her generally, indeed explicitly, in fee, it would not have restricted her interest to a life estate, as the authorities cited from our own court above amply demonstrate.

The judgment of the court below is reversed.

SIMMONS et al. v. McCULLIN.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. HOMESTEAD (§ 172*)—WAIVER—CONSENT TO LEVY AND SALE.

Where a man convicted of murder in the second degree, in order to get a lighter sentence, agreed that a judgment should be entered in an action by the administrator and the widow of the murdered man for the support of the widow, and that it should be satisfied out of the property attached by the sheriff in that action, the judgment defendant consented to waive his homestead in the land attached, and could not thereafter ask that it be set aside to him, as he might have done had the judgment been obtained without his consent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Cent. Dig. § 339; Dec. Dig. § 172.*]

2. HOMESTEAD (§ 169*)—WAIVER—CONSENT TO SALE—JOINDER OF WIFE.

It appearing that the homestead exemption of the debtor had not been set apart, the consent of the wife to the judgment waiving the homestead was not necessary, since Const. art. 10, § 8, requiring her consent to a deed conveying the homestead, applies only when the homestead has been set apart, or there is a judgment docketed and in force which is a lien upon the land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Cent. Dig. § 335; Dec. Dig. § 169.*]

3. HOMESTEAD (§ 172*)—WAIVER—FORM—CONSENT JUDGMENT.

A debtor can waive his homestead exemption by consenting to the entry of a judgment and its satisfaction out of the homestead, since a judgment entered by consent of the parties is at least as conclusive upon them as one rendered by the court after trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homestead, Cent. Dig. § 339; Dec. Dig. § 172.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Sampson County; Lyon, Judge.

Action by Sallie Simmons and another against W. R. McCullin. From a judgment requiring the sheriff to allot and set apart the homestead of the defendant before proceeding to sell certain land to satisfy a judgment, the plaintiffs appeal. Judgment modified.

This is an injunction against a sale of defendant's land. W. R. McCullin and James McCullin were indicted for the murder of Jonah Simmons, and were convicted of murder in the second degree. Plaintiff and the widow brought civil suits to recover damages for the killing. The court, after the verdict was returned in the criminal case, suggested that, if a liberal provision was made for the widow, by allowing a judgment in the civil case for $3,000, he would consider it in passing sentence, and award the minimum punishment. The parties all agreed to this, and consented that judgment should be entered in favor of the widow for $3,000 and costs. This was accordingly done, and judgment was entered by consent for that sum and costs against W. R. McCullin, and for $1 and costs against James McCullin; it being provided therein that "she recover of the defendants the sum of $3,000 and costs of the action, and the sheriff shall satisfy the same out of the property attached by him in the case of Charlie Bradshaw, administrator of Jonah Simmons, against the said defendants, and that the said Charlie Bradshaw, administrator of Jonah Simmons, recover of defendants the sum of $1 and the costs of action, which the sheriff shall collect out of said property." The property was advertised by the sheriff in obedience to the judgment of the court, and pending the said advertisement defendants applied for and obtained an order restraining the sale of the property, and an order to show cause why a perpetual injunction should not issue, upon the ground that the sheriff proposed to sell without allotting the homestead. Judge Lyon found as facts, on the hearing of the order to show cause before him, that James McCullin has a wife and child, but owns no real property, and that W. R. McCullin owns real property in Sampson county, and has a wife. Upon his findings, the pleadings, and admissions, he adjudged that defendants are not entitled to any exemption in the personal property, and that W. R. McCullin is entitled to a homestead in the land owned by him, which is all he had, and he further adjudged that the sheriff allot and set apart the homestead of W. R. McCullin before proceeding to sell the land, and that he sell only the surplus of the land, and what is called the "reversionary interest" and the personal property, and apply the proceeds to the payment of the judgment and costs. Plaintiff appealed.

Faison & Wright and Geo. E. Butler, all of Clinton, for appellants. H. A. Grady, of Clinton, for appellee.

WALKER, J. (after stating the facts as above.) [1] It is evident that the judgment entered by the consent of the parties was the result of the compromise between them, and intended to relieve the two convicted defendants of the heavy pains and penalties of the law which they had violated. In accordance with the agreement, the verdict was changed to one of manslaughter, and the lightest sentence imposed, instead of confining the defendants in the penitentiary at hard labor for a long term. No question of duress is raised in the case. It presents the naked question, in the plaintiff's appeal, whether the defendant W. R. McCullin is entitled to a homestead as against this judgment. We observe that the argument of the defendant's counsel is based almost entirely upon the assumption that the judgment was taken in invitum; whereas, it appears on its face to have been entered by consent of the parties. It is not like the judgment of a court ascertaining their rights, with or without a verdict, and decreeing against them of its own will. In such a case, where it is adjudged that money be paid, the sheriff should have the homestead laid off to the defendant before selling the surplus, if any, of the land. The part so allotted and set apart is exempt from sale under the process for the period prescribed by law, and no part of it can be sold under execution until this quality of exemption has ceased to exist. It is not necessary to discuss the right to sell what is called the "reversionary interest," in the view we have taken of the case. Instead of being a judgment in invitum, this has all the attributes of a consent judgment, and it expressly provides, as we construe it, that all of the property, real and personal, upon which a former levy, under an attachment, had been made shall be sold and the proceeds applied to the "satisfaction" of the judgment and costs. This must be the meaning and sense of it, not only in view of the facts and circumstances surrounding the parties at the time it was entered, but by the very terms of the judgment itself. By consent and with the sanction of the court, it is adjudged that the whole of the property be appropriated to the payment of the amount recovered and costs, without regard to any right of exemption.

[2] The only remaining questions are, Was the wife's joinder necessary to thus condemn the property to the satisfaction of the judgment? and, second, could the husband, in that form, part with his right of exemption? We think that both questions must be answered against the defendant W. R. McCullin. It has been held for a long time and in many cases, that the wife's joinder is not required, unless there is a judgment docketed and in force, which is a lien upon the land, or unless the homestead has been actually set apart. Const. art. 10, § 8; Mayho v. Cotton, 69 N. C. 289; Hughes v. Hodges, 102 N. C. 249, 9 S. E. 437; Scott v. Lane, 109 N. C. 155, 13 S. E. 772; Joyner v. Sugg, 132 N. C. 590, 44 S. E. 122; Rodman v. Robinson, 134 N. C. 503, 47 S. E. 19, 65 L. R. A. 682, 101 Am. St. Rep. 877; Shackleford v. Morrill, 142 N. C. 221, 55 S. E. 82. In Hughes v. Hodges, the court (by Avery, J.) said: "The defendant conveyed his land by mortgage deed to secure money (loaned to him on the land, as we infer). Until proof to the contrary is offered, the presumption is in favor of this power to convey, and the defendant offers no evidence of the existence of a judgment against himself. For the purpose of this discussion there can be no difference between a mortgage and an absolute deed. His first wife, who was then living, did not join, and did not, therefore, convey her right to dower, had she survived her husband. But she died in 1881 and it is not necessary to discuss the rights of defendant's second wife. It is sufficient to say that neither she nor any other person can be allowed a homestead in the land. No homestead having been allotted before the deed was executed in 1878, or since, the deed of the defendant to the plaintiff's testator was valid, and passed the land to the grantee for the purposes mentioned therein, subject only to a contingent right (of dower) no longer hanging over it. We therefore hold that the judge erred in ordering the sale of the reversionary interest, and should have adjudged that the entire interest, instead of the reversionary interest only, be sold, unless the debt should be paid by the time mentioned."

[3] In regard to the second question, we do not see that a judgment is none the less effective as a bar, because its merits were determined, in whole or in part, by the agreement of the parties. It seems to us that it is immaterial whether it was obtained by consent or by a decision of the court upon the points in controversy, so far as its conclusiveness and binding force is concerned, which do not depend upon its form or upon the fact that the court investigated or decided the legal principles involved, and there is no substantial reason why it should not be just as effective to finally determine and settle the rights of the parties as if it had been rendered upon demurrer or verdict, nor why it should not be as complete a bar between the parties to it as any judgment in invitum. It has been conceded by the highest authority to have just that effect, and the courts have held that a judgment entered upon a stipulation of the parties after issue joined has the same binding force and operation as an estoppel has if the action had been tried on the merits, and the judgment was a perfect bar. The above principle is fully stated in the text of 2 Black on Judgments, § 705, and well supported by the cases in the notes. "A decree in equity, by consent of parties and upon a compromise between them, is a bar to any subsequent suit upon a claim therein set forth as among the matters compromised and settled, although not in fact litigated in the suit in which the decree was rendered." Nashville R. Co. v. U. S., 113 U. S. 261, 5 Sup. Ct. 460, 28 L. Ed. 971; Bigley v. Watson, 98 Tenn. 357, 39 S. W. 525, 38 L. R. A. 679; Adler v. Van Kirk L. Co., 114 Ala. 561, 21 South. 490, 62 Am. St. Rep. 133. "There can be no doubt that a judgment entered up by the court, upon the agreement of parties, is, to say the least, as conclusive upon them as if judgment were rendered in the ordinary course of proceeding." Pelton v. Mott, 11 Vt. 143, 34 Am. Dec. (Extra Anno.) 678. The same doctrine, we think, has been expressly approved by this court. In Stump v. Long, 84 N. C. 616, it was held that an agreed judgment or order is binding and conclusive, and cannot be set aside or modified, without the consent of both parties, except upon the ground of mutual mistake or fraud. See Edney v. Edney, 81 N. C. 1; McEachern v. Kerchner, 90 N. C. 179, and 93 N. C. 455; Vaughan v. Gooch, 92 N. C. 527. It is said in Kerchner v. McEachern, 90 N. C. 179, that, while the terms are settled by the parties, the judgment has the same force and effect as if it had been entered by the court in regular course, and in that sense, it becomes the judgment of the court by virtue of its sanction. Lamb v. Gatlin, 22 N. C. 37, was decided on special grounds, and is not like this case, and the same may be said of Bank v. Commissioners, 119 N. C. 214, 25 S. E. 966. The matters there involved, it was held, were not the subject of agreement; but here the defendant is sui juris, and can convey, release, or otherwise dispose of his property by deed duly executed, or contract, or judgment regularly entered, and may sometimes even lose his constitutional rights by not asserting them at the proper time and in the proper way. A regular judgment against him, disposing of his homestead, would not be void or even irregular, but at most only erroneous, and to be corrected, if wrong, by appeal. McLeod v. Graham, 132 N. C. 473, 43 S. E. 935; Henderson v. Moore, 125 N. C. 383, 34 S. E. 446. The case of Beavan v. Speed, 74 N. C. 544, does not apply, as there was no direction to sell the land, but simply a judgment for the amount of the note. As the joinder of the wife is not required, we do not see why the husband cannot part with his right of exemption by judgment that the land should be sold to pay the sum recovered as well as he can by mortgage or deed for the same purpose. Hughes v. Hodges, supra. Defendant alleges, in his application for the injunction against the sale, that the land is not more than sufficient in value to pay the claim. How, then, can the latter be "satisfied" without selling the land as an entirety and without regard to the homestead?

In the view we have taken of the case, it is not necessary to discuss the correctness of the decision in Dellinger v. Tweed, 66 N. C. 206, which we were asked to re-examine. The court's ruling as to the personal property is covered by what we have said in regard to the homestead exemption.

There was error in the judgment, and it will be modified by dissolving the injunction and requiring the land to be sold for the payment of the amount due and costs, without allotting any homestead or personal property exemption. Appellant will recover the costs of this court.

Error.

Defendants' Appeal.

The decision in the plaintiff's appeal requires us to declare that there was no error in this appeal. There are other reasons that might be assigned for this conclusion; but it is unnecessary to state them.

No error.

RAEFORD LUMBER CO. v. ROCKFISH TRADING CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. MECHANICS' LIENS (§ 132*) — NOTICE OF LIEN—TIME OF FILING.

Revisal 1905, § 2028, as amended by Pub. Laws 1909, c. 32, providing that notice of liens shall be filed within 12 months after the final furnishing of materials, provided that, as to the rights of a purchaser for value without notice, the notice of lien must be filed within 6 months, contemplates that the materialman to protect himself against a purchaser for value without notice must file his notice of lien within 6 months, but that he may file it within 12 months to protect himself against purchasers with notice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. §§ 190, 192-207; Dec. Dig. § 132.*]

2. STATUTES (§ 185*) — PRESUMPTIONS — KNOWLEDGE OF EXISTING LAW.

The Legislature is presumed to know the existing law, including the judicial construction given to existing statutes, and to legislate with reference thereto.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 264; Dec. Dig. § 185.*]

3. VENDOR AND PURCHASER (§ 228*)—BONA FIDE PURCHASER — NOTICE — PUTTING ON INQUIRY.

A purchaser having notice of an opposing claim is thereby placed upon inquiry, and charged with notice of every fact which a proper inquiry would have discovered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 495-501; Dec. Dig. § 228.*]

4. MECHANICS' LIENS (§ 210*) — WAIVER OF LIEN—EXTENDING TIME OF PAYMENT.

Extending the time of payment to the owner does not waive a mechanic's lien, unless the time is extended by agreement beyond that allowed for enforcing liens.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 384; Dec. Dig. § 210.*]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1066*)—HARMLESS ERROR—INSTRUCTIONS.

Any error, in mechanics' liens proceedings in which defendant claimed as a purchaser without notice of the lien, in charging on the burden of proof as to notice of the lien was harmless, where notice was shown by the evidence without dispute.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 4220; Dec. Dig. § 1066.*]

6. MECHANICS' LIENS (§ 279*)—BONA FIDE PURCHASERS—BURDEN OF PROOF.

One claiming to have purchased land charged with a mechanic's lien without notice thereof has the burden of proof that he is within the proviso of Revisal 1905, § 2028, as amended by Pub. Laws 1909, c. 32, requiring notice of lien to be filed within 12 months after furnishing the materials, provided that as to the rights of a purchaser without notice the notice of lien must be filed within 6 months.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. §§ 555, 556; Dec. Dig. § 279.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Hoke County; Lyon, Judge.

Action by the Raeford Lumber Company against the Rockfish Trading Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

This is an action to enforce a material lien against real property. During the spring and summer of 1911 W. N. Campbell bought of the plaintiff material with which to build his house at Rockfish, N. C. The last item of material, as indicated in the notice of lien, was furnished July 13, 1911. The defendant Campbell gave plaintiff his promissory note for 90 days, which was not paid, and then a renewal note for the same amount for another 90 days, which was not paid, and which was due about the 1st day of March, 1912. The notice of lien was duly filed on the 13th day of March, 1912, more than 6 and less than 12 months after the last of the material was furnished, and after the registration of the deed from W. N. Campbell to the Rockfish Trading Company. The defendants filed answers, denying any liability, and the defendant Rockfish Trading Company further pleaded that it was a purchaser of said property for value and without notice of the alleged claim of plaintiff, and that more than 6 months had elapsed since plaintiff furnished said material and its notice of lien.

At the trial A. A. Williford, president of plaintiff corporation, testified that the last of the material was furnished July 10, 1912, and July 19th thereafter he took defendant's note for said amount, and discounted it at the Bank of Raeford. When this note matured, it was renewed for another 90 days, and again discounted. He further testified that probably about the 1st of January he told J. W. McLaughlin, an officer of the Rockfish Trading Company, that Campbell had not paid them for the material used for building his house at Rockfish. J. W. McLaughlin testified in behalf of the Trading Company that it bought the house in which Campbell lived, and paid value and probably more for it, and that some considerable time before the purchase Williford had said something about plaintiff's claim against Campbell, and that there was no incumbrance on the record against the property. The deed from Campbell to the Rockfish Trading Company, reciting a consideration of $2,000, was introduced. There was no dispute as to the amount due the plaintiff. The jury returned the following verdict: "(1) Is the defendant W. N. Campbell indebted to plaintiff on account for material furnished? If so, in what amount? Answer: Yes; $290, with interest. (2) Did defendant Rockfish Trading Company purchase the land for value and without notice of lien for material furnished by plaintiff? Answer: No." There was a motion for judgment of nonsuit by the Trading Company, which was overruled, and it excepted. His honor charged the jury that the burden of proof was on the defendant Trading Company on the second issue, and it excepted. Judgment on the verdict for the plaintiff, and the Trading Company excepted and appealed.

J. W. Currie, of Raeford, and J. G. McCormick, of Wilmington, for appellant. Thomas & Whitley, of Raeford, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. (after stating the facts as above). The motion to nonsuit rests on two grounds: (1) That it is admitted that the defendant is a purchaser for value, and there is no evidence that it had notice of the lien. (2) That the acceptance of a note for the amount due for material and its renewal is a waiver of the right to a lien. The correct settlement of these questions requires a consideration of section 2028 of the Revisal, which, as amended by chapter 32, Public Laws of 1909, reads as follows: "Notice of lien shall be filed, as hereinbefore provided, at any time within twelve months after the completion of the labor, or the final furnishing the materials, or the gathering of the crops: Provided, that as to the rights of a purchaser for value and without notice the notice of lien must be filed within six months."

[1] The statute evidently means that, if the materialman wishes to protect himself against a purchaser for value without notice, he must file his notice of lien within 6 months, and that as against purchasers for value with notice he may do so within 12 months. It also marks the distinction between "notice to the purchaser" and "notice of lien," using the language, "as to the rights of a purchaser for value without notice, the notice of lien must be filed within 6 months."

[2, 3] "The Legislature is presumed to know the existing law, and to legislate with reference to it" (State v. Railway, 145 N. C. 542, 59 S. E. 570, 13 L. B. A. [N. S.] 906), and we must therefore assume that at the time of the enactment of the statute it had in mind the particularity required in filing notice of lien, as illustrated in several cases in our reports (Wray v. Harris, 77 N. C. 77; Cook v. Cobb, 101 N. C. 68, 7 S. E. 700; Jefferson v. Bryant, 161 N. C. 405, 77 S. E. 341), and the principle, well established as to purchasers, that, "where one has notice of an opposing claim, he is put 'upon inquiry,' and is presumed to have notice of every fact which a proper inquiry would have enabled him to find out" (Blackwood v. Jones, 57 N. C. 57; James v. Gaither, 93 N. C. 362; Whitted v. Fuquay, 127 N. C. 72, 37 S. E. 141).

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

If this is a correct position, and the term used, "purchaser for value without notice," is construed in accordance with its accepted meaning, there is not only evidence of notice to the defendant, but it is substantially beyond dispute, as one of the officers of the plaintiff testified that he told an officer of the defendant that Campbell had not paid the plaintiff for the material used in building his house at Rockfish, and the officer of the defendant admitted that before the purchase the officer of the plaintiff said something to him about Campbell owing the Raeford Lumber Company for material used in the house.

[4] The second reason assigned by the defendant in support of his motion for judgment of nonsuit—that the acceptance of a note, and its extension, for the amount due for materials constitute a waiver of the right to a lien—might avail the defendant, if it did not appear that the note became due and was unpaid by Campbell before the time for filing the lien expired.

In 27 Cyc. p. 265, in the article on mechanics' liens, the author says: "An extension of the time of payment is not a waiver of the lien, although the lien is lost, if the time for payment is extended by agreement beyond the time allowed for enforcing the lien," and the text is sustained by the decided cases. Montandon v. Deas, 14 Ala. 33, 48 Am. Dec. 84; Chisholm v. Williams, 128 Ill. 115, 21 N. E. 215; Woolf v. Schaefer, 103 App. Div. 567, 93 N. Y. Supp. 184; Hoagland v. Lusk, 33 Neb. 376, 50 N. W. 162, 29 Am. St. Rep. 495; Cushwa v. Improvement Co., 45 W. Va. 490, 32 S. E. 259; Wisconsin Trust Co. v. Robinson, 68 Fed. 778, 15 C. C. A. 668; Goble v. Gale, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 218, 41 Am. Dec. 219. There is a very full note to the last case, in which many authorities are collected to sustain the position that "the acceptance of the debtor's promissory note is not alone sufficient to effect a waiver of the lien, in the absence of any express agreement that it shall so operate." We are therefore of opinion that there is no error in denying the motion to nonsuit.

[3] The exception to the charge on the burden of proof on the second issue is immaterial, as there is no real controversy as to notice; but, if there had been a conflict in the evidence, the burden of the issue is on the defendant.

[6] The defendant does not rely for its protection upon an exception in the enacting clause of the statute, but upon the proviso, which withdraws from its operation after 6 months, purchasers for value without notice, and it devolves upon the defendant to bring itself within the proviso. In Black on Interpretation of Statutes, p. 275, the author says: "Where the enacting clause is general in its language and objects, and a proviso is afterwards introduced, that proviso is construed strictly, and takes no case out of the enacting clause which does not fall fairly within its terms. In short, a proviso carves special exceptions only out of the enacting clause, and those who set up any such exception must establish it as being within the words as well as within the reason thereof." The question is fully discussed and the authorities collected in State v. Goulden, 134 N. C. 746, 47 S. E. 450. We are therefore of opinion there is no error. No error.

BREWER v. WYNNE, Mayor, et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. THEATERS AND SHOWS (§ 1*)—IMMORAL SHOW—RIGHT TO SUPPRESS—AUTHORITY OF POLICE.

Under Revisal 1908, § 3781, making it a misdemeanor for any person to give or take part in any immoral show, exhibition, or performance, and Priv. Laws 1907, c. 1, §§ 28, 32, 34, giving the chief of police of Raleigh general supervision of nuisances and the abatement thereof, and charging him with preservation of the peace, the detection of crime, the arrest of offenders, and the inspection of all places of public amusement, the police are entitled to prevent or suppress an indecent or immoral show given in a public place, or in any place to which the public are invited.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Theaters and Shows, Cent. Dig. § 1; Dec. Dig. § 1.*]

2. ARREST (§ 63*)—AUTHORITY—POLICE OFFICERS.

The police of the city of Raleigh being authorized to suppress immoral shows held in a public place within the city, they are entitled to act immediately whenever an unlawful exhibition is taking place in their presence, or where its performance is imminent and their present interference is required to accomplish the purpose; and in such case they may arrest without a warrant any and all persons aiding or assisting in such shows, whenever it reasonably appears that such course is necessary for the proper performance of their official duty.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Arrest, Cent. Dig. §§ 145-156; Dec. Dig. § 63.*]

3. TRIAL (§ 165*)—APPLICATION—EVIDENCE—REVIEW.

In determining a motion for a nonsuit, the evidence which makes for plaintiff's right to recover must be taken as true, and interpreted in the light most favorable to him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 373, 374; Dec. Dig. § 165.*]

4. FALSE IMPRISONMENT (§ 39*)—ACTION—QUESTION FOR JURY.

In an action for alleged wrongful arrest of plaintiff, while in a theater in performance of his contract to attend to the heating of the building, as a person aiding in the proposed production of an alleged immoral show, evidence held to require submission to the jury of the question whether plaintiff's arrest without a warrant was justifiable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see False Imprisonment, Cent. Dig. §§ 116-118; Dec. Dig. § 39.*]

5. ARREST (§ 63*)—NECESSITY OF WARRANT—ORAL DIRECTION FROM MAYOR.

Though the mayor of the city of Raleigh has some judicial functions of a justice of the peace, his oral direction to his chief of police to prevent the exhibition of an alleged immoral show at a theater was ministerial in character, and did not authorize an arrest of plaintiff, who was engaged in looking after the heating appliances of the theater before it was open to the public, without a warrant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Arrest, Cent. Dig. §§ 145-156; Dec. Dig. § 63.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wake County; Carter, Judge.

Action by W. H. Brewer against J. S. Wynne, mayor and another. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

There was evidence to show that on the night of February 16th, about 7:30 p. m., plaintiff was arrested without warrant, in the city of Raleigh, by defendant J. P. Stell, chief of police, and confined in the city guardhouse. And it was insisted for plaintiff that the evidence tended to show that the said chief of police was acting at the time under direct instructions of his codefendant, J. S. Wynne, then mayor, and that there was no legal excuse or justification for such arrest, and the same amounted to an actionable wrong. It was contended for defendants that on the facts in evidence, it appeared that plaintiff at the time was engaged in an unlawful act, to wit, the effort to bring on an immoral and indecent show or play at the Academy of Music in the city of Raleigh, and that defendant Stell, being present for the purpose and in the proper performance of official duty, was endeavoring to prevent and suppress the unlawful exhibition, and the arrest of defendant was justifiable and necessary to effect this purpose, and, further, that plaintiff was at the time engaged in resisting effort of defendant to perform his duty, contrary to the statute. At the close of plaintiff's testimony, and again at the close of the entire evidence, there was motion to nonsuit. The latter motion allowed, and plaintiff excepted and appealed.

Armistead Jones & Son, W. B. Snow, W. H. Lyon, Jr., J. W. Bunn, and Douglass & Douglass, all of Raleigh, for appellant. Jones & Bailey and B. M. Gatling, both of Raleigh, for appellee Wynne. Walter L. Watson, of Raleigh, for appellee Stell.

HOKE, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] Under the general law and the statutes more directly applicable to the city of Raleigh, the chief of police and his officers have the right to prevent or suppress an indecent or immoral show, given in a public place, or in any place to which the public are invited. Revisal 1908, § 3731; Priv. Laws 1907, c. 1.

In section 3731 it is made a misdemeanor for "any person * * * to give or take part in any immoral show, exhibition, or performance where indecent, immoral, or lewd dances or plays are conducted in any booth, tent, room, or other place to which the public is invited, or if any one permit such exhibitions or immoral performances to be conducted in any tent, booth, or other place owned or controlled by him."

By section 28, Priv. Laws 1907, c. 1, being the Revised Charter of the city of Raleigh, the chief of police is given general supervision over "nuisances and the abatement of same," etc. In section 32 he is charged with the duty of preserving the peace and under order of the city of suppressing disturbance, etc. Section 34 makes provision in part as follows: "It is hereby made the duty of the police department and force, at all times of day or night, and the members of such force are hereby thereunto empowered, to especially preserve the public peace, prevent crime, detect and arrest offenders, suppress riots and unlawful gatherings which obstruct the free passage of public streets, sidewalks, parks and places; * * * carefully observe and inspect all places of public amusements, all places of business having license to carry on any business, and to repress and restrain all unlawful disorderly conduct or practices therein."

[2] In the proper discharge of these important duties the chief of police or his lawful officers and subordinates may act immediately whenever one of these unlawful exhibitions is taking place in their presence, or where its performance is imminent and their present interference is required to accomplish the purpose and in such case they may arrest without warrant any and all persons who aid and assist in such plays and shows whenever, under all the facts as they reasonably appear to them, such course is necessary for the proper and effective performance of their official duty. This, we think, presents the correct interpretation of the statutory provisions controlling the matter and the position is in accord with our cases dealing generally with this subject as in Martin v. Houck, 141 N. C. 317, 54 S. E. 291, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 576; Sossamon v. Cruse, 133 N. C. 470, 45 S. E. 757; State v. Campbell, 107 N. C. 948, 953, 12 S. E. 441; State v. Sigman, 106 N. C. 723, 11 S. E. 520; State v. McNinch, 90 N. C. 695; Neal v. Joyner, 89 N. C. 287.

[3] While we uphold the right of the police officials to arrest without warrant in proper instances, and do what is reasonably required to prevent or suppress an illegal exhibition, we do not take the view of this case as it now appears, which seems to have impressed the court below. It is fully understood that when a nonsuit is ordered the evidence which makes for plaintiff's right to recover must be taken as true and interpreted in the light most favorable to him; and, considering the case under that well-established rule, we are of opinion that the cause should have been submitted to the jury.

[4] From the facts in evidence it appears that on the night in question the plaintiff was arrested without a warrant and imprisoned for a time in the city guardhouse. That this was done by defendant Stell, the chief of police, acting under written instructions from his codefendant, J. S. Wynne, then mayor, to prevent or suppress the exhibition of the play called "The Girl from Rectors." This of itself is an act which calls for explanation, and would constitute an actionable wrong unless, as heretofore stated, it is sufficiently established that the play in question was indecent or immoral, and that the action of the officer was necessary to prevent or suppress the exhibition under all of the facts as they reasonably appeared to him. Speaking more directly to this question, the plaintiff, a witness in his own behalf, testified: "That he had recovered recently from a long typhoid spell, and not very strong. That he was at the theater on the night in question, being under contract to supply heat for the building; and, while standing near the door, he was requested by J. S. Upchurch, the local manager of the theater to lock the doors, and not to let any one in until he said so." That the witness turned to comply with the request. That defendant Stell, coming up at the time, seized the witness' hands, took the keys away from him, and said to Mr. Denning, a policeman, "Arrest this man and lock him up." That this was done, and the plaintiff, the officer holding him, was taken down the stairway and through a crowd of a thousand people, and confined in the city guardhouse at or near the market. That witness had not locked the door, but same was still swinging when defendant came up and that witness did not strike Mr. Stell, or in any way try to resist the arrest. That witness had no personal knowledge of the character of the play, and was there only to heat the building in compliance with his contract to do so whenever a play was put on. That next morning he was taken before the police justice, and they said they had no charge against him, etc.

J. S. Upchurch, a witness for plaintiff, among other things, testified that: "Plaintiff was there under his contract to heat the house. That witness had gone to the mayor that day or the day before, and offered to put up bond as to the character of the show, and was told by the mayor, that he had made up his mind to stop it, and witness replied 'All right'; and, further, on the night in question, it was not the purpose to put on the show that night unless there was an order permitting it from the superior court judge before whom proceedings were pending to test the question. That the doors had not been opened that night, and no audience had been admitted, and the witness had directed the doors to be locked with the purpose of keeping every one out until the action of the judge could be ascertained. That plaintiff was just out of bed, and was very weak that night," etc.

There is much evidence in the record to the effect that "The Girl from Rectors" was an immoral and indecent play; that plaintiff was there to assist in having the same performed, and was engaged at the time in active resistance to the officer, and tending to show, further, that it was necessary to presently arrest the plaintiff in order to prevent the exhibition, but this comes from the testimony of defendants, or from the cross-examinations of plaintiff's witnesses, and may not be considered in the case as now presented. Under the principle as heretofore stated we are allowed to consider only the facts making for plaintiff's right, and it does not follow as a legal conclusion from his version of the occurrence that his arrest without warrant was justifiable.

[5] It is urged for defendant that the act complained of was done under written orders of the mayor, and, being a judicial act, no responsibility should attach unless he was shown to have acted corruptly or without power in the premises. It may be that under the statutes applicable to the city of Raleigh some portion of the judicial functions of a justice of the peace are still left with the mayor, but if this be conceded, we do not think the principle relied upon can avail in the present instance. These judicial warrants, general in terms and unsupported by preliminary oath or sworn evidence, and for conduct not committed in the immediate presence of the magistrate, are not recognized in the laws of this country. They are forbidden by the Constitutions of both state and nation. North Carolina Constitution, art. 1, § 15; Constitution of the United States, amend. 4. The order in question here, however, is not and does not purport to be a judicial warrant. It is clearly ministerial in character, and must be so considered and dealt with in determining whether the defendant, J. S. Wynne authorized the act of his codefendant Stell, and how and to what extent he may be responsible for it.

There is error in the order of nonsuit, and the same must be set aside.

Reversed.

SMITH v. CUMBERLAND COUNTY AGR. SOCIETY.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 866*)—SCOPE OF REVIEW—NONSUIT.

On appeal from a judgment as of nonsuit, granted at the close of all the evidence, evidence for defendant in support of the defenses of independent contractor's negligence, contributory negligence of plaintiff, and negating defendant's negligence, cannot be considered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3467-3475; Dec. Dig. § 866.*]

2. AGRICULTURE (§ 4*)—AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES—LIABILITIES.

A county agricultural association which gives a fair cannot exonerate itself from liability for damages to one injured by its negligence, on the theory that it is a public service company.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Agriculture, Cent. Dig. §§ 1, 4-9; Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

3. TRIAL (§ 165*)—MOTION FOR NONSUIT—MATTERS TO BE CONSIDERED.

On nonsuit the court will consider only the evidence most favorable to the plaintiff and in the most favorable aspect to him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 373, 374; Dec. Dig. § 165.*]

4. AGRICULTURE (§ 4*)—AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES—LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE.

The owner of a place of entertainment, such as a fair association, is charged with the obligation of knowing that the premises are safe for public use, and of furnishing adequate appliances for the prevention of injuries which might be anticipated from the nature of the performance, but he is not an insurer of the safety of those attending the exhibition, though he must warn the public against dangers that can readily be foreseen.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Agriculture, Cent. Dig. §§ 1, 4-9; Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

5. AGRICULTURE (§ 4*)—AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES—NEGLIGENCE—EVIDENCE.

In an action by a spectator at a fair, who was carried up by a hot-air balloon, a rope catching around his foot, evidence of the negligence of the fair association held sufficient to go to the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Agriculture, Cent. Dig. §§ 1, 4-9; Dec. Dig. § 4.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Bladen County; Lyon, Judge.

Action by J. W. Smith against the Cumberland County Agricultural Society. From a judgment as of nonsuit at the close of all the evidence, plaintiff appeals. Reversed and remanded.

R. S. Hall, Shaw & MacLean, of Fayetteville, and McIntyre, Lawrence & Proctor, of Lumberton, for appellant. Rose & Rose, of Fayetteville, for appellee.

CLARK, C. J. This is an action for injuries sustained by the plaintiff, who was caught by his foot in the trail rope of a balloon which ascended from the fair grounds of defendant at Fayetteville, N. C., and was carried in the air for some distance. The appeal is from a nonsuit, and the testimony of the plaintiff, somewhat condensed, is as follows: "The plaintiff, who is 53 years old, attended the fair held by the defendant at Fayetteville, and paid his fare for entrance. A 'free balloon ascension' had been advertised as one of the attractions for that day, and he went over to the place where they were making arrangements for the balloon to ascend; he walked up to within 15 or 20 steps of the balloon; there was some difficulty in launching it. It was swaying to and fro, though there was not much breeze. The man in charge, who was unknown to the plaintiff, called for help; he was trying to hold the balloon down until he could get it loaded. He said, 'Everybody get a hold.' The witness and several others went up and took hold; the witness held on for a few minutes, and then left and walked off eight or ten steps; this man then beckoned him back, and said, 'Come back and hold this,' and the witness went back and took hold, but only for a minute or two before he turned loose again because the balloon seemed uncontrollable, and he thought it best to leave. He had gotten only three or four steps, when some ropes caught him around his leg. He threw those ropes off with his hands, and just at that time his left foot was caught by a noose in the rope around his instep; he had on a button slipper, and the noose caught him around that and jerked his left foot up so quick that his head never struck the ground; the balloon went off like a rifle ball, and he went with it. He was a couple of hundred yards in the air before he got righted up; he was hanging by his foot, head down, and he was way up; he could not tell how far; he managed to get up somehow, and got hold of the rope and climbed it, and when he got up some distance he managed to get his arm over something, and held on with that arm and hand to the rope until the balloon came down. He could not tell how high the balloon went; he was sure a long way from the earth. He said he did not have language to explain his feelings; he said he thought he was gone, and that was the last of him; he imagines he felt like a man on the gallows with the black cap over his face to be hung. He could not say how long that state of feeling continued, but it was a long time; he thinks he was a couple of hundred yards in the air before he managed to rise up somehow and get hold of this rope and climb up it; he does not know how long he was about it; he recollects that he first got hold of his leg and tried to pull up, but his pants slipped and he fell back, and his head again swung down; he managed to recover, and somehow pulled up by his leg, and reached the rope and managed to get his right arm around it and held by that arm and his left hand to the rope until the balloon came down. When he managed to get his arm over the swing and to hold it there, he looked down into space, and was 1,500 or 1,600 feet from the ground. He went about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles, he thinks. When he came down he was still holding by his right arm, and his left hand until he struck the ground. He then got the noose off his foot, the balloon rose again, and went off, he does not know where, but supposes it must have come down again. The searching party, in an automobile, met him coming back, bare-headed, on a bicycle." The witness then stated at length the impairment of his physical and nervous system and his mental suffering, which of course were serious. On cross-examination the witness says: That "the balloon ascension took place in the race track; is not certain that there was a fence around it, but thinks there was. That he got inside of the race track by going through the gate; did not see any policeman. A crowd of people were going, and he went along with them. He does not recollect seeing any one telling the people to keep off. That he took hold and helped to hold the balloon because the man in charge called for help, and that he went back the second time because after he started off the man in charge of the balloon said to him, 'Come back and help hold this balloon.' He says many other men were there helping to hold the balloon down. No one told him not to go into the inclosure, and no one warned the crowd to get back from the balloon. If this was done, he did not hear it. He did not hear the man in charge of the exhibition make public outcry that the wind was blowing hard and it was dangerous, and for everybody to keep back. When he went to the race track he was not warned by any policeman or marshal, or any one else, to keep away after the gate was opened. That if he had not crossed the race track and had not gone near the balloon he, of course, would not have been hurt. He says that a crowd of people were around the balloon within 15 or 20 feet, and he heard no warning given. That he did not know the balloon was going up, or that it was dangerous to be around where the ropes were."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[1,2] There was evidence on the part of the defendant that the crowd broke down the fence and crowded around the balloon; that there was public warning given that it was dangerous to be there. There was also evidence tending to sustain the defense that the manager of the balloon was an independent contractor. We cannot consider this, as this is an appeal from a nonsuit, and the plaintiff did not offer evidence on this point, which, being an affirmative defense, was a matter for the jury. The defense that the defendant was not liable because it was a public service company was properly abandoned in this court. Hallyburton v. Fair Ass'n, 119 N. C. 526, 26 S. E. 114, 38 L. R. A. 156.

Neither can we consider the evidence tending to show that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, nor to negative negligence on the part of the defendant. These matters in defense were for the jury to determine, not for the court.

[3] Nothing is better settled than that on a nonsuit the court will consider only the evidence most favorable to the plaintiff and in the most favorable aspect to him, since the jury might have taken that view, and the plaintiff cannot be deprived of his right to ask a jury to find that his contention was the true state of the facts. The decisions to this effect are numerous and uniform. Brewer v. Wynne, 79 S. E. 629, at this term.

[4] The rule of liability of fairs, shows, and theaters is summed up (38 Cyc. 268, with full citation of authorities) as follows: "The owner of a place of entertainment is charged with an affirmative positive obligation to know that the premises are safe for the public use and to furnish adequate appliances for the prevention of injuries which might be anticipated from the nature of the performance, and he impliedly warrants the premises to be reasonably safe for the purpose for which they are designed." He is not an insurer of the safety of those attending the exhibition, but he must use care and diligence to prevent injury, and by policeman or other guards warn the public against dangers that can reasonably be foreseen. While the defense of "independent contractor" is not before us upon a nonsuit, we may call attention to the fact that the same citation cites Thompson v. Railroad, 170 Mass. 577, 49 N. E. 913, 40 L. R. A. 345, 64 Am. St. Rep. 323, for the proposition that the owner "is not exonerated because the exhibition where the injury was received was provided and conducted by an independent contractor." Nor do we now pass upon the question whether the manager of the balloon was an independent contractor.

[5] Taking the evidence in the aspect most favorable to the plaintiff, and with the inferences which a jury would be authorized to draw therefrom, they would have been justified in finding a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, and that the defendant was guilty of negligence. The matters of defense could not be considered by the judge on a motion for nonsuit. The nonsuit is reversed.

MULLALY v. SMYTH et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Oct. 8, 1918.)

1. TRIAL (§ 295*)—INSTRUCTIONS AS A WHOLE—DEGREE OF PROOF.

Where the charge as a whole instructed the jury that plaintiff must make out his case by the greater weight of the evidence, the fact that the court at times required plaintiff to prove his case to the satisfaction of the jury by a clear preponderance of the evidence, did not render the charge erroneous as requiring of him too high a degree of proof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 703-717; Dec. Dig. § 295.*]

2. TRIAL (§ 193*)—INSTRUCTIONS—FACTS.

The trial judge is entitled to charge the law applicable to any facts proven, and a statement of facts admitted or not contested is not a charge on the facts.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 436-438; Dec. Dig. § 193.*]

3. TRIAL (§ 373*)—TRIAL BY COURT—SPECIAL ISSUES—SUBMISSION TO JURY—CHARGE.

Under Code Civ. Proc. 1912, § 312, providing that the findings of fact on the issues submitted to a jury in an equity suit shall be conclusive, except that the presiding judge may grant new trials therein according to the practice in other jury trials, it is not error for the court, in submitting special issues to a jury in a suit for specific performance, to charge that the jury's findings are not binding on the court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 883; Dec. Dig. § 373.*]

4. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 502*)—MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—GROUNDS.

Where the case on appeal stated that a motion for new trial was made on various grounds, without stating the grounds, exceptions to the overruling of the motion, specifying the grounds, could not be reviewed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2306-2309; Dec. Dig. § 502.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Anderson County; S. W. G. Shipp, Judge.

Suit by J. B. Adger Mullaly against Ellison A. Smyth and another, as executors, etc. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

A. H. Dagnall, of Anderson, for appellant.
T. F. Watkins, of Anderson, for respondents.

WATTS, J. This was an action for specific performance of a contract. The plaintiff alleged in his complaint that his aunt had promised to will and devise all of her property to him, provided he lived with her and managed her property during her lifetime, and that she endeavored to carry out her agreement by making a codicil, but that the codicil was not legally executed, and she died without carrying out her agreement, although plaintiff performed his part of the agreement. Defendants, by answer, denied the material allegations of the complaint, and interposed as a defense the statute of frauds, and that if there was any such contract, as alleged, it was obtained by fraud and undue influence. After issue joined, the cause came on for a hearing before his honor, Judge Prince, and four issues were framed to be submitted to the jury under rule 28 of the circuit court. Upon the issues the jury found in favor of the defendants, and a motion for new trial was made and refused, and his honor, Judge Prince, passed a decree approving and confirming the verdict of the jury, and upon consideration of the whole case, in the light of the findings of fact, dismissed the complaint. After entry of judgment plaintiff appeals, and asks reversal of the same.

[1] Exceptions 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 11 complain of error on the part of the circuit judge in his charge to the jury, in that by his charge he required too high a degree of proof on the plaintiff, by requiring the plaintiff to prove his case to the satisfaction of the jury by a clear preponderance of the evidence. An inspection of the judge's charge as a whole clearly shows that the jury were informed that the plaintiff must make out his case, and establish it by the greater weight of the evidence. It is true that at times he told them that it was to be proven by a clear preponderance of the evidence, but his charge as a whole could not have conveyed to the jury any other inference than that the plaintiff should make out his case by the greater weight of the evidence, and his charge sufficiently explained and defined to the jury what he meant by "a clear preponderance" of the evidence to the satisfaction of the jury. This charge was not obnoxious to the cases decided by this court, but is in accordance with the law, as decided in McKeegan v. O'Neill, 22 S. C. 454; McMillan v. McMillan, 77 S. C. 511, 58 S. E. 431; Folk v. Brooks, 91 S. C. 7, 74 S. E. 46; Lawson v. Southern Railway Company, 91 S. C. 210, 74 S. E. 473; Sullivan v. Moore, 92 S. C. 805, 75 S. E. 497. These exceptions are overruled.

[2] Exception 3 imputes error on the part of his honor in charging on the facts. We fail, after a careful examination of the judge's charge, to find that he in any manner invaded the province of the jury and charged on the facts as complained of. The judge has a right to charge the jury what the law is applicable to any facts proven, and, further, a statement by him of what facts are admitted or not contested is not a charge on the facts. Trapp v. Western Union Tel. Co., 92 S. C. 214, 75 S. E. 210. The judge did not violate the provision of the Constitution and invade the province of the jury by charging on the facts, and this exception is overruled.

[3] The ninth, tenth, and twelfth exceptions impute error in the judge in charging the jury that their findings in the case were not binding on the court, and in not granting a new trial. These exceptions are overruled. Section 312, vol. 11, Code of Laws 1912, says: "The findings of fact upon such issues by the jury shall be conclusive of the same: Provided, that the presiding judge may grant new trials therein, according to the practice in other jury trials." This clearly shows that his honor was not bound by these findings to such an extent that he was compelled to accept them and make up his decree upon these findings. He could set the verdict aside and order a new trial, if he saw fit, or accept them, as he did here, and confirm and approve them. While it is the better practice for the judge, when any issue is submitted to a jury, to determine not to tell them, he is not bound by their verdict, yet it is not reversible error to do so, as in most cases he is clothed with the power of setting their verdict aside and granting a new trial. We do not think the plaintiff was in any manner prejudiced by this statement of his honor.

[4] The eleventh and twelfth exceptions alleged error in refusing motion for a new trial, on the grounds which appear for the first time in these exceptions. The case says: "A motion was made for a new trial upon various grounds"; none of the grounds were made or stated before the circuit judge. These exceptions are too indefinite to be considered. Fowler v. Harrison, 64 S. C. 311, 42 S. E. 159; Glover v. Telegraph Co., 78 S. C. 505, 59 S. E. 526; Lorick & Lowrance v. Caldwell, 85 S. C. 94, 67 S. E. 143.

But we have examined the whole record and considered all of the exceptions and alleged errors on the part of his honor, and we nowhere find any errors that would justify us in sustaining the appeal. All exceptions are overruled.

Judgment affirmed.

GARY, C. J., and HYDRICK and FRASER, JJ., concur.

PARRISH v. TOWN OF YORKVILLE.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Oct. 9, 1913.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 723*)—ACTIONS—TORTS.

An action for tort will not lie against a municipal corporation, unless it is made liable by statute; such a corporation being merely an arm of the state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 1545; Dec. Dig. § 723.*]

2. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 2*)—"TAKING OF PRIVATE PROPERTY"—WHAT CONSTITUTES.

Where a municipal corporation emptied sewage into a stream flowing through plaintiff's land, thus injuring her property, there was "a taking of private property" for public use within the purview of the Constitution, guaranteeing that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 3-12; Dec. Dig. § 2.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 8, pp. 6852-6860; vol. 8, p. 7813.]

3. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 69*)—RIGHT OF CONDEMNATION.

As the Constitution prohibits the taking of private property for a public use without just compensation, the granting by the Legislature of the right to condemn private property imposes upon the condemning corporation the correlative duty of making just compensation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 171-179; Dec. Dig. § 69.*]

4. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 167*)—CONDEMNATION—ASSESSMENT OF DAMAGES.

As condemnation of land by a municipality is of statutory origin, the method prescribed by Civ. Code 1912, § 3023, by which the amount of compensation is to be determined by arbitrators appointed by the corporation and the landowner, is exclusive; there being no common-law action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 451-456; Dec. Dig. § 167.*]

5. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 269*)—INSTITUTION OF CONDEMNATION PROCEEDINGS.

As the remedy of condemnation is for the benefit, not only of the condemning corporation, but of the owner, a landowner whose property is taken by a municipality as a dumping place for sewage may, if the right to compensation is not denied, institute condemnation proceedings, for the assessment of his damage, by mandamus for the appointment of arbitrators to assess the damage.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 698, 699; Dec. Dig. § 269.*]

6. MANDAMUS (§ 73*)—SCOPE OF MANDAMUS.

The institution by a municipality of proceedings to ascertain the amount of compensation due in a condemnation case is a plain ministerial duty, and can be enforced by mandamus.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mandamus, Cent. Dig. §§ 115, 135, 144-149; Dec. Dig. § 73.*]

7. EMINENT DOMAIN (§ 266*)—TAKING OF PROPERTY—DENIAL OF RIGHT TO COMPENSATION—REMEDY OF OWNER.

Where a municipality which has taken private property for public use, denies the owner's right to compensation, the owner may bring an action in equity to ascertain his right to compensation, because Civ. Code 1912, § 3023, which provides that the amount of compensation in condemnation proceedings is to be determined by arbitrators appointed by the municipality and the landowner, does not provide any method for determining the right to compensation when it is contested.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. §§ 694-696, 702, 703, 705; Dec. Dig. § 266.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of York County; Thos. S. Sease, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Action by Laura E. Parrish against the Town of Yorkville. From a judgment sustaining a demurrer to the complaint, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

Marion & Marion, of Chester, and Thos. F. McDow, of Yorkville, for appellant. W. W. Lewis, of Yorkville, for respondent.

HYDRICK, J. Plaintiff attempted to set up two causes of action in her complaint. Divested of unnecessary verbiage, the material allegations of the first cause of action are: That since the year 1908 the defendant has emptied the sewerage of the town of Yorkville into a stream which flows through plaintiff's land, thereby polluting the waters thereof to her injury and damage; that said use of her property was begun without notice to her, and without her consent, and without acquiring the right thereto, or making compensation therefor, in the manner prescribed by law, and that it has been continued against her protest; that defendant has refused her demand for compensation, and denies her right thereto; that such use of her property is a taking thereof for a public purpose, without compensation, and without due process of law, and she is thereby denied the equal protection of the law, contrary to the guaranties of both the state and federal Constitutions. The allegations of the second cause of action are such as are usual and appropriate to an action against a municipal corporation for damages for tort under the statute. Civil Code 1912, § 3053.

The grounds of demurrer to the first cause of action are: (1) That an action for damages for tort cannot be maintained against a municipal corporation, in the absence of legislative authority, and there is no such authority to bring this action; (2) that plaintiff has a remedy by condemnation, which is exclusive. The first ground was also interposed to the second cause of action. The court sustained the demurrer to both causes of action and dismissed the complaint.

[1] It has been settled by a long line of decisions in this court that an action for damages for tort will not lie against a municipal corporation, unless the corporation is made liable by statute, because such corporation is merely an agent of the state for governmental purposes. Young v. Commissioners, 2 Nott & McC. 537; White v. Charleston, 2 Hill, 575; Coleman v. Chester, 14 S. C. 291; Black v. Columbia, 19 S. C. 412, 45 Am. Rep. 785; Young v. Charleston, 20 S. C. 118, 47 Am. Rep. 827; Acker v. Anderson County, 20 S. C. 498; Chick v. Newberry, 27 S. C. 419, 3 S. E. 787; Hill v. Laurens County, 34 S. C. 145, 13 S. E. 318; Dunn v. Barnwell, 43 S. C. 401, 21 S. E. 315, 49 Am. St. Rep. 843; Parks v. Greenville, 44 S. C. 170, 21 S. E. 540; Matheny v. Aiken, 68 S. C. 163, 47 S. E. 56; Bramlett v. Laurens, 58 S. C. 60, 36 S. E. 444; Bryant v. City Council, 70 S. C. 140, 49 S. E. 229; Irvine v. Greenwood, 89 S. C. 515, 72 S. E. 228, 36 L. R. A. (N. S.) 363.

[2, 3] It is not, and cannot be, disputed that plaintiff has been deprived of her property; that it has been taken by defendant for a public purpose within the meaning of the constitutional guaranty that private property shall not be taken for a public purpose without just compensation. Matheny v. Aiken, 68 S. C. 179, 47 S. E. 56, and cases cited. The question of vital interest to the plaintiff, then, is, Has she any remedy for the injury which she has admittedly sustained? We think she has. As the Constitution forbids the taking of private property for a public use without just compensation, the grant by the Legislature of the right to condemn private property for such purposes imposes upon the condemning corporation the correlative duty to make just compensation for property so taken. Bramlett v. Laurens, 58 S. C. 60, 36 S. E. 444.

[4] As condemnation of lands for such purposes is statutory in its origin, and was unknown to the common law, there is no common-law action appropriate to the assessment of compensation in such cases. Hence the statutes which confer the right to condemn usually provide a method of ascertaining the compensation, and this court has uniformly held that, when the statute provides a method, it is exclusive; the intention being that the remedy shall be simple, inexpensive, and expeditious. See cases cited below.

Turning to the statutes (Acts of 1902, 23 Stat. 1040; Civil Code 1912, § 3023), we find that the act which conferred upon municipal corporations the power to condemn lands and streams for the purpose of discharging sewerage provides that the compensation therefor shall be ascertained as follows: The corporation shall appoint one arbitrator, the landowner one, and these two a third, and the three shall constitute a board which shall ascertain the compensation and render its decision in writing, which shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the circuit court. From the award either party may appeal to the circuit court, where the question of compensation shall be submitted to a jury in open court.

[5, 6] Appellant contends, however, that the statute authorizes the corporation only to institute condemnation proceedings. We do not concede the correctness of that proposition. The rights and duties of the municipality and of the landowner are reciprocal and correlative under the statute. It was intended for the benefit of both. We see no reason why either may not invoke the rights and remedies provided by it. There is no material difference between this statute and section 80 of the charter of the city of Greenville (which is quoted in full in Water Co. v. Greenville, 53 S. C. 86, 30 S. E. 699), under which it was held that the landowner sustaining damages could, by mandamus, compel the appointment of an arbitrator, who should be one of a board of three to assess damages, as in section 3023, supra, under which the appointment of the arbitrator is the initial step in the proceedings. If the court can compel the appointment of an arbitrator, we see no reason why it may not compel the institution of condemnation proceedings, because, if the right to compensation is conceded or has been determined, the institution of proceedings to ascertain the amount of compensation is a plain ministerial duty. Garraux v. Greenville, 53 S. C. 575, 31 S. E. 597; Gibson v. Greenville, 64 S. C. 455, 42 S. E. 206. We conclude, therefore, that plaintiff has a remedy by condemnation under the statute. It, therefore, becomes unnecessary to consider the question whether, in the absence of a remedy by condemnation, plaintiff would have a cause of action under section 3053, supra.

[7] But the statute provides only for ascertaining the amount of compensation. It does not provide a method for determining the right to compensation, when the right thereto is denied. In Water Co. v. Nunamaker, 73 S. C. 550, 53 S. E. 993, the court said: "When the right to institute condemnation proceedings is contested, the proper remedy is to bring an action in the court of common pleas in order that the court may, in the exercise of its chancery powers, determine such right. Railway v. Riddlehuber, 38 S. C. 308, 17 S. E. 24; Cureton v. Railway, 59 S. C. 371 [37 S. E. 914]; Glover v. Remley, 62 S. C. 52, 39 S. E. 780; Railroad v. Burton, 63 S. C. 348, 41 S. E. 451; Riley v. Union Station Co., 67 S. C. 84 [45 S. E. 149]; Railway v. Reynolds, 69 S. C. 481, 48 S. E. 476." To these may be added Leitzsey v. Water Co., 47 S. C. 484, 25 S. E. 744, 34 L. R. A. 215; Garraux v. Greenville, 53 S. C. 575, 31 S. E. 597; South Carolina & W. Ry. v. Ellen, 95 S. C. 68, 78 S. E. 963; Groce v. Greenville, etc., Ry. Co., 94 S. C. 199, 78 S. E. 888.

The plaintiff alleges, in her first cause of action, that her right to compensation is denied, and that allegation is admitted by the demurrer. Therefore, under the authorities above cited, she stated a cause of action to have her right to compensation determined by the court, and the court erred, therefore, in sustaining the demurrer to that cause of action.

This case differs from the case of Matheny v. Aiken, supra. The complaint in that case, which was held insufficient on demurrer, did not allege that plaintiff's right to compensation was denied, and the omission of that allegation was made a ground of the decision, as it was in Glover v. Remley, 62 S. C. 52, 39 S. E. 780.

Reversed.

GARY, C. J., and WATTS and FRASER, JJ., concur.

CITIZENS' SAVINGS BANK v. EFIRD et al.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Oct. 10, 1913.)

PLEADING (§ 95*)—AMENDMENT OF DEFECTS.

Under Code Civ. Proc. 1912, § 220, providing that no variance between the pleading and the proof shall be deemed material unless it shall have actually misled the adverse party, that if a party has been so misled that fact shall be proved, and that the court may order the pleading to be amended upon such terms as shall be just, section 221 providing that where the variance is not material, the court may direct the fact to be found according to the evidence, or order an immediate amendment, section 222 providing that where the allegation of the cause of action or defense is not proved in its entire scope, this shall be deemed a failure of proof, section 224 providing that the court before or after judgment may amend any pleading, process, or proceeding by adding or striking out the name of any party, by correcting a mistake in the name of a party, etc., and section 227 providing that the court shall disregard any error in the pleadings or proceedings not affecting the substantial rights of the adverse party, where an action on a note formerly held by the C. Savings Bank, all of whose assets were taken over by a trust company, which then changed its name to the C. Trust & Savings Bank, was brought in the name of the C. Savings Bank, plaintiff, on defendants' motion for a nonsuit because of the variance, should have been permitted to amend by changing the name of the plaintiff to the C. Trust & Savings Bank, especially where, instead of proving that they had been misled, defendants did not even allege that they were misled.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. § 195; Dec. Dig. § 95.*]

Watts, J., dissenting.

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Lexington County; I. W. Bowman, Judge.
"To be officially reported."

Action by the Citizens' Savings Bank against D. F. Efird and others. From a judgment of nonsuit, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

J. B. Wingard, of Lexington, for appellant. Efird & Dreher and Thurmond, Timmerman & Callison, all of Lexington, for respondents.

HYDRICK, J. Under date of February 6, 1907, the defendants made and delivered to McLaughlin Bros. their joint and several note, payable to their order one year after date. On December 6, 1907, the payees discounted said note at the Citizens' Savings Bank, of Columbus, Ohio. Thereafter, on October 30, 1909, the Ohio Trust Company, being the owner of the entire capital stock of the Citizens' Savings Bank, took over all the assets of the bank, including said note, and on that day the stockholders of the Ohio Trust Company changed its corporate name to the Citizens' Trust & Savings Bank. Thereafter this action was brought on said note in the name of Citizens' Savings Bank, and it is alleged in the complaint that said bank is the owner and holder of said note. That allegation is, among others, denied by the defendants. When the facts above stated came out in the evidence introduced by plaintiff at the trial, the defendants moved for a nonsuit, on the ground that there was a fatal variance between the allegation and proof as to the ownership of the note sued on. The plaintiff's attorney moved for leave to amend by changing the name of the plaintiff from Citizens' Savings Bank to the Citizens' Trust & Savings Bank, so as to make the allegation conform to the evidence. The court refused the motion and granted a nonsuit.

The Code of Procedure was adopted for the purpose of getting the courts away from the technicalities of common-law pleading

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep.'s Indexes and practice, under the rules of which the utmost precision was required, and the most intricate distinctions were drawn, which too frequently sacrificed substance to form and defeated substantial justice. Hence the Code has made liberal provisions with respect to allowing amendments, and the Legislature has declared that the Code must be liberally construed, with the view to the doing of substantial justice. In the chapter which deals with "Mistakes in Pleadings and Amendments," we find section 220, which reads: "No variance between the allegation in a pleading and the proof shall be deemed material unless it have actually misled the adverse party, to his prejudice, in maintaining his action or defense, upon the merits. Whenever it shall be alleged that a party has been so misled, that fact shall be proved to the satisfaction of the court, and in what respect he has been misled; and thereupon the court may order the pleading to be amended, upon such terms as shall be just."

Section 221 provides that, where the variance is not material, the court may direct the fact to be found according to the evidence, or order an immediate amendment.

Section 222 provides that, where the allegation of the cause of action or defense is not proved, not in some particular or particulars only, but in its entire scope and meaning, it shall not be deemed a case of variance within sections 220 and 221, but a failure of proof.

Section 224 provides: "The court may, before or after judgment, in furtherance of justice, and on such terms as may be proper, amend any pleading, process, or proceeding, by adding or striking out the name of any party; or by correcting a mistake in the name of a party, or a mistake in any other respect; or by inserting other allegations material to the case; or, when the amendment does not change substantially the claim or defense, by conforming the pleading or proceeding to the facts proved."

Section 227 reads: "The court shall, in every stage of action, disregard any error or defect in the pleadings or proceedings, which shall not affect the substantial rights of the adverse party; and no judgment shall be reversed or affected by reason of such error or defect."

The facts and circumstances warrant no other conclusion than that the action was brought in the name of Citizens' Savings Bank through mistake. It is equally clear that defendants have not been misled thereby to their prejudice in maintaining their defense on the merits. At any rate, they have not even alleged that they have been so misled, to say nothing of their failure to even attempt to comply with the requirement of section 220 by proving to the satisfaction of the court wherein they have been misled.

In Roundtree v. Railway, 72 S. C. 477, 52

S. E. 231, Mr. Chief Justice Gary, delivering the opinion of the court, quotes with approval from Ahrens v. Bank, 8 S. C. 410, as follows (the section numbers in the quotation being changed to correspond with the numbers of the same sections in the Code of 1912): "Under section 220, no variance is to be regarded as material unless it has actually misled the party, and in that case his remedy is to satisfy the court immediately, by proof by affidavit, that he has been so misled. The effect of such proof is not to prevent the court from allowing an amendment to such case, but to entitle the party prejudiced by such amendment either time, or such other compensatory terms and conditions as may be reasonable. The object of the Code is to secure to parties, acting in good faith, the fullest right to rectify, by amendment, any defect in pleading the result of misapprehension, inadvertence, or accident, but at the same time to protect, as far as possible, the substantial rights of the party prejudiced by such amendment. If the party prejudiced by such variance does not take advantage of the remedy afforded by section 220, then, under section 221, it is the duty of the court to disregard the variance as immaterial, and either to order an immediate amendment, or to direct the fact to be found according to the evidence. Section 222 was intended to guard against the application of sections 220 and 221 to cases which are not, properly speaking, cases of variance, but where the party has proved, on the trial, a state of facts foreign to the allegations of the pleadings, and having the effect to leave the facts alleged in the pleadings unproved in their 'entire scope and meaning.' It is obvious that variances, involving nothing more than technical differences between the allegations and proofs, can only be made material in the mode pointed out in section 220. * * * Under the foregoing provisions of the Code (220 and 221), a motion for a nonsuit is not the proper mode of taking advantage of any variance that might have occurred; nor can this court set aside the judgment, if sustained by the proofs, on the ground of any such variance, in view of the provisions of the Code in question."

In Bull v. Lambson, 5 S. C. 288, the syllabus reads: "In an action against two as copartners, the court may, at the close of plaintiff's case, and after motion for nonsuit, on the ground that neither a copartnership nor other joint liability had been shown, allow the plaintiff, under section 296 (224, supra) of the Code, to amend by striking out the name of one defendant and proceeding against the other individually."

In Coleman v. Heller, 13 S. C. 491, the action was brought in the name of Geo. H. Coleman on certain school certificates, and it was alleged that he was the owner of them. At the trial it appeared from the plaintiff's own testimony that the certificates belonged to his wife, S. A. Coleman. Thereupon the defendant moved for a nonsuit, as was done in the present case. The court refused the motion, and granted an order, moved for by the plaintiff, to substitute his wife, S. A. Coleman, in his place on the record as plaintiff. The defendant's attorneys then moved for time to prepare their defense to the action of S. A. Coleman, alleging that they could not make their defense to that action without an opportunity for preparation. The court refused their motion, and held that they could set up the same defense to the action of S. A. Coleman which they had proposed to set up against that of Geo. H. Coleman. On appeal from judgment for S. A. Coleman, this court, in construing the sections of the Code above cited, held: "It was in the discretion of the trial judge, at the trial in furtherance of justice, to grant an order striking out the name of one person and inserting that of another as plaintiff." On page 496 of 13 S. C., the court said: "In the case of Jennings v. Springs, Bailey, Eq. 181, Chancellor De Saussure had granted an order permitting the complainant, Jennings, to amend his bill by substituting the names of the executors of Pressly for his own; the bill having been filed by him as their agent, and his own name erroneously inserted. Appeal was taken, and the Court of Appeals held that it was within the discretion of the court to permit a bill to be amended by substituting the name of a new for an original complainant, even after answer filed, but upon reasonable terms." But it was held, in Coleman v. Heller, that it was error to refuse the motion of defendant's attorneys for time to prepare their defense to the action of S. A. Coleman, the substituted plaintiff, and, on that ground, a new trial was granted.

In Tarrant v. Gittelson, 16 S. C. 231, the second and third syllabi read: "(2) The complaint alleged that the defendant was 'indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $100 for work, labor, and services done,' etc. Upon objection made by defendant to the introduction of evidence to prove a special contract, the trial judge permitted the plaintiff to amend his complaint so as to allege a special contract, and then received the evidence. Held, that the amendment was permissible under section 196 (224, supra) of the Code. (3) The amendment was opposed by defendant, but time to answer was not asked for. It was within the discretion of the circuit judge to allow the trial to proceed on the amended complaint."

The foregoing cases show clearly that the court erred in refusing plaintiff's motion to amend. See, also, Sibley v. Young, 26 S. C. 415, 2 S. E. 314; Moore v. Christian, 31 S. C. 333, 9 S. E. 981; State v. Scheper, 33 S. C. 576, 11 S. E. 623, 12 S. E. 564, 816; Booth v. Langley, 51 S. C. 412, 29 S. E. 204; Mew v. B. Co., 55 S. C. 90, 32 S. E. 828; Adams

v. R. Co., 68 S. C. 409, 47 S. E. 698; Sevier v. R. Co., 82 S. C. 311, 64 S. E. 390; Taylor v. R. Co., 81 S. C. 574, 62 S. E. 1113; Brown v. R. Co., 83 S. C. 557, 65 S. E. 1102; Selgler v. R. Co., 85 S. C. 345, 67 S. E. 296.

Reversed.

GARY, C. J., concurs.

WATTS, J. I dissent, as I think judgment should be affirmed.

FRASER, J. I concur, in result, in the opinion of Mr. Justice HYDRICK.

BETHEA et al. v. ALLEN.†

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Sept. 30, 1913.)

1. EVIDENCE (§ 35*)—FOREIGN LAWS—PROOF. Where the law of another state is germane to the issue, it must be proved as a fact.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 35, 51; Dec. Dig. § 35.*]

2. QUIETING TITLE (§ 15*)—COMMON SOURCE—ESTOPPEL.

Where defendant in a suit to quiet title claimed under a deed to the common source, defendant could not take advantage of any defect in the execution of such deed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Quieting Title, Cent. Dig. § 47; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1033*)—INSTRUCTIONS—RIGHT TO ALLEGE ERROR.

Appellant may not allege error in instructions favorable to him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4052-4062; Dec. Dig. § 1033.*]

4. EJECTMENT (§ 15*)—PROOF OF TITLE—COMMON SOURCE.

The rule that plaintiff in ejectment must show a complete and perfect title in himself, going back to a grant either actual or presumed, is subject to the exception that, where both parties claim from a common source, plaintiff need go back no further than such source, and, having done so, the question then is which of the two has the superior title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Ejectment, Cent. Dig. §§ 59-62; Dec. Dig. § 15.*]

5. LIFE ESTATES (§ 24*)—PAYMENT—ASSIGNMENT TO MORTGAGEES.

Where life tenants mortgaged the land and on paying the mortgage had it assigned to them, the court, in an action by the remainderman against the grantee in fee of the life tenants, properly refused to charge that by such assignment the life tenants became mortgagees in possession for the sole purpose of applying the rents and profits of the land to the payment of the mortgage, and that such possession could never ripen into title as against the claim of the plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Life Estates, Cent. Dig. §§ 21, 46, 52; Dec. Dig. § 24.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Dillon County; C. J. Ramage, Special Judge.

Action by B. P. Bethea and others against J. Furman Allen. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff Bethea alone appeals. Reversed and remanded.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

† Rehearing denied October 20, 1913.

Sellers & Moore, of Dillon, for appellant.
W. F. Stevenson, of Cheraw, for respondent.

FRASER, J. Parker Bethea and his wife died, leaving a large tract of land. In the division among their children, lot No. 4 was set aside to Elizabeth Henderson, a daughter. Elizabeth had no children and lived with her two sisters, Laura Jane Bethea and Maria L. Bethea, in the family home on lot No. 4. On the 6th day of January, 1871, Elizabeth signed the following paper: "State of South Carolina, County of Marion. Know all men by these presents that I, Elizabeth E. Henderson, for and in consideration of the natural love (sic) and affection I bear to my two sisters, Laura Jane Bethea and Maria L. Bethea, I give at my decease all the real and personal property that came to me from the estate of the late Parker Bethea and Elizabeth Bethea, his wife, and in case the said Laura Jane Bethea and Maria L. Bethea die leaving no children; then after paying for a set of tombstones to be put to my grave and all other debts and funeral expenses, I give the above described property to Benjamin P. Bethea, and to his children at his decease to have and to hold, and I bind each and every one of my heirs and administrators and assigns to warrant and defend the same with the above described parties. Given under my hand and seal this the 6th day of January, 1871. Elizabeth E. Henderson. [Seal.] Witness: Elmore Allen. G. W. Miles."

On June 28, 1872, the paper was probated, and on June 29, 1872, it was recorded. On the 19th of June, 1872, Elizabeth died leaving her sisters in possession. The grantees conveyed this land by deeds that purported to carry a fee, and it was bought by the respondent. Both of these sisters are now dead, and Benjamin P. Bethea and others bring this suit to recover the possession of the land as remaindermen. On the 10th of April, 1872, Elizabeth executed another paper which was construed to have been a mortgage of "all her right, title, and interest" in this land. Upon this mortgage there appears the following indorsement: "The within mortgage paid in full by Laura J. Bethea and Maria L. Bethea and turned over to them for their benefit this June 3, 1873." Laura married Allen; Maria married Harris.

The defendant denied plaintiff's title and claimed title in himself, set up the bar of the statute (10 years) and a presumption of a grant (20 years), and claimed to be entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee and claimed betterments. The jury found for the defendant, and, from the judgment entered thereon, the plaintiff appealed upon six exceptions.

[1] "(1) This (sic) his honor erred in refusing plaintiff's fourth request to charge as follows: Under the statute of many jurisdictions superiority of title between conflicting conveyances is made to depend upon priority of record. Between two deeds standing on the same footing as to recording the older will have the preference. It being respectfully submitted that the foregoing request embodies a correct proposition of law and that under the testimony same was applicable to this case." This exception is overruled. There was nothing in this case which called for the charge as to the law in other jurisdictions, and, if there had been, there was nothing in the case upon which the charge could be based. If the law in other states is germane to the issue, then these laws must be proved, and there was no proof of them.

[2] Exception 2: "That his honor erred in charging the jury that the plaintiff must prove the delivery of the deed under which plaintiffs claim by the preponderance of the testimony. Whereas, under all the admitted facts in the case, he should have charged that there was a prima facie showing of delivery and that it was incumbent on defendant to prove nondelivery of said deed by a preponderance of testimony."

Exception 3: "That his honor erred in charging the jury that plaintiffs must prove delivery of the deed under which they claimed by a preponderance of the testimony in that he should have held under all the admitted facts and circumstances of the case that defendant was estopped from claiming that there had been no delivery of said deed for the reason that plaintiff and defendant claimed the lands in dispute from a common source, to wit, from Elizabeth Henderson."

These exceptions are sustained for the reason that Elizabeth Henderson was the common source, as will be seen under exception 5; and, as the defendant claimed under this deed, he could not take advantage of a defect in the execution of it.

[3] Exception 4: "That his honor erred in charging the jury the law as to adverse possessions when in fact there was, and could be under all the admitted facts and circumstances in the case, no question of adverse possession, and that such a charge could only have confused the minds of the jurors to the prejudice of the plaintiff."

His honor charged as follows: "I charge you that there could be no adverse holding or possession sufficient to ripen into title by the heirs at law or grantees of Laura Allen and Maria Harris, if they died without children, even if they undertook to convey the premises in fee simple with general warranty against Benjamin P. Bethea and his children until both Maria and Laura had been dead for ten years or more." It was undisputed that they had no children and the survivor had not been dead ten years. The charge was wholly in favor of appellant and he cannot complain. This exception is overruled.

Exception 5: "That his honor erred in refusing plaintiff's motion for a new trial, based upon the ground that the verdict of the jury was capricious and unsupported by the evidence in that it appeared from the testimony and evidence that both parties claimed from a common source, to wit, Elizabeth Henderson, and that defendant's predecessors in title had only a life estate, with remainder over to the plaintiffs, and that such life estate had terminated, thus terminating the right of defendant to the possession of the premises in question."

[4] This exception must be sustained. In the case of Kilgore v. Kirkland, 69 S. C. page 84, 48 S. E. page 46, we find the following: "In Smythe v. Tolbert, 22 S. C. 133, the court says: 'There is no doubt that, as a general rule, the plaintiff, in an action to recover possession of real estate, on the ground of title, must show a complete and perfect title in himself, going back to a grant either actual or presumed.' To this rule, however, there are several exceptions, one of which is that, where both parties claim from a common source, the plaintiff need go no further back than this source; and, having done so, the question then is: Which of the two has the superior title? * * * Whether, then, the general rule or the exceptions is to govern, in any special case, must depend upon the fact whether or not the parties claim through a common source. If they do not, then the plaintiff must recover upon the strength of his own title and not upon the weakness of that of his adversary and must trace back to a grant; if they do, then the plaintiff may stop, in the first instance, at the title of the common grantor; and whether they thus claim or not is a question of fact (unless admitted in the pleadings) for the jury upon the evidence."

In this case the plaintiff claimed directly under the Elizabeth Henderson deed. He procured successive conveyances from the grantees under that and to the defendant. Plaintiff had thereby made out a prima facie case. The defendant had the right to show that he did not claim under the Henderson deed or that he had an independent source of title. He made no such proof, but, on the contrary, the following appears in the case: "Q. Since the death of Mrs. Henderson, those under whom you claim and you have used it and claimed the whole of that land as your own land? A. Yes, sir." There was undisputed evidence that the successive grantors in defendant's chain of title had been in possession. There was therefore no evidence from which the jury could infer that the defendant did not claim under the Henderson deed. Inasmuch as the defendant did claim under the Henderson deed, there could be no adverse holding until the death of Mrs. Laura Allen and Mrs. Maria Harris, and the survivor died in 1909. The limitations were therefore unavailing.

[5] Exception 6: "Because his honor erred in not charging the jury as requested by plaintiff that the only effect of the mortgage on the land in dispute admittedly given by Laura Bethea and Maria Bethea to Joel Allen soon after the death of Elizabeth Henderson, and its so-called assignment to them by Joel Allen when paid, was to make them mortgagees in possession for the purpose of applying the rents and profits of the land to the payment of the mortgage, and that such possession could never ripen into title as against the claim of title by the plaintiff and his children under the deed of Elizabeth Henderson in question in this case." The mortgage was marked paid, and there is no evidence that it was not paid. This exception is overruled.

The judgment appealed from is reversed as to Benjamin F. Bethea, who alone appeals, and the case remanded for a new trial.

GARY, C. J., and HYDRICK and WATTS, JJ., concur.

CITY OF ANDERSON v. FANT.

(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Oct. 8, 1913.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 120*)—ORDINANCES—CONSTRUCTION.

In construing a municipal ordinance the court must bear in mind the law and policy of the state upon the same subject and if possible construe them so that there will be no conflict, because the ordinance will be void to the extent of the conflict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 274-280; Dec. Dig. § 120.*]

2. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 132*) — PUBLIC POLICY—HOW DETERMINED.

In determining the public policy of a state with reference to guilt in questions of the sale and purchase of intoxicating liquor, the court must accept the statutes as fixing the public policy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 141; Dec. Dig. § 132.*]

3. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 132*) — DIVISION OF POWER—JUDICIAL FUNCTIONS.

In determining the public policy of the state with reference to the sale and purchase of intoxicating liquor, the courts have no concern with the reasons of the lawmakers in failing to condemn the buyer.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 141; Dec. Dig. § 132.*]

4. STATUTES (§ 241*)—CONSTRUCTION IN FAVOR OF DEFENDANT.

In a criminal prosecution there should be a strict construction of the law in favor of the defendant, but it should not be one which would thwart the clear intention of the lawmakers as gathered from a reasonable interpretation of the statute.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. §§ 322, 323; Dec. Dig. § 241.*]

5. STATUTES (§ 241*)—CONSTRUCTION—RIGHTS OF DEFENDANT.

In a criminal prosecution under a statute it must appear, not only that the accused is within the letter of the law, but that he is within its spirit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. §§ 322, 323; Dec. Dig. § 241.*]

6. COURTS (§ 107*)—DECISIONS — CONSTRUCTION.

In construing a judicial opinion the language must always be read and considered in the light of the facts in the case under consideration.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. § 360; Dec. Dig. § 107.*]

7. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 138*)—OFFENSES.

Cr. Code 1912, § 794, provides that all intoxicating liquors are detrimental and contraband, and that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation, or association to sell, * * * receive, accept, * * * keep in possession, or furnish, or otherwise dispose of intoxicating liquors, while section 825 makes it a misdemeanor to transport liquors into the state or from place to place within it. A municipal ordinance made it a misdemeanor for any person to transport, handle, etc., any illicit or contraband alcoholic liquors. Defendant, as agent for two other men, purchased intoxicating liquor from one not authorized to sell and transported it to his principals. Held that, as it is the policy of the law not to punish the buyer of intoxicating liquors, defendant, even though he obtained the liquors from an illegal source, cannot be convicted of a violation of the ordinance against carrying contraband liquors, because he does not come within its spirit as defined by the public policy of the state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 148; Dec. Dig. § 138.*]

8. WITNESSES (§ 297*)—PRIVILEGE—LOSS OF PRIVILEGE.

One liable to a prosecution for a criminal offense cannot be compelled to testify merely because the prosecuting officer may agree not to prosecute him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 1011, 1026-1037; Dec. Dig. § 297.*]

9. INTOXICATING LIQUORS (§ 169*)—OFFENSES —PURCHASES BY AGENT.

One who acts in good faith solely as the agent or messenger of a purchaser of intoxicating liquors is not himself guilty of violating the law against the illegal sale of intoxicants.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 187, 188; Dec. Dig. § 169.*]

Fraser, J., dissenting.

Appeal from General Sessions Circuit Court of Anderson County; S. W. G. Shipp, Judge.

"To be officially reported."

Proceeding by the City of Anderson against Milton Fant for the violation of a municipal ordinance. From a judgment of conviction, defendant appeals. Reversed.

A. H. Dagnall and Leon L. Rice, both of Anderson, for appellant. Proctor Bonham, of Greenville, and Hood & Sullivan, of Anderson, for respondent.

HYDRICK, J. Defendant was convicted and sentenced for violating an ordinance of the city of Anderson against transporting contraband liquors. The facts stated in the record as the basis of his conviction are: "The defendant, at the request of two white men, purchased and obtained from a person within the city of Anderson, whom he knew was not authorized to sell, two pints of whisky and carried and delivered the whisky to the said white men." In the order dismissing his appeal, the circuit court found that defendant, either as agent or principal, purchased the liquor from one whom he knew was not authorized to sell it and held that, having obtained it through an unlawful sale, it was contraband, and the subsequent transportation of it was a violation of the ordinance.

From this statement of the facts and finding of the court, we assume (in fact, it was conceded) that defendant's conviction was not based upon the finding that he was, in any degree whatever, a participant in the sale or the agent of the seller, but solely upon the ground that, notwithstanding he was only the agent of the purchasers, he was nevertheless subject to punishment under the ordinance. It necessarily follows, from this construction of the statute and ordinances, that if the white men, for whom he purchased the liquor, had themselves purchased it directly from the seller and had carried it to their homes, they too would have been subject to the penalty of the law.

[1] In construing the ordinance, we must bear in mind the law and policy of the state upon the same subject and construe them so that there will be no conflict, because to that extent the ordinance would be void.

[2-7] Section 794 of the Criminal Code of 1912 reads: "All alcoholic liquors and beverages, whether manufactured within this state or elsewhere, or any mixture by whatsoever name called, which if drunk to excess will produce intoxication, are hereby declared to be detrimental, and their use and consumption to be against the morals, good health and safety of the state, and contraband. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or association within this state to manufacture, sell, barter, exchange, receive, accept, give away to induce trade, deliver, store, keep in possession in this state, furnish at public places or otherwise dispose of any spirituous, malt, vinous, fermented, brewed or other liquors and beverages, or any compound or mixture thereof which contains alcohol and is used as a beverage, and which if drunk to excess will produce intoxication, except as hereinafter provided."

Section 825 makes it a misdemeanor to transport liquors into the state or from place to place within the state, except as therein permitted, and none of the exceptions include defendant's case.

The ordinances of the city upon the same subjects are as follows:

"Sec. 49. It shall be deemed a misdemeanor for any person to sell, barter, exchange or give away in connection with business or trade, any distilled, malt, vinous or other alcoholic liquors or any intoxicating liquor or whisky or spirits of any kind, in the city of Anderson."

"Sec. 51. It shall be deemed a misdemeanor for any person to transport, handle, store or conceal within the city of Anderson, any illicit or contraband alcoholic liquors."

It will be observed that neither the state statute nor the city ordinance penalizes the purchase of liquors. It has never been the policy of this state to punish the buyer of liquors. There is therefore no inhibition in the statutes or ordinances against buying, except as it is the counterpart of selling, which is prohibited; but, as between the two, the seller alone is subjected to punishment. It may be that, from a moral standpoint, the buyer is equally culpable with the seller, and doubtless there are circumstances under which, viewed from that standpoint, he is the more worthy of blame. But the courts must accept, as the policy of the state, that which is written in the statutes. The reasons why the lawmakers have not seen fit to condemn the buyer as well as the seller are not material, because that is a matter for legislative rather than judicial consideration. But it may not be amiss to say that one of the reasons usually assigned (and a very cogent one) is that, if both were subject to punishment, neither could be compelled to testify against the other upon the ground that no man can be compelled to furnish evidence against himself, and for that reason both would escape punishment.

The rule that statutes which prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors are not to be construed so as to bring the purchaser, or those who act solely for him in making the purchase, within their condemnation is thus stated in the case of Lott v. United States (C. C. A.) 205 Fed. 28: "It is uniformly held that statutes prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors are directed against the act of selling only, and that the offense is committed only by the vendor or some one who aids him in selling, and that the purchaser and those who aid him in the purchase are not guilty of aiding or abetting in the commission of the offense." Numerous authorities are cited which fully sustain the principle stated.

In the light of the established policy of the state and of the universally recognized principle that penal statutes must be strictly construed, we cannot, without doing violence to both, sustain defendant's conviction. We cannot do so without reading into the statute and ordinances that which the lawmakers have purposely refrained from writing into them. They do not condemn the buyer. We must assume that the lawmakers understood the use of the word "buy" quite as well as the word "sell," and that, if they had intended to condemn the buyer, they would have done so in language as plain as that used against the seller. We have no authority to extend the statute or ordinances by construction to include the buyer. To say that they may not be construed so as to penalize the buyer for the act of buying, but that they may be construed so as to penalize him for the acts which must almost inevitably follow the buying, to wit, transporting and keeping in possession the liquor which he buys, would not only be an extremely technical construction but it would be one so highly technical that it would not be warranted, even if it were invoked in favor of the defendant instead of against him, for, while the rule requires a strict construction in favor of defendant, it should not be strained or unnatural or one which would thwart the clear intention of the lawmakers to be gathered from a reasonable interpretation of the language used.

It must appear, however, that the accused is within the spirit as well as the letter of the law. That he may be within the strict letter of the law is not enough, as was held in State v. Rookard, 87 S. C. 444, 69 S. E. 1076, where section 794, supra, was construed by the circuit court to make it a crime to keep liquor in one's possession, though it had been obtained lawfully and was kept for a lawful purpose. The defendant was clearly within the letter of the statute. But this court reversed the ruling and held that the statute must be construed to mean "liquor which had been unlawfully obtained (that is, obtained in a manner not recognized as lawful by that act or the un-repealed provision of the act of 1907), or to keep in possession for sale or some other use forbidden by the statute liquor lawfully obtained." It is now contended that the language of the court above quoted warrants the holding that, as the defendant in this case obtained the liquor unlawfully or in a manner not recognized as lawful by the act, he falls within its spirit as well as its letter. Strictly construed, the language used may possibly bear that construction. But that was not intended. The language of an opinion must always be read and construed in the light of the facts of the case under consideration, and, when so read, that above quoted does not bear the interpretation placed upon it. In that case the sole question was whether a citizen could lawfully keep liquor in his possession which he had obtained for a lawful purpose. The circuit court had ruled that he could not, without regard to the manner of his acquiring possession or the purpose for which he kept it. This court held that he could, if he kept it for a lawful purpose.

In State v. Nickels, 65 S. C. 169, 43 S. E. 521, the court, speaking through Mr. Chief Justice Gary, expressly held that the character of the liquor found in the possession of a citizen (that is, as to whether it was contraband or not) was to be determined by the purpose for which he had it, and said: "The question whether the liquor was contraband depended upon the purpose with which the defendant took it into his possession." In the Rookard Case the question as to how or in what manner the defendant obtained possession of the liquor was not involved, nor was it made an element of the decision, except in so far as the manner of obtaining possession was considered as throwing light on the purpose of it; as, for instance, if it should appear that one had obtained possession by manufacturing it (an act which is not only not recognized as lawful but one which is positively prohibited under penalty), or for the purpose of selling, or other unlawful purpose.

But the question now before us, whether a citizen can lawfully transport and keep in possession for his own personal use liquor which he purchased from one who had no authority to sell it, was not considered or decided in that case. While obtaining it in that manner is unlawful in one sense, it is not unlawful in the sense that it is a crime, at least so far as the buyer is concerned; and to say that the buyer cannot be punished for buying, but that he may be for acts which must necessarily immediately follow the purchase, to wit, the transportation and keeping in possession, is contradictory in terms. In speaking of obtaining possession unlawfully, in the Rookard Case, the court evidently did not use the word in the sense which it is now sought to give it. Suppose one should steal a pint of liquor from a dispensary and carry it home and keep it there for his own personal use. Would it be contraband simply because he had obtained it in an unlawful manner? And could the thief be convicted of transporting and storing and keeping in possession contraband liquor? Yet without doubt he obtained it unlawfully.

[8] The construction put upon the statute and ordinance by the circuit court makes them conflict with the policy of the state in that it brings the buyer as well as the seller under the condemnation of the law and deprives the state of the right to compel the buyer to testify against the seller, thereby frustrating one of the purposes of penalizing only the seller. If that construction is sustained, the buyer can refuse to testify, because the purchase almost necessarily implies transporting and keeping in possession. It is no answer to say that the prosecuting officer may agree not to prosecute him. The privilege of refusing to testify would still be his, and he could not be compelled to waive it.

If defendant had been convicted upon the finding, even by inference from the facts stated, that he was a participant in the sale or the agent of the seller as well as the buyer, I should be satisfied to sustain the conviction. But the agreed facts and the finding of the court exclude that hypothesis.

[9] The greater weight of authority sustains the proposition that one who acts in good faith solely as the agent or messenger of the purchaser of liquors is not himself guilty of violating the law against selling thereof. But of course this rule will not be allowed to shield a guilty participation in the sale; nor will the courts tolerate an evasion of the law by any device, pretense, or subterfuge. See State v. Ito, 114 Minn. 426, 131 N. W. 469, 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 619, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 681, where the authorities are collated.

Judgment reversed.

GARY, C. J., and WATTS, J., concur.

FRASER, J. I cannot concur in the opinion of the majority in this case. I know we are construing an ordinance of the city of Anderson and not a statute of the state. An ordinance of a city, however, should not be construed with a total disregard of the public policy of the state from whose laws it derives its powers. It is the public policy of this state that "all alcoholic liquors and beverages, whether manufactured within this state or elsewhere, or any mixture by whatever name called, which if drunk to excess will produce intoxication, are hereby declared to be detrimental, and their use and consumption to be against the morals, good health, and safety of the state and contraband." With this preliminary statement, the statutes go on to allow the sale under certain conditions, the main object of which is to protect the health and good morals of her citizens. In its dealings with this most difficult question, there appears the recognition of this fact that there are liquors that are pure and liquors that are impure. The use of impure liquors is deemed peculiarly harmful. In order to prevent the use of that which is impure and most deadly, it provided that its own officers shall purchase with careful analysis, and in order to prevent subsequent adulteration its own officers shall have the exclusive right to sell to the citizens. The statute does not forbid the buying of liquor. The right to buy, however, is not a constitutional or inalienable right. The state may pass any law that is not forbidden by its Constitution. Those rights, therefore, that are not reserved by the Constitution may not only be infringed upon, to the point of uselessness, but destroyed altogether. Buying had not been forbidden. The defendant was not charged with buying. The right to buy may be rendered useless by forbidding the buyer to transport.

It will be observed that it is the policy of the state to prohibit the use of contraband liquor. If the Legislature sees fit to hamper the unlawful sale by forbidding the transportation and not the purchase, it does not lie with the courts to say the thing is illogical and therefore is not the law.

Section 825, Crim. Code 1912, prohibits the transportation of contraband liquors. The city of Anderson has the same policy, within its limited sphere, and by its ordinance provides: "Sec. 51. It shall be deemed a misdemeanor for any person to transport, handle, store or conceal within the city of Anderson any illicit or contraband alcoholic liquors." The appellant was found guilty of transporting contraband alcoholic liquors in the city of Anderson.

The case shows the following: "The defendant at the request of two white men purchased and obtained from a person within the city of Anderson, whom he knew was not authorized to sell, two pints of whisky and carried and delivered the whisky to the said white men." The case further shows: "The defendant, Milton Fant, a negro, was tried and found guilty by the recorder of the city of Anderson of transporting alcoholic liquors in the city of Anderson." The defendant was not charged with buying and not convicted of it. He was convicted of transporting the liquor that certainly up to the time of sale was contraband.

Crim. Code, § 794, says: "It shall be unlawful for any person, etc., to * * * receive, accept * * * any compound or mixture thereof which contains alcohol * * * except as hereinafter provided." This was not within the exception. So we have liquor contraband in the hands of the seller, contraband in the hands of the principal, and not contraband in the hands of the go-between. I fail to see that this view is technical. The state has the right to prevent the sale of contraband liquor or to hamper the sale by any means allowed by the Constitution. The city of Anderson has the right to promote the public policy of this state as declared by the Legislature. If it be true that the consumption of contraband liquors is fraught with peculiar danger to health and morals, then the state and city has the right to hamper the sale of it. It has the right to forbid the sale, the purchase, the storing, or even the possession and transportation. It may forbid them all. It may forbid one and not the other. The fault may be in the writer of this opinion, but I cannot see it and cannot concur.

MILLER v. ATLANTIC COAST LINE R. CO.
(Supreme Court of South Carolina. Sept. 29, 1913.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 110*)—ORDERS APPEALABLE—ORDER GRANTING OR REFUSING NEW TRIAL.

An order granting or refusing a new trial is expressly made appealable by Code Civ. Proc. 1912, § 11 (d), subd. 2; but the right of appeal is necessarily limited to such orders as the Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 740-748; Dec. Dig. § 110.*]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 979*)—ORDER DENYING NEW TRIAL—REVIEW.

The Supreme Court in actions at law has no jurisdiction to review orders granting or refusing new trials when involving the decision of questions of fact, unless the finding is wholly unsupported by evidence, or the conclusion reached was controlled by some error of law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3871-3873, 3877; Dec. Dig. § 979.*]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 933*)—MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—DENIAL—REVIEW.

Where an order denying a motion for a new trial did not specify the grounds on which it was decided, it must be affirmed on appeal, if the record presented any grounds on which the motion could have been properly refused.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3425, 3426, 3772-3776; Dec. Dig. § 933.*]

4. NEW TRIAL (§ 108*) — DENIAL — NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE—ISSUE OF FACT.

Where, in an action for injuries, defendant after verdict caused plaintiff to be followed, and sought a new trial for alleged newly discovered evidence with reference to plaintiff's conduct incompatible with the injury claimed, but the affidavits in support thereof were conflicting, presenting a sharp issue of fact, and insufficient to show that the newly discovered evidence would probably change the result, there was no abuse of the trial court's discretion in denying the motion, and hence such order was not reviewable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 226, 227; Dec. Dig. § 108.*]

Appeal from Common Pleas Circuit Court of Sumter County; Hayne F. Rice, Judge.

Action by J. A. Miller against the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Dismissed.

P. A. Willcox, of Florence, and Purdy & Bland, Mark Reynolds, and L. W. McLeomore, all of Sumter, for appellant. Best & Cunningham, of Columbia, and L. D. Jennings and John H. Clifton, both of Sumter, for respondent.

HYDRICK, J. This is the third appeal in this case. The action was begun in September, 1910, to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff on October 18, 1909, while in defendant's service as a locomotive engineer. The first trial was had at the November term, 1910, of the circuit court for Sumter, and resulted in a judgment for defendant by direction of the court. The opinion of this court reversing that judgment was handed down on December 21, 1911. 90 S. C. 249, 73 S. E. 71. The second trial was had at the March term, 1912, and plaintiff obtained a verdict and judgment for $35,000, which was affirmed by this court in an opinion filed April 30, 1913. 94 S. C. 388, 77 S. E. 1111. While the last appeal was pending in this court, the defendant moved the circuit court, at the March term, 1913, for a new trial, on the ground of after-discovered evidence. The court refused the motion in a short order, without assigning any reasons therefor. This appeal is from that order.

After the return had been filed in this court, plaintiff moved to dismiss the appeal on the grounds that the order is not appealable: (1) Because the refusal of the motion was discretionary; and (2) because the appeal was taken merely for delay. While it is true that motions for new trials are addressed to the discretion of the court, yet the discretion is not absolute or arbitrary, but judicial. Its exercise must, therefore, be predicated upon legal grounds. And, while this court will not substitute its discretion for that of the circuit court, it will correct any manifest error in the exercise of the discretion vested in that court.

[1] An order granting or refusing a new trial is expressly made appealable in section 11 (d), subd. 2, of the Code of Procedure. But the right of appeal must necessarily be limited to such orders as this court has jurisdiction to review.

[2] We have held in cases too numerous to mention that, under the constitutional limitation of the power of this court to the correction of errors of law, in law cases, such as this is, we have no jurisdiction to review orders granting or refusing new trials, when they are based upon or involve the decision of questions of fact, unless it appears that the finding is wholly unsupported by evidence, or the conclusion reached was influenced or controlled by some error of law.

[3] The order of the circuit court in this case does not disclose the grounds upon which it was decided. We have no way of ascertaining, therefore, whether it was based solely upon findings of fact, or whether any error of law influenced or controlled the decision. However, it must be presumed to be correct, and therefore, if the record presents any grounds upon which the motion could have been properly refused, we must assume that the court rested its decision upon those grounds. Stanford v. Cudd, 93 S. C. 367, 76 S. E. 986. And, if those grounds necessarily involve the decision of disputed questions of fact, it follows that we are without power to review the order.

It becomes necessary, therefore, to state briefly the facts and circumstances upon which the motion was decided. On both trials in the circuit court the plaintiff's physical condition and the cause of it were contested issues of fact, upon which a great deal of expert medical testimony was taken. Plaintiff's testimony tended to prove that his nervous system was seriously and permanently impaired as the result of his injury. Defendant's testimony tended to show that his condition was not so serious as he contended; but, if it was, that it was due to constitutional causes, and not to his injury. After the second trial, defendant employed two men, named Stender and Primrose, to watch plaintiff's movements to see whether they were compatible with the existence of the condition of himself which he and his witnesses had testified to. These men had plaintiff under observation from December 29, 1912, until a short time before the hearing of the motion for a new trial, some time in March, 1913. They testified that during that time he walked normally and naturally, and went about the streets as other men; that on several occasions he got on and off street cars while in motion, with the apparent agility of the ordinary man. Some of the medical experts who had testified for the defendant at the trial testified on this motion that, after careful review and consideration of all the evidence introduced at the trial, the plaintiff's activity, as testified to by Stender and Primrose, was incompatible with the physical condition attributed to him at the time of the trial by plaintiff himself and his witnesses, and that such condition either did not then exist, or, if it did, that he had had a complete recovery, which his experts thought would be impossible. This is the substance of the testimony relied on in support of the motion. On the other hand, plaintiff reaffirmed the truth of his former testimony, and said that he was as bad off as ever, and denied the truth of the testimony of Stender and Primrose, and introduced testimony impeaching their credibility. A number of the medical experts who had testified in his favor at the trial testified, on the hearing of this motion, that they had examined him only a short while before the hearing, and that his condition had not improved since the trial. Some of them said that his condition then and at the time of the trial, as testified to by him and them, was not incompatible with the activity on his part testified to by Stender and Primrose, because, they said, he could have acted as stated by them by overtaking his strength and nervous energy, but that he would have suffered the consequences.

[4] The foregoing history of the case and statement of the evidence adduced at the trial and upon the hearing of the motion show that there was ample ground for dispute in the testimony upon at least two vital questions which involved the decision of questions of fact: (1) Whether the evidence relied upon by defendant, in support of the motion, was "after-discovered," in the legal sense of that word, or was only such as might be more correctly designated "after-thought-of" or "after-procured," and whether, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, evidence of the same kind (except, of course, the element of plaintiff's conduct after the trial, and after he had won his case, and the effect which that might have had upon his mind and conduct) could not have been procured before and in time for the trial. (2) Whether the evidence was of such character that it must necessarily have led any reasonable mind to the conclusion that, if it had been adduced at the trial, the result would probably have been different. The decision of either of those questions adversely to appellant would have been fatal to the motion. Both involved questions of fact, as the court has decided in several cases. See State v. Jones, 89 S. C. 52, 71 S. E. 291, and cases cited.

In State v. Bradford, 87 S. C. 548, 70 S. E. 306, the defendant, having been sentenced to life imprisonment, moved for a new trial on after-discovered evidence, and his motion was refused. On appeal, this court said: "We are deeply impressed with the force of the affidavits made on these and other points on behalf of the defendant. Yet it cannot be doubted that some of the affidavits are cumulative, and that, if the statements contained in all of them had been admitted in evidence at the trial, there would have remained a sharp issue of fact, which might have been decided for or against the defendant according to the view taken by the jury of the credibility of the witnesses. It cannot be said, therefore, that the affidavits must necessarily lead any reasonable mind to the inference that the newly discovered evidence would probably change the result. Nothing short of this would justify the conclusion that the circuit court abused its discretion in refusing the motion. This being so, the law does not allow this court to reverse the decision of the circuit court that a new trial should not be granted. In the recent case of Mills v. A. C. L. R. Co., 87 S. C. 152, 69 S. E. 97, it is said: 'The rule is well settled that a motion for a new trial on after-discovered evidence is addressed to the discretion of the circuit court, and the refusal of such motion will not be reviewed, unless it appears that there was abuse of discretion, or that the exercise of discretion was controlled by some error of law. State v. David, 14 S. C. 432; State v. Workman, 15 S. C. 547; Sams v. Hoover, 33 S. C. 404, 12 S. E. 8; Seegers v. McCreery, 41 S. C. 549, 19 S. E. 696; Peeples v. Werner & Co., 51 S. C. 405, 29 S. E. 2. Such a motion must generally depend on matters of fact, over which this court has no jurisdiction in actions at law.'"

From what we have said, it follows that this court has no jurisdiction to review the order appealed from. This conclusion makes unnecessary the consideration of the second ground of the motion to dismiss the appeal. Appeal dismissed.

GARY, C. J., and WATTS and FRASER, JJ., concur.

ATKINSON v. VIRGINIA OIL & GAS CO.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 81*) — OIL AND GAS—DAMAGES—PERCOLATING WATERS.

The lessor in an oil and gas lease, guaranteeing to him the payment of rental for gas wells and a supply of gas for his mansion house from the same, has a right of action at common law, and also by virtue of the provisions of chapter 62d of the Code of 1906, for injury to a producing and paying gas well on his premises by the percolation of water into the gas-bearing sand from an abandoned well on adjacent land, consequent upon the failure of the owner of such abandoned well to plug it or adopt any means or measures for the prevention of such injury to the neighboring well of the lessor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 211; Dec. Dig. § 81.*]

2. ACTION (§ 35*) — STATUTORY REMEDY—EXCLUSIVENESS—OIL AND GAS — FAILURE TO PLUG WELL.

The remedies given to an adjacent or neighboring landowner by chapter 62d of the Code of 1906 are not exclusive.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 273-294; Dec. Dig. § 35.*]

8. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 81*) — OIL AND GAS—FAILURE TO PLUG WELL—ACTION FOR DAMAGES.

In a declaration for such injury, it is not essential to aver that, at the time thereof, the plaintiff was in receipt of the gas rentals for the injured well, or supplied with gas therefrom for use in his mansion house, under the stipulations therefor in the lease.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 211; Dec. Dig. § 81.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Marshall County.

Action by R. M. Atkinson against the Virginia Oil & Gas Company, a corporation. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed and remanded.

Noyes & Ritz, of Wheeling, for plaintiff in error. S. G. Smith and J. B. Sommersville, both of Wheeling, for defendant in error.

POFFENBARGER, P. The plaintiff's declaration in this action of trespass on the case, held insufficient on a demurrer thereto and to each of its four counts, claims a right of action for damages arising out of the following facts set forth in the declaration: Owning a small tract of land, containing an acre and a half, the plaintiff, on the 24th day of May, 1905, executed an oil and gas lease thereon in favor of John T. Scott, containing, among other things, an agreement on the part of the lessee to pay to the lessor $75 quarterly, in case a well should be found on the premises producing gas in sufficient quantities to justify the marketing of the same, the first payment to mature 30 days after the well should be turned into the pipe line for marketing. This lease was assigned by Scott to the Ohio Valley Gas Company which company completed a well on the property about the 1st of April, 1906, finding gas in paying quantities in the "Big Injun Sand," and connected it with the main line, and the gas therefrom was marketed off of the premises. A large adjoining tract was owned by one S. T. Alley, who gave a lease thereon for oil and gas purposes to the Virginia Oil & Gas Company, or to some one who assigned it to that company. In the spring of 1907, the Virginia Oil & Gas Company drilled a well on the Alley land into the "Big Injun Sand," at a point about 100 feet distant from the gas well on plaintiff's land, and found oil, but pulled the casing from said well about the last of September, 1910, and abandoned it, without having plugged it or taken any other precaution against the escape of gas or oil or surface water or damage to the adjacent property or the well thereon. In consequence of this action on the part of the Virginia Oil & Gas Company, water entered through the abandoned well into the strata of gas-bearing sand, and percolated to such an extent therein and so far permeated it as to obstruct, impede, and destroy the flow of gas into the plaintiff's well, so that it became worthless, and was wholly lost to him as a producing well.

The first count charges a common-law right of recovery on the wrongful failure of the defendant to plug the well, that being one recognized method of avoiding injury likely to ensue upon the abandonment thereof. The second count claims such right on the ground of failure on the part of the lessee to take any precautions against injury by such means. The third count is based upon the violation of a statute, requiring owners of wells intending to abandon them to plug them, and the fourth upon violation of the statute by failure to use any other method of preventing injury. The first two counts stand upon an alleged common-law right of action, and the other two upon a statutory right of action.

[1] The lack of a precedent or line of authorities, asserting a right of action for injury of the kind described in the declaration, necessitates resort to general legal principles and the analogies of the law for disposition of the question presented. As against any person except the owner of the land, the lessee could make such use of it, without liability to strangers, as the owner himself could without such liability. The owner was bound to use his property in such manner as not to injure the property of the adjacent owner, provided he could avoid such injury by the exercise of care and abstention from negligence. In other words, having the right as owner to the full enjoyment of his property and to do thereon what he pleased, he was nevertheless bound to exercise care in such use to avoid injury to his neighbor, if such injury could be avoided by the adoption and observance of reasonable precautions. Walker v. Strosnider, 67 W. Va. 39, 46, 67 S. E. 1087, 21 Ann. Cas. 1; Veith v. Salt Co., 51 W. Va. 96, 41 S. E. 187, 57 L. R. A. 410. An owner may improve his real property in such manner as he may see fit, and if, in consequence thereof, the surface water flows from his premises onto the grounds of his neighbor, he is not liable for any resulting injury. But, if, through negligence or design, he collects the surface water on his premises and casts it in a body onto the lands of his neighbor, he is liable for such injury as may result. In the exercise of his riparian right, he may consume, for domestic and ordinary purposes, all of the water of a stream passing over his land, and thus deprive the adjacent owner below him on the same stream of the use of water therefrom. The same rule is applicable to the enjoyment of percolating or subterranean water by adjacent owners. Pence v. Carney, 58 W. Va. 296, 52 S. E. 702, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 206, 112 Am. St. Rep. 963. But an owner is liable for injury resulting from the diversion of a stream or the waste of water from subterranean streams supplying springs on adjacent property. Pence v. Carney. Similarly, it is now almost universally held that an owner of land cannot rightfully pollute or poison percolating water in his premises so as to injure or destroy streams or wells supplied therefrom on adjacent property. Gilmore v. Royal Salt Co., 84 Kan. 729, 115 Pac. 541, 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 48; Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Howell, 92 Ill. 19; Gas Co. v. Murphy, 39 Pa. 258; Sherman v. Iron Works, 5 Allen (Mass.) 218; Haugh's Appeal, 102 Pa. 42, 48 Am. Rep. 193; Brewing Ass'n v. Peterson, 41 Neb. 897, 60 N. W. 373; Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Graham, 28 Ill. 73, 81 Am. Dec. 263; Gas Co. v. Pebley, 25 Fla. 381, 5 South. 593; Lowe v. Cemetery Ass'n, 58 Neb. 94, 78 N. W. 488, 46 L. R. A. 237.

The declaration charges no pollution or contamination in the ordinary sense of the term, but it nevertheless avers and charges a very substantial injury. It sets up as a fact generally known to oil and gas men that the admission of water into the oil or gas bearing stratum or sand retards or impedes, and often completely stops, the flow of oil and gas in such sand, and charges that the open and unplugged well on the Alley land collected water, which entered the sand from which gas was extracted on the plaintiff's land in such quantities and in such manner as to destroy his well. The injury thus shown is, in its general nature, the same as that inflicted by the pollution of a water well so as to render the water therein unfit for use. In each case, there is injury which could have been avoided by the exercise of care and caution. Though a gas well is not so essential to the enjoyment of premises as a water well, it is nevertheless valuable, and necessary, in the legal sense of the term, to the full enjoyment of the premises. Hence wanton or negligent injury to it ought, upon principle, to call for redress in the courts as in the case of such injury to wells supplying water for domestic purposes. In our opinion, therefore, the declaration sets forth a good cause of action at common law.

[2] The statute, section 2 of chapter 62d of the Code of 1906, makes it the duty of an owner of a well, before abandoning or ceasing to operate it and before drawing the casing therefrom, to plug it in the manner described by that section; and section 5 of that chapter makes the lessee or any person managing, operating, controlling, or possessing any well an owner for the purposes of the act. The statute has for one of its purposes the prevention of the result complained of here. It requires the well to be filled with sand or rock sediment to a depth of at least 50 feet from the top of the oil or gas bearing sand or rock, and a wooden plug, equal in diameter to the diameter of the well below the casing, to be driven at least five feet below the casing. After the withdrawal of the casing, another plug is required to be put in and the well to be filled on top of that plug to a depth at least 50 feet above the top of the oil or gas bearing sand or rock. From all this it is apparent that the injury complained of is the direct and immediate result of a violation of the statute, wherefore, on well-settled principles, there is a right of action under the statute, as well as upon the common law. Bishop on Non Contract Law, § 141; Norman v. Coal Co., 68 W. Va. 405, 66 S. E. 357, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 504. "As a general rule, where an act is enjoined or forbidden under a statutory penalty, and the failure to do the act enjoined or the doing of the act forbidden has contributed to an injury, the party thus in default is liable therefor to the party injured, notwithstanding he may also be subject to a penalty." Parker v. Barnard & Others, 135 Mass. 116, 120 (46 Am. Rep. 450).

As the act prescribes a penalty for non-compliance with its requirements, recoverable in the name of the state at the instance and upon the relation of any citizen of the state, and authorizes a neighboring landowner or lessee or owner of oil or gas rights in neighboring land to enter upon the land on which the abandoned well is and plug the same and charge the owner thereof with the reasonable cost and expense of the work, and also to proceed by bill in equity to compel the owner to comply with the statute, it is contended that these remedies were intended by the Legislature to be exclusive, and to take away such remedies as the common law gives. We are unable to concur in this view. As to a right of action for damages, the statute is silent. It fails to deal with that subject at all. Failing to cover this feature of the subject-matter, it lacks comprehensiveness, one of the essentials of the application of the rule of construction invoked. State v. Harden, 62 W. Va. 313, 58 S. E. 715, 60 S. E. 394; State v. Mines, 38 W. Va. 125, 18 S. E. 470; Herron v. Carson, 26 W. Va. 62; Grant v. Railroad Co., 66 W. Va. 175, 66 S. E. 709. Failure on the part of the adjacent owner to avail himself of the statutory remedies may be a mitigating circumstance, but as to this we express no opinion.

[3] As owner of the property on which the injured well was, the plaintiff had sufficient interest to confer a right of action, even though the rental stipulated for in the lease had not been paid or he was not in receipt of the same at the time the well was injured, or was not in receipt of gas from the well for the purposes of his mansion house. He would be entitled to damages, as owner of the premises on which the well was; for, although he may not have received any rentals nor any gas, he had the right to demand them, upon the facts stated in the declaration, for a producing well had been drilled and connected with the pipe line, and the gas therefrom had been marketed off of the premises.

The court having erred in sustaining the demurrer to the declaration and the several counts thereof, the judgment will be reversed, the demurrer overruled, and the case remanded for further proceedings.

FIRST NAT. BANK v. BANK OF KEYSTONE.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia. Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

ACCOUNT STATED (§ 19*)—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The judgment below is supported by the facts proven, and is therefore affirmed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Account Stated, Cent. Dig. §§ 91-93; Dec. Dig. § 19.*]

Error to Circuit Court, McDowell County.

Action by the First National Bank against the Bank of Keystone. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Anderson, Strother & Hughes, of Welch, for plaintiff in error. French & Easley, of Bluefield, and Ira J. Partlow, of Keystone, for defendant in error.

MILLER, J. Plaintiff, successor of the Citizens Bank of Welch, sued defendant in assumpsit, a state bank organized for the purpose and which in 1905, purchased and took over the business, property and assets of a branch of the Citizens Bank of Welch, theretofore conducted at Keystone, to recover an alleged balance due it under the contract of sale and purchase made and executed by and on behalf of the respective parties thereto.

The declaration contained the common counts, also a special count on the contract, the latter alleging a breach thereof by defendant. Besides the general issue, two special pleas in writing were filed by defendant over the objection of plaintiff, pleading in abatement of the suit an alleged judgment or award of arbitrators, pending the suit, to whom it is alleged all matters in difference in the suit had been submitted by a parol contract between the parties. The demurrer of plaintiff to the special pleas was overruled, and issue was joined on the plea of non assumpsit and on the special pleas with general replication thereto, and the case submitted to the court in lieu of a jury, and for final judgment.

On the special pleas the court found for plaintiff; but on the merits, and on the general issue, the court found for defendant, and the judgment of nil capiat has been brought here by plaintiff for review.

By the contract pleaded in the special count the Citizens Bank of Welch agreed to turn over and sell to defendant as of April 1, 1905, said branch, its safe, stationery, discount accounts, deposit accounts, and all other property of its branch bank, and the defendant thereby agreed to purchase the same, and to pay plaintiff's predecessor therefor the original cost price; also to reimburse and pay it any and all sums lost in excess of all earnings of the branch bank, in the payment of salary, rent, traveling expenses, and all other outlays in the conduct of said branch bank, from its establishment up to April 1, 1905.

The original bill of particulars filed with the declaration contained two items, as follows: To account stated, May 21, 1908, $562.37. Proceeds note for $800.00, dated Jan. 11, 1905, due 90 days after date, made by Ira P. Quesenbery, endorsed &c., and payable to Citizens Bank of Welch, $800.00. Total $862.37. Pending the suit, and before pleas filed plaintiff was permitted, over objection, to amend the bill of particulars, by adding the item: To account stated, $816.44.

It appears from the record that after the purchase of the business of this branch bank by defendant, the old account between the parent and the branch bank was continued on the books of the plaintiff, and that the $816.44, was the balance shown by the books of the plaintiff bank to be due from the defendant to it, as of October 2, 1908, when all business relations ceased, and this suit, after some efforts to adjust differences failed, was brought in December following.

The view we take of the case renders it unnecessary for us to deal with the cross-assignments of error relating to the special pleas in writing. In our opinion the findings of fact and the judgment of the court below thereon for defendant on the general issue must be sustained.

On the trial the two items of the original bill of particulars were practically abandoned, and reliance was placed solely on the item added by the amendment: "To account stated, $816.44." There is no evidence of an account stated covering this item. The only evidence relating to it is that plaintiff's books show this balance. The evidence is not as clear, it seems to us, as it might have been on the matters of account to which the contract relates. It is quite clear, however, that after the sale and purchase by defendant of the branch bank, the parent bank rendered defendant an account of items of expenses disbursed by it on account of the business of the branch bank, including the item, safe $800.00, and aggregating about $1,208.21, and with which defendant credited it. Included in this statement were items of expenses disbursed by the parent bank, aggregating $312.72, which the cashier of defendant, who was also cashier of the branch bank, and kept its books, swears were credited to the parent bank, and charged to expenses. The balance, $629.23, he swears "was the amount of our loss," and was the amount paid out by the branch bank, and carried there in expense account, and which with the $312.72, charged to that account, on the rendition of the account for $1,208.21, by the parent bank, made up the sum $941.95, net loss, of the branch bank, after deducting earnings on the business done for the year, the total expenses according to this witness amounting to $1,756.20. On the trial this witness was pressed hard by the court and opposing counsel, to explain how and in what manner, if at all, defendant had reimbursed the plaintiff the amount of this net loss. He admitted that defendant had never paid this money, but answered that it had given the parent bank credit for $312.72, expenses paid by it, and as to the item $941.95, representing the net loss of the branch bank after deducting earnings, the new bank had carried that amount to expense account and carried it there until the earnings were sufficient to charge it off. On cross-examination this witness testified as follows: "Q. When he rendered that statement showing what expenditures had been made or what furniture had been furnished to the branch bank, what course was pursued then? A. Do you mean after the branch was opened up? Q. From the first. A. That was kept here. We didn't have any statement of that until we bought the branch bank out, then Mr. Woodward rendered a statement showing the furniture and fixtures and the expenses they had borne, such as stationery. He rendered us a statement and we charged that to their respective accounts and gave them credit for these things." Further on in his cross-examination this witness further explains that the $312.72, was the entire amount of expenses paid out by the parent bank, according to the statement rendered, and for which it had credit, and that the balance of the total loss of $941.95, namely $629.23, was the amount of the loss shown on the books of the branch bank. As we interpret the whole evidence, and the testimony of the bookkeepers given in technical terms, the facts are: That certain of the expenses and disbursements for furniture, etc., for the branch bank were paid by the parent bank, and the record thereof kept there while other expenses were paid out of the funds at the branch bank, and the record thereof kept there. And when the sale of the branch was made to defendant, such of the disbursements for furniture and expenses as had been made by the parent bank were covered by the statement then rendered aggregating $1,208.21, and with which the old bank was given credit on the books of the new, the account, furniture and fixtures, being charged with part of the account, and expenses with the residue. Then after an invoice of the accounts of discounts and deposits at the branch bank, purchased by the defendant, the result was a showing of a loss of $941.95, which was carried on the books of the defendant, in expense account, until the earnings enabled it to charge that amount off, and in this way the old bank got paid the loss, for the loss was in this way assumed by defendant, otherwise the old bank would have been obliged under its contract with defendant to make good the deficiency of discounts and other assets to cover the deposit accounts taken over by the defendant bank in the purchase. As noted, the evidence is not clear. It seems to us it might easily have been made so. But we think the court below fairly concluded, that defendant was not indebted to plaintiff on an account stated, or on any account, and our opinion is to affirm the judgment.

INDIANA & OHIO LIVE STOCK INS. CO. v. BOWMAN.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. JUDGMENT (§ 190*)—VERDICT — JUDGMENT NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO.

The plaintiff in an action, claiming more than the defendant admits to be due from him and having a verdict for the amount so admitted, is not entitled to a judgment non obstante veredicto for a sum larger than the verdict, when sufficient pleadings have put in issue his right to have more than the sum so admitted.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 367-375; Dec. Dig. § 190.*]

2. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT (§ 78*) — APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1003*)—ACTION BY PRINCIPAL —EVIDENCE.

Acquiescence by an agent in statements of the account between them rendered by his principal, and his failure to object to the same in any manner, supplemented by evidence showing the relation of principal and agent and a course of business between them, are sufficient evidence of liability, in the absence of opposing evidence, to call for a verdict against him, and the verdict of a jury ignoring such evidence should be set aside.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. §§ 162-177; Dec. Dig. § 78.*
Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3938-3943; Dec. Dig. § 1003.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Barbour County.
Action by the Indiana & Ohio Live Stock Insurance Company against Thomas B. Bowman. Judgment for plaintiff for less than claimed, and it brings error. Reversed and remanded.

Blue & Dayton, of Philippi, for plaintiff in error. W. T. George, of Philippi, for defendant in error.

POFFENBARGER, P. The overruling of a motion to set aside the verdict and to render judgment notwithstanding the verdict are the principal matters of complaint on this writ of error. The action is in assumpsit, the declaration claiming $2,000, and contains only the common counts. The bill of particulars filed with it amounts to $1,493.02. To get rid of the office judgment, the defendant filed an affidavit, admitting indebtedness in the sum of $300, and denying indebtedness in any large amount. He also entered a plea of non assumpsit and one of sets-off, claiming credits by way of set-off, amounting to $1,184.65. Issue having been joined on these pleadings, the case went to the jury upon the oral testimony of the assistant secretary of the plaintiff company and documentary evidence in the form of letters, statements and the books of the company. The verdict was for $300, the amount admitted by the defendant, and the court refused to set aside the verdict and also to enter judgment non obstante veredicto.

[1] As the plea of non assumpsit was sufficient in substance and form and went to the whole demand set up in the declaration, and sets-off, going to a large portion thereof, were sufficiently pleaded, and issues were taken on these pleas, the court properly refused to render judgment notwithstanding the verdict. To sustain this conclusion, it suffices to refer to the authorities, without any discussion of the principles involved. Mason v. Bridge Co., 28 W. Va. 639; Boyles v. Overby, 11 Grat. 202; Beale v. Justices, 10 Grat. 278; 11 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 912 et seq.; Bouv. L. Dic., title Non Obstante Veredicto.

[2] But the court should have set aside the verdict. Offering no testimony whatever, the defendant contented himself with cross-examination of plaintiff's witness who admitted credits amounting to about $1,710. These credits, however, had all been allowed by the plaintiff in the statements rendered to the defendant, showing balances amounting to about $1,478.24, exclusive of interest. About $800 of it was credited on the account for the year 1906, leaving a balance of $520, and the remaining items were all credited to the account for the year 1909, showing a balance of $968.74. These statements were rendered a considerable period of time before the action was brought and the defendant made no objection whatever to them. This evidence of his acquiescence in the claims made against him was supplemented by the testimony of the witness and plaintiff's own letters put in evidence, showing the relation of principal and agent subsisting between the parties. The testimony also indicates an established course of business between them as principal and agent. The defendant was an insurance agent, having charge of a large territory and employing subagents. When applications for policies were made, the policies were sent to the defendant or his subagent and he was charged with the premiums. Policies not accepted by the applicants were returned by the agent and the premiums thereon credited as not having been collected and as being uncollectible. There was no proof of the exact and full terms of the contract between them nor of the actual collection of money, but the oral testimony and letters show the relation of principal and agent and indicate a course of business. These important elements or circumstances having been thus shown, the failure of the defendant to make any objection to the statements is evidence of an admission on his part of the correctness thereof. This evidence is not opposed nor rebutted in any manner whatever and was utterly ignored by the jury. It made a prima facie case and called for a verdict in the absence of opposing evidence. Harmon & Crockett v. Maddy Bros., 57 W. Va. 66, 49 S. E. 1009; Ruffner v. Hewitt, 7 W. Va. 585; 1 Greenleaf, Ev. § 209; Chapman v. Liverpool, etc., Co., 57 W. Va. 395, 50 S. E. 601; Shrewsbury v. Tufts, 41 W. Va. 212, 23 S. E. 692.

In our opinion, the evidence entitled the plaintiffs to a verdict for much more than the $300 admitted by the defendant to be due, and the court erred in refusing to set aside the verdict. Hence we will reverse the judgment, set aside the verdict, and remand the case for a new trial.

DAVIS et al. v. SPRAGG.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 667*) — OBSTRUCTION OF STREET—AWNING — "PUBLIC NUISANCE."

A private awning erected over a public street without lawful authority is a public nuisance whether it materially interferes with public travel or not.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1443, 1494-1496; Dec. Dig. § 667.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 6, pp. 5799-5804.]

2. NUISANCE (§ 72*)—RIGHT TO ENJOIN—PARTIES.

A private individual may maintain a suit to enjoin a public nuisance only when his rights are injuriously affected in a special manner different from the public in general.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Nuisance, Cent. Dig. §§ 164-169; Dec. Dig. § 72.*]

3. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 669*) — STREETS—RIGHT OF ABUTTING OWNERS.

In addition to his right to use the highway in common with the general public, an abutting owner has also a special right of access thereto and to light, air, and view therefrom. These are property rights and exist regardless of the ownership of the fee in the highway.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 1445; Dec. Dig. § 669.*]

4. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§§ 680, 681*) — POWERS—CONTROL OF STREETS.

The council of a city, unauthorized by its charter to do so, acts ultra vires when it attempts to permit the permanent occupation of any portion of its public streets for private purposes.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1459-1466; Dec. Dig. §§ 680, 681.*]

5. ACTION (§ 7*)—NUISANCE (§ 75*)—ACTION TO ENJOIN—DEFENSES — MAINTENANCE OF SIMILAR NUISANCE.

In a suit to abate a nuisance, it is no defense that plaintiff maintains a similar nuisance or that he was actuated by spite or ill will to bring his suit. The court cannot inquire into plaintiff's motives for suing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. § 8; Dec. Dig. § 7; Nuisance, Cent. Dig. §§ 176-184; Dec. Dig. § 75.*]

6. NUISANCE (§ 72*) — PUBLIC NUISANCE — RIGHT TO ENJOIN.

Before equity will abate a public nuisance at the suit of a private individual, it must appear, not only that plaintiff is specially damaged by it in a manner different from the general public, but also that his injury is serious, affecting the substance and value of his property.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Nuisance, Cent. Dig. §§ 164-169; Dec. Dig. § 72.*]

7. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 697*) — OBSTRUCTION OF STREET—ACTION TO ENJOIN—INJURY—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

A case in which relief is denied because of failure to prove injury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1502-1505; Dec. Dig. § 697.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Marshall County.

Bill by E. S. Davis and others against J. I. Spragg. Decree for defendant, and plaintiffs bring error. Affirmed.

D. B. Evans, of Moundsville, and Caldwell & Caldwell and McCamie & Clarke, all of Wheeling, for appellants. T. H. Shanon, of Waynesburg, Pa., and Noyes & Ritz, of Wheeling, for appellee.

WILLIAMS, J. The plaintiffs E. S. Davis and E. S. Romine and the defendant, J. I. Spragg, are the several owners of three adjoining buildings fronting on Main street in the town of Cameron. The fronts of the buildings are flush with the street. Defendant erected a porch or wooden awning in front of his building 22 feet long and 15 feet above the street, extending to the outer edge of the sidewalk, a distance of about 9 feet, and supported by two iron posts about 4 inches in diameter, resting on the sidewalk near the curb line. Plaintiffs brought this suit to enjoin its maintenance, averring that it is a public nuisance and that they are specially damaged by it. On a full hearing of the case on bill, answer, general replication, and numerous depositions, the chancellor dissolved the preliminary injunction and dismissed plaintiffs' bill, and they have appealed.

[1] It is alleged in the bill that, if the porch is permitted to remain, it will not only obstruct public travel on the street and constitute a public nuisance but that it will cause irreparable injury to plaintiffs; that it will obstruct the light and air to their buildings and will greatly depreciate their rental and actual value; that it will cut off the prospect or view from the buildings out upon the street; also that the posts or pillars supporting the porch will materially interfere with the right of access to the Romine property from the public street. All these averments are denied, and much evidence was taken on the question whether or not the structure is in fact a public nuisance. But it is admitted that the porch extends out over the street line about nine feet and is supported by four-inch iron posts resting on the sidewalk. This of itself is enough to show that it is a public nuisance. Any unlawful encroachment upon or over a public highway, whether actually interfering with travel by the public or not, is a preposterous and a nuisance per se, and the jury are not at liberty to determine whether such encroachment amounts to a public nuisance by the measure of inconvenience the public may suffer from it. 2 Elliott on Roads and Streets, § 828. This rule is abundantly supported by adjudicated cases. For instance, an awning over the sidewalk (Hibbard & Co. v. Chicago, 173 Ill. 91, 50 N. E. 256, 40 L. R. A. 621), a bay window extending 18 inches into the street (People v. Harris, 203 Ill. 272, 67 N. E. 785, 96 Am. St. Rep. 304), a bay window 16 feet above the sidewalk extending 3 feet and 4 inches over the street line (Reimer's Appeal, 100 Pa. 183, 45 Am. Rep. 373), pillars in front of a building, extending 22 inches onto the sidewalk (Bank v. Tyson, 133 Ala. 459, 32 South. 144, 59 L. R. A. 399, 91 Am. St. Rep. 46, and Bischof v. Bank, 75 Neb. 838, 106 N. W. 996, 5 L. R. A. [N. S.] 486) have all been held to be public nuisances. But neither the public, nor its trustees, the municipal officers, are complaining here; they are not before the court.

[2] What, then, are the rights of these plaintiffs in the premises? Before a private individual can enjoin a public nuisance, it must appear that his rights are injuriously affected in a manner different from the public in general. "In order to secure an efficient administration of the law for the benefit of the public and to avoid multiplicity of suits to accomplish one purpose, public wrongs are redressed at the suit of proper officials, and individuals are not permitted to maintain separate actions or suits to redress a wrong that is public in its nature unless the individual suffers or is threatened with some special, particular, or peculiar injury growing out of the public wrong. If the nuisance causes special or peculiar injury to an individual different in kind and not merely in degree from the injury to the public at large, and the injury is substantial in its nature, the individual may have his civil remedy." 2 Elliott on Roads and Streets, § 850a; Keystone Bridge Co. v. Summers, 13 W. Va. 476; Talbott v. King, 32 W. Va. 6, 9 S. E. 48.

[3] Plaintiffs, being the owners of property abutting on the highway, have an easement therein not possessed by the public in common. In addition to their right of passage over the highway, which they hold in common with all other citizens, they have a special right of access to their property from the highway and the right to the light and air from it. These rights exist independent of the ownership of the fee in the highway. Barnett v. Johnson, 15 N. J. Eq. 481; Dill v. Board of Ed. Camden, 47 N. J. Eq. 422, 20 Atl. 739, 10 L. R. A. 276.

"Owners of land abutting upon public streets, even in case the fee of the street is in the municipality, have an easement in the streets, not only for ingress and egress, but also for the uninterrupted passage of light and air." Jones on Easements, § 489.

The unlawful occupation of any portion of the public highway in such manner as to materially interfere with the access of an abutting owner to his property or his easement of light and air from the highway is an unwarranted invasion of his property right and constitutes a private, as well as a public, nuisance. 2 Elliott (3d Ed.) § 896.

"A structure connecting two buildings on opposite sides of a street, built so far above the street as not to interfere with traffic thereon, is a nuisance as to adjacent property owners, whose light it obstructs." Townsend v. Epstein, 93 Md. 537, 49 Atl. 629, 52 L. R. A. 409, 86 Am. St. Rep. 441, and Field v. Barling, 149 Ill. 556, 37 N. E. 850, 24 L. R. A. 406, 41 Am. St. Rep. 311, a similar case.

[4] The council of the town of Cameron acted ultra vires when it passed an ordinance permitting defendant to erect his porch over the sidewalk. Chapter 47 of the Code is the town's charter, and it vests no authority in the council to authorize the erection of anything on or over its streets for even a public purpose. Having paramount control of the public highway, the Legislature could no doubt confer such authority upon a municipality (Wormser v. Brown, 149 N. Y. 163, 43 N. E. 524); but in the present case it has not seen fit to do so. Moreover, the occupation of the highway in this instance is for a purely private purpose. "Even where a city is given exclusive power over its streets, such power must be exercised for the good of the general public, and a city cannot authorize obstructions in its streets for merely private purposes." 2 Elliott, § 886; Townsend v. Epstein, 93 Md. 537, 49 Atl. 629, 52 L. R. A. 409, 86 Am. St. Rep. 441; Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 181 Ill. 289, 54 N. E. 825, 53 L. R. A. 223; Pettis v. Johnson, 56 Ind. 139; People v. Harris, 208 Ill. 272, 67 N. E. 785, 96 Am. St. Rep. 804; Reimer's Appeal, 100 Pa. 182, 45 Am. Rep. 373.

But the right of easement of access and of light and air from the public street is so far regarded as the private property of an abutting owner that the Legislature itself has not the right to deprive the owner of it without just compensation, even when taken or injured for the public good; and certainly it would not have the right to so deprive him of it for purely private purposes. 2 Elliott, § 882, and numerous cases cited in note; Lahr v. Met. El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 268, 10 N. E. 528; Story v. N. Y., etc., R. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122, 43 Am. Rep. 146.

[5] It was no defense to plaintiffs' suit that they were, at the time of bringing it, maintaining awnings or verandas overhanging the street in front of their properties. Defendant, of course, could not plead plaintiffs' wrong in justification of his own. Each alleged wrong must stand and be tried by itself. Bowman v. Humphrey, 132 Iowa, 234, 109 N. W. 714, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1111, 11 Ann. Cas. 131; Robinson v. Baugh, 81 Mich. 290; Schaldt v. Blaul, 66 Md. 141, 6 Atl. 609; Bank v. Tyson, 133 Ala. 459, 32 South. 144, 59 L. R. A. 399, 91 Am. St. Rep. 46. That plaintiffs may have been influenced by motives of personal spite and ill will to bring their suit is no defense. The result of the suit must depend upon plaintiffs' legal right, which is not affected by their motives. The court has no right to inquire into their motives in bringing the suit. Koblegard v. Hale, 60 W. Va. 37, 53 S. E. 793, 116 Am. St. Rep. 868, 9 Ann. Cas. 732.

[6] Defendant's porch being a public nuisance, plaintiffs have a right to its abatement if they have sustained special and material damages. But, to entitle them to relief in equity, the damages must be substantial; they "must be serious, affecting the substance and value of the plaintiffs' estate." Talbott v. King, 32 W. Va. 6, 9 S. E. 48; Keystone Bridge Co. v. Summers, 13 W. Va. 476; Hahn v. Thornberry, 7 Bush (Ky.) 403; and Jenks v. Williams, 115 Mass. 217.

[7] It appears from the written opinion of the chancellor, copied into the brief of counsel for defendant, that he dismissed the bill for the reason "that no serious damage affecting the substance and value of the plaintiffs' estate had been proven." The evidence is voluminous on the question of plaintiffs' alleged injury, and no useful purpose would be accomplished in reciting even the material portions of it in this opinion. It is mostly matter of the opinions of different witnesses. The testimony of about 20 witnesses was taken by plaintiffs and of about 25 by defendant. The two plaintiffs and one other are the only witnesses who attempted to fix any certain amount as the diminution in value of their property on account of the maintenance of the porch. Mr. Davis says his property is damaged to the extent of $2,000 and Mr. Romine's $1,000. Mr. Romine says he considers his property damaged as much as $1,000 and Mr. Davis' about as much, or perhaps a little more than his, because it is a more valuable property. But a vast majority of witnesses say that in their opinion no damage has been suffered. A number of photographs of the buildings were taken from different angles in the street and were filed as evidence. We get a better knowledge from them of the physical surroundings and of the effect on plaintiffs' property produced by the defendant's porch than we can possibly obtain from the description of the situation by the witnesses. Neither of the posts, supporting the porch, stands in front of Romine's building, which is the building next to defendant's; but the nearest post is nine or ten feet on Spragg's side of the dividing line of the lots, extended into the street. It is therefore evident that the only injurious effect produced by the posts is their interference with travel on the street. They do not interfere with plaintiffs' right of access to their respective buildings. Consequently neither one of them is affected by the posts in a manner different from the public in general. Neither is it proven that the porch itself obstructs plaintiffs' light or air from the street. It does not extend the full distance across the front of defendant's property; it is about the same distance from the dividing line between his and Romine's properties as the iron post is. It, of course, could not shut out the light and air from the upper floors of plaintiffs' buildings. The first floors of all three of the buildings are used as mercantile rooms. Mr. Grossman, a retail merchant and tenant of Mr. Romine occupying the lower floor, says the porch does not obstruct the light or air. He says, "It is the same as it always was." He asked for no reduction in his rent and expected none on account of defendant's porch. The Davis storeroom is less likely to be injuriously affected than Romine's, because it is farther from the porch.

We therefore think it is clear, from the evidence, that plaintiffs' access to their respective buildings, and their light and air from the street to the lower part of their buildings, has not been injuriously affected. It does appear, however, that their view from the second-story window, looking out upon the street toward the west, is obstructed for some distance along the sidewalk in front of and to the west of the Spragg building; and much stress is laid by counsel for appellants in their brief upon the proposition that an obstruction of plaintiffs' prospect or view out upon any portion of the highway constitutes a special injury to their property, entitling them to relief, whether their light and air has been interfered with or not, and in support of this proposition they rely upon Bank v. Tyson, 133 Ala. 459, 32 South. 144, 59 L. R. A. 899, 91 Am. St. Rep. 46, and Bischof v. Bank, 75 Neb. 838, 106 N. W. 993, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 486, in both of which cases it was held that: "An owner of land abutting on a public street has an easement of view from every part of the street, of which he cannot be deprived by encroachments placed on it by an adjacent proprietor." Those suits were by abutting owners to abate a nuisance by injunction, as in the present case, on the ground that plaintiffs suffered special damages; and in each case the thing sought to be enjoined was the maintenance of pillars erected in front of defendant's building, extending from the sidewalk to the second story and projecting outward beyond the street line, in the Tyson Case 22 inches and in the Bischof Case about 24 inches, thus cutting off the view of pedestrians on the sidewalk from the front windows of plaintiffs' buildings, which were used for the display of wares and merchandise. The Tyson Case was not heard upon full proof. It was an appeal from an order of the court overruling a motion to dissolve the preliminary injunction which had been awarded and was heard upon the pleadings and ex parte affidavits only. Says the court in its opinion: "We try the case on this appeal, on the pleadings as they are presented, in advance of any evidence taken in the cause. Whether the evidence when taken will, on submission of the case for final disposition, sustain the averments for relief or not, we are not given to know." This indicates clearly that plaintiff's right to ultimate relief in that case would depend upon his proving that his property was actually damaged by the obstruction of his view.

In the Bischof Case there seems to have been a final decree by the lower court dismissing plaintiff's bill on the ground that his damages could be ascertained with reasonable certainty in an action at law. The Supreme Court reversed the decree and remanded the cause, with direction to enter a decree abating the nuisance. In discussing the question whether or not plaintiff had sustained any special injury peculiar to himself, aside from and independent of the injury to the general public, the court says: "On this point we derive but little aid from the opinions of different witnesses. That the obstruction in question obstructs the view to the front windows of the plaintiff's building, which is kept for mercantile purposes is self-evident. The value of the front windows of a mercantile house for the display of goods and wares for advertising purposes and of an unobstructed view there-to are matters of common knowledge. The value of a conspicuous business front was not lost sight of by the defendant bank when it planned an ornamental entrance, which extended outwards beyond the sidewalk line and beyond the front line of adjacent buildings. It requires no evidence to show that any unlawful obstruction that cuts off, to a substantial degree, the view to the front of a business house, or renders it less valuable for the display of goods and advertising purposes, is a damage to the owner of such building and a damage which is special and peculiar to him and independent of any damage sustained by the public at large."

We are inclined to think that these cases determine the law correctly, and that, if plaintiffs in this case had proven that the obstruction of the view from the street to the front of their buildings seriously and injuriously affected their actual or rental value, they would have been entitled to relief. But, upon careful reading of the evidence, we think the chancellor correctly decided that they had failed to prove any such damages. In view of the character of the nuisance complained of and the nature of the view interfered with, it being only a view from the upper window upon a portion of the sidewalk, it is an injury which we think is more fanciful than real. The maintenance by plaintiffs themselves of a similar porch over the front of their buildings, though extending not so far over the sidewalk as defendant's porch, is a circumstance clearly indicating that their alleged injury is without real foundation. They have no right to a view which can be enjoyed only from their own verandas, because they are unlawfully maintained and constitute a public nuisance as well as defendant's porch. If the obstruction of the upper windows from the view of a pedestrian in the street below is the ground of complaint, it would seem that plaintiffs are more injured by the maintenance of their own porticoes than they are by that of defendant, because a pedestrian on the sidewalk, standing in front of the Spragg building, could not read a sign in the upper windows of either of plaintiffs' buildings even if Spragg's porch were not there. He would be viewing it at too great an angle; and the view from the sidewalk, immediately in front of plaintiffs' buildings, is obstructed by their own verandas. The Spragg porch, in our opinion, does not obstruct the view of a person in the street from any point therein, from which a sign so placed could be read, and it therefore clearly appears that the upper windows in plaintiffs' buildings, so far as it relates to their value for the purpose of advertising signs or for displaying goods and wares, are in no wise interfered with by defendant's porch.

We affirm the decree.

SELVEY et al. v. GRAFTON COAL & COKE CO.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. ACTION (§ 50*)—JOINDER OF CAUSES OF ACTION—DIVERSITY OF INTERESTS.

Two or more plaintiffs may join in an action to recover the penalty provided by section 7, c. 79, Code 1906, for the unlawful mining and removal of coal within five feet of their property line, provided they have some interest in either the surface of the land or the vein of coal or in both; and it makes no difference that some of them are interested in the coal and others in the surface only; or any such interested person may sue alone. But there can be but one recovery for such wrong.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 511-547; Dec. Dig. § 50.*]

2. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 94*)—UNLAWFUL MINING—ACTION FOR PENALTY—DECLARATION.

The declaration in such action is sufficient if it avers the wrong in language the legal equivalent of the terms of the statute; it need not be in the exact words of the statute.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 220, 221; Dec. Dig. § 94.*]

3. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 94*)—UNLAWFUL MINING—ACTION FOR PENALTY—VARIANCE—"LAND."

Under an averment that plaintiff owns "land," he may prove that he owns coal under the land; such proof is not a material variance from the allegation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 220, 221; Dec. Dig. § 94.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 5, pp. 3975-3984; vol. 8, pp. 7700, 7701.]

4. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1073*)—HARMLESS ERROR—JUDGMENT.

In such joint action by several, the contradicted testimony of any one of them that he did not consent in writing to the removal of the coal will warrant a judgment against defendant for the full penalty, the proof in other respects being complete; and it is not material to defendant whether judgment be rendered in favor of all the plaintiffs or only in favor of the one who so testified.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4240-4247; Dec. Dig. § 1073.*]

5. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 94*)—UNLAWFUL MINING—ACTION FOR PENALTY—PROOF OF DAMAGES.

In such action it is not necessary to prove damages or special injury. The statute fixes the amount of recovery for its violation, without regard to the amount of damages actually suffered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 220, 221; Dec. Dig. § 94.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

6. PLEADING (§ 204*)—DECLARATION—SUFFICIENCY AGAINST GENERAL DEMURRER.

A general demurrer to a declaration containing more than one count is properly overruled where one of the counts is good, though the others are bad.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 486-490; Dec. Dig. § 204.*]

7. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 94*)—UNLAWFUL MINING—ACTION FOR PENALTY—PLEADING.

Where the declaration, in an action for the penalty provided by Code 1906, c. 79, § 7, for unlawful mining, alleged the taking and removing of coal within five feet of the land without written permission, it was not defective for failing to allege whether defendant encroached within five feet of the land by sinking a shaft or by following and removing the vein of coal from its outcrop on the hillside.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 220, 221; Dec. Dig. § 94.*]

8. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1051*)—HARMLESS ERROR—EVIDENCE.

The erroneous admission in evidence of an excerpt from a deed was harmless where the deed itself was in evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4161-4170; Dec. Dig. § 1051.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Taylor County.

Action by John W. Selvey and others against the Grafton Coal & Coke Company. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Warder & Robinson, of Grafton, for plaintiff in error. J. L. Hechmer and J. H. S. Barlow, both of Grafton, for defendants in error.

WILLIAMS, J. Plaintiffs recovered a judgment for $500, the forfeiture provided by section 7, c. 79, Code 1906, to be paid to the party injured, for mining and removing coal within five feet of his property line without his consent in writing, and defendant was awarded this writ of error.

[1] The first error assigned is that the court improperly overruled the demurrer to the declaration. It is urged that there is a misjoinder of plaintiffs; that only one could sue. This question was recently decided otherwise in Shinn v. O'Garra Coal Mining Co., 78 S. E. 104. We there held that the life tenant and remainderman, or reverser, could unite as plaintiffs in one action. The words of the statute, "any person injured thereby," include all persons whose property is injured by a violation of the statute. But of course there can be but one recovery; and, if more than one is injured by the same violation of the statute, there is no reason why they should not all join.

[6] The declaration is in three counts in debt. It is not necessary for us to decide whether or not the first count is bad for failure to aver that the defendant was "the owner or tenant of any land containing coal." For even if this count is bad, and either one of the other two is good, the demurrer, being general and not to each count, was properly overruled. The statute does not prescribe the form of action, and therefore an action of debt lies. Maple v. John, 42 W. Va. 30, 24 S. E. 608, 32 L. R. A. 800, 57 Am. St. Rep. 839, decides that either debt or trespass on the case lies to recover the forfeiture.

[7] The second count is good; it avers that plaintiffs are the owners of a certain tract of land containing coal, and that defendant is the lessee of an adjoining tract containing the same vein of coal, and also avers that the defendant "unlawfully and contrary to the statute in such cases made and provided did dig, excavate, work, mine, and remove the said vein of coal within five feet of the said boundary and division line between said tracts of coal land, without the consent of the plaintiffs in writing or otherwise." This is a sufficient averment that the statute has been violated, and that the defendant is liable for the forfeiture thereby imposed. It is immaterial that the declaration does not allege how the defendant encroached within five feet of the line, whether by sinking a shaft or by following and removing the vein of coal from its outcrop on the hillside. Digging and removing the coal within five feet of the line, without written permission, constituted the wrong; the manner of doing it was not material.

[2] It is further urged that the declaration is defective because it does not state the cause of action in the exact language of the statute. But the pleader has employed language which is the legal equivalent, and that is sufficient. Even in case of an indictment for a statutory offense, where the rules of pleading are, if any difference, more rigid than in civil cases, it has been held that, although it is the safer method to pursue the exact language of the statute in describing the offense, still it is sufficient to do so in legally equivalent language. State v. Riffe, 10 W. Va. 794. True, the statute is penal in nature and is therefore subject to strict construction. But that rule is applied only for the purpose of ascertaining the actual wrong intended to be prohibited. Gawthrop v. Fairmont Coal Co., 68 W. Va. 650, 70 S. E. 556. It does not apply to the form and manner of pleading. The defendant offered no evidence but submitted its case upon a demurrer to plaintiffs' evidence; and it is insisted that its demurrer was improperly overruled. But we do not think so.

[3] The court properly overruled defendant's objection to the introduction of the deed from Thomas Selvey to John W. Selvey, dated May 14, 1890. There is no material variance between that deed and the averment in the declaration that plaintiffs are the owners of the land. That averment is substantially proven by the deed, notwithstanding it purports to convey only coal and mining rights. Coal in place is land. The word "land" includes "tenements and hereditaments and all rights thereto and interests therein, except chattel interests." Section 17, ch. 15, c. 13, Code. Proof that plaintiffs were owners of coal in place was not a material variance from the averment that they were the owners of land which contained a valuable vein of coal. The statute authorizing this action was designed to protect the owner of the seam of coal as well as the owner of the surface of the land above it. Gawthrop v. Fairmont Coal Co., supra.

[4] It is contended that the evidence does not prove that defendant did not have plaintiffs' consent in writing. John W. Selvey testified that he did not give his consent; this proves that he, at least, was entitled to recover; and, even if he was the only one entitled to recover anything, he would be entitled to the full penalty of the statute. Therefore the question whether or not some of the other plaintiffs gave their consent could not affect the rights of defendant. It was immaterial to the Grafton Coal Company whether it pays the penalty to one of plaintiffs or to all of them jointly, as one payment discharges it as to all.

Defendant claims that it is not proven that it was the owner or tenant of the adjoining land. Plaintiffs introduced in evidence the coal lease from Adolphus Armstrong to defendant for the coal under a number of contiguous tracts of land, one of which is described in the lease as "the Thomas Selvey parcel of 32 $\frac{1}{4}$  acres." The lease refers to the deed from Selvey to Armstrong by date, deed book, and page where recorded. That deed is also in evidence. It conveyed coal and described the tract of land containing it by metes and bounds, and also as containing 37 acres and 3 roods, and excepts 5 acres of coal which is also described by metes and bounds. Five acres deducted leaves the exact quantity conveyed to defendant. This evidence, together with the testimony of witnesses who surveyed the lines of the five acres and also the mine, and who viewed the mine, and the testimony of other witnesses that defendant was then, and had been, operating the mine, established the facts that defendant is the lessee; that its coal is in a tract contiguous to the plaintiffs'; and that defendant had removed the coal within five feet of the dividing line of the properties. The testimony of the county surveyor, R. A. Morrow, and of George Brackett, the mining engineer, who surveyed the lines of the five acres, proves the location of the line encroached upon with sufficient definiteness.

[5] Defendant is not prejudiced by the introduction in evidence of the excerpt from the deed of Thomas Selvey and wife to Adolphus Armstrong, containing the metes and bounds of the five acres reserved in that deed. It was the data upon which the surveyor had made his survey of those lines. The deed itself is in evidence, and the metes and bounds of the five acres are therein given and are identical with those given in the paper objected to.

[6] It was not necessary for plaintiffs to prove injury. The injury is inferred from the doing of the wrongful act. The statute fixes the penalty, and the question of damages does not enter into the case. However much plaintiffs might have been actually injured, they could not have recovered more, in this action, than $500, the amount fixed by statute. Maple v. John, 42 W. Va. 30, 24 S. E. 608, 32 L. R. A. 800, 57 Am. St. Rep. 839. Inasmuch as the statute protects the owners of coal in place as well as owners of the surface lands, it is immaterial that one of plaintiffs is a joint owner only of the coal, while the others are joint owners of both coal and surface. All, nevertheless, have the right to join in this action to recover the forfeiture.

The judgment is affirmed.

ROBINSON, J., absent.

WOODS et al. v. TETER.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PLEADING (§ 155*) — VERIFIED DENIAL — SUFFICIENCY.

The form for verification of pleadings, prescribed by section 42, c. 125, Code 1906, is insufficient as an affidavit by defendant under section 46 of the same chapter, unless when read with the pleading thus verified, a denial of liability in whole or in part substantially appears therefrom.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 309-311, 313, 314; Dec. Dig. § 155.*]

2. PLEADING (§ 155*) — VERIFIED DENIAL — SUFFICIENCY.

A case wherein the plea and verification are held insufficient.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 309-311, 313, 314; Dec. Dig. § 155.*]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

3. PLEADING (§ 268*)—AMENDMENT—AFTER TERM.

Where the verification of a special plea in the form prescribed by Code 1906, c. 125, § 42, when considered together with the plea, was wholly inadequate to constitute the affidavit of defense prescribed by section 46, the court properly refused, after an adjournment of term, to permit it to be amended to conform to the requirements of such affidavit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 809, 810; Dec. Dig. § 268.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Barbour County.

Action by J. Hop Woods and another against Floyd Teter. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Wilcox & Musgrave, of Belington, for plaintiff in error. J. Hop Woods and J. Blackburn Ware, both of Phillippi, for defendants in error.

LYNCH, J. By the action of debt, Woods and Ware seek recovery from defendant Teter of the amount due on a note. The terms and provisions, as stated therein, are: "Twelve months after date, with interest, I promise to pay J. Hop Woods and J. Blackburn Ware the sum of one thousand dollars, as and for agreed attorney's fees as my counsel in the pending cause in the circuit court of Barbour county styled Geo. M. Whitescarver et al. v. Floyd Teter, and which fee is for professional services of said attorneys to be rendered in said cause in said court and in the Supreme Court of Appeals of the state in case of the appeal thereof thereto. Witness my hand and seal this 2d day of February, 1906. Floyd Teter [L. S.]."

Process issued June 18th, returnable to July rules, 1908, more than one year after the date of the note. Plaintiffs then filed their declaration, accompanied by the affidavit provided by section 46, c. 125, Code 1906. The clerk, at the same time, entered the common order. At August rules he also confirmed the common order. The defendant, for the first time, appeared to the action at September rules, when he tendered a plea of nil debet, without the counter affidavit required by said section. But at the same rules, and prior to the first day of the September term, he tendered and the clerk filed a special plea and affidavit, the substance of both of which is that the plaintiffs ought not to have or maintain their aforesaid action, because he says that the note mentioned in the declaration "was for professional services of the said plaintiffs to be rendered" in the chancery cause stated in the note, pending in said court at the date of the note, "and for no other or further or different consideration or purpose, and that the said plaintiffs in consideration thereof were to render their professional services in the said chancery cause in the circuit court of Barbour county and in the Supreme Court of Appeals of this state; and the defendant avers that the said plaintiffs have failed to render said professional services in the chancery cause above mentioned in the said circuit court of Barbour county, and that the said chancery cause is still pending in the circuit court of said county, and the same is wholly undetermined and undecided; and so this defendant says that the consideration for the said writing obligatory mentioned in the plaintiffs' declaration in this action sued on has wholly failed, and the defendant is entitled to his costs herein. And this the defendant is ready to verify." "State of West Virginia, County of Barbour, to wit: Floyd Teter, being by me first duly sworn, says that the allegations contained in the said plea are true, except so far as they are therein stated to be upon information, and that so far as they are stated to be upon information he believes them to be true. Taken, signed, and sworn to before me this the 1st day of September, 1908. F. M. Right, N. P." At the first term of court thereafter, being the term next succeeding the date of the writ, the trial of the action was, on the defendant's motion and affidavit tendered for the purpose, continued for cause until the following term, at which defendant moved for leave to amend the affidavit verifying his special plea. The court refused leave to amend, and, on plaintiffs' motion, entered judgment against the defendant for the full amount of the note, interest, and costs. The errors assigned by the defendant are the refusal to grant leave to amend the affidavit, and the action of the court in entering judgment against him; in neither of which respects do we think the court erred.

[1, 2] The affidavit tendered and filed with the special plea did not sufficiently comply or attempt to comply with the requirements of section 46. It did not state or attempt to state that "there is not, as he (affiant) verily believes, any sum due from him to the plaintiffs upon the demand or demands stated in the plaintiffs' declaration," or "a sum certain less than that stated in the affidavit of the plaintiffs, which, as he verily believes, is all that is due from him to the plaintiffs" upon such demand or demands. The final determination of the suit, the services in which constitute the consideration for the obligation, is not made a condition precedent to the payment of the amount due plaintiffs. The payment thereof is not upon any condition. The note is an absolute promise to pay after the expiration of one year. At maturity plaintiffs were entitled to payment. If not then paid, they could sue and recover, notwithstanding the pendency of the Whitescarver suit, unless by proper plea the defendant asserted and established a good and sufficient defense to the action. The special plea states the facts appearing in the note, and that the suit is still pending. It does not assign any cause for delay in the Whitescarver suit, or charge such delay to the failure of the plaintiffs faithfully to serve defendant, or even suggest that nothing is due from him to them on the note, except by the general averment that they "have failed to render said professional services," that the suit is pending and wholly undetermined, and that therefore the consideration for the note has wholly failed. Defendant's affidavit that these general averments are true is not a substantial statement that "there is not, as he verily believes, any sum due from him to the plaintiffs" upon the note. In fact, it does not indicate any purpose or intention on his part to make any statement of that character. The nearest approach thereto is the general conclusion of the plea, based on the facts stated therein, that the consideration for the note "has wholly failed, and said defendant is entitled to his costs herein." So that the special plea and affidavit, when read together, as properly they may be, do not substantially deny the liability of the defendant, and therefore in that respect fail to comply with section 46. They do not fall within the rule announced in Walls v. Zufall, 61 W. Va. 166, 56 S. E. 179, and Ceranto v. Trimboli, 63 W. Va. 340, 60 S. E. 138. In fact, it may with propriety be inferred that neither the draftsman of the plea and affidavit, nor the defendant himself, had in mind, at the date thereof, any purpose other than the making of the affidavit deemed necessary to the verification of the special plea under section 5, c. 126, Code 1906.

[3] The affidavit being clearly unavailing under section 46, c. 125, it was not amendable after the adjournment of the first term. The circuit court, therefore, did not err either in refusing leave to amend or in entering judgment for plaintiffs.

Judgment affirmed.

WILEY et al. v. BALL et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. WILLS (§ 781*)—RIGHTS OF DEVISEE.

A devisee cannot take under one provision of a will and deny the validity of another provision thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 2013-2017; Dec. Dig. § 781.*]

2. EASEMENTS (§ 44*)—CONSTRUCTION—EXTENT OF RIGHT.

The mere reservation of a right of way, by a testator, over land given one devisee, for ingress to and egress from land given another, confers no right to the exclusive use of the soil over which the way may be located, but creates only an easement, and the way cannot be enclosed by fences against the wishes of the servient tenant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Cent. Dig. §§ 98-100; Dec. Dig. § 44.*]

3. FENCES (§ 1*)—DUTY TO FENCE—EASEMENT.

No obligation rests upon the land owner to fence the way in which another has simply an easement.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fences, Cent. Dig. § 1; Dec. Dig. § 1.*]

4. EASEMENTS (§ 44*)—EXTENT OF RIGHT.

The servient tenement cannot be burdened with the occupancy of a greater width than is reasonably necessary for the uses for which a right of way thereover is reserved as an easement, where no width is defined in the reservation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Easements, Cent. Dig. §§ 98-100; Dec. Dig. § 44.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Mason County.

Action by Millie C. Wiley and others against J. Robert Ball and others. From judgment for defendants, plaintiffs appeal. Modified and affirmed.

Rankin Wiley, of Point Pleasant, for appellants. Elmer L. Stone, of Ripley, and John E. Beller, of Point Pleasant, for appellees.

ROBINSON, J. Plaintiff by this suit sought a partition of land in conformity with the provisions of the will of her father, devising the land to her and the children of her brother. By that will plaintiff was given the "front part" of the land and the other devisees, defendants herein, were given the "back or east part." The will definitely stated just where the division line should be run. It also provided that "a right of way is reserved through the front tract to the public road." Plainly from the terms of the instrument this reservation of a right of way was for the use of the back part of the land. It was clearly devised in connection with the devise of that portion. Plaintiff not only prayed for a partition under the will but also for a marking out and establishing of the right of way. By a decree in the cause the lands were partitioned, and plaintiff in her petition for an appeal and in her brief expresses entire satisfaction with the division which has been made. A subsequent decree established a way fifteen feet wide through the front part which was given plaintiff, and imposed conditions on her in regard thereto. It is of this decree alone that she complains. By the decree plaintiff is required to build and maintain a fence along one side of the way, and defendants are required to build and maintain the way and a fence along the other side. Further, the decree allows plaintiff, at her own expense, to build and maintain gates or bars at such points in the fences as she may desire.

[1] The testator in fact only owned an undivided one-half interest in the land though he dealt with it in making the devise as if he owned the whole. He had only the curtesy in the other undivided one-half interest through right of his deceased wife. So plaintiff submits that he had no power to make the devise of a reservation of right of way through land not wholly owned by him. Plaintiff urges this as a ground against the validity of the devise for the right of way. She proposes to hold the front part of the land under the will, but to deny the will as to the reservation of way. This she can not do. The rule is well known. "One entitled to any benefit under a will or other instrument must, if he claims that benefit, abandon every right and interest the assertion of which would defeat even partially any of the provisions of that instrument." Tolley v. Poteet, 62 W. Va. 231, 57 S. E. 811. Plaintiff claims and has accepted the front part of the land under the will. She can not therefore deny the validity of the will as to the reservation of a way over that part of the land.

[2] But we find error in the decree. While under all the facts and circumstances presented by the cause it seems to be a proper one for judicial determination of the location of the way, yet the decree goes further than simply to fix the location. It puts upon the servient tenement more than the granting of a mere right of way over it will justify and legally allow. It splits the servient tenant's land by a fencing of the way which the will does not call for. The reservation in the will does not give right to an exclusive use of the soil over which the way may be located, so that the same may be enclosed by fences. It gives only an easement, leaving title to the soil in the servient tenant, together with dominion over the soil covered by the way except so far as the necessary and reasonable use of the way takes from him that dominion. By no means does the reservation in the will mean that the land devised plaintiff is to be divided by fences without her consent, the use of the land thus encumbered, and its value thus perchance lessened. A fencing of the way is not necessary to a reasonable use of the easement, and nothing but a reasonable use was ever granted. "The owner of the right of way is not entitled to fence in the way against the wishes of the owner of the soil." Jones on Easements, sec. 410.

[3] Then, the decree puts upon plaintiff, the servient tenant, the obligation to build and maintain a fence on one side of the way. The mere reservation of the way puts no such burden on her and the decree can not rightly do so. "No obligation rests upon the land owner to fence the way in which another has an easement." Jones on Easements, sec. 409.

[4] Nor can the decree be sustained wherein it fixes the width of the way at fifteen feet. That particular width, for all that appears in the record, may be more than is necessary for the reasonable use of a right of way for ingress to and egress from defendant's land. No width is defined in the reservation.

We find no reason to disturb the finding and decree as to the location of the way. The decree will be modified by striking from it all provisions as to fencing and width, and by providing simply for such use of a way on the location fixed as is reasonably necessary for the ordinary purposes of defendants in going to and from the land devised them. And as so modified the decree will be affirmed.

PARKER v. CITY OF FAIRMONT.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Sept. 23, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 623*)—POWERS—ABATEMENT OF NUISANCE.

Under the provision of the charter of the city of Fairmont, same as Code 1906, ch. 47, sec. 28, that "the council shall have power to abate or cause to be abated anything which, in the opinion of a majority of the whole council, shall be a nuisance," the council may abate only that as a nuisance which is recognized as such per se, or branded as such by lawful statute or ordinance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1371-1374, 1383, 1384; Dec. Dig. § 623.*]

2. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS (§ 623*)—POWER—ABATEMENT OF NUISANCE.

The production and emission of smoke from the plant of a lawful business cannot be abated by the city of Fairmont under its mere charter powers to abate nuisances and to prevent injury and annoyance, in the absence of a reasonable ordinance, applicable alike to all of a class, making such production and emission unlawful.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. §§ 1371-1374, 1383, 1384; Dec. Dig. § 623.*]

3. INJUNCTION (§ 77*)—GROUNDS—MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—ABATEMENT OF NUISANCE.

Equity will restrain a municipal corporation from proceeding under illegal and invalid order or resolution to remove an alleged nuisance, where private rights are unlawfully encroached upon and irreparable injury will ensue.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. §§ 146, 147; Dec. Dig. § 77.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Marion County.

Action by Richard F. Parker against the City of Fairmont. From judgment for defendant, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

Harry Shaw and French McCray, both of Fairmont, and Chas. E. Hogg, of Morgantown, for appellant. Walter R. Haggerty and Tusca Morris, both of Fairmont, for appellee.

ROBINSON, J. Parker was summoned before the municipal council of the city of Fairmont to show cause why his dye works, located in a residence section of that city, should not be declared a nuisance by reason of the coal smoke and soot produced and emitted therefrom. Upon a hearing of the matter the dye works was declared to be such a nuisance and the mayor was ordered to proceed to abate the same. Thereupon Parker by this suit sought to enjoin the city authorities from proceeding further toward interfering with his business, on the ground that the proposed interference was without warrant of law and would irreparably damage him. He obtained a preliminary injunction, but upon a hearing the same was dissolved and his bill dismissed. From the decree in the premises he has appealed.

[1, 2] The city authorities claim power to make the order which they did under provisions of the city charter and an ordinance of the city, which are as follows: "The council shall have power within the said city * * * to prevent injury or annoyance to the public or individuals from anything dangerous, offensive or unwholesome; * * * to abate or cause to be abated anything which, in the opinion of a majority of the whole council, shall be a nuisance." Acts 1899, ch. 11. "Whenever any out-house, privy, hog-pen, stable or other building within said city shall be by a majority of the whole council declared a nuisance or injurious to the health or comfort of any person or persons, the owner, agent, or lessee of the property shall be notified by the mayor to abate the nuisance by removal or keeping in proper order such building and in case of refusal or neglect to comply with such notice, the mayor shall direct the proper officer of the city to have the same put in order or removed and report his proceeding and costs incurred by him to the mayor," etc. Municipal Code of the City of Fairmont, ch. 27, sec. 86.

Plaintiff's business—his use of the premises—is not per se a nuisance. It is a lawful one. The provisions which we have quoted do not brand it as unlawful. Those provisions do not forbid smoke and soot from being produced and emitted. It would seem that under the charter power "to prevent injury or annoyance to the public or individuals from anything dangerous, offensive or unwholesome," the city authorities could make a just and reasonable regulation as to the production and emission of smoke and soot, applicable to all alike of the same class and not merely directed toward the property and business of one person. But we find no power in the city to strike directly at plaintiff alone. Plainly the ordinance quoted as relied upon does not apply to the production and emission of smoke and soot. It is an ordinance most apparently directed wholly against buildings of a very distinct class. Nor can the granted power "to abate or cause to be abated anything which, in the opinion of a majority of the whole council shall be a nuisance," be properly viewed as authorizing the council to single out and condemn as to any sole individual that which is ordinarily lawful. That provision can not rightly be construed to mean that the council may determine that to be a nuisance which is not such by the common law, by statute, or by ordinance. It gives power to abate nuisances, not to determine what shall be considered nuisances. It plainly relates to nuisances per se, those primarily branded as such by the law. Dillon on Municipal Corporations (5th Ed.) secs. 690, 694; St. Paul v. Gilfillan, 36 Minn. 298, 31 N. W. 49. The charter provision grants a police power of abatement; not an arbitrary power of determining that something is a nuisance which by no law is known to be such. It is not reasonable to presume that the Legislature meant to grant such arbitrary power to the municipal authorities. True, the opinion of the majority of the whole council is called for by the provision. But that opinion is to be applied in discerning that the thing complained of comes within the category of nuisances pronounced to be such by law. Clearly the power granted is to abate what the law holds to be a nuisance, not to enact that any particular thing is a nuisance. In this view we are confirmed by the forceful writing of Judge Dent in Town of Davis v. Davis, 40 W. Va. 474, 21 S. E. 906.

Such a power as is claimed by the city herein can not be upheld. The municipal authorities of Fairmont may, by the power in the city charter, abate per se nuisances; or under other powers granted by the charter it may pass reasonable ordinances preventing injury or annoyance to the citizens. All that is quite different from arbitrarily singling out a lawful business of one individual and making a law applicable to him alone, which is the substance of the city's action as to the plaintiff herein. The council must proceed under established law, not under arbitrary rule. It must ordain and publish law which relates to all alike that are similarly situated, and then enforce the same. It can not make the law and enforce it at the same time in individual cases. Such a power, it is said generally, can not be tolerated. Lake v. City of Aberdeen, 57 Miss. 260. It may be that the smoke and soot from plaintiff's dye works should be abated; but the city of Fairmont has not power to proceed simply against that smoke and soot. It must proceed uniformly as to that and all other similarly produced and emitted smoke and soot. Recognition and adherence to this rule is worth more indeed than any good that might come to the citizens complaining of plaintiff's dye works in this particular case. Only the even administration of the law produces ultimate public good. It is dangerous ever to ignore the principle, or to open the door for its disregard. Mr. Justice Miller, in Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. Ed. 984, said: "It is a doctrine not to be tolerated in this country, that a municipal corporation, without any general laws either of the city or of the State, within which a given structure can be shown to be a nuisance, can, by its mere declaration that it is one, subject it to removal by any person supposed to be aggrieved, or even by the city itself. This would place every house, every business, and all the property of the city, at the uncontrolled will of the temporary local authorities." It seems unnecessary to cite authorities for this principle. Reason impresses it. The books abound in its justification.

We are firmly of the opinion that, though the city of Fairmont had the power to enact laws regulating the production and emission of smoke and soot, at the time of the procedure against plaintiff's business neither the city charter nor any ordinance passed in pursuance thereof warranted the order to abate that business as a nuisance.

[3] What was plaintiff's remedy to prevent the city's unwarranted interference with his lawful business, or use of the premises? Clearly, that which he chose, injunction. That the threatened invasion of plaintiff's private rights under the illegal and invalid resolution of the council, if allowed to be carried out, would affect the very substance of plaintiff's estate and produce irreparable damage is boldly apparent from the nature and circumstances of the case. That plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law is equally clear. The case comes plainly within the rule allowing equity cognizance. "Injunction will lie to restrain proceedings of a municipal corporation to remove an alleged nuisance where private rights are encroached upon and irreparable injury will ensue." Smith on Municipal Corporations, sec. 1629; High on Injunctions, sec. 1243; 118 Am. St. Rep. 376; Bristol Door & Lumber Co. v. City of Bristol, 97 Va. 304, 33 S. E. 588, 75 Am. St. Rep. 783.

As to the public, represented by the municipal authorities, plaintiff's use of his premises is not shown to be a nuisance. We repeat, that use is ordinarily lawful, and in behalf of the public it has not been branded as unlawful by an enactment within the power of the city. This being true, the city by its answer in the cause can not justify its act against plaintiff. It can not say merely by its answer that the use is in fact a nuisance. It must first say that by general and uniform ordinance. Of course, plaintiff's use may be a private nuisance of which some individual may complain in equity regardless of city ordinance. But we have only the question of the right of the city to complain.

The decree is erroneous. It will be reversed. The court should not have dissolved the injunction but perpetuated it. That which the circuit court should have done will now be done here.

POMEROY NAT. BANK v. HUNTINGTON NAT. BANK.†

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
May 20, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 151*)—CERTIFICATE OF DEPOSIT—NEGOTIABILITY—"NEGOTIABLE."

A certificate of deposit issued by a bank for a certain sum of money, not subject to check and payable to the order of the depositor in current funds, on the return of the certificate properly indorsed, is negotiable within the meaning of section 7 of chapter 99 of Code 1906.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 380-387; Dec. Dig. § 151.*]

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, vol. 5, pp. 4766, 4767.]

2. JUDGMENT (§ 720*)—CONCLUSIVENESS—ESTOPPEL—DIFFERENT CAUSES OF ACTION.

If the cause of action in a second suit differs from that of a former one in which the parties participated, though growing out of the same transaction or relating to the same property or fund, the record in such former suit does not estop the parties as to everything that could have been litigated therein but only as to such matters as affirmatively appear to have been decided in it.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

†Rehearing denied.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 1251; Dec. Dig. § 720.*]

3. JUDGMENT (§ 720*)—RES JUDICATA—ISSUES—DETERMINATION.

The record of a chancery cause in which a copartner charged a bank with a fund deposited with it as money belonging to the firm and successfully resisted the bank's defense of authorized payment of the funds to a member of the firm, by the issuance to him, in exchange for the firm's check drawn by him, of a certificate of deposit payable to his order, showing no actual adjudication against the indorsee of the certificate, who was made a party to the cause, does not sustain a plea of former adjudication in an action of debt brought against the bank on the certificate of deposit by the indorsee thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 1251; Dec. Dig. § 720.*]

Error to Circuit Court, Cabell County.

Action by the Pomeroy National Bank against the Huntington National Bank. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed and rendered.

J. P. Bradbury, of Pomeroy, Ohio, and Charles E. Hogg, of Morgantown, for plaintiff in error. Enslow, Fitzpatrick, Alderson & Baker, of Huntington, for defendant in error.

POFFENBARGER, P. The subject-matter of this action is somewhat related to that of the equity suit of Grobe v. Roup, in which there were two appeals to this court, one of which was disposed of in 44 W. Va. 197, 28 S. E. 699, and the other in 46 W. Va. 488, 33 S. E. 261. In February, 1898, before the suit of Grobe v. Roup and others ended and before the date of the decision on the last appeal therein, the Pomeroy National Bank instituted this action of debt in the circuit court of Cabell county for the recovery of the amount of the certificate of deposit, issued by the Huntington National Bank to C. W. Roup, and indorsed by him to the Pomeroy National Bank, as shown by the two opinions in the suit just mentioned. Having filed its declaration in said action, the plaintiff awaited final disposition of the chancery cause, and judgment was not rendered until the 13th day of April, 1910. Two defenses were interposed, nonnegotiability of the certificate of deposit and former adjudication. There was a judgment for the defendant upon a finding by the court, trial by jury having been waived, but the order does not indicate upon what ground the court based its conclusion.

[1] The certificate of deposit is in the words and figures following: "$1,800. The Huntington National Bank, Huntington, West Virginia, May 14, 1896. C. W. Roup has deposited in this bank eighteen hundred dollars, payable to the order of himself in current funds on the return of this certificate properly indorsed. J. K. Oney, Cashier." It was countersigned by "C. M. Gohen, Teller," and bore the following notice: "Certificate of deposit, not subject to check. No. 14007." To be negotiable, this paper must be within the terms of the statute in force at the date of its issue (section 7 of chapter 99 of the Code), making promissory notes, checks for money, and bills of exchange negotiable. And the paper must be payable at a particular bank or at a particular office thereof for discount or deposit or at the place of business of a savings institution or savings bank. That the paper in question is neither a check nor bill of exchange is admitted, but, by the great weight of authority, it is held to be in legal effect a promissory note, notwithstanding the lack of a promise in express words. It acknowledges indebtedness in a certain amount and declares it to be payable to a certain person or his order, and this necessarily implies a promise. The promise so made is to pay at the issuing bank, because the amount is payable on the return of the certificate properly indorsed. The place of payment is just as certain as the place of return, and as to that the paper is absolutely certain. Nor is the promise a conditional one, for it requires nothing beyond the return of the paper, corresponding with presentation for payment of a formal promissory note. Having these requisites of negotiability, the instrument is not rendered nonnegotiable by the specification of current funds as the medium of payment. A promise to pay in such funds is construed to be one to be paid in lawful money, convertible into specie or circulating at par with it, in the absence of proof of use of the terms in some other sense. Outside of Alabama and Pennsylvania, the courts almost uniformly sustain these conclusions. An intimation of a different view was expressed in Hotchkiss v. Mosher, 48 N. Y. 478, but that case was distinguished in Pardee v. Fish, 60 N. Y. 265, 19 Am. Rep. 176, expressly declaring a certificate of deposit payable in current bank notes to be negotiable. Some of the earlier cases in Wisconsin refused to recognize the negotiability of such certificates, but they were disapproved and overruled in Klauber v. Biggerstaff, 47 Wis. 551, 8 N. W. 357, 32 Am. Rep. 773. The following additional authorities sustain the conclusions here announced, but they are not all cited as supporting any one of the several propositions stated nor as each sustaining all of them; some of them declaring certificates of deposit negotiable, while others a promise to pay in current funds, whether in a note or a certificate of deposit, to be a promise to pay in lawful money: Miller v. Austen, 13 How. (U. S.) 218, 14 L. Ed. 119; Welton v. Adams & Co., 4 Cal. 37, 60 Am. Dec. 579; Poorman v. Mills, 35 Cal. 118, 95 Am. Dec. 90; Kilgore v. Bulkley, 14 Conn. 362; Maxwell v. Agnew, 21 Fla. 154; Carey v. McDougald, 7 Ga. 84; Laughlin v. Marshall, 19 Ill. 390; Drake v. Markle, 21 Ind. 433, 83 Am. Dec. 358; Bean v. Briggs, 1 Iowa, 488, 63 Am. Dec. 464; Saving Inst. v. Weedon, 18 Md. 320, 81 Am. Dec. 603; Tripp v. Curtentius, 36 Mich. 494, 24 Am. Rep. 610; Cassidy v. Bank, 30 Minn. 87, 14 N. W. 363; Fultz v. Walters, 2 Mont. 165; Kirkwood v. Bank, 40 Neb. 484, 58 N. W. 1016, 24 L. R. A. 444, 42 Am. St. Rep. 683; Johnson v. Henderson, 76 N. C. 227; Bank v. Brown, 45 Ohio St. 39, 11 N. E. 799, 4 Ann. St. Rep. 526; Smilie v. Stevens, 39 Vt. 315; Curran v. Witter, 68 Wis. 16, 31 N. W. 705, 60 Am. Rep. 827. In two cases decided by this court at the present term and not yet officially reported (Citizens' Bank v. Bryan, 78 S. E. 400, and Benedum v. Citizens' Bank, 78 S. E. 656), negotiability of such certificates of deposit has been declared.

[2] The plea of former adjudication is not sustained by the record of the chancery cause adduced in evidence in support thereof. The two causes of action are different, though they grew out of transactions between some of the parties to the former suit and are related both as to parties and subject-matter. The broad rule of estoppel, relied upon by the defendant in error, applies only in those instances in which the cause of action in the second suit is the same as the cause of action in the first. Hudson v. Land & Mining Co., 76 S. E. 797; Herm. Est. & Res. Adj. pp. 477, 478. When the parties to the second suit and the cause of action therein are identical with the parties to the former suit and its cause of action, everything which fell within the scope of the issues in the first suit, actual or potential, as determined by the nature and limits of its cause of action, is concluded, whether actually adjudicated or not. But, if the cause of action in the second suit, though relating to the same property or the same transaction as that out of which the first grew, is different, the record of the former suit is conclusive of those things or questions only which were actually decided therein. Under such circumstances, it becomes necessary to ascertain what issues were made and how decided; and if it appears that the question, fact, or right involved in the second action was not actually decided in the first, or if a decision thereof does not affirmatively appear, there is no estoppel or adjudication as to it. Hudson v. Land & Mining Co., cited; Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 606, 24 L. Ed. 214; Cromwell v. County of Sac, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. Ed. 195; De Sollar v. Hanscome, 158 U. S. 216, 15 Sup. Ct. 816, 39 L. Ed. 956; Biern v. Ray, 49 W. Va. 129, 38 S. E. 530; Western, etc., Co. v. Virginia Coal Co., 10 W. Va. 250; Coville v. Gilman, 13 W. Va. 314.

[3] Grobe's suit against Roup, his partner, the Huntington National Bank, and the Pomeroy National Bank had for its purpose the subjection of partnership funds, alleged to be in the hands of the Huntington National Bank, to payment of the partnership debts and enforcement of the plaintiff's right, as against that bank's claim of exoneration from liability therefor, to his share of any surplus that might remain after the payment of such debts. The basis of the bill, according to its allegations and purposes, was the indebtedness of the bank to the plaintiff's firm. Standing upon that, he defended his position by an attack upon the validity of the transaction between the bank and the partner, which he charged to have been a fraudulent attempt on the part of the latter to misappropriate or divert that fund. Roup, with the knowledge of the bank, had drawn the firm's check for $1,922, out of which he took $122 in cash and the bank's certificate of deposit for $1,800 payable to himself. Grobe's amended bill, filed after the decision of this court on the first appeal, charged actual notice to the bank of want of authority in Roup to draw the firm's checks. The original bill attempted to hold it liable upon its payment of the money to Roup with knowledge of his appropriation thereof to his own private or individual use, evidenced by the taking of the certificate of deposit payable to himself or his order. The question between Grobe and the bank was substantially the same as that between Bank v. Furniture Co., 57 W. Va. 625, 50 S. E. 890, 70 L. R. A. 312, not fraud on the part of the bank but reliance by the bank upon an unauthorized act of the partner as agent of the firm. The fraud, if any, was on the part of Roup, but in the perpetration thereof he did an act in excess of his powers as firm agent of which the bank had notice.

The bill also attacked the validity of the certificate of deposit and denied negotiability thereof. The Pomeroy National Bank appeared for the purpose of responding to this allegation of the bill and defending, as against Grobe, its claim as a bona fide holder of the certificate as a negotiable instrument. There were no pleadings between the Pomeroy National Bank and the Huntington National Bank. The latter did not, by any allegation of its answer, deny the negotiability of the certificate of deposit or its validity in any respect. Its answer to the amended bill set up the conflicting claims of Grobe and the Pomeroy National Bank as to the fund, and the latter appeared to the answer, but it did not treat it as a cross-bill or make any response to it by any sort of pleading.

Grobe's cause of action, growing out of the partnership relation between him and Roup, the relation of debtor and creditor between his firm and the bank, and the allegation of the unwarranted and unauthorized action of the bank respecting the firm assets, is clearly not the same as that of the Pomeroy National Bank in this action, founded solely upon a negotiable instrument, issued by the Huntington National Bank and held by the Pomeroy National Bank as a purchaser thereof in due course of business and in good faith. This being true, the plaintiff in error, the Pomeroy National Bank, is not precluded from recovery upon the certificate of deposit merely by reason of having been a party to the Grobe suit. Whether it is concluded or not by any adjudication therein depends upon inquiry as to what was actually decided.

On the filing of the amended pleadings to which reference has been made, the court, on motion of the plaintiff, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that the Huntington National Bank pay to J. K. Oney, special receiver, the sum of $1,800, describing it as the amount of the certificate of deposit. Later the court, being of the opinion that Grobe was entitled to have the fund described in the bill and amended bill, then in the hands of the special receiver, subjected to the payment of the partnership debts of the firm of Grobe and Roup and the balance divided between the partners in proportion to their interests in the partnership, and that the Pomeroy National Bank was entitled to be subrogated to the interest of Roup therein, adjudged, ordered, and decreed accordingly and referred the cause to a commissioner to take, state, and report an account, which was done and the fund afterwards distributed. The effect of this procedure was to compel the Huntington National Bank to pay into the hands of the special receiver the amount of money in controversy, at the suit of John T. Grobe, subject that fund to the payment of partnership debts, and distribute the balance between the partners. As between the Pomeroy National Bank and the Huntington National Bank, there is no express decision of anything. In none of the decrees is there any reference to any controversy between them. Nowhere did the court pass upon the negotiability of the certificate of deposit in express terms or say whether the Pomeroy National Bank had or had not a cause of action against the Huntington National Bank founded upon the certificate of deposit.

On the issues made by the pleadings, the plaintiff introduced the certificate of deposit and proved the following additional facts: C. W. Roup presented the same to the Pomeroy National Bank and received thereon, after having indorsed it, $100 in cash and a new certificate of deposit for the sum of $1,700. Afterwards Roup indorsed and transferred the $1,700 certificate of the Pomeroy National Bank to the Bank of Ravenswood, and, on presentation thereof by the Bank of Ravenswood and demand for payment, the Pomeroy National Bank paid the same. On May 29, 1898, the $1,800 certificate of the Huntington National Bank, properly indorsed by Roup, was presented at said bank and payment thereof demanded on behalf of the Pomeroy National Bank. There was neither plea nor proof of any payment or set-off by the Huntington National Bank. In this state of the evidence, the defendant was clearly liable, upon the principles and conclusions already stated, for the full amount of said certificate, with interest thereon from the 29th day of May, 1898, amounting to $1,408.20, making an aggregate of $3,298.20, for which the court should have rendered judgment on the 13th day of April, 1910, the date of its finding and judgment for the defendant.

Accordingly the judgment complained of will be reversed, and judgment rendered here for the plaintiff, the Pomeroy National Bank, for the sum of $3,298.20 as of the 13th day of April, 1910, with interest thereon from said date until paid, together with its costs in the trial court as well as in this court.

MILLIGAN v. ALEXANDER.†

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
June 17, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MECHANICS' LIENS (§ 71*)—IMPROVEMENT OF WIFE'S LAND—AGENCY OF HUSBAND.

If a husband contracts, in his own name, with the knowledge of his wife, for the erection of a building on her land, and the work is carried on also with her knowledge and consent, she will be presumed to have constituted her husband her agent, and her property is liable to a mechanic's lien for such improvement.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 85; Dec. Dig. § 71.*]

2. MECHANICS' LIENS (§ 281*)—IMPROVEMENT OF WIFE'S LAND—AGENCY OF HUSBAND.

Proof that the wife was frequently present, in company with her husband, while the building was being erected, and on one occasion gave directions, or made suggestions, as to how a certain part of the building should be constructed, is sufficient evidence that she consented to having the building erected.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. §§ 565-572; Dec. Dig. § 281.*]

Appeal from Circuit Court, Pocahontas County.

Bill by J. W. Milligan against Eliza Alexander. Decree for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

L. M. McClintic, of Marlinton, for appellant. Price, Oseinton & Horan, of Marlinton, for appellee.

WILLIAMS, J. J. W. Milligan sued Mrs. Eliza Alexander in the circuit court of Pocahontas county to enforce a mechanic's lien against a lot of ground and a building erected thereon by him, situated in the town of Marlinton. From a decree granting relief to plaintiff, defendant has appealed.

The amount of the lien claimed is $1,050.93. The defense is (1) that defendant did not contract for the erection of the building and did not authorize any one else to do so as her agent, and (2) that the building was not put up in a workmanlike manner. The court scaled plaintiff's account because of imperfect work and bad material used, and decreed a lien upon the property for the sum of $910.43, and also decreed that it be sold to satisfy the lien, if not paid in 60 days.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

† Rehearing denied.

The contract for the erection of the building was oral, and was made by said Milligan with John Alexander, husband of defendant. The case turns upon this question: Was her husband defendant's agent in making the contract?

A mechanic's lien is a creature of statute and in order to obtain such lien the requirements of the statute must be complied with. A builder cannot have a lien simply by erecting a building on the land of another, independent of contract. The work must be done "by virtue of a contract with the owner or his authorized agent." Section 2, c. 75, Code (1906). Defendant and her husband both testified that she did not authorize him to contract for the building. The building was erected for a bowling alley, and is occupied by Dwight Alexander, defendant's son, free of rent. The contract price was $1,500, but plaintiff claims that he did extra work in putting up an addition to the building, which made his account amount, in all, to $1,738.03. Partial payments were made in June and July, 1909, amounting to $736.10.

[1, 2] Milligan testifies that Mrs. Alexander was present a good deal of the time when the contract was being made; that she said to him, on one occasion when the work was going on: "We are having the building put up on Dwight's account; he wants to keep on with the amusement business"—and that she was present, at the building, when the agreement was made to put up an addition to it for a boiler room, and made suggestions in regard to the manner of its construction. Concerning this latter fact Milligan is corroborated by L. W. Herold, who was present and heard the conversation. Mrs. Alexander denies that she was present when the original contract was made, but admits that she was present when the contract for the boiler room was made, and that she was at the building with her husband frequently when the house was being erected. She denies giving instructions, or making suggestions in regard to the building of the boiler room. The chancellor had to determine the facts upon the conflicting testimony of the witnesses, and we cannot say that his finding, which must have been that the facts were as Milligan had testified, is erroneous. Then, do the facts and circumstances prove agency of the husband? We think they do. It is true that agency of the husband will not be presumed from the marital relations alone. Boisot on Mechanics' Liens, § 277; Rust-Owen Lumber Co. v. Holt, 60 Neb. 80, 82 N. W. 112, 83 Am. Rep. 518. But the agency may be established by circumstantial evidence, and we think the facts and circumstances are such as to warrant the conclusion that, in making the contract with Milligan, John Alexander acted as agent for his wife. Certainly such view is consistent with justice. Mrs. Alexander knew that her husband had contracted for the erection of the building on her lot, and she did not object to it. The building was going up in sight of her dwelling house, and she was frequently present while the work was going on. In view of what was said and done by her husband and plaintiff, in her presence and with her knowledge, she is presumed to have authorized her husband to act as agent for her in the premises. The property in question is Mrs. Alexander's separate estate, and the statute (section 3, c. 66, Code [1906]) permits her to contract freely with reference to the improvement of it, and it would be inequitable and unjust, under the circumstances shown to exist in this case, if she should be permitted to reap the benefit of plaintiff's labor without consideration. That she derives no revenue from the building is not material. Her son is occupying it free of rent, but he does so with her consent. She has the right to demand rent, and cannot complain because she is getting no revenue from it.

"Proof that the wife knew of the work ordered by her husband while it was being done, and gave direction to the mechanics about it, has usually been considered sufficient to show that the husband acted as the wife's agent." Boisot on Mechanics' Liens, § 277. The rule stated in the text is supported by the following cases: Bradford v. Peterson, 30 Neb. 96, 46 N. W. 220; Rand v. Parker, 73 Iowa, 396, 35 N. W. 493; Wheaton v. Trimble, 145 Mass. 343, 14 N. E. 104, 1 Am. St. Rep. 463; Schmidt & Smith v. Joseph, 65 Ala. 475; Collins v. McGraw, 47 Mo. 495; Leisse v. Schwartz, 6 Mo. App. 413; Bodey v. Thackara, 143 Pa. 171, 22 Atl. 754, 24 Am. St. Rep. 526.

Under circumstances similar to those disclosed in the case under review, some courts hold that the wife is estopped to deny that a mechanic's lien was thereby created upon her separate estate. Schwartz v. Saunders, 46 Ill. 18; Greenleaf v. Beebe, 80 Ill. 520. The same result is reached whether the wife is made liable by estoppel or on the score of agency, presumed from her knowledge of and acquiescence in the improvement made on her land by her husband. Inasmuch as the statute gives a married woman the right to contract for the improvement of her property as freely as if she were a feme sole, we think it is more consonant with reason to hold her liable on the ground of her husband's agency. Such view also harmonizes with the great majority of the decisions.

There is a good deal of testimony tending to prove that some of the work on the building was not done in good workmanship style, and the court was justified in scaling plaintiff's demand on account of it. We find no error in the decree, and will affirm it.

OHIO FUEL OIL CO. v. BURDETT, Judge, et al.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Oct. 7, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

PARTITION (§ 53*)—GROUNDS OF RECEIVERSHIP—PRESERVATION OF PROPERTY.

When a tract of land, containing large and valuable deposits of oil and gas, as indicated by operations upon adjacent land, is the subject-matter of a suit in partition, and there is imminent danger of loss to the cotenants by drainage through the operation of wells on adjacent land, and the parties interested therein and owners in fee simple are unable to agree upon some plan for development of the land for its oil and gas, or some of these parties refuse to join in such measures, the court in which the suit is pending may appoint a receiver to produce the oil and gas as a measure of preservation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Partition, Cent. Dig. § 147; Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

Application for writ of prohibition by the Ohio Fuel Oil Company against Samuel C. Burdett, Judge, etc., and others. Prohibition refused.

Brown, Jackson & Knight, Thomas P. Ryan, and E. M. Burdette, all of Charleston, for petitioner. Geo. E. Price, Berkeley Minor, Jr., Cato & Biedsoe, and A. S. Alexander, all of Charleston, for respondents.

POFFENBARGER, P. Questioning the jurisdiction of a court of equity to appoint a receiver to produce oil and gas from a tract of land owned in undivided interests by numerous persons and under lease for oil and gas purposes to parties who are unable to agree upon a plan of operation for their mutual interests, as a means of preserving the oil and gas from loss or waste by drainage, through operations on adjacent premises, the relator filed its petition for a writ of prohibition, upon which a rule was issued, and the case made up for hearing on the merits.

The nature of the cause in which the receiver was appointed and the status thereof at the time of the appointment, together with all the facts involved and the relation of the parties, are very clearly and succinctly stated in the answer of the respondent, as follows: "The said suit was brought for the purpose of compelling a partition of a small tract of land containing about 25 acres, lying in Kanawha county, W. Va., alleged to be owned by a large number of persons in different interests. And by section 1 of chapter 79 of the Code of West Virginia, the circuit court of the county wherein is the estate is given jurisdiction of such suit. This defendant, as judge of the said circuit court, was convinced from the pleadings and affidavits filed in said cause that said tract of land has within it a large quantity of petroleum oil and gas, and that by reason of wells already drilled by the plaintiff in this cause—the defendant in said chancery cause—on adjacent lands, near the lines of this tract, and by the William Seymour Edwards Oil Company, and by other wells which are being drilled and are located very close to the lines of this tract by the said plaintiff in this cause, the said petroleum oil is being, and will be, very rapidly drained away from said tract, principally by the plaintiff in this cause, the Ohio Fuel Oil Company, which is one of the cotenants of said tract of land involved in said chancery cause, and that a very large amount, if not all, of said oil will have been extracted from said tract of land before a final decree of partition and settlement of the rights of the parties interested can be had in said cause; that the said Ohio Fuel Oil Company and said William Seymour Edwards Oil Company are within their strict legal rights in drilling oil wells on the adjacent lands, near the line of this tract, and cannot be prohibited from doing so by injunction; that by this means the greater part, if not practically all, of the value of the said land will be taken away, exhausted, and lost before partition can be had, and the other tenants in common deprived of their rights therein. And this defendant, as judge of said court, was of opinion that this was a proper case for the appointment of a special receiver on account of the danger of the loss and misappropriation of the subject-matter of the suit, or a material part thereof, under section 28 of chapter 133 of the Code of West Virginia, and under the general powers of a court of equity to preserve from loss or destruction the subject-matter involved in any suit pending before it, and especially in a partition suit. This respondent was of opinion that the said circuit court had the power to prevent, by means of a receiver, one cotenant from appropriating to itself the substance, value, and profits of a tract of land involved in a partition suit by indirect ways and means, when such cotenant had no right to make such appropriation by proceeding directly on the land itself."

The application for the writ raised only a question of jurisdiction in the circuit court, and did not call in question the propriety of the decree or order complained of on any ground other than the alleged want of jurisdiction, or power, to appoint a receiver to produce oil and gas from land held in cotenancy, without the consent of all parties interested therein. Under ordinary circumstances, there would be no such power, but the bill filed in the cause in which the receiver was appointed shows an extraordinary and unusual situation. The small tract of land, as to which partition was sought, probably contained very large and valuable quantities of oil and gas, as disclosed by operations on adjacent lands, and the wells on the adjacent land were so close and numerous that extensive drainage of the tract would have been the inevitable and direct consequence of the operation of such wells. The only remedy for this situation, as a means of preventing certain and great loss, was the drilling and operation of wells on the tract itself by way of offset to wells on the adjacent land. As the relator had wells of its own on adjacent property, through which it was draining oil from the tract probably largely in excess of its interest therein as cotenant and lessee, development of the tract was against its interest, and, holding interests in the tract, it was in a position to prevent development thereof by refusal to join in any manner with its cotenants, the other lessees in the work of development. What the circuit court did, therefore, by the appointment of a receiver was not to give one person rights in the lands of another, without his consent, but merely to preserve to the owners of the property that which belonged to them. It was a case of loss, without the intervention of the court by its preventive process. It was one of preservation of that which otherwise would have been destroyed. Finding no direct precedent for the action of the court below, this court was of the opinion that its action accords with general legal principles and the analogies of the law, recognizing and admitting drastic and summary remedies for the preservation of property, likely to be lost by any means and under any circumstances. Perishable goods are sold by their custodians, and their value preserved by conversion thereof into money when necessary to prevent loss. Property may be sold and converted into money by court action, pending litigation, when the expense of keeping it is so greatly disproportionate to its value that loss may result.

Upon these general principles, the writ prayed for was refused.

NOLL v. DAILEY, Judge, et al.
(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
May 20, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION (§ 137*) — RIGHT TO QUASH.

An indictment cannot be quashed because it was found upon illegal evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indictment and Information, Cent. Dig. §§ 490-487; Dec. Dig. § 137.*]

2. PROHIBITION (§ 10*)—GROUNDS — PLEA TO INDICTMENT.

Prohibition lies to prevent a trial court from entertaining a plea to an indictment, challenging the legality or sufficiency of the evidence on which it was found.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Prohibition, Cent. Dig. §§ 87-56; Dec. Dig. § 10.*]

Poppenbarger and Miller, JJ., dissenting.

Application for a writ of prohibition by the State, on the petition of Allen B. Noll, against Honorable R. W. Dailey, Judge, and others. Writ awarded.

Allen B. Noll, of Martinsburg, and Forrest W. Brown, of Charlestown, for petitioner.

WILLIAMS, J. Claude W. Stewart, who was indicted for felony at the January term of the circuit court of Berkeley county, appeared in court and tendered three several pleas in abatement averring that there was no legal evidence before the grand jury on which they could find the indictments. The attorney prosecuting for the state objected to the filing of the pleas and moved the court to require defendant to plead or demur to the indictments. The court overruled the motion and objection, until the matters arising on the pleas in abatement should be determined; and the Attorney General and the attorney appointed to prosecute the case in the court below have applied to this court, on behalf of the state, for a writ of prohibition to prohibit R. W. Dailey, judge of said court, from proceeding to try the matters set up in said pleas.

[1] The law of this state does not permit the court to go behind an indictment to inquire into the evidence considered by the grand jury, either to determine its legality or its sufficiency. "An indictment cannot be quashed because it rests, in whole or part, on incompetent evidence," is the rule that was declared in State v. Woodrow, 58 W. Va. 527, 52 S. E. 545, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 862, 112 Am. St. Rep. 1001, 6 Ann. Cas. 180. That was the first case to come before this court involving the question. Woodrow had filed a plea in abatement alleging that the indictment was found against him on the testimony of his wife, an incompetent witness. The court rejected his plea and refused to quash the indictment, and this court sustained that ruling.

The practice in this respect, however, is not uniform throughout the country; some of the courts holding that, if the indictment is found entirely upon illegal evidence, it may be quashed upon plea in abatement. 22 Cyc. 205; 10 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 395. But a number of states, including Virginia and West Virginia, hold that an indictment returned by a grand jury, properly constituted, cannot be attacked for want of legal evidence before the grand jury to support it. The law in these two states, on this subject, seems to have been so generally and so well understood that their courts of last resort were not called upon to pass upon it, until within very recent years. Woodrow's Case, supra, and Wadley's Case, 98 Va. 804, 35 S. E. 452, appear to be the first cases in the Supreme Courts of the two states, respectively. A similar question arose in Massachusetts in 1830, upon a motion by counsel for accused requesting the court to instruct the grand jury in regard to the nature of the evidence proper to be received by them, and the motion was overruled. Says Parker, C. J., in his opinion in that case (Anonymous, 9 Pick. 495): "According to my recollection, this is the first attempt of the kind in this commonwealth. It is to be presumed that only proper evidence will be laid before the jury. * * * If anything improper shall be given in evidence before the grand jury, the error may be corrected subsequently upon the trial before the petit jury."

Of course an indictment ought not to be found upon illegal evidence. But the impracticability of showing that it was found upon such evidence renders a plea in abatement or motion to quash on that ground improper. The testimony of a grand juror will not be received to impeach the indictment. 2 Bishop's New Crim. Proc. § 874. And in case a number of witnesses are examined by the grand jury, it would be impossible to ascertain by what evidence the grand jury were influenced. It is the body entrusted with the power to say when a crime has been committed, and when a prosecution should be begun against the person whom the evidence before them leads them to believe is probably the guilty party. According to our judicial system they are the tribunal representing the people, for the purpose of charging crime and designating the criminal. The evidence that satisfies them that probable cause exists for the prosecution of a certain person for a designated crime might not be enough to satisfy the court or a petit jury; and, to permit the court to inquire into the legality, or sufficiency, of the evidence on which the grand jury acted, would be to substitute, in a measure, the opinion of the court for that of the grand jury, and would ultimately lead to the destruction of the grand jury system. Such proceeding would also furnish opportunity for long and unnecessary delay in the trial of criminal cases and would be a useless incumbrance upon criminal procedure. Because the matter can be inquired into as well upon the trial of the indictment as upon the plea in abatement, and if it is made to appear that the indictment was found either upon illegal evidence, or without any evidence, and the state produces no other evidence at the trial than what was before the grand jury, the prisoner will be vindicated as fully by an acquittal as he would be by quashing the indictment. But the state is entitled to produce at the trial new and additional evidence of guilt. It may not have had all its evidence before the grand jury. But if the indictment is to be quashed for want of proper evidence before the grand jury, it would cut off this right.

Speaking of proceedings by grand juries, Judge Harrison, in Wadley's Case, supra, says: "It is the policy of the law, in the interest of justice, that this preliminary hearing should be conducted with closed doors. This secrecy is not only consistent with, but essential to, the nature of the institution. The sufficiency of the proof cannot be inquired into to invalidate an indictment found by a lawfully constituted grand jury. The presumption is that every indictment is found upon proper evidence. If anything improper is given in evidence before a grand jury, it can be corrected on the trial before the petit jury."

Quoting from the opinion of Judge Branham in State v. Woodrow, supra, 58 W. Va. page 538, 52 S. E. page 547, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 862, 112 Am. St. Rep. 1001, 6 Ann. Cas. 180: "It would be very bad practice, and less inconvenience, to have a full preliminary trial of competence of evidence before the grand jury in many cases. How far would the practice go? Does the inconvenience to the accused justify the institution of such a practice? Are not his rights fully vindicated by his right to exclude improper evidence on the trial? Therefore we conclude that the plea in abatement was properly rejected."

The following cases are also in accord with the law as we find it in Virginia and West Virginia, viz.: State v. Fasset, 16 Conn. 457; Brobeck v. Superior Court, 152 Cal. 289, 92 Pac. 646; State v. Dayton, 23 N. J. Law (3 Zab.) 49, 53 Am. Dec. 270; State v. Boyd, 2 Hill (S. C.) 288, 27 Am. Dec. 376; Stewart v. State, 24 Ind. 142; Smith & Cavin v. State, 61 Miss. 754; Cotton v. State, 43 Tex. 169; Clark v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 43 S. W. 522; State v. Fowler, 52 Iowa, 103, 2 N. W. 983; U. S. v. Cutler, 5 Utah, 608, 19 Pac. 145.

[2] Seeing that the court is without authority of law to make preliminary investigation of the evidence that was before the grand jury, it follows that, in attempting to do so, it is exceeding its legitimate powers, and can be prohibited. Section 1, c. 110, Code of West Virginia (1906), says: "The writ of prohibition shall lie as a matter of right, in all cases of usurpation and abuse of power, when the inferior court has not jurisdiction of the subject-matter in controversy, or having such jurisdiction, exceeds its legitimate powers."

By entertaining the pleas, the court is adopting a method of procedure not authorized or recognized by the law of this state. It is therefore exceeding its legitimate powers. It is more than mere error of judgment, because the court has no right to try the question; it does not have jurisdiction for that purpose, notwithstanding its jurisdiction to try the indictment. Where the court, although having jurisdiction of the cause, during the trial of it, exceeds its powers in some matter pertaining thereto, for which there is no adequate remedy by the ordinary course of proceeding, the writ of prohibition lies, under the general principles of law, as well as under the statute which, in respect to this case, is but declaratory of the common law; the state being given no other remedy.

In McConiha v. Guthrie, Judge, 21 W. Va. 134, the circuit court was prohibited from proceeding to condemn land for railroad purposes, which could not be lawfully taken, notwithstanding it had jurisdiction of the cause, and notwithstanding the remedy, in that case, by writ of error.

In the following cases inferior courts were prohibited from exceeding their legitimate powers, in causes of which they had general jurisdiction: Ensign v. Carroll, 30 W. Va. 532, 4 S. E. 782; City of Charleston v. Beller et al., 45 W. Va. 44, 30 S. E. 152; W. Va. Central Gas Co. v. Holt, Judge, 66 W. Va. 516, 66 S. E. 717; Supervisors of Culpepper County v. Gorrell et al., 20 Grat. (Va.) 484; McInerney v. City of Denver, 17 Colo. 302, 29 Pac. 516; Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 327, 24 Pac. 121, 10 L. R. A. 627, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192.

We award the writ.

POFFENBARGER and MILLER, JJ., dissent.

SULLIVAN v. HILL, Sheriff.

(Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.
Oct. 21, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. STATES (§ 34*)—LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEES—WITNESSES.

A summons for a witness before a joint committee of the two houses of the legislature, ordered by the unanimous action of such joint committee, is not invalid, if signed by the chairman of the committee from either house, pursuant to section 7, chapter 12, Code 1906, though such chairman be also the chairman selected by the joint committee to preside at the sessions of the joint committee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see States, Cent. Dig. § 42; Dec. Dig. § 34.*]

2. STATES (§ 40*)—LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEES—WITNESSES.

If the subject of investigation before such joint committee be within the range of legitimate legislative inquiry and the proposed testimony of the witness called relates to that subject, obedience to its process may be enforced by the committee directing the summons, by attachment, fine or imprisonment, as provided by said section 7, chapter 12, Code 1906.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see States, Cent. Dig. § 46; Dec. Dig. § 40.*]

3. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW (§§ 60, 273*)—STATES (§ 40*)—LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEES—WITNESSES.

Said section 7, chapter 12, Code 1906, authorizing either house of the legislature or a committee thereof to enforce obedience to its process is constitutional and valid.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 89, 90, 93, 739; Dec. Dig. §§ 60, 273;* States, Cent. Dig. § 46; Dec. Dig. § 40.*]

4. WITNESSES (§ 203*)—PRIVILEGE.

Knowledge or information acquired by a witness, though at the instance, in connection with and under the direction of a prosecuting attorney to use in the trial of indictments against members of the legislature for bribery, is not privileged, and furnishes a witness lawfully summoned no legal ground for refusing to respond to legitimate questions by the committee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. § 758; Dec. Dig. § 203.*]

Petition for writ of habeas corpus by Jesse V. Sullivan against Bonner H. Hill, sheriff, etc. Writ refused.

S. B. Avis and T. C. Townsend, both of Charleston, for petitioner. A. A. Lilly, Atty. Gen., for respondent.

MILLER, J. Petitioner by writ of habeas corpus seeks discharge from the custody of defendant, to whom he was committed by the order of Oliver S. Marshall, chairman of a legislative committee, pursuant to section 7, chapter 12, Code 1906.

At the time of the order of commitment, March 28, 1913, committees of the House and Senate were sitting pursuant to "Senate Joint Resolution No. 22—Raising a joint committee to investigate bribery charges against certain members of the Senate and House of Delegates and persons unknown who are alleged to have offered said bribes," as follows:

"Be it resolved by the Senate, the House of Delegates concurring therein:

"That a committee of five, composed of two members of the Senate, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and three members of the House of Delegates, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Delegates, be appointed, which committee is authorized and instructed to proceed, with all reasonable diligence, to make a thorough investigation of all matters and things concerning certain bribery charges against certain members of the Senate and House of Delegates, and other persons unknown at the present time, who are alleged to have offered bribes to the aforesaid members; and to investigate all matters and things concerning charges that certain members aforesaid have been offered and paid certain sums of money for their votes in the Joint Assembly, for the purpose of electing a United States Senator to the Congress of the United States for the term beginning March 4, 1913, which said committee is authorized and empowered to employ assistance, to summon and compel the attendance of witnesses, to administer oaths, and, generally, to send for persons and papers. Said committee shall have all the authority and power conferred on committees by section seven of chapter twelve of the Code. Said committee shall have full power and authority to act after the adjournment of the Senate and House of Delegates, to the end that all the charges may be fully investigated, and to report their findings to a future meeting of the Legislature, if unable to complete said investigation before the expiration of the present session."

Pursuant to the resolution Oliver S. Marshall and O. A. Hood were appointed members of the committee from the Senate, and Vernon E. Johnson, C. A. Sutton, and A. G. Swiger, members thereof from the House.

The petitioner on a summons issued by Chairman Marshall appeared before the joint committee, and being sworn, and after responding to some preliminary questions, he was requested by Chairman Marshall to state to the committee what information or knowledge he had concerning the arrest of or bribery charges against certain members of the Senate and House of Delegates of West Virginia, or other persons. He declined to answer, not on the ground that it would in any way incriminate him, but giving as his only reason, that the information he had on the subject had been obtained at the instance, in connection with and under the direction of the prosecuting attorney of Kanawha County, and that the latter had not waived his privilege so as to permit him to testify. He was then asked by the attorney general, present on behalf of the committee: "You mean you were with him, or near him, at the time you saw or heard anything concerning which you now refuse to testify?" To which the witness replied: "Yes, sir."

The several grounds alleged and relied on by petitioner for his discharge are: (1) That neither the committee nor any member thereof had any power or authority to order his arrest and detention, restraining him of his liberty: (2) That said committee had no power or authority to require him to give testimony or respond to the questions propounded to him in relation to the matters and things set forth in said joint resolution: (3) That the information sought by the committee was privileged, he being under the confidential ban of the prosecuting attorney as alleged: (4) That neither said committee nor any member thereof had any power or authority to punish him as for a contempt, and that his commitment was illegal and void and that he should be discharged.

[1] The jurisdiction of the committee under the joint resolution is not rested alone in inherent powers of the legislature, or of one of its committees in the premises. Section 7, chapter 12, provides: "When the senate or house of delegates, or a committee of either house, authorized to examine witnesses, or to send for persons and papers, shall order the attendance of any witness, or the production of any paper as evidence, a summons shall be issued accordingly, signed by the presiding officer or clerk of such house, or the chairman of said committee, directed to the sheriff or other proper officer of any county, or to the sergeant-at-arms of such house, or any person deputed by him. And when served, obedience thereto may be enforced, by attachment, fine or imprisonment, at the discretion of the house which appointed the committee; and if the committee be authorized to sit during the recess of the legislature or the recess of the house which appointed the committee, then obedience to the summons may be enforced by said committee as aforesaid. And when a committee is appointed by each house under any joint or concurrent resolution, and directed to sit jointly, with authority to examine witnesses or send for persons and papers, the summons aforesaid may be signed by the chairman of the committee on the part of the senate or the chairman of the committee on the part of the house of delegates; and obedience thereto may be enforced as aforesaid by the house which appointed the committee, which directed the summons to be issued; and if such committees be authorized to sit during the recess of the legislature, then obedience to the summons aforesaid may be enforced as aforesaid by the committee which directed the summons to be issued." According to the return, the summons, order of arrest and commitment were the result of the unanimous action of the joint committee, or of both committees sitting together, but the summons and order of arrest and commitment were signed only by Oliver S. Marshall, chairman, who by general parliamentary practices, being the first named, was chairman of the Senate committee, or the Senate branch of the joint committee.

We think the summons and order of arrest, so directed and executed, were valid exercises by the senate committee of the power given by the statute to enforce obedience to its summons, for though joint it was also several, and obedience might have been enforced by either committee. So much for the regularity of the proceedings. Our conclusion, therefore, is that if the matter of inquiry was lawful, there was no want of power in the Senate committee, as a means of enforcing obedience to its writ, to arrest and restrain the petitioner as was done, and to punish him by attachment and imprisonment for his disobedience, and that first and fourth points relied on must be overruled.

[2] The second ground, namely, want of authority to require petitioner to respond to the questions propounded to him, presents a different question. If the subject of investigation covered by the joint resolution was within the range of legitimate legislative inquiry, and the questions were pertinent thereto, and not calling for privileged matter, the authorities generally agree, that either house, if authorized, or a committee of either house, though sitting in recess, may summon witnesses, and compel obedience thereto. People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463, 2 N. E. 615, 52 Am. Rep. 49; Kilbourn v.

Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 26 L. Ed. 377; In re Chapman, 166 U. S. 661, 17 Sup. Ct. 677, 41 L. Ed. 1154; In re Falvey, 7 Wis. 630; In re Gunn, 50 Kan. 155, 32 Pac. 470, 948, 19 L. R. A. 519; Ex parte Lawrence, 116 Cal. 298, 48 Pac. 124; People v. Learned, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 626; Ex parte Parker, 74 S. C. 466, 55 S. E. 122, 114 Am. St. Rep. 1011, 7 Ann. Cas. 874, and dissenting opinion in In re Davis, 58 Kan. 368, 49 Pac. 160, and cases cited and reviewed. In Kilbourn v. Thompson, discharge was ordered, on the ground that the subject of the inquiry was not within the range of legitimate legislative investigation. Whether, if otherwise, obedience to its process could be enforced as attempted, was reserved and not decided. In In re Chapman, the writ was denied. In that case the resolution directed the committee to inquire "whether any Senator has been, or is, speculating in what are known as sugar stocks during the consideration of the tariff bill now before the Senate." The Court, by Chief Justice Fuller, 166 U. S. at page 669, 17 Sup. Ct. at page 680, 41 L. Ed. 1154, says: "What the Senate might or might not do upon the facts when ascertained, we cannot say, nor are we called upon to inquire whether such ventures might be defensible, as contended in argument, but it is plain that negative answers would have cleared that body of what the Senate regarded as 'offensive imputations, while affirmative answers might have led to further action on the part of the Senate within its constitutional powers." That the resolution of the Senate did not specify the purpose of the investigation was regarded immaterial, the subject of investigation being clearly within the constitutional powers of the Senate.

In the face of these authorities it is hardly necessary to inquire whether the subject of inquiry directed by the joint resolution was proper matter of legislative probe. That subject at once suggests, expulsion of its members, if found to be bribe takers, and further legislation on the subject of punishing the crime, clearly within the powers of the legislature enumerated in the Constitution.

[3] But it is insisted that though either house may punish a contumacious witness for disobedience to its process, or the process of one of its committees, no such power could by statute or resolution be devolved on one of the committees. The diligence of counsel and the investigation of the court have failed to find any case affirming the proposition, other than In re Davis, 58 Kan. 368, 49 Pac. 160. Denying it are People v. Learned, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 626, Ex parte Parker, 74 S. C. 466, 55 S. E. 122, 114 Am. St. Rep. 1011, 7 Ann. Cas. 874, and the dissenting opinion in In re Davis.

To deny the power of the committee to enforce obedience to its process in the manner provided by the statute, we would have to hold the act unconstitutional. To so hold the act would have to be clearly violative of some constitutional guarantee. There is surely nothing in our constitution expressly prohibiting such delegation of power. The act involved in People v. Learned, supra, was held not in conflict with the constitutional provision declaring that no person shall be deprived of life or liberty or property without due process of law. The conclusion we reach, that the act is valid, and the action of the committee authoritative, though not directly decided, we think supported by the reasoning and some of the authorities cited in Ex parte Caldwell, 61 W. Va. 49, 55 S. E. 910, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 172, 11 Ann. Cas. 646.

[4] Lastly, as to the question of privilege relied on. The privilege invoked is not a personal privilege of the witness, but the supposed right or privilege of the prosecuting attorney, because of the circumstances under which witness obtained his information. Witness asks no personal protection. The prosecuting attorney objects that his evidence would disclose the information to the committee in advance of a trial of the accused members on indictments found, and that the jurisdiction of the criminal court is exclusive of any other authority to try and punish the offending members of the legislature. The rule respecting state secrets is also appealed to. We do not think that rule has any application to the case here. While there are instances in which public officers, on grounds of public policy, may not be compelled to disclose information obtained in the course of their employment, such as revenue officers and the like, no principle of public policy is involved here as between witness and the state or the state's officer. There is no public policy of suppressing knowledge or information of the guilt or innocence of persons accused of crime, no matter how obtained, particularly where that knowledge or information is sought by a legislative committee, in the lawful pursuit thereof. There may be instances where the mouth of a prosecutor could be closed by a citizen consulting and giving him information, for the purpose of getting his advice on the propriety of some proposed or contemplated criminal proceeding. There the relationship of attorney and client might be established, and the information become privileged, cutting off the prosecuting officer from disclosing the information so acquired. But no such relationship of attorney and client existed between witness and prosecutor in this case. We think the point is without substantial merit.

For the reasons stated, the writ was properly denied, and the petitioner rightfully remanded to the custody of the defendant.

CAVENAUGH v. JARMAN.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 29, 1913.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 959*)—MATTERS OF DISCRETION—MOTION TO AMEND—DENIAL.

Denial of a motion to amend a complaint, in the exercise of the trial court's discretion, will not be reviewed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3825-3831; Dec. Dig. § 959.*]

2. JUDGMENT (§ 720*)—CONCLUSIVENESS—ESTOPPEL.

A deficiency judgment having been rendered against plaintiff in foreclosure, he conveyed certain other land to his son-in-law, who on the same day conveyed the same to plaintiff's wife. Execution was levied on the land, and a homestead allotted thereunder, to which exceptions were filed and a judgment rendered, holding that plaintiff was not entitled to homestead and directing the sale of the land. Held, that such judgment constituted an estoppel precluding plaintiff from thereafter maintaining an action to recover the land as homestead.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 1251; Dec. Dig. § 720.*]

3. TRUSTS (§ 366*)—PAROL TRUST—ENFORCEMENT—PARTIES.

Where plaintiff against whom a deficiency judgment in foreclosure was rendered conveyed land to his son-in-law, who immediately conveyed the same to plaintiff's wife, and the land was thereafter sold on execution based on the judgment, plaintiff could not establish a parol trust in the land for his own benefit as against the grantee in his deed, and his wife and children, in a suit to which they were not parties.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Cent. Dig. §§ 574-583; Dec. Dig. § 366.*]

4. PLEADING (§ 218*)—DEMURRER—JUDGMENT.

Where, in a suit to enforce a constructive trust in certain land, the complaint was held insufficient on demurrer, and no answer was filed by defendant or any facts admitted, the judgment should have merely determined that the complaint did not state a cause of action, and it was improper to include an adjudication of title to the land in controversy and an order for a writ of possession and for damages.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 549-566; Dec. Dig. § 218.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Onslow County; Connor, Judge.

Suit by J. E. Cavanaugh against H. A. Jarman. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Modified and affirmed.

The only parties to this action are J. E. Cavanaugh, the plaintiff, and H. A. Jarman, the defendant. The complaint alleges, in substance, that in 1905 the plaintiff and his wife executed a mortgage to one Mills, conveying certain lands, to secure a debt; that upon default in the payment of the debt, an action was instituted against the plaintiff and his wife in the superior court of Onslow county, in which a decree was rendered at July term, 1908, adjudging the amount due, and condemning the land to be sold to pay the same; that the land was sold under the decree and the proceeds applied to the judgment, leaving a balance of $382.52 due thereon; that after said judgment was docketed the plaintiff conveyed another tract of land of 25 acres, which belonged to him, to his son-in-law, and on the same day the son-in-law conveyed the land to the wife of the plaintiff; that execution issued on the judgment of 1908 to collect the balance due thereon and was levied on the said 25 acres; that a homestead was allotted under said execution, and exceptions thereto were filed, which were passed on at April term, 1912, and a judgment was then rendered substantially holding that the plaintiff was not entitled to a homestead and directing the land to be sold; that said land was sold under execution on the 1st day of July, 1912, and the defendant became the purchaser at the price of $530, and took a deed therefor; that protest was made against the sale, upon the ground that it had not been properly advertised, and was not being offered for sale at the hour allowed by law. There was also allegation that the plaintiff was an ignorant man, and that the deed to his son-in-law and from him to the wife were executed in good faith and under advice that this was the best way to secure a homestead, and that the price paid by the defendant was inadequate. The defendant demurred to the complaint, upon the ground that it failed to state a cause of action in any one, and also that it showed no title or interest in the plaintiff. The demurrer was sustained, and the plaintiff excepted. The plaintiff then moved the court to allow him to amend the complaint by alleging, in substance, specifically that the plaintiff made the conveyance of the tract of land mentioned in the complaint, under which his wife obtained the deed therein mentioned, being ignorant of the true manner of securing to himself, his wife and children, their homestead rights, and that the true purpose and intent of the transaction was that the said property should be held in trust for the purposes of securing to the said plaintiff, his wife and children, the homestead allowed by the Constitution of North Carolina; that there was no intent to defraud any creditors in so doing, but that the plaintiff, through ignorance and advice of others, honestly, believed that this was the proper way to obtain his homestead rights for the benefit of his wife and children, and such was the expressed trust attached to the said deeds therein mentioned. The court declined to permit the plaintiff to amend the complaint as above, holding also as a matter of law that such amendment was immaterial and could not affect the result of the action. To the court's declining to allow such amendments and to its ruling the plaintiff excepted. The judgment also contains an adjudication of title, an order for a writ of possession against the plaintiff, and for an assessment of damages against the plaintiff and the surety on his bond. The plaintiff excepted and appealed.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes 79 S.E.—43

G. V. Cowper, of Kingston, and Duffy & Koonce, of Jacksonville, for appellant. McLean, Varner & McLean, of Lumberton, and Frank Thompson, of Jacksonville, for appellee.

PER CURIAM. [1] The ruling of his honor on the motion to amend seems to have been in exercise of his discretion, and would not be reviewable, but we concur in the opinion that if the amendment had been allowed, the complaint, as amended, would not have stated a cause of action.

[2, 3] The facts are not clearly stated, but as they appear the judgment of 1912 would be an estoppel, and if there was no estoppel, the plaintiff could not establish a parol trust in his own favor against the grantee in his deed, under Gaylord v. Gaylord, 150 N. C. 222, 63 S. E. 1028, and his wife and children, alleged to be the other beneficiaries of the trust, are not parties.

[4] The exceptions to the form of the judgment are well taken. No answer has been filed by the defendant, and no facts are admitted, and the judgment upon the demurrer should do no more than adjudicate that the complaint does not state a cause of action, and that the plaintiff has no right to sue.

It also appears that the bond of the plaintiff does not purport to cover anything except costs.

The judgment will therefore be modified to the effect that the demurrer be sustained, the action be dismissed, and that the defendant recover of the plaintiff and his surety his costs.

Modified and affirmed.

STATE v. LUCAS.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 29, 1913.)

1. HOMICIDE (§ 118*) — SELF-DEFENSE — RETREAT TO THE WALL.

Where an unprovoked assault with intent to kill is made upon a person, he may stand his ground and, if necessary, kill his assailant, although, if the assault were not with intent to kill, he would be required to retreat to the wall before taking life in self-defense.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 168-171; Dec. Dig. § 118.*]

2. HOMICIDE (§ 118*) — SELF-DEFENSE — UNPROVOKED ASSAULT.

The rule requiring one to quit the fight before he can maintain self-defense applies only where the person who slays another provoked the dispute or entered into it unlawfully.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 168-171; Dec. Dig. § 118.*]

3. HOMICIDE (§ 300*) — HARMLESS ERROR — INSTRUCTIONS — CURE BY OTHER INSTRUCTIONS.

Error in an instruction which required the defendant to prove that he was without fault in entering into the difficulty which resulted in a homicide and to show that he quit the fight and went as far as he could with safety requires a reversal of the conviction where it was the only instruction which attempted to lay down the rules of self-defense for the jury, although another instruction had referred to it in general terms.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Homicide, Cent. Dig. §§ 614, 616-620, 622-630; Dec. Dig. § 300.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Cumberland County; Ferguson, Judge.

Theodore Lucas was convicted of murder in the second degree, and he appeals. Reversed, and new trial ordered.

Indictment for murder, tried before his honor, G. S. Ferguson, judge, and a jury at May term, 1913, of the superior court of Cumberland county. On the trial below it was proved that on March 15, 1912, in Cumberland county, the prisoner, Theodore Lucas, shot the deceased, Gilbert McDougal, with a pistol, inflicting wounds from which he shortly died.

There was evidence on part of the state tending to show that at the time there was altercation between the prisoner and deceased, when the latter was seen to put his hand on the prisoner's shoulder, when the latter drew his weapon and fired the shots which resulted fatally, and there was no adequate provocation or legal excuse for the homicide on the part of the defense. The prisoner, a witness in his own behalf, testified in part as follows: "I am the defendant in this action. I shot Gilbert McDougal. When I shot him, he came up to me, he did, and asked me what was that about me sending for him not to come up there. He was a married man and I had done discussed the matter, and said they just couldn't be together so much and I was the same as her brother. He made threats that he was going to get drunk and what he was going to do to me. When I shot him he was making towards me with a knife. He caught my arm. I was trying to keep him from striking me and was running backwards, and the first time I shot him I shot myself through the arm. He struck at me and caught and pulled me this way and I shot myself through the arm. He run me 10 or 15 steps after he was shot three times, and the last one he said: 'You damn son of a bitch, you better run. If I get you I will kill you.'" There was other testimony from eyewitnesses of the occurrence, tending to support this statement and tending to show that the homicide was committed by the prisoner in his necessary self-defense. There was evidence also to the effect that a knife was found near the deceased when he fell; one witness saying when so found it was shut and another that it was open.

The court being of opinion that there was no evidence to justify a conviction of murder in the first degree, the case was submitted on murder in the second degree, manslaughter, or excusable homicide. There was verdict guilty of murder in second degree. Judgment, and prisoner excepted and appealed.

Shaw & MacLean, of Fayetteville, for appellant. The Attorney General and T. H. Calvert, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

HOKE, J. (after stating the facts as above). After charging the jury correctly as to murder in the second degree and manslaughter, the court below, in reference to the prisoner's claim of self-defense, stated the rule as follows: "But if you are satisfied he was without fault at the time, that he did not enter into the quarrel willingly, that he did not enter into the fight maliciously, but that having entered into the fight he quit it and went as far as he could with safety and was followed by the deceased and then pushed to the wall and shot and killed the deceased, then he would be acting in self-defense"—and to this the prisoner duly excepted.

[1] It is held for law in this state that, when an unprovoked and murderous assault is made on a citizen, he is not required to retreat but may stand his ground and take the life of the assailant if it is necessary to do so to save himself from death or great bodily harm. State v. Hough, 138 N. C. 663, 50 S. E. 709; State v. Blevins, 138 N. C. 668, 50 S. E. 763; State v. Dixon, 75 N. C. 275.

In the Hough Case, the doctrine is stated as follows: "If an assault be committed under such circumstances as to naturally induce the defendant to believe that the deceased was capable of doing him great bodily harm, and intended to do it, then the law will excuse the killing, because any man who is not himself legally in fault has the right to save his own life or to prevent enormous bodily harm to himself. (4) There is a distinction between an assault with felonious intent and assault without felonious intent; in the former a person attacked is under no obligation to flee but may stand his ground and kill his adversary, if need be; in the latter he may not stand his ground and kill his adversary, if there is any way of escape open to him."

In the Blevins Case, speaking to the position the court said: "It has been established in this state by several well-considered decisions that where a man is without fault, and a murderous assault is made upon him, an assault with intent to kill, he is not required to retreat but may stand his ground, and if he kill his assailant, and it is necessary to do so in order to save his own life or protect his person from great bodily harm, it is excusable homicide and will be so held (State v. Harris, 46 N. C. 190; State v. Dixon, 75 N. C. 275; State v. Hough, 138

N. C. 663 [50 S. E. 709]); this necessity, real or apparent, to be determined by the jury on the facts as they reasonably appeared to him. True, as said in one or two of the decisions, this is a doctrine of rare and dangerous application. To have the benefit of it, the assaulted party must show that he is free from blame in the matter; that the assault upon him was with felonious purpose; and that he took life only when it was necessary to protect himself. It is otherwise in ordinary assaults, even with deadly weapons. In such case a man is required to withdraw if he can do so and to retreat as far as consistent with his own safety. State v. Kennedy, 91 N. C. 572. In either case he can only kill from necessity. But in the one he can have that necessity determined in view of the fact that he has a right to stand his ground; in the other he must show as one feature of the necessity that he has retreated to the wall."

It will be noted from these citations, and they are in accord with the doctrine prevailing here, that when one is subjected to an unprovoked assault, felonious or otherwise, he is not always required to quit the combat in order to maintain the position of self-defense. As we have seen, if the assault is unprovoked and with intent to kill, the person may stand his ground, and if an ordinary assault he must retreat to the wall; that is, withdraw as far as safety permits.

[2] This principle of requiring one to quit the fight in order to maintain self-defense obtains only when the person who slays another has provoked the dispute or entered into it unlawfully.

In the first part of this excerpt, therefore, the court was correct in holding that, in order to establish self-defense, the prisoner must be without legal fault in entering upon the difficulty; but having said this and on the facts in evidence he committed error in imposing on the prisoner, as he did, the further burden of showing he "quit the fight," went as far as he could with safety, and was followed by deceased, and then, being pushed to the wall, he then shot and killed the deceased.

[3] It is urged for the state that, while this direction, when standing alone, may be subject of criticism, it should not be held for reversible error because in the charge as a whole the position of self-defense has been fairly presented. We are fully mindful of this wholesome rule for construing a judge's charge, which has been approved in several of our recent decisions, but are not at liberty to adopt the suggestion of the learned counsel in the present instance. While his honor in a former part of the charge made one reference in general terms to the doctrine of self-defense as being a killing from necessity, it is in this present portion that he lays down the rule on the subject for the jury's guidance, and it is the only place he intends or professes to do it. There is nothing in any other portion of the charge that corrects or tends to correct or qualify the rule as stated, and in our opinion it amounts to reversible error, entitling the prisoner to a new trial. It is so ordered.

New trial.

KISTLER v. SOUTHERN RY. CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 29, 1913.)

APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 781*) — DISMISSAL OF APPEAL—GROUNDS—COLLUSIVE ACTION.

The Supreme Court will not attempt to construe Laws 1907, c. 24, § 3, and the act of Congress ratified March 3, 1913 (Act March 3, 1913, c. 117, 37 Stat. 732), as to transportation of intoxicating liquor, without the benefit of a full argument by opposing counsel in a case in which there is a real controversy, and will therefore dismiss an appeal from a judgment in an action brought to obtain a construction of such act where it is apparent that both parties are interested on the same side of the case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 63-80, 3122; Dec. Dig. § 781.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Burke County; Cline, Judge.

Action by A. M. Kistler against the Southern Railway Company. From a judgment for the plaintiff upon an agreed statement of facts, the defendant appeals. Appeal dismissed.

This is an action to recover one barrel of beer, consigned to the plaintiff, and heard upon an agreed statement of facts. There was judgment in favor of the plaintiff, and the defendant excepted and appealed.

S. J. Ervin, of Morganton, for appellant. W. A. Self, of Hickory, for appellee.

PER CURIAM. This is a proceeding to obtain a determination of the question whether the defendant can legally transport a barrel of beer from a point beyond the state to Morgantown, N. C., and there deliver it to the plaintiff. The plaintiff files a brief contending that chapter 24, § 3, Laws 1907, forbidding such act, and the act of Congress ratified March 3, 1913 (37 Stat. 732, c. 117), cannot deprive him of the right to receive such consignment. The defendant in his brief avers that he is ready to obey the law if he knows what it is and files a brief in accordance with the contention of the plaintiff. It is apparent that both parties are interested on the same side and that this is really a proceeding to ask the advice or opinion of the court on practically a "moot case," though there is no doubt as to the facts. There was no stay of execution, and the beer was doubtless delivered and long since consumed.

In Parker v. Bank, 152 N. C. 255, 67 S. E. 492, this court held that the object of the suit was evidently to procure a construction of section 4, c. 150, Laws 1909, and that it was instituted solely for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of the court, and dismissed the action. That case referred to Blake v. Askew, 76 N. C. 327, in which it was attempted in a similar way to obtain the opinion of the court as to the validity of the special tax bonds and where the same action was taken. In this case it would be necessary to construe the above statutes of the state and of the United States, and we are not willing to pass upon a question of such importance without the benefit of a bona fide controversy and full argument by opposing counsel. The court has refused to entertain controversy submitted to obtain the opinion of the court upon the administration of the public school system (Board of Education v. Kenan, 112 N. C. 567, 17 S. E. 485) or to advise a sheriff as to the application of moneys (Millikan v. Fox, 84 N. C. 107; Bates v. Lilly, 65 N. C. 232).

We must therefore enter an order: Appeal dismissed.

OUTLAW v. GRAY.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 55*)—CONVEYANCE—CONSTRUCTION.

An indenture under seal granting on a stated consideration all of the marl and fossil deposits under the grantor's land, to the grantee, his heirs and assigns, together with the right to enter and remove the same, is a conveyance in fee, and is not a mere temporary license revocable at the will of the grantor, and hence the right to remove the marl and other deposits passes to the executors and representatives of the grantee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 153-165; Dec. Dig. § 55.*]

2. DEEDS (§ 90*)—CONSTRUCTION.

A deed should be construed most favorably to the grantee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 234-237, 247, 248; Dec. Dig. § 90.*]

3. MINES AND MINERALS (§ 55*)—CONVEYANCE.

The minerals beneath the surface of land may be conveyed in fee separate from the surface of the land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 153-165; Dec. Dig. § 55.*]

Clark, C. J., and Hoke, J., dissenting.

Appeal from Superior Court, Lenoir County; Allen, Judge.

Action by F. P. Outlaw against M. E. Gray. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Reversed.

Loftin & Dawson and G. V. Cowper, all of Kinston, for appellant. Rouse & Land, of Kinston, for appellee.

BROWN, J. The case turns upon the construction of an indenture from Julia E. Gray to M. E. Gray, the material part of which is as follows: "That said party of the first part for and in consideration of the sum of ten dollars ($10.00) to her in hand paid by the said party of the second part, receipt of which is hereby fully acknowledged, the said party of the first part hath given, granted, bargained, and sold, and by these presents do give, grant, bargain, sell, and convey unto the party of the second part, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, the right of entering in and upon the lands hereinafter described for the purpose of searching for all marl deposits and fossil substance, and for taking and removing therefrom said marl and fossil substance, which he may find imbedded in the earth of the said lands, and for mining and quarrying operations for that purpose to any extent he may deem advisable, but not to hold possession of any part of the said lands for any other purpose whatsoever." Here follows a description of the lands and a covenant that no other consideration by way of rent is to be paid for the marl except that recited in the deed, and a clause wherein the grantee covenants that "no damage shall be done to said lands other than shall be necessary in conducting the operations specified." The instrument is under seal.

[1] The plaintiffs contend that the written instrument is a mere license to quarry for marl and fossil substances in the earth and that it expired with the death of the grantor. His honor so held. The defendant contends it is a deed in fee and that it conveys in fee simple all "marl deposits and fossil substances" under the surface of the land described in the instrument under a covenant upon the part of the grantee that no damage shall be done the land other than shall be necessary to remove such deposits.

The character of the instrument and the language employed are both appropriate to the conveyance of a fee-simple estate in "all the marl deposits and fossil substances" imbedded in the earth of the lands described therein, and such is the legal construction we put upon it. It must be admitted that the deed is sufficient in form to convey a fee in the land itself had that been the subject of conveyance. That being so, it is sufficient to convey a fee in the mineral deposits described in it. The grant is made upon a present and stated consideration, and not upon a rent charge or other consideration payable in the future. It is made of "all the marl deposits and fossil substances" imbedded in the land, and not only of such as the grantee may from time to time remove within a given time. As the grantee is given the right to remove "all the marl deposits," his interest cannot be terminated until they are removed. Under a revocable license they could be terminated at any time. It is made to the grantee and "his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns," and not to the grantee for years or life. Every clause and recital in the instrument appears to be inconsistent with the idea of a temporary license revocable at the will of the grantor, and is wholly consistent with an intention to convey a fee.

[2] If the meaning is doubtful, we should construe it a fee; that being more favorable to the grantee. Devlin on Deeds, c. 25.

[3] That mineral substances beneath the surface of the earth may be conveyed by deed distinct from the right to the surface itself is now well settled. The common-law courts of England regarded such rights as incorporeal hereditaments, a right issuing out of a thing corporate, because there could be no livery of seisin. In this country, where livery of seisin is not essential in the transmission of the title, such rights are regarded as corporeal hereditaments and pass by apt words in a deed, though not susceptible of livery of seisin; delivery or registration of the deed taking its place. Hartwell v. Camman, 10 N. J. Eq. 128, 64 Am. Dec. 449. The conveyance of such rights in fee is common in Pennsylvania and other mining states. In that state there are numerous decisions to the effect that a conveyance of the right to take the coal under the grantor's tract of land is a conveyance of the entire ownership of the coal in place beneath the land. Caldwell v. Fulton, 31 Pa. 475, 72 Am. Dec. 761, and notes. This case is almost on all fours with the case at bar. The words employed in this deed are very comprehensive and express absolute ownership and complete enjoyment of the interest conveyed. They are inconsistent with the idea of a temporary and transient use.

Reversed.

CLARK, C. J., and HOKE, J., dissent.

BARFIELD v. HILL et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 15, 1913.)

1. ADVERSE POSSESSION (§ 115*)—EVIDENCE—QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

In an action to try the title to land, where the plaintiff introduced evidence tending to prove adverse possession for more than 21 years under color of title, a motion to nonsuit was properly denied.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 314, 691-701; Dec. Dig. § 115.*]

2. TRIAL (§ 141*)—DIRECTION OF VERDICT—WHEN POWER MAY BE EXERCISED.

Where the evidence is uncontradicted, and only one inference can be drawn therefrom, the judge may direct the jury to find a certain verdict if they believe the evidence, but it is very rare that a verdict can be properly directed when the sole question is the possession of land, and much evidence is offered on each side.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 336; Dec. Dig. § 141.*]

ELGIN CITY BANKING CO. v.

McEACHERN et al.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 330*)—TRANSFER—INDORSEMENT—NECESSITY.

Under Revisal 1905, § 2178, providing that a negotiable instrument payable to order may be negotiated by the indorsement of the holder coupled with delivery, the delivery of a promissory note payable to order without indorsement makes the transferee a mere equitable owner, and he does not take the paper free from defenses good between the parties as he would were he a bona fide purchaser.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 794-804; Dec. Dig. § 330.*]

2. BILLS AND NOTES (§ 330*)—DEFENSES.

A mere equitable owner of a promissory note takes it subject to defenses good against the holder, and consequently, where the note was procured by fraud, the transferee's want of notice of the fraud is immaterial; it being a good defense against him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bills and Notes, Cent. Dig. §§ 794-804; Dec. Dig. § 330.*]

3. EVIDENCE (§ 318*)—ADMISSIBILITY—HEARSAY.

In an action upon a note, where the plaintiff was a mere equitable holder of the instrument, a letter written by one not a party to the note tending to show good faith of plaintiff, is inadmissible as hearsay.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1183-1200; Dec. Dig. § 318.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Robeson County; Ferguson, Judge.

Action by the Elgin City Banking Company against R. A. McEachern and others. From a judgment for defendants, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

This is an action upon a note executed by the defendant and payable to the order of Albert O. Tracy for the purchase price of a horse. The plaintiff alleged that the note was transferred for value and before it was due by indorsement to Coleman & Son and by Coleman & Son to the plaintiff. The defendant denied the indorsement by Tracy and alleged that the note was procured by false and fraudulent representations. Defendants further alleged that the note was not to become effective until and unless it was signed by 14 solvent persons, the plan of sale being that 14 men would take shares of $200 each, making up the total purchase price of $2,800, and it was only signed by 11 men, some of whom were not solvent.

The evidence as to the indorsement of the note was as follows:

Charles R. Coleman testified: "I reside at Wayne, Ill., and am engaged in importing and breeding Percheron horses and farming. I am associated with my sons in business under the firm name of Charles R. Coleman & Sons. On February 13, 1910, I purchased from Alvin O. Tracy the note of Robert A. McEachern et al. [The note was exhibited to him and is the same note sued on in this case.] I accepted this note, the face value thereof with accrued interest thereon in payment for an imported stallion. Mr. Tracy gave me the bank letter from the Bank of Red Springs at the same time that I bought the note. The purchase price of the horse I sold Tracy was something like a thousand dollars. I inquired about the note from Tracy, and he satisfied me that the makers were solvent and responsible. I made no inquiry as to what the note was given for. He recommended it so highly that he said he had just as soon put his name across the back of the note. He said he would put his name on the back of the note."

The jury returned the following verdict:

"(1) Did the plaintiff become the holder of the note sued on before overdue and without notice that it had previously been dishonored and did it take it in good faith and for value, without notice of any infirmity or defect in the same? Answer: No.

"(2) Is the plaintiff the equitable owner of the note sued on? Answer: Yes.

"(3) Did the defendants sign the note sued on with the agreement made at the time that the note should be surrendered in the event Tracy or his agent, James, failed to procure the signature of 14 solvent or responsible parties to said note? Answer: Yes.

"(4) Was the execution of the note sued on procured by false and fraudulent representations, as alleged in the answer? Answer: Yes."

The plaintiff requested the following special instructions to be given to the jury by his honor:

"(1) If the jury shall find from the evidence that the note in question was, on the 13th day of February, 1910, sold and delivered, for value, by Alvin O. Tracy to Charles R. Coleman & Sons, and on the 10th day of May, 1910, the same was indorsed, sold, and delivered by said Coleman & Sons to the Elgin City Banking Company, for value, the said plaintiff is presumed to be the holder of said note in due course."

His honor refused to give this instruction, and the plaintiff excepted.

"(2) If the jury shall find from the evidence that the Elgin City Banking Company had no knowledge of any fraud or defect in the execution of said note, at the time the purchase of same from said Coleman & Sons, and that said note was indorsed by said Coleman & Sons and delivered, for value, before maturity, to plaintiff, the said Elgin City Banking Company will be presumed to be the holder of said note in due course."

His honor refused to give this instruction. Plaintiff excepted.

His honor charged on the first issue:

"In order for the plaintiff to be the holder of the note in due course, it is necessary for the plaintiff to show to you from the evidence, and by its greater weight, that it is a purchaser of the note for a valuable consideration, and before it is due, and in order to constitute the plaintiff a holder in due course, it is necessary that it should be indorsed by the payee on the note, and when the indorsement is denied it devolves upon the plaintiff to prove the indorsement by the greater weight of the evidence. So that one of the first questions for you to inquire into is whether or not the note was indorsed by Tracy to Coleman. The evidence touching the indorsement, and the only testimony in regard to that, is contained in the deposition of Coleman, and it is contained in that portion of the deposition in which the question is asked: 'Was there any contract between you and A. O. Tracy or between the firm of C. R. Coleman & Son and A. O. Tracy at or prior to the indorsement of this note that the note should be returned if it is not good, and he recommended it so highly that he had said he had just as soon put his name across the back.' There was nothing said about the indorsement on the note; he said he would put his name on the back of the note; that is all the evidence touching the question of indorsement. It is contended on the part of the defendants that it was only a promise to put it on the back of the note, and there is no evidence that he actually did write his name on the back of the note, but he only agreed to do it without any proof that he did do so. If, upon the evidence, you shall be satisfied by its greater weight that he indorsed the note, then it would be your duty to find that as a fact in consideration of the first issue; but if the proof does not satisfy you by its greater weight when you come to examine that part of the testimony, and you fail to find that it was indorsed by A. O. Tracy, not that his name was on it but if he put his name on it himself, then it will become your duty to answer the first issue, 'No,' because, unless it was indorsed by the payee, A. O. Tracy, the legal title would not pass to Coleman and could not by Coleman's indorsement pass to the plaintiff. If you should find that the note was indorsed, then it was purchased for a valuable consideration, without notice of its infirmity."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

Judgment was entered upon the verdict in favor of the defendants, and the plaintiffs excepted and appealed.

A. P. Spell, of Red Springs, and R. E. Lee, of Lumberton, for appellant. McIntyre, Lawrence & Proctor and McLean, Varser & McLean, all of Lumberton, for appellees.

ALLEN, J. [1] As the note sued on is payable to order and not to bearer, the indorsement by Tracy was necessary to pass the title to Coleman & Son, freed of the equities and defenses of the makers against the payee, and without such indorsement the holders of the note were only the equitable owners and subject to these defenses (Revisal, § 2178; Tyson v. Joyner, 139 N. C. 72, 51 S. E. 803), and the jury, under proper instructions, has found in answer to the first and second issues that the indorsement was not made. Coleman & Son then became the equitable owners of the note under the findings of the jury, subject to the legal defenses of the defendants against Tracy; and, as they could not sell more than they owned, the plaintiff took the note by purchase from Coleman & Son with the same infirmity attached. It follows, therefore, that the prayers for instruction requested by the plaintiff were properly refused, as they are predicated upon the idea that the plaintiff was a holder in due course and was the owner of the legal and equitable title.

[2, 3] In this view of the case, it is not necessary to consider the first four exceptions to evidence, as they all bear on the question of good faith on the part of the plaintiff, and its notice of fraud, which was immaterial if the plaintiff was only the equitable owner. It also appears that his honor charged the jury that the plaintiff had no actual notice of any fraud.

The letter offered in evidence was properly excluded, as the declaration of a stranger and hearsay, but, if admitted, it could have had no bearing on the case except to show good faith on the part of Coleman & Son in the purchase of the note, and good faith could have added nothing to their title if there was no indorsement.

There are many other exceptions in the record; most of them being directed to the evidence to prove false and fraudulent representations. We have examined all of them and find nothing that will justify a reversal of the judgment.

The evidence of fraud is stronger than in many of the actions on so-called "horse notes" that have been before us.

No error.

ROBINSON v. SECURITY LIFE & ANNUITY CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 29, 1913.)

1. INSURANCE (§ 138*)—LIFE POLICY—PREMIUMS—CONTRACT—MODIFICATION.

Where plaintiff contracted to take out a life policy under an agreement that he should be permitted to pay a quarterly premium of $38.53, when in fact the quarterly premium on the policy which should have been charged was $40.84, so that the contract was discriminatory, plaintiff was not for that reason required to pay the increased amount, but was entitled to refuse to enter into a new contract to do so.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 246-249; Dec. Dig. § 138.*]

2. INSURANCE (§ 138*)—LIFE POLICY—STATUTES—CONSTRUCTION.

Revisal 1905, § 4775, provides that no life insurance company shall discriminate in favor of individuals of the same class and equal expectation of life in the amount of payment of premiums or rates charged, nor shall any company make any contract of insurance other than as plainly expressed in its policies, nor allow as inducement to insurance any rebate or premium payable on a policy, or any special favor or advantage in dividends, etc. Held, that such act purported to operate on insurance companies alone and did not invalidate a policy or agreement between the parties by which insurance was granted at less than the regular premium.

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 246-249; Dec. Dig. § 138.*]

3. INSURANCE (§ 198*)—INVALID CONTRACT OF INSURANCE—RECOVERY OF PREMIUMS.

Where an insurance company issued a policy for less than the regular premium in violation of Revisal 1905, § 4776, prohibiting discrimination among insureds of the same class, and accepted premiums at the reduced rate for a number of years, and then canceled the policy as illegal under the statute, the insured and insurer were not in pari delicto, and, the offense of the insurance company being but malum prohibitum, insured was entitled to recover the premiums paid as money received to his use.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 457-467; Dec. Dig. § 138.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wayne County; Carter, Judge.

Action by M. E. Robinson against Security Life & Annuity Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

This is an action to recover damages for the wrongful cancellation of a policy of insurance. On the 18th day of January, 1902, the defendant issued to the plaintiff a policy of insurance, in which it was provided that the premium should be $154.11, payable annually, and at that time and since then the insured had the right, under the by-laws of the defendant, upon notice, to change the premium from an annual to a quarterly premium.

Dr. M. E. Robinson, the plaintiff, testified as follows: "Mr. Van Noppen came down here about the time they were organizing this company, in January, 1902, and he said that he wanted to get some prominent men insured in this company so that he could get some insurance, and asked me to give him a few names. I did so, and he came back and said if I would give him some insurance, he would give me enough medical examinations of applicants to pay the premium for the first year. He said that I could take out a policy with the premium of $154.11, payable annually in advance, or I could pay a quarterly premium of $38.53. He made a calculation at the time. I told him that I would take it quarterly, and I have been paying this quarterly premium for ten years, until they merged this company with the Jefferson Standard and others, some time last year. Since then they came around and said that they had made a mistake on my premium, which should have been $40.84, and that I would have to pay this amount in the future, or they would cancel the policy. He told me my quarterly premium would be $38.53, and I told him that I would take the quarterly premium and have been paying it. I do not remember whether the first year's premiums were all paid out of medical service or not. I never did at any time pay $154.11 premiums in advance or any other way, as that receipt states. I wrote to Mr. Grimesly to draw on the Bank of Wayne for payment of the quarterly premiums of $38.53, and the company has drawn drafts for that amount every quarter for over ten years. I paid $38.53 quarterly until April, 1912, when the contention arose. The agent of the company filled out the application for the policy at the time. The agent told me that the premium would be $38.53 quarterly, and the company drew drafts for that amount for about ten years. I supposed that the policy set out our agreement correctly. I never made any complaint about the policy after I got it. There was an inducement offered us. I knew when I took out this policy that I was getting a special and material inducement as to the amount of premiums to be paid. I did not know that it was unlawful to take a policy under such inducements."

G. A. Grimesly testified as follows for defendant: "I was raised in Greene county and am secretary of the Security Life & Annuity Company. I became secretary in the early part of January, 1902. I kept the books of the company. The first annual premium on the policy of Dr. Robinson was paid in advance. The policy is dated January 18, 1902, the same month I became secretary. It was the duty of the treasurer to call upon policy holders for their premiums after the policies were written and delivered. I called on Dr. Robinson as secretary, about 11 months after the policy was written. Dr. Robinson never made any complaint to the company about the terms of this policy, nor were there any objections sent or offered to the company on account of the provisions of the policy that I ever heard of. The first objection I ever heard from Dr. Robinson to the provisions or terms of the policy was when he was given notice of the error in quarterly premium, some ten years after he had received the policy. The error in collecting this premium occurred as follows: We were collecting one-fourth of the regular annual premiums of $154.11 instead of the usual quarterly premium. As soon as we discovered that, we attempted to correct it. The rules and regulations of the company are that the policies were written on an annual basis; that is, we charged an annual premium. The first year the agent was authorized to collect that premium. The annual premium is due in advance. If the policy holders elect to pay the quarterly premium instead of the annual premium, they may do so. The quarterly premium is not one-fourth of the annual premium with any company that I know of. The quarterly premium is made usually with all companies by adding 6 per cent. to the annual premium and dividing by four. That is the deferred premium, and the interest is added to cover the cost of collecting. If he desires to pay semiannually, the custom is to add 4 per cent. and divide by two. The error in Dr. Robinson's premium was discovered in April or May, 1912. I thereafter demanded of him the same amount that other policy holders for like insurance were paying and no more. As soon as I notified Dr. Robinson of the mistake, he notified me that there was no mistake and of his agreement with Mr. Van Noppen. He wrote me a number of letters. From the time of the issuing of the policy up until the time of the discovery of the mistake ten years afterwards, there was no complaint made by Dr. Robinson that I know of. We called on him for the payment of the annual premium and he said he wanted to pay it quarterly. I do not think we drew drafts. I think Dr. Robinson's statement that he wrote me and requested me to draw on him was correct to the best of my recollection. I think he wrote me that he might be off on business and to draw on the Bank of Wayne. I failed to draw for the proper amount."

*For other cases see same topic and section NUMBER in Dec. Dig. & Am. Dig. Key-No. Series & Rep'r Indexes

At the conclusion of the evidence there was judgment of nonsuit, and the plaintiff excepted and appealed.

Russell M. Robinson, of Goldsboro, and John M. Robinson, of Charlotte, for appellant. A. L. Brooks, of Greensboro, for appellee.

ALLEN, J. We will at the outset eliminate from the discussion the evidence as to the agreement with the agent of the defendant, and will assume that this agreement is merged in the written policy under the authority of Floars v. Insurance Co., 144 N. C. 237, 56 S. E. 915.

Conceding this much, and treating everything as true which the evidence reasonably tends to prove, which is the established rule in passing upon judgments of nonsuit, it appears that the defendant issued its policy to the plaintiff in 1902, stating the annual premium to be $154.11; that the by-laws of the defendant gave the plaintiff the right, at his election, to change the premium from an annual to a quarterly premium; that after the policy was issued the defendant drew a draft on the plaintiff for the annual premium, and he said he wished to pay his premiums quarterly; that thereafter the defendant drew on the plaintiff quarterly for ten years for a quarterly premium of $38.53, which the plaintiff paid; that after the expiration of ten years the defendant demanded that the plaintiff pay a quarterly premium of $40.84, which he refused to do; that the policy was thereupon canceled; that the plaintiff knew he was paying a reduced premium, but did not know that this was illegal, if it was so.

[1] The reasonable inference from these facts, and inferences which the jury had the right to draw, are that after the policy was issued the plaintiff and defendant agreed to change it, acting under the authority of the by-laws of the defendant, and that for ten years the contract of insurance in existence was one to pay a quarterly premium of $38.53 and not an annual premium of $154.11. If this was the contract, whether legal or illegal, the plaintiff had the right to refuse to enter into a new contract at an increased premium, and no fault can be attributed to him in doing so.

This brings us to the consideration of the two questions chiefly debated in the oral arguments and the printed briefs:

(1) Is the contract, which the evidence of the plaintiff tends to establish, legal?

(2) If illegal, can the plaintiff maintain his action to recover the premiums paid under it, when the defendant, relying upon the plea of illegality, refuses to perform the contract?

[2] The defendant contends that the contract, as interpreted, is an unjust discrimination in favor of the plaintiff and forbidden by Rev. § 4775, which reads as follows: "No life insurance company doing business in this state shall make any distinction or discrimination in favor of individuals between insureds of the same class and equal expectation of life in the amount of payment of premiums or rates charged for policies of life or endowment insurance, or in the dividends or other benefits payable thereon, or in any of the terms and conditions of the contracts it makes; nor shall any such company or any agent thereof make any contract of insurance or agreement as to such contract other than as plainly expressed in the policy issued thereon; nor shall any such company or agent pay or allow as inducement to insurance any rebate of premium payable on the policy, or any special favor or advantage in the dividends or other benefit to accrue thereon, or any valuable consideration or inducement whatever not specified in the policy contract of insurance." This section of the Revisal is in all material respects like section 4773a (Revisal 1908), which was considered at this term in Blount v. Royal Fraternal Ass'n, 79 S. E. 299, and should receive the same construction. The statute does not invalidate the contract of insurance or the agreement of the parties, and it purports to operate upon insurance companies alone. It says "no life insurance company shall make any distinction or discrimination," and fails to denounce as illegal a contract of insurance which gives a lower rate to the insured than to others, and it is manifest that at least one of the purposes of the statute was for the benefit of the stronger insurance companies, by declaring that in soliciting insurance all companies should be on an equal footing, and that none should offer inducements below the published rates.

Mr. Vance, in his treatise on Insurance, speaking of statutes imposing conditions upon insurance companies to do business and regulating their contracts, says (pages 86 and 87): "When, however, the statutes imposing conditions upon doing business by the foreign insurer merely prohibit the making of the contract without compliance with their terms, the question as to the rights of the parties becomes of much greater difficulty. In accordance with the general rule that a contract that is prohibited is illegal, and therefore void, it would follow that neither one of the parties would take any rights under the contract, or could enforce the agreement against the other. Yet to apply this general doctrine to a contract made under such circumstances as usually attend the making of a contract of insurance would work great hardship and be manifestly unjust. The party insured cannot, without great difficulty, discover whether the insurer has complied with all the statutory requirements or not; and while it is true that the statutes imposing these conditions upon the insurer are public acts, and therefore presumed to be known to all, yet it would be unreasonable to require that every person to whom a corporate insurer offers a contract of insurance should make an exhaustive investigation in order to discover whether his co-contractor has been fully qualified to make the agreement that is proposed, which is a question of fact. It would seem that the insured has a right to presume that the insurer has complied with all the requirements of law. Accordingly, it is held by the great weight of authority that when the insured attempts to enforce such a contract, made in good faith, against the unlicensed insurer, the latter will be estopped to escape liability under the contract by pleading his own infraction of law. The same principle of estoppel, however, does not apply when the insurer is endeavoring to enforce some right under the contract against the insured. The plaintiff, not having legally qualified himself to make the contract under which he sues, has no standing in law or equity when he attempts to enforce it." Our case is stronger than the one covered by the quotation, as there is no statute which prohibits the contract made by the plaintiff.

[3] We might therefore rest our decision on the legality of the contract, but it is not necessary to do so. The contract is not immoral, and, if illegal, it is so by reason of the provisions of the statute (Rev. § 4775), and the action is not to enforce the contract, but to recover money received by the defendant under it, and after a refusal to perform. The citation from Vance marks the difference in the relations of the parties to the contract under these circumstances, and demonstrates that they are not in equal fault. It is there said "that the insured has the right to assume that the insurer has complied with all the requirements of the law," and that "the latter will be estopped to escape liability under the contract by pleading his own infraction of law," and that the insured may maintain an action upon the contract when the insurer cannot.

This principle is clearly recognized in several recent decisions in our court, and notably in Herring v. Lumber Co., 159 N. C. 382, 74 S. E. 1011, 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 64, which in its essential features is almost identical with the one before us. In that case, the plaintiff and certain other neighboring land-owners agreed to sell their timber to the defendant in consideration of the payment of a stipulated sum, and the building of a standard gauge railway from Delway to Wallace, and the contract provided for the payment of a penalty upon failure to build the railway. The plaintiff conveyed his timber, and, when the defendant refused to build the railway, sued for the penalty, and one of the defenses set up was that the contract for building the railway was illegal and forbidden by Revisal, § 2598. The court, in considering the contention of the defendant as to the illegality of the contract, says: "We need not decide whether or not this is a correct position, as we are of the opinion with the plaintiff upon another view of the matter. It appears in the case that the plaintiff and his neighbors, who joined with him in the agreement to sell their timber to the Wallace Manufacturing Company, one of the defendants, were influenced in fixing the price of the same by the stipulation of the said company to construct this road, and that they sold the timber at much less than its reasonable worth because of this agreement, believing that if the road was built and put into operation the benefit or advantage they would derive therefrom would compensate them for the loss of the difference between the price charged by them for the timber and the real value thereof. This being so, it would seem to be very unjust and inequitable that the defendants should repudiate their agreement and rely on its invalidity for the purpose of evading the payment of a reasonable price for the timber; in other words, that they should be allowed to keep the amount of the difference between the price paid for the timber and its true value, and, at the same time, refuse to execute their part of the contract to build the road, even upon the ground that it is malum prohibitum. If the stipulation to construct the road is invalid, the plaintiff, if particeps criminis, is not in pari delicto. He can recover the amount of his loss without declaring upon the alleged illegal stipulation, and relief can be given without enforcing this part of the contract. In such a case the action, it may be said, is not based on the agreement alleged to be illegal or invalid, but on the promise created by law to repay money of the plaintiff improperly obtained. 9 Cyc. p. 547."

Many authorities are cited in support of this position, and among others Morville v. Am. Trust Soc., 123 Mass. 129, 25 Am. Rep. 40, in which the language used is so apposite to the facts in this record that we reproduce it: "The money of the plaintiff was taken and is still held by the defendant under an agreement which it is contended it had no power to make, and which, if it had power to make, it has wholly failed on its part to perform. It was money of the plaintiff, now in the possession of the defendant, which in equity and good conscience it ought now to pay over, and which may be recovered in an action for money had and received. The illegality is not that which arises when the contract is in violation of public policy or of sound morals, and under which the law will give no aid to either party. The plaintiff himself is chargeable with no illegal act, and the corporation is the only one at fault in exceeding its corporate powers by making the express contract. The plaintiff is not seeking to enforce that contract, but only to recover his own money and prevent the defendant from unjustly retaining the benefit of its own illegal act. He is doing nothing which must be regarded as a necessary affirmance of an illegal act."

We are therefore of opinion that if the contract is illegal, which is at least doubtful, the plaintiff, not being in pari delicto with the defendant, can maintain his action, and that there was error in granting the motion to nonsuit.

Reversed.

FEREBEE v. NORFOLK SOUTHERN R. CO.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 29, 1913.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 111*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—RAILROADS—NEGLIGENCE.

Plaintiff, a baggageman, while passing out onto the steps of a baggage car at night, as his train was moving into a station, fell from the car owing to the steps having been torn away after the train left its starting point. Some weeks prior to the accident, the railroad company placed and maintained a large number of boxes unsecured on a trestle platform, about 12 or 14 inches from a passing car. On the night in question one or two of the boxes had toppled over from jar or other cause, and struck and tore away the steps of the car. Held, that defendant was guilty of actionable negligence in leaving the boxes where they might collide with a passing train, and that such act was the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 215-217, 255; Dec. Dig. § 111.*]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT (§ 129*)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—PROXIMATE CAUSE—NEGLIGENCE—VIS MAJOR.

Where defendant railroad company was negligent in placing a quantity of boxes near the track where they might topple over and strike parts of a moving train, as they did, breaking the steps of a baggage car and resulting in injury to the baggageman, such negligence being the proximate cause of the injury, the railroad company was not relieved from liability because an unexpected or unusual storm might also have contributed to the accident.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 257-263; Dec. Dig. § 129.*]

3. DAMAGES (§ 53*)—PERSONAL INJURIES—MENTAL SUFFERING.

In an action for injuries to a servant, mental suffering, consisting of worry concerning the welfare of his wife and child during the period when he was unable to work, is too remote to constitute a proper element of damage.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. §§ 100, 255; Dec. Dig. § 53.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Wake County; Ferguson, Judge.

Action by W. G. Ferebee against the Norfolk Southern Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. New trial for rehearing on the issue of damages.

The action was brought under the Federal Employer's Liability Act (Act June 11, 1906, c. 3073, § 4 Stat. 232 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1911, p. 1316]); the train on which plaintiff was employed and injured being engaged at the time in interstate commerce, and was submitted and determined on the following issues and verdict:

"(1) Was the plaintiff injured by the negligence of the defendant, as alleged in the complaint? Answer: Yes.

"(2) What is the whole amount of damages, if any, sustained by the plaintiff? Answer: $15,000.

"(3) Did the plaintiff by his own negligence contribute to his injury, as alleged in the answer? Answer: No.

"(4) What amount, if any, shall be deducted from the damages sustained by the plaintiff as the proportion thereof attributable to the plaintiff's own negligence? Answer: ———"

R. N. Simms, of Raleigh, for appellant. Ward & Thompson, of Elizabeth City, and Douglass & Douglass and W. H. Lyon, Jr., all of Raleigh, and W. W. Elliott, of Norfolk, Va., for appellee.

HOKE, J. We find no reversible error affecting the determination of the first and third issues. There was evidence tending to show that, at the time of the occurrence, plaintiff was an employe of defendant company as baggagemaster and flagman on a train carrying passengers and freight from Raleigh, N. C., to Norfolk, Va., and that it was a part of plaintiff's duties to go out on the steps of the baggage car as the train moved into a station yard for the purpose of receiving the United States mail and, further, of preventing persons from getting on or off train when it was in motion and to assist the conductor in seeing that the passengers entered and departed from the train in safety; that on June 2, 1912, at 9:15 p. m., the train on which plaintiff was so employed left the station yard in the city of Raleigh on its regular run for Norfolk, and, as it was approaching the station of Wendell, plaintiff, in the line of his duty, went on the platform and started down the steps, and, they having been torn away after the train left Raleigh, he fell through the opening, was dragged some distance by the train, and was fearfully crushed and mutilated and permanently injured; that the night was dark; there was no light on the platform at the time except a little railroad lantern, carried by plaintiff, and which threw no light up or down but just "glared from the sides."

[1] It was further proved that for some weeks or longer prior to the occurrence, on the platform or walkway of a trestle, in the Jones street yard, in the city of Raleigh, there had been left a number of boxes to hold oil cans for engineers and other things; these boxes, 4 feet tall and 13 and 18 inches thick, the same being on the trestle platform, setting up on end and unsecured in any way and about four feet from the rail, leaving them 12 or 14 inches from the car. And the evidence further tended to show that, on the night in question, one or two of these boxes had toppled over from the jar or other causes and had struck and torn away the steps and thus occasioned the injury complained of. It was a negligent act to leave boxes of that shape and size so near the main track of the railroad where they were liable, at any time and from ordinary causes, to fall over and collide with defendant's trains, and, the jury having accepted this version of the occurrence and determined, further, that such act was the proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries, an actionable wrong has been established; the statute on which the suit is brought, the Federal Employer's Liability Act, having made provision that contributory negligence, even if it existed, shall only be considered in diminution of damages.

[2] It was urged for defendant that the evidence tending to show the prevalence of an unusual windstorm on the night in question has not been allowed its proper weight, but, on the facts in evidence, the position cannot avail the defendant. The negligent placing of the boxes having been accepted as the proximate cause of the injury, or one of them, the defendant is not relieved, though an unexpected or unusual storm should have contributed also to the result. In Shearman & Redfield on the Law of Negligence (6th Ed. § 16), it is said: "Inevitable accident is a broader term than an act of God. That implies the intervention of some cause not of human origin and not controllable by human power. An accident is inevitable if the person by whom it occurs neither has nor is legally bound to have sufficient power to avoid it or prevent its injuring another. In such a case, the essential element of a legal duty is wanting, and it cannot therefore be a case of negligence, etc." Pursuing the same subject in section 16 B, the author says, further: "The rule is the same when an act of God or an accident combines or concurs with the negligence of the defendant to produce the injury or when any other efficient cause so combines or concurs; the defendant is liable if the injury would not have resulted but for his own negligent act or omission." And, as heretofore stated, no reason is shown why the verdict on the third issue, that as to contributory negligence, should be disturbed; it having been made to appear that plaintiff went out on the platform and started down the steps, in the performance of his duty, and the jury, under a proper charge, having found that he was careful at the time and, under all the circumstances, had no reason to anticipate nor expect that the steps had been torn away.

[3] On perusal of the record, however, we must hold that there was error committed on the trial of the issue as to damages. On that issue, the plaintiff, over objection by defendant to both question and to specific portions of the answer, was allowed to testify as follows: "Q. In what respect were you troubled mentally? A. I was troubled about having a wife and child on me, with no prospect and no future; I was worried about having a boy four years old; I was worried all the time about no income whatever; I never received a cent for the period of nine months; I had a wife and a child, who had never been to school a day in his life, to educate. (The defendant objects to the last part of the answer.)" It is very generally held that mental suffering which would naturally result from physical injury, wrongfully inflicted, is a proper element of the damages which may be awarded, and, in such case it may be allowed whether spoken to directly by the witness or not; but the decisions are also to the effect that the damages recoverable from this source must be confined to those which are the natural and proximate result of the injury as it affects the person himself, and that the concern which may be caused by its possible or probable effect upon others may not be considered. The effort to fix upon proper compensation in injuries of this character is, in many cases, very unsatisfactory, and the testimony received in this instance would introduce such an additional element of uncertainty and of divergence among litigants suffering the same or similar injuries that it has been very generally regarded as too remote. Atchison, etc., R. R. v. Chance, 57 Kan. 40, 45 Pac. 60; Maynard v. Oregon R. R., 46 Or. 15, 78 Pac. 988, 68 L. R. A. 477; Statler v. Ray Mfg. Co., 195 N. Y. 478, 88 N. E. 1063;

Pittsburg R. R. v. Story, 68 Ill. App. 239; Keyes v. Railway, 86 Minn. 290, 80 N. W. 888; Brown, Receiver, v. Sullivan, 71 Tex. 470, 10 S. W. 288; 1 Sedgwick on Damages (9th Ed.) § 439.

For the error indicated, there must be a new trial on the issue of damages, and it is so ordered.

Partial new trial.

DELL SCHOOL et al. v. PEIRCE.

(Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. PLEADING (§ 85*)—TIME TO PLEAD—EXTENSION—NOTICE.

A defendant is bound to take notice of any order made in the regular term extending the time of pleading, and the law presumes that he has full notice of it, particularly where he himself is an attorney.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 172-178; Dec. Dig. § 85.*]

2. JUDGMENT (§ 167*)—DEFAULT JUDGMENT—OPENING—COST BOND.

Under the direct provisions of Revisal, § 453, a defendant, in an action for the recovery of land, is required to file a cost bond before he may answer, plead, or demur, consequently the filing of such cost bond is a condition precedent to the setting aside of a default judgment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 326, 330, 333, 334; Dec. Dig. § 167.*]

3. JUDGMENT (§ 138*)—DEFAULT JUDGMENT—VACATION—CARE REQUIRED.

A defendant seeking to set aside a default must show that he used care in protecting his rights; the standard of care required being that which an ordinarily prudent man bestows upon his important business.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 249-251, 254; Dec. Dig. § 138.*]

4. JUDGMENT (§ 106*)—DEFAULT JUDGMENT—TAKING DEFAULT.

A default judgment may be rendered, although the cause is not on the trial or motion docket.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 160, 162, 180-197; Dec. Dig. § 106.*]

5. EQUITY (§ 64*)—MAXIMS.

The law will assist those who are diligent and will not take from them the advantage they have thus acquired and turn it over to those who have been inactive.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Dec. Dig. § 64.*]

6. EQUITY (§ 60*)—MAXIMS.

He has the better right who was first in point of time.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Equity, Cent. Dig. § 181; Dec. Dig. § 60.*]

7. JUDGMENT (§ 143*)—DEFAULT—VACATION—EXCUSABLE NEGLIGENCE.

Defendant, an attorney, was duly served with process on July 4th; the writ being returnable to the August term. At the August term plaintiffs were allowed 30 days to file a complaint, which they filed on September 14th. Defendant attended the November term and examined the order and the complaint which had been filed but did not move for time to answer or enter an appearance or file cost bond. He left before the final adjournment, and plaintiffs took a default judgment. Held, that he was not entitled to a vacation of the judgment, as he should have moved the court for leave to file an answer, even though the case was not on the trial or motion docket, and his rights lost by his own carelessness.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 269, 270, 272-291; Dec. Dig. § 143.*]

8. JUDGMENT (§§ 143, 145*)—DEFAULT—VACATION—GROUNDS.

To warrant a vacation of a default judgment, it must appear that the defendant's neglect was excusable and that he had a meritorious defense.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 269-295; Dec. Dig. §§ 143, 145.*]

9. JUDGMENT (§ 162*)—DEFAULT—VACATION—BURDEN OF PROOF.

The burden of establishing a meritorious defense necessary to procure the setting aside of a default judgment rests upon the defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 319-322; Dec. Dig. § 162.*]

10. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 219*)—PRESENTATION OF GROUNDS OF REVIEW IN COURT BELOW—NECESSITY.

A party cannot on appeal complain that the judge failed to find additional facts, where it does not appear that any request was made.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1315, 1317-1320, 1322, 1323; Dec. Dig. § 219.*]

11. PROCESS (§ 126*)—SERVICE—VALIDITY.

Service of process upon one attending court as a witness is not void but voidable and hence must be attacked by motion to set aside, the defendant appearing specially for the purpose of the motion; his remedy, in case the motion is overruled, being to except, answer, and appeal from the final judgment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Process, Cent. Dig. § 156½; Dec. Dig. § 126.*]

12. APPEARANCE (§ 9*)—GENERAL APPEARANCE—WHAT CONSTITUTES.

An appearance will not be considered special simply because so called; hence a party seeking to set aside a default waives defects in the summons by asking leave to file an answer and cannot move to set aside the judgment on the ground of the want of jurisdiction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appearance, Cent. Dig. §§ 42-52; Dec. Dig. § 9.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Duplin County; Allen, Judge.

Action by the Dell School and others against W. W. Peirce. Defendant defaulted and thereafter moved to set aside the judgment, and from the denial of his motion he appeals. Affirmed.

This is a motion before Judge Allen to set aside a judgment rendered at November term, 1912, by Judge Carter. The judge found the following facts: "Summons was issued July 4, 1910, and personally served by the deputy sheriff on that date and returned to the August term, 1910, of the Superior court of Duplin county. At the August term, 1910, an order was duly entered before his honor, Frank Carter, judge presiding, in open court, making additional parties plaintiffs and allowing the plaintiffs 30 days to file complaint, and no order other than that was made as to pleading, and on September 14, 1912, the plaintiffs filed a duly verified complaint. The August term, 1912, of the said court adjourned on the 7th day of September, 1912. The defendant, W. W. Peirce, is a practicing attorney in the courts of this state. No appearance has even been entered on the docket of this court either by the defendant or by an attorney for him. The defendant attended the November term, 1912, of said court and personally examined the order at the November term, 1912, and the complaint which was filed by the plaintiffs; the same being on file in the clerk's office. No motion was made before the court for time to answer, and no time was granted by the court or by counsel, and there is no rule of the Duplin bar allowing time to answer without application to the court; nor has the defendant ever filed answer in this cause; nor has he given the bond required by the statute or asked to be allowed to do so. The defendant left the court on Friday before final adjournment on Saturday, and, on Saturday before the final adjournment, the plaintiffs moved the court for judgment, for the want of an answer. A member of the bar present, not of counsel on either side, suggested that the defendant desired time to answer. The plaintiffs insisted upon their motion, and, after hearing the same, his honor, Carter, judge, rendered the judgment set out in the record. The judgment at the November term, 1912, does not appear to have been rendered against the defendant through such mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect as entitles him to relief, and it is so adjudged; nor does he show, in the opinion of the court, a meritorious defense to the action." The court denied the motion, and defendant appealed.

W. C. Munroe and W. W. Peirce, both of Goldsboro, and Winston & Biggs, of Raleigh, for appellant. A. D. Ward, of New Bern, and Johnson & Johnson, of Warsaw, for appellees.

WALKER, J. It would be useless to discuss each of the 11 assignments of error, as the material questions are: (1) Was there excusable neglect on the part of the defendant? (2) Did he show a meritorious defense?

[1] This is an action to recover the possession of land. Defendant knew that at August term, 1912, an order had been made enlarging the time for filing pleadings. The August term adjourned September 7, 1912, and the verified complaint was filed September 14, 1912. Whether the defendant actually knew before the November term, 1912, that the time for filing pleadings had been extended, the order was made at a regular term, it was his duty to be there and take notice of it, and the law presumes that he had full knowledge of it. Spencer v. Credle, 102 N. C. 68, 8 S. E. 901; Zimmerman v. Zimmerman, 113 N. C. 432, 18 S. E. 334; Hemphill v. Moore, 104 N. C. 379, 10 S. E. 318; Clark's Code (3d Ed.) § 595, and the numerous cases in the notes. At any rate, the defendant knew at the November term what had been done and should then have asked the court for further time to file his answer and defense bond. Instead of doing so, he left the court and took his chances. No reasonable explanation is given for this apparent neglect of his own interest. Being himself an attorney, he cannot well plead ignorance of the law, and he must therefore have known that his time for pleading had expired. To say the least, defendant, in any view of his case, left his affairs in a very precarious state and with a seeming disregard of consequences.

[2] He has never yet tendered his defense bond, which must precede his right to answer. It is so distinctly provided by statute. Revisal, § 453; Jones v. Best, 121 N. C. 154, 28 S. E. 187. That section requires him to file this bond "before he is permitted to answer, plead, or demur." That was his first duty at November term, as soon as he learned the cause of action, if he intended to defend the action, and this he failed to do.

[3-7] And he took no proper action in any way looking to the exercise of his right to defend, or to its revival, as it had then been lost by his delay. We have seen that he had notice of the order at August term, extending the time to plead, and this required him to make reasonable inquiry as to the filing of the complaint and to be on his guard. He had not even entered his appearance on the docket. The law does not allow a party to sleep on his rights. He must keep awake and be alert, exercising the care and watchfulness of an ordinarily prudent man in protecting his rights and saving his interests. We have held that the standard of care by which he must be judged is that which a man ordinarily prudent bestows upon his important business. Roberts v. Alman, 106 N. C. 391, 11 S. E. 424. We said in the recent case of McLeod v. Gooch, 162 N. C. —, 73 S. E. 4, that "a party has no right to abandon all active prosecution of his case simply because he has retained counsel to represent him in the court." This applies with peculiar force to the defendant, now applying for relief, as he has assumed the dual position of attorney and client and must therefore give both his personal and professional attention to his business on the docket. We do not think that, in any view of the facts, the defendant has made out a case of excusable neglect. There was apparent inattention and indifference throughout the progress of the cause, without any adequate explanation. Even if the case was not on the trial or motion docket, defendant should at least have moved for leave to file his answer, and, if he had done this, the court, in the exercise of its discretion, may have granted his motion. The fact that this case was not on the trial or motion docket did not prevent the court from giving judgment, though it might have excused defendant's absence if he had been otherwise diligent and active. He took the chance of leaving his case to take care of itself, with no one duly authorized to represent him and look after his interests, and he must abide the result. We cannot take away the advantage his adversary has gained, and legitimately so, by due attention to the case. Vigilance is often a part of the price we must pay for what we get and what we keep after it is acquired. He who neglects his interests is apt to lose them, which is the plight of defendant now. It early grew into one of the cardinal maxims of the law that it will assist those who are diligent and not those who sleep on their rights, and the law will not take from him, who has been thus diligent, what he has secured thereby and turn it over to him who has lost by his inaction. Broom's Legal Maxims (6th Am. Ed.) p. *857. Heath, J., once remarked that "this is one of the maxims which we learn on our earliest attendance in Westminster Hall" (Cox v. Morgan, 2 B. & P. 412), and it is the one underlying the law of limitations or statutes of repose. So much importance does the law attach to diligence in protecting our interests that it has another maxim equally fundamental and closely related to the one just mentioned, "Qui prior est tempore, potior est jure;" that is, he has the better right who was first in point of time. Broom, 345.

[8] Having reached the conclusion that there is no excusable neglect, it is unnecessary that we should discuss or decide whether defendant has shown a meritorious defense. If he has, as his neglect was inexcusable, the motion should still be denied. He must not only show such a defense but excusable neglect as well. We have, though, carefully considered the other branch of the case and are of the opinion that he has shown no legal merits—nothing that would defeat plaintiff's recovery.

[9] At least he has not made it clear to us, and the burden of doing so is upon him.

[10] He complains that the judge should have found additional facts, but there was no request that he should do so, and such a request must appear. McLeod v. Gooch, supra; Albertson v. Terry, 108 N. C. 75, 12 S. E. 892; Hardware Co. v. Buhmann, 159 N. C. 511, 75 S. E. 731. This is the well-settled practice.

[11, 12] His next position is that he was a nonresident, attending court as a witness, when the summons was served upon him. But this goes to the jurisdiction of the person and the defective service of process. In order to avail himself of it, he should have appeared specially. In a case precisely like this one, the court held that such a service was not void but voidable, and advantage, therefore, could be taken of it only by a special appearance. Cooper v. Wyman, 122 N. C. 784, 29 S. E. 947, 65 Am. St. Rep. 731. The court there said: "Service in such cases is not void but voidable; hence the party, before appearing in the action, should by special appearance move to set aside the return of service (Thornton v. Machine Co., 83 Ga. 288 [9 S. E. 679, 20 Am. St. Rep. 320]) and, if the motion is denied, should request the judge to find the facts and enter them on the record together with the exception to the ruling, so that it may come up for review on the appeal from final judgment. Guilford County v. Ga. County, 109 N. C. 310 [13 S. E. 861]."

A motion to set aside a judgment upon the ground of excusable neglect is one addressed to the merits and equivalent to a general appearance and therefore a waiver of any defective service of process. Scott v. Life Assn., 137 N. C. 515, 50 S. E. 221. This case has been frequently approved. Quoting from it in Woodard v. Milling Co., 142 N. C. 102, 55 S. E. 71, Justice Brown says: "The test for determining the character of an appearance is the relief asked; the law looking to its substance rather than form."

A further reference to Scott v. Insurance Co., and what it decided, may serve to bring this important distinction between a general and special appearance, and the office of each, more clearly before us. We there said: "If the appearance is in effect general, the fact that the party styles it a special appearance will not change its real character. 3 Cyc. pp. 502, 508. The question always is what a party has done and not what he intended to do. If the relief prayed affects the merits or the motion involves the merits, and a motion to vacate a judgment is such a motion, then the appearance is in law a general one. Id. pp. 508, 509. The court will not hear a party upon a special appearance except for the purpose of moving to dismiss an action or to vacate a judgment for want of jurisdiction, and the authorities seem to hold that such a motion cannot be coupled with another based upon grounds which relate to the merits. An appearance for any other purpose than to question the jurisdiction of the court is general. 2 Enc. of Pl. & Pr. 632. The effort of the company evidently was to try the matter and obtain a judgment on the merits while standing just outside the threshold of the court. This it could not do. A party cannot be permitted to occupy so ambiguous a position. * * * If a defendant invokes the judgment of the court in any manner upon any question, except that of the power of the court to hear and decide the controversy, his appearance is general. * * * If he appears to the merits, no statement that he does not will avail him, and, if he makes a defense which can only be sustained by an exercise of jurisdiction, the appearance is general, whether it is in terms limited to a special purpose or not"—citing numerous cases. It all comes to this: That he cannot take the inconsistent position of denying the authority of the court to take cognizance of the cause by reason of some defect in the process and at the same time seek judgment in his favor upon the merits. Affirming this principle as laid down in Scott v. Life Asso., are the following cases: Allen-Fleming Co. v. Railroad, 145 N. C. 37, 58 S. E. 793; Warlick v. Reynolds, 151 N. C. 606, 66 S. E. 657; Grant v. Grant, 159 N. C. 528, 75 S. E. 784.

In Currie v. Mining Co., 157 N. C. 209, 72 S. E. 980, Justice Allen concludes the opinion as follows: "The defendants, Allen and Golconda Company, in their application to have the judgment set aside, asked to be allowed to answer, and this is equivalent to a general appearance by both"—citing Scott v. Life Asso. That is our case. The other exceptions are without any merit. The defendant should first have appeared specially, if he questioned the jurisdiction of the court over him; and, if his motion to dismiss was denied, he should have excepted and then proceeded (without appeal) to his motion to set aside the judgment and appealed from the final order. The procedure is stated in Cooper v. Wyman, supra.

We find no error in the record.

Affirmed.

JOHNSON v. SEABOARD AIR LINE RY. CO. (Supreme Court of North Carolina. Oct. 22, 1913.)

1. TRIAL (§ 165*)—TAKING CASE FROM JURY— NONSUIT—DIRECTED VERDICT—DETERMINATION OF MOTION.

In ruling upon a defendant's motion for a nonsuit or a directed verdict, the court must adopt the evidence of the plaintiff and reject that of the defendant except in so far as the latter is in the plaintiff's favor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 373, 374; Dec. Dig. § 165.*]

2. RAILROADS (§ 301*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—MUTUAL RIGHTS.

Where a railroad track crosses a public highway, both a traveler and the railroad have equal rights to cross, but the traveler must yield the right of way to the railroad in the ordinary course of the latter's business.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. § 956; Dec. Dig. § 301.*]

3. RAILROADS (§ 312*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—DUTIES OF RAILROAD.

While a train has the right of way at a crossing, it is the duty of the engineer to give signals and exercise vigilance in approaching such crossings.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 988-1001, 1003-1005; Dec. Dig. § 312.*]

4. RAILROADS (§ 301*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—MUTUAL DUTIES—LOOKOUT.

A railroad company and a traveler on a highway approaching a crossing are charged with a mutual duty of keeping a careful lookout for danger, and the degree of vigilance is in proportion to the known danger.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. § 956; Dec. Dig. § 301.*]

5. RAILROADS (§ 327*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—DUTIES OF TRAVELER—LOOK AND LISTEN.

On reaching a railroad crossing, and before attempting to go upon the track, a traveler must look and listen in both directions for approaching trains, if not prevented from doing so by the fault of the railroad company.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1043-1056; Dec. Dig. § 327.*]

6. RAILROADS (§ 327*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—DUTIES OF TRAVELER—NATURE.

The duty of a traveler to look and listen when approaching a railroad crossing is not always absolute, but may be qualified by attendant circumstances.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1043-1056; Dec. Dig. § 327.*]

7. RAILROADS (§ 324*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

If a traveler fails to exercise the degree of care required of him when approaching a railroad crossing, it is such negligence as will bar his recovery, if it was the proximate cause of his injury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1026-1025; Dec. Dig. § 324.*]

8. RAILROADS (§ 326*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—DUTIES OF RAILROAD—OBSTRUCTIONS.

If a traveler's view is obstructed or his hearing an approaching train is prevented, especially if through the fault of the railroad company, and the company's servants fail to warn him of the approach of a train, and he attempts to cross the track, having used his faculties as best he could under the circumstances, negligence will not be imputed to him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1037-1042; Dec. Dig. § 326.*]

9. RAILROADS (§ 334*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—SUDDEN PERIL.

Where a traveler is without fault, or his fault is excused by some act of the company, or the company has the last clear chance to avoid the accident, the traveler, suddenly confronted by a peril, may, without the imputation of negligence, adopt such means of extrication as are apparently necessary, and is held only to such measure of care as a man of ordinary prudence would exercise in the same circumstances.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. § 1027; Dec. Dig. § 334.*]

10. RAILROADS (§ 350*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

In an action for injuries received by a 12 year old boy, who was injured at a railroad crossing over a frequented street by the rear portion of a train engaged in making a flying switch, and which was concealed by cars upon a siding, evidence held sufficient to take to the jury the question of the boy's exercise of due care.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1152-1192; Dec. Dig. § 350.*]

11. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 928*)—PRESUMPTIONS—INSTRUCTIONS NOT IN RECORD.

Where the instructions of the court as to the negligence of the railroad company and the contributory negligence of the person injured at a railroad crossing are not in the record, it will be presumed that the verdict was found under proper instructions on such issues.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3749-3754; Dec. Dig. § 928.*]

12. RAILROADS (§ 312*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—GROSS NEGLIGENCE—FLYING SWITCH.

The act of a railroad company in making a flying switch across a public highway in the midst of a populous town, or village is gross and criminal negligence, which would render those responsible guilty of manslaughter if death were caused thereby.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 988-1001, 1003-1006; Dec. Dig. § 812.*]

13. RAILROADS (§ 837*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—CAUSE OF INJURY—NEGLIGENCE OF COMPANY.

Where a boy, as he approached a railroad crossing, looked and listened, but his view was obstructed by cars upon a siding near the crossing and his attention was attracted by a train which had just passed and apparently was about to return, and was injured by the rear portion of that train, which was making a flying switch, and there was no warning given him of the approach of that portion of the train, the negligence of the company, and not the boy's want of care, was the cause of the injury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1090-1096; Dec. Dig. § 837.*]

14. RAILROADS (§ 301*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—DUTY OF TRAVELER—DEGREE OF VIGILANCE.

A greater degree of vigilance is required of a traveler approaching a railroad crossing than is required of employees of the company who are engaged in the performance of their duties.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. § 866; Dec. Dig. § 301.*]

15. RAILROADS (§ 324*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—APPEARANCE OF SAFETY.

Where a traveler is deceived by appearances produced by the negligence of the railroad company in such a way, and to such an extent, that a man of ordinary prudence would not anticipate danger, the company cannot escape liability by imputing the blame to him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1020-1025; Dec. Dig. § 324.*]

16. RAILROADS (§ 347*)—ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS—ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE—RELEVANCE.

In an action for injuries to a traveler at a grade crossing, where the plaintiff testified that his view was obstructed by cars upon a siding, evidence of measurements of other cars, which were not shown to have been of the same width as those on the siding, is inadmissible to prove that the cars could not have been in the position claimed without being struck by a train on the other track.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Railroads, Cent. Dig. §§ 1124-1137; Dec. Dig. § 347.*]

17. WITNESSES (§ 369*)—BIAS OF WITNESS—ACCEPTING PASS.

In a personal injury action against a railroad company, it is proper for the plaintiff to show by cross-examination of a witness for the defendant that the company furnished the witness transportation to come to the trial as a circumstance from which bias may be inferred.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 1187, 1188; Dec. Dig. § 369.*]

18. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1004*)—REVIEW—QUESTIONS OF FACT—DAMAGES.

Under Const. art. 4, § 8, giving the Supreme Court jurisdiction to review upon appeal any decision of the courts below or any matter of law or legal inference, the court has no power to review the action of the trial court in affirming a verdict for damages for personal injuries which were claimed to be excessive.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3944-3947; Dec. Dig. § 1004.*]

19. DAMAGES (§ 100*)—MEASURE—DIMINISHED EARNING CAPACITY.

In an action for personal injuries resulting in diminished earning capacity, the measure of damages is not the difference between the probable earnings of the plaintiff before and after the injury, but the reasonable present value of the diminution of his earning capacity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. §§ 237-241; Dec. Dig. § 100.*]

20. APPEAL AND ERROR (§ 1178*)—REVERSAL—NEW TRIAL—PARTICULAR ISSUES.

Where the only error in the trial of an action for personal injuries was in the instructions as to the measure of damages, a new trial will be granted only upon the question of damages.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4604-4620; Dec. Dig. § 1178.*]

On Motion for New Trial.

21. NEW TRIAL (§ 168*)—APPLICATION IN APPELLATE COURT—DETERMINATION.

Where the defendant moves for a new trial upon the ground of newly discovered evidence after the case is argued in the Supreme Court, the application should be carefully scrutinized, and the burden is upon the defendant to rebut the presumption that the verdict is correct and that there has been a lack of diligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 7, 232, 245, 252, 253, 266, 280, 284, 286, 291, 292, 294, 296, 303, 305, 318; Dec. Dig. § 168.*]

22. NEW TRIAL (§ 168*)—APPLICATION IN APPELLATE COURT—SUFFICIENCY—NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE.

An affidavit in the Supreme Court for a new trial upon the ground of newly discovered evidence must show that the witness will give the evidence; that it is probably true; that it is competent, material, and relevant; that due diligence was used to procure the testimony at the trial; that it is not merely cumulative; that it does not tend only to contradict or impeach a former witness; and that it is such that a different result will probably be reached upon another trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 7, 232, 245, 252, 253, 266, 280, 284, 286, 291, 292, 294, 296, 303, 305, 318; Dec. Dig. § 168.*]

Appeal from Superior Court, Lee County; Daniels, Judge.

Action by Clarence Johnson against the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company. Judgment for the plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed in part and reversed and remanded in part, and motion for a new trial denied.

The plaintiff alleged that on or about September 1, 1910, he, a boy of about 12 years of age, was attempting to cross the track of the defendant railroad on Elm street in Maxton, N. C., at a public crossing; that the defendant was engaged in making what is known as a flying switch; that it negligently ran over the plaintiff as he was crossing the defendant's tracks on said street; that his foot was injured by being run over; and that he was damaged in the sum of $20,000. The specifications of negligence in the complaint are as follows: (1)

The train of the defendant was operated in a negligent and careless manner and at an unlawful rate of speed. (2) Defendant had no one on the car, which struck the plaintiff, to control its movements. (3) No lookout was kept on the car. (4) No warning or signal whatsoever was given of its movements or approach, and defendant was making what is known as a flying switch. (5) That the street is constantly used by the public in passing and repassing over the defendant's tracks from one side to the other, and defendant permitted a string of cars to remain standing on one of its tracks, and they so obstructed the view of plaintiff, as he approached the tracks on his bicycle, that he could not see the loose cars, as they moved toward the crossing, after being detached from the train.

The defendant answered, denying all the allegations of negligence, and alleged that plaintiff was guilty of negligence, in that he was coming down Elm street on a bicycle and crossed defendant's track, after being warned not to do so, and instead of keeping on the street, where there was no danger, he suddenly turned his wheel or bicycle, and, running parallel with the said track, he fell under the moving train, and this was the sole cause of his injury. Much evidence was introduced by the parties to sustain their respective contentions. There was evidence tending to prove the following facts: The Seaboard Air Line Railway at the crossing consists of a main line and a side track, which side track branches off west of the crossing and enters, at some distance, the cotton oil mill yard; this part of the track being known as the oil mill siding, and lying on the north side of the main track, next Robert Croom's residence. A "pass track" connects the main line with the side track, leaving the main line just west of the crossing and merging with the side track upon and east of the crossing. All the tracks at one point on the crossing are only 19 feet across. Elm street at this place is a much-used thoroughfare on one of the principal residential streets, all three of the principal churches being on it and near this place. It is much used by children going to the graded school, about 200 yards away on this street, cotton oil mill employes, and citizens at large.

The witness for the plaintiff, as well as the plaintiff himself, testified that the view of the pass track mentioned above, and of the main track west of Elm street, was entirely obscured by a line of standing cars on the oil mill siding, coming almost down to the street. The defendant's witnesses stated that they were making a "running switch," but that the loose car had upon it the conductor and a flagman. The evidence of the plaintiff, and of some of plaintiff's witnesses, is that there was no person on the car, and no warning was given of its approach. There is no evidence that any sufficient warning was given at this time. The defendant, however, relied upon a warning, which its evidence tended to show had been given the plaintiff when the train first arrived at Maxton, and was then some 500 or 600 feet west of the crossing, and standing still, to, "Stop! We are going to make a switch," after which, so the witness testified, he walked back some 200 feet and turned the train into the switch. Plaintiff testified that the negro was not at the crossing at all.

The witness McNeil, who made the map, testified that he did not know the width of the street; its edge was not well defined; he did not measure the distance between the south edge of the oil mill track and the north edge of the "pass track" on the west side of the street; but he used the map to illustrate his evidence as to measurements he did make. He put some designs on the oil mill track at the direction of young Johnson to represent standing cars, but did not say that the number and the exact position were directed by him.

Plaintiff testified in part as follows: "I started to Strickland's store and went on the left-hand side as you go down street towards Wilmington, Strickland's store being on the opposite side of the railroad; was going after some groceries for my mother; was on a bicycle. I went out the back yard down a path to Elm street, and went then in the usual way starting to Strickland's store, and when I came to the Seaboard crossing at Elm street near Mr. Robert Croom's residence, I found a train there, that was shifting and had blocked the crossing. I stopped for it to get out of the way. Stopped somewhere between Mr. Croom's house and the railroad. A colored woman was there, but I did not know her at that time. It was Eliza McIver. She was between me and the Seaboard track, and had a gocart with a child in it and one by it. At the time I stopped there waiting for that track to clear, I noticed on that oil mill siding some box cars. Q. How near down to Elm street did they come? A. They ran near about onto Elm street, just enough to pass by. They were shifting, and the train was running back and forth. I did not attempt to cross the street until the engine cleared and went on towards the depot with some cars attached to it. When it went by I looked and listened and started across. Q. What did you look for? A. I looked for another train. Q. Did you see another? A. No. Q. What effect, if any, did those cars standing on the oil mill track have with your seeing it? A. It was between me and the loose cars. After the track was cleared and the engine had gone down towards Maxton going east, I started across the tracks. Just as I got about across, I heard somebody holler, 'Lookout!' and I looked around and saw a car, and I tried to get between the tracks, and by that time it struck me. I tried to get between the main line and the side track to clear the cars so I would be safe. Q. Could you tell which track that loose car was going to take, the main line or the siding? A. No, sir. Q. If you had gotten between that main line and the side track, would you have been clear, regardless of what it took? A. Yes, I could have gone down and beaten it to where it was going. Q. What happened? A. The car struck me about that time and ran over me. I had not gotten quite clear of that side track that the car came in on. No one was at the crossing except Eliza McIver. I could not see the cars on the main line because of those box cars, and the cars that I saw were on the oil mill side track. They were not blocking the street, but they were near about on the street. I did not see any loose cars on the main line west of Elm street; I saw one down at the crossing at the oil mill. I saw no cars on the main line except that one down at the crossing. That crossing was about a block west of Elm street, and the other cars I saw were near about to Elm street on the oil mill side track. They ran near about up to Elm street, but I cannot say exactly how close, and those cars stayed on the oil mill track until after I passed over. When I started down Elm street, this colored woman, who was ahead of me, was about 10 feet from the track, and I was 10 or 15 feet behind her. I was riding a boy's bicycle and I was 12 years old at that time. I remained where I was until I saw the engine go towards the depot. I then immediately got up on my bicycle and rode across, but not until after I looked both ways and listened for another train. I crossed the railroad about the middle of Elm street and was stricken by the cars. Q. Was any one on those loose cars? A. No, sir. After the car ran over me, I got up and started home, and I saw a man who I took to be the flagman coming towards the switch. When the flagman came, I asked him to carry me home. He did not do anything, but only stood and looked at me. Mrs. Croom came out there and asked him to carry me in her house, if he would not carry me home. He stood and looked at me and did not say anything. About that time Cleo Strickland came along, and I asked him to carry me home. He said, 'All right, get up,' and I got up in the wagon, and he started on across and got to the next crossing. He started the nearest way, got to the nearest crossing, and there was a car on that crossing, and we stopped to let it pass, and the flagman came running down there and said—they said carry me to the hospital. I think it was the flagman who said carry me to the hospital. Elm street is used for all the school children going to school, people going to the Baptist, Methodist, and Presbyterian churches, and people use it to go to the college. It is one of the public thoroughfares of the town. The employes of the oil mill also cross there. They carried me to the hospital, operated on me, and put me to sleep. I had my foot mashed up, a hole cut in the back of my head, and a hole cut in my thigh."

Plaintiff then described his injuries more minutely, as follows: "My foot is perfectly useless, or near about so. I can't use it at all from the heel to the end of the toes. The foot is sensitive and I can't bear any weight on it at all. In walking I put my weight on my heel. I suffered all the time. Sometimes I got a chance to sleep. This accident happened on Thursday about 10 o'clock, and, on Saturday following the Thursday, they dressed my foot again and found some gangrene in it. They cut the bone, cut all the flesh off of my foot, and cut two of my toes off. After that when the doctor dressed it he kept cutting off some. He cut off the ball of my foot and scraped the bone. I stayed in the hospital six weeks. I was not under the influence of ether on Saturday when those parts were cut off of my foot, and it hurt me so I had just had to scream and holler. I could not help it. After I left the hospital, I walked on crutches for over a year, and during that time I was not able to put my foot to the ground any. Have not been able to use the forepart of my foot from the instep out to amount to anything. Since then it pains me whenever I work any. If I stand up right smart it hurts me. Can't lift any weight on that foot, and I lost a job because I could not lift and stand on my foot. When the weather changes it feels like neuralgia. The leg of my injured foot is about one-half inch smaller than the other one. Prior to this injury I was carrying water for the oil mill and got 50 cents per day. I can read and write and figure some. I do not use tobacco in any form and do not drink. My health was pretty good prior to this injury."

The defendant offered evidence tending to show that the plaintiff was not injured as he had testified, but fell under the cars and was hurt, as set forth in the answer, and that he was injured by his own carelessness, and not by any negligence of the defendant; that he failed to look and listen when his sight and hearing were unobstructed. The usual four issues were submitted to the jury as to negligence, contributory negligence, the last clear chance, and damages, and the jury answered all of them (except the third, which was not answered) in favor of the plaintiff, assessing his damages at $10,000. The court charged the jury upon the law relating to negligence under the first three issues, and there was no exception thereto. Defendant has reserved these exceptions, which are the ones mentioned and argued in his brief:

(1)-Refusal of motion to nonsuit or to charge the jury "that, upon all the evidence, the plaintiff, Clarence Johnson, is guilty of contributory negligence."

(2) Excluding the evidence of the witness C. C. Hatch that he had measured other box cars and ascertained their size and dimensions, this with a view of showing by comparison of those cars with those at the crossing in question, upon the assumed similarity of the two, that cars on the main track could not have passed cars standing on the siding in the position described, and as testified by plaintiff.

(3) Plaintiff, on cross-examination of defendant's witness Bonnie Helms, who was employed by it as brakeman, asked him if he came to Maxton on a railroad pass furnished by the defendant. The question and answer were admitted, and defendant excepted.

(4) The court charged the jury on the issue of damages as follows, omitting immaterial parts: "Under this issue he is entitled to a reasonable compensation for such injury as you may find to have been negligently inflicted by the defendant, which was the direct and necessary consequence of the injury so negligently inflicted; a reasonable compensation for any and all pain which he may have suffered or may hereafter suffer for all diminution of his power to earn money—his diminished earning capacity, as the books put it. Plaintiff contends that he cannot now perform, and that he will never be able to perform, work that men usually do in attempting to make a living. He has introduced the mortuary tables that show his expectancy of life is 47 years, and they have made some figures about how much he would earn during that length of time. You are to consider what he was earning when he was hurt, and you may consider the mortuary table about how long he is likely to live. You may consider from what you find from this evidence what his earning capacity will be as he goes on, and then you will satisfy yourselves what would be the amount that he would lose from the earning capacity by reason of this injury to his foot. He is entitled to the difference between what he would make if the injury had not been done and what he would make with it done. You are not bound by the mortuary tables. You are not bound by figures of the plaintiff or defendant as to any amount which you should give him in consequence of his diminished earning powers. Something was said by the defendant's counsel about a thousand dollars being a large verdict; but you are not bound by what he claims. You are not bound by what his counsel think he ought to have. You are not bound by what the defendant thinks he ought to have, or his counsel. It is a matter in your sound discretion. You are to exercise your best judgment and your reason upon this evidence. If you reach this issue and say what is the value of his diminished earning capacity, then, when you do that, you are to add reasonable compensation for his pain and suffering. In view of all the circumstances, consider this young man's condition in life and his probable future, as far as you can ascertain it, what is a reasonable compensation for the pain and suffering which he has undergone; and when you ascertain that, gentlemen, you add that to such amount as you may have determined to be the amount in which his earning capacity has been diminished by reason of the injury; put both amounts together, and that will be your verdict."

(5) That the court refused defendant's motion to set aside the verdict, as being against the weight of the evidence, and the verdict as to damages, because they are excessive.

Judgment upon the verdict, and defendant appealed.

A. A. F. Seawell, of Sanford, and Robinson, Caudle & Pruette, of Wadesboro, for plaintiff. W. H. Neal, of Laurinburg, and K. R. Hoyle, of Sanford, for defendant.

WALKER, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] The defendant's motion for a nonsuit upon the evidence, and its request for a peremptory instruction to answer the issues in its favor, were both properly denied. The rule as to the treatment of the evidence upon such a question is not only very familiar, but has been stated in various ways so clearly and with so much repetition as to have become somewhat trite and even hackneyed. We must again say that we are not at liberty to select those portions of the testimony more favorable to a defendant in such a case than the rest and act upon it for his special benefit. Such an imposing array of the evidence in his behalf would be not only one-sided, when we are required to hear both sides equally and fairly, but would manifestly be partial and unjust. The rule is rather the other way. We restated it concretely in the recent case of Osborne v. Railroad, 180 N. C. 309, 78 S. E. 16, much like ours in its essential facts, though not literally so. Some of the language then used will practically fit almost any case, and is surely applicable to the one at bar. We there said: "Defendant requested the court to enter a judgment of nonsuit upon the evidence, as plaintiff's intestate was guilty of such contributory negligence in driving upon the crossing, without looking or listening, as barred his recovery. The judge could not have done so without deciding an issue of fact, which he is forbidden to do; that being the function of the jury. Pell's Revision, § 535, and cases cited in note. The evidence favorable to defendant's view of the case may be ever so strong and persuasive; but, if there is a conflict of testimony, it must be left to the jury, and they must find the facts. This is a case where there was a serious dispute as to the facts, which, of course, carried the case to the jury. It is our duty, upon a motion for a nonsuit, to consider the evidence in the view most favorable to the plaintiff, for at least one reason, which is, that the jury may adopt his version of the facts as the true one. It would be contrary to all our decisions to discard the proof in his favor and consider only that favorable to the defendant, or to permit the latter to overthrow the former, even if it is more reasonable and convincing. Such a course would contravene the express terms of the statute and would nullify its plain and explicit injunction that we, as judges, should confine ourselves to the law of the case and leave the finding of facts to the jury." See Brittain v. Westhall, 135 N. C. 492, 47 S. E. 616; Deppe v. Railroad, 152 N. C. 80, 67 S. E. 262; Hamilton v. Lumber Co., 156 N. C. 519, 72 S. E. 588. We would not hazard much, if anything, by stating broadly that Osborne's Case, just cited, seems to cover this case as with a blanket, and we may refer to it later in order to show the striking similarity between the two. As generally pertinent to the case in hand, we may formulate the following rules:

[2] 1. Where a railroad track crosses a public highway, both a traveler and the railroad have equal rights to cross; but the traveler must yield the right of way to the railroad company in the ordinary course of the latter's business. Duffy v. Railway Co., 144 N. C. 26, 56 S. E. 557.

[3] 2. While a train has the right of way at a crossing, it is the duty of the engineer to give signals and exercise vigilance in approaching such crossings. Coleman v. Railway Co., 153 N. C. 322, 69 S. E. 251.

[4] 3. A railroad company and a traveler on a highway crossing are charged with a mutual duty of keeping a careful lookout for danger, and the degree of vigilance is in proportion to the known risk; the greater the danger, the greater the care required of both. Railway Co. v. Hansbrough's Adm'x, 107 Va. 733, 60 S. E. 58.

[5] 4. On reaching a railroad crossing, and before attempting to go upon the track, a traveler must use his sense of sight and of hearing to the best of his ability under the existing and surrounding circumstances; he must look and listen in both directions for approaching trains, if not prevented from doing so by the fault of the railroad company, and if he has time to do so, and this should be done before he has taken a position exposing him to peril or has come within the zone of danger, this being required so that his precaution may be effective. Cooper v. Railroad, 140 N. C. 209, 52 S. E. 932, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 391, 6 Ann. Cas. 71; Coleman v. Railroad, 153 N. C. 322, 69 S. E. 251; Wolfe v. Railroad, 154 N. C. 569, 70 S. E. 993, in the last of which cases the rule was applied to an employé charged with the duty of watching a crossing and warning travelers of the approach of trains, and he was required to exercise due care, under the rule of the prudent man, for his own safety by looking and listening for coming trains.

[6] 5. The duty of the traveler arising under this rule is not always an absolute one, but may be so qualified by attendant circumstances as to require the issue as to his contributory negligence, by not taking proper measures for his safety, to be submitted to the jury. Sherrill v. Railroad, 140 N. C. 255, 52 S. E. 940; Wolfe v. Railroad, supra.

[7] 6. If he fails to exercise proper care within the rule stated, it is such negligence as will bar his recovery, provided always it is the proximate cause of his injury. Cooper v. Railroad, supra; Strickland v. Railroad, 150 N. C. 7, 63 S. E. 161; Wolfe v. Railroad, supra.

[8] 7. If his view is obstructed or his hearing an approaching train is prevented, and especially if this is done by the fault of the defendant, and the company's servants fail to warn him of its approach, and induced by this failure of duty, which has lulled him into security, he attempts to cross the track and is injured, having used his faculties as best he could, under the circumstances to ascertain if there is any danger ahead, negligence will not be imputed to him, but to the company; its failure to warn him being regarded as the proximate cause of any injury he received. Mesic v. Railroad, 120 N. C. 490, 26 S. E. 633; Osborne v. Railway, supra.

[9] 8. If a traveler is without fault, or if his fault is either excused by some act of the company or is not the proximate cause of his injury, the company having the last clear chance, and if, in attempting to cross a track on a highway, he is suddenly confronted by a peril, he may without the imputation of negligence adopt such means of extrication as are apparently necessary and is only held to such measure of care as a man of ordinary prudence would exercise in the same circumstances. Vallo v. Express Co., 147 Pa. 404, 23 Atl. 594, 14 L. R. A. 745, 30 Am. St. Rep. 741; Lincoln v. Nichols, 37 Neb. 332, 55 N. W. 872, 20 L. R. A. 855; Crampton v. Ivie Bros., 124 N. C. 591, 32 S. E. 968; and especially Douglass v. Railway, 82 S. C. 71, 62 S. E. 15, 68 S. E. 5; 3 Elliot on Railroads (2d Ed.) § 1173.

With these general rules to guide us, the solution of the question presented will not be difficult.

[10] This young boy rode up to the crossing on his bicycle and, as he testified, looked and listened for a train. He saw one pass, composed of an engine and box cars; the latter being shifted by the engine. He could not see to the west because of box cars standing on one of the tracks, which obstructed his view. He did look to the east at the moving train, believing and having good reason to believe, that it was coming back, and not suspecting that it had detached cars for the purpose of making a "flying switch." He did not and could not hear the noise of the loose cars as they came up to the crossing, for he could not see them through the solid intervening cars, and no warning was given of their approach; the first notice he had of them being the cry of the woman, which he heard at the very time he was stricken by the cars and knocked under them. He therefore had no chance to escape. There was no one on the loose cars to give him a signal to leave the track, and the cars on the adjoining track were so near the crossing as to render such a signal ineffective if it had been given. This is his version, and, if accepted as true by the jury, it made out a perfect case for him. Defendant denied it, and alleged that he voluntarily rode between the cars in a negligent manner, not made very clear, and fell from his wheel under the cars and was crushed as he described. They allege that there was a man on the cars to warn those using the crossing, and that a proper and effective signal was given by him and the woman, which was disregarded. In this conflict of views, the jury were the proper and only arbiters.

[11] They found for the plaintiff, and, as we must assume, under proper instructions from the court, as this part of the charge is not in the record, error not being presumed unless alleged and shown. This being so, the facts are as stated by the plaintiff, and he was therefore justly and legally entitled to the verdict. If we should nonsuit him or direct a verdict, it would be to reject all of his evidence in favor of that of defendant, which is out of the question. We must adopt his and reject the defendant's, except so far as the latter makes in his favor.

[12] In this view of the facts, what are the legal questions involved and the ultimate rights of the parties under them? This court has recently declared, in Vaden v. Railroad, 150 N. C. 700, 64 S. E. 762, that: "Making 'flying switches' on the railway tracks and sidings running across and along the streets of populous towns is per se gross negligence, and has been so declared by all courts in this country and by text-writers generally. It is stated in one of the best known text-books that the use of a running switch in a highway in the midst of a populous town or village is, of itself, 'an act of gross and criminal negligence on the part of the company'"—citing Sherman & Redf. Neg. (3d Ed.) § 466; Wilson v. Railroad, 142 N. C. 333, 55 S. E. 257; Allen v. Railroad, 145 N. C. 214, 53 S. E. 1081; Bradley v. Railroad, 126 N. C. 742, 36 S. E. 181; Farris v. Railway, 151 N. C. 483, 66 S. E. 457, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1115; Railroad v. Smith, 93 Ky. 449, 20 S. W. 392, 18 L. R. A. 66, to which is appended a most valuable note upon this subject. In this respect, the Vaden Case and this one cannot possibly be distinguished. So we see that defendant was "grossly" in fault at the very inception of this lamentable occurrence. It started wrong in the beginning and continued wrong throughout. It had set a death trap for the passer-by, and the plaintiff unwarily, but without fault, was caught in it, and came very near losing his young life. Will the railroads never stop doing, in this respect, what the courts have so emphatically condemned as contrary to law and humanity? If plaintiff had been killed, upon the facts found by this jury, the person to blame for his death would have been guilty of manslaughter for his palpable negligence with full knowledge of its dangerous tendency.

[13] Not only did defendant make the dangerous "flying switch," but by its negligent conduct in concealing the moving of the detached cars, and by failing to give proper signals or warning to travelers using the crossing, it threw the plaintiff off his guard and enticed him into the trap. The jury having repudiated the defendant's version of the facts and accepted the plaintiff's, there is no room left for the argument that the latter was guilty of contributory negligence, because they have found that he looked and listened and was prevented from any effective use of his faculties or his senses by the wrongful conduct of defendant in moving its cars rapidly without an engine, where they could not be seen, or the noise of their movement heard by plaintiff, and failing to give any warning of their approach. There is no logic that can withstand such an array of facts, and no law which justifies or excuses the defendant's conduct. It is like Wolfe's Case, in that plaintiff's attention was riveted on the moving train that had just passed with every indication of its immediate return, and the resemblance does not end here, for Wolfe's view to the east was obstructed by cars standing on a side track, just as plaintiff's view to the east was, in this case, obstructed by cars similarly situated. Wolfe v. Railway, 154 N. C. 569, 70 S. E. 993.

[14] While a greater degree of vigilance is required of a traveler than of an employé engaged in the performance of other duties for defendant, as in the instance of Wolfe, the principle underlying the two cases is essentially and broadly the same. Justice Manning said in Farris v. Railroad, 151 N. C. 483, 66 S. E. 457, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1115: "While we are in no wise inclined to relieve the person crossing the tracks of a railroad from the imperative duty of observing the measure of caution so well established for his safety by the well-considered decisions of this and other courts, yet 'it cannot always be said that he is guilty of contributory negligence, as a matter of law, because he did not continue to look and listen at all times continuously for approaching trains, where he was misled by the company or his attention was rightfully directed to something else as well.'" The crucial facts are that plaintiff did look and listen and seems to have done the best he could under the circumstances. His suspicion was disarmed by the defendant's fault, and he did not, therefore, anticipate any danger in crossing at the time he did. All this brings this case under the direct control of Osborne v. Railroad, 160 N. C. 809, 78 S. E. 18, which is peculiarly analogous to it. We there said: "Applying these principles to the case, it will appear by a bare reading of the evidence that it should not have been withdrawn from the jury by granting a nonsuit. The jury, by their verdict, evidently found that the intestate and J. E. Puckett did look and listen, in the exercise of that degree of care characteristic of the man of ordinary prudence, and, further, that no signal from the approaching train was given. In Mesic v. Railroad, 120 N. C. 490 [28 S. E. 633], after stating that it is the duty of a traveler on the highway, when he approaches a railroad crossing, to look and listen, even though the railroad may have been negligent, the court says: 'The rule, however, does not prevail where to look would be useless on account of obstructions, natural in themselves, or such as had been placed by accident or design by the company's employes on their tracks, and when at the same time the engineer had failed to sound the whistle or ring the bell for the crossing, and in consequence of this failure the plaintiff had been induced to go upon the track and take the risk'"—citing Hinkle v. Railroad, 109 N. C. 473, 13 S. E. 884, 26 Am. St. Rep. 581; Alexander v. Railroad, 112 N. C. 720, 16 S. E. 896; Russell v. Railroad, 118 N. C. 1098, 24 S. E. 512; Norton v. Railroad, 122 N. C. 910, 29 S. E. 886. See, also, Inman v. Railroad, 149 N. C. 126, 62 S. E. 878; Morrow v. Railroad, 146 N. C. 14, 59 S. E. 158; Norton v. Railroad, supra; and Farris v. Railroad, 151 N. C. 483, 66 S. E. 457, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1115. Judge Elliott states the rule to be that "where the employes of a railroad company by negligent or wrongful acts mislead a traveler, and put him off his guard, the company may be liable although the traveler may have done that which, but for the wrongful or negligent acts of the company, must have been considered negligence on his part." He adds that the traveler, though, must continue to exercise ordinary care to avoid injury according to the better reasoned decisions. But this is but another form of stating the general principle that, if the situation and surroundings are suggestive of danger, ordinary care must be used to avoid it.

[15] If the traveler is deceived by appearances produced by the negligent act of the railroad employes, in such way and to the extent that a man of ordinary prudence would not anticipate danger, the company cannot take advantage of its own wrong and impute the blame to him so as to defeat his action. The railroad company must abandon the device of the flying switch as

